

For Reference

Not to be taken from this room

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2011 with funding from LYRASIS members and Sloan Foundation

Vol. LIII
Number 1

January 3
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

A New Year Message to the Church

From the Moderator of General Conference

"Ye have not passed this way heretofore" as recorded in Joshua is a suggestion for the Brethren Church and each of her members for the year Nineteen Hundred Thirty One. It is a new road we travel this year. Are you prepared to enjoy it? Most people like to find a road they have never traveled before. Drive to that mountain top for the farther view or descend into that valley for the hidden flower. If the hill is steep you have confidence that your engine will make it; if the valley is soft you test your skill as a driver and seem to enjoy it. The whole trip is interesting for you never have been this way before.

Brethren, are you looking into the new year like that? Joy in the prospects before you; happiness because of new opportunities; expecting the year to contain many blessings; faith that faces the testings fearlessly; assurance that even death, should it come, would be a happy departure; is this the way the journey looks to you?

Some object that our vision is too short to appropriate joy, happiness, expectation, faith and assurance so early in the year, especially since the last year has been so uncertain, but the God of Israel, who is our God and the Father of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ bids us go forward like that. Suppose we cannot see beyond the horizon, we are told to walk by faith and not by sight. Suppose there are turns in the road, hills to climb and valleys to go down we have a Lord who saves them to the uttermost that come unto God by him. Therefore, brethren ALL the precious promises of the Bible for this age are ready to rush into action this New Year that the saints may have victory even in this present hour. Our confidence is in him. May every church and every member have his blessing this year.

A. V. Kimmell.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

THE Professors' Union"

The American Association of University Professors, gathered in Cleveland this week, is considering the matter of "academic freedom" for its members. Professor Thurstone of the University of Chicago will propose that the Association "blacklist" those colleges which do not permit teachers the right of free speech in the class rooms, and also suspend from membership any of its members who accept positions in blacklisted institutions.

FREE Speech for Students

Such a scheme will protect the professors from the wrath of college trustees. But when this is adjusted to the satisfaction of those concerned, something should be done to protect the students from the professors. No one knows how much suffering there is in class rooms caused by professors who think they must lecture but have never learned how, who repeat stale theories and indulge in senile witticisms. And generally the student must suffer in silence filled with groanings that dare not be uttered. Hanging over his defenceless head like the sword of Damocles is the important matter of his final grade.

Why not organize the students into a union to defend the right of free speech in the class rooms? Doubtless, the professors are too young to be entrusted with the protection of "academic freedom," but it may be said, is exactly what thoughtful trustees think of certain members of the American Association of Professors.

THE "Closed Shop" in Education

One wonders just how the "closed shop" system will work in the realm of education. Suppose that I, for example, should become a member of the Association of Professors. Then suppose still further that I should come to the conclusion that there is no God, that the Bible is a myth, that promiscuous sex experience is a good thing. And suppose that I should begin to teach these opinions in the class rooms of Ashland College, as they are being taught in some educational institutions. And suppose that the General Conference of the Brethren Church should demand my dismissal, as I am sure it would. If I appealed to the American Association of Professors, would that organization place Ashland College on its blacklist? That is a serious question.

What is "academic freedom?" Is it to be modeled along the lines of Russian Communism, the dictatorship of a certain class of men organized on the assumption that its principles are infallible? Such a scheme will spell the doom of progress. No one group of men is wise enough to warrant the imposition of its ideas upon everybody else.

True academic freedom should apply to institutions as well as to individuals. It should guarantee to any institution the freedom to make experiments in the field of education. This is what I mean: Some of us believe that, in the long run, higher education is most successful when conducted under the positive influence of the Christian view of God and the world. Others believe that the idea of God and the Christian view are hindrances to progress. Now to such we are willing to concede the freedom to experiment with the type of education they believe in, and the Christian College asks only the same freedom to conduct its own experiment. Surely, that is a very reasonable demand. When we are certain that we have arrived at final principles, that there is nothing more to be discovered in educational theory, it will be time enough to close the doors to further experiment and "blacklist" the institutions which have some ideas of their own. Until that day it is better to let the different theories of higher education stand or fall by their own success or failure. We Christians are willing to submit our own "theory" to that final acid test, measured in terms of abundant life.

The medieval church once made the fatal mistake of trying to impose a certain theory of education upon all the world. Happily that day is past. Is the American Association of University Professors now about to try the same scheme. Let us hope that the proposal will fail.

ACADEMIC "Honor"

True academic freedom cannot succeed without academic honor and the spirit of fair play. This country has educational institutions which stand for almost every conceivable type of theory. If new theories arise, new institutions can be started to experiment with them. But the right to experiment without interference should be extended to all alike as long as the rights of others are maintained. No accurate experiment can be carried out in the chemical laboratory where each student is permitted to throw whatever he chooses into the other fellow's test-tube. The same is true to a certain extent in the realm of educational theory. Professors who have ideas with which they desire to experiment should seek a congenial group in which to work. If none exists, let them pioneer and start one. The professor who deliberately enters an educational institution with whose principles he is inwardly at war, hampers not only the institution but also himself.

In the educational world, as in the political world, there can be no true freedom without honor.

The Hand of God

There are people who tell us that miracles do not happen. By this they generally mean events in the natural world that cannot be explained on natural grounds. As a matter of fact, such people when confronted with the innumerable instances of Divine Providence interposing in a remarkable manner in the affairs of men, simply say, "coincidence," and let it go at that. Take the following for instance:

During the recent storms in England a radio fan sat by his fireside at Weybridge, listening to the call of ships from the English Channel. That night the British Broadcasting Company's program did not interest him, so he tuned in on the ships. But before he could do that, he had to go out and fix his aerial, which the wind had blown down. He turned to 600 meters to catch the ships. Presently he heard an S. O. S.

call from a Russian ship in distress, and, to his astonishment, realized it was not being answered. Then he heard in odd English, "Please everybody come and help." Realizing the need the listener-in went to the telephone and called the North Foreland radio station with his news. The station had not heard the call because the messages were being jammed. The chief operator secured quiet and got in touch with the Russian ship, and tugs were sent to its aid. The listener-in who had heard the call was told that his intervention had saved the ship and a quarter of an hour later his wireless aerial was blown down.

Was all this coincidence, my skeptical friend, or was it the hand of God? We have no doubts in our mind. Have you?—Evangelical Christian (Canada).

CHILD WELFARE

Three thousand delegates attended the recent Conference on Child Welfare in Washington. Accumulated data showed that there are 48,000,000 children in the United States under 18 years of age; that 4,000,000 of them are working, 28,000,000 attending schools, and that children between 10 and 14 have a higher life anticipation than any other age group, but they are also most subject to accidents—more than 18,000 being killed every year. Since 1900 the accident rate has rapidly increased.

A committee report gathered from the studies of 40,000,000 children showed: 35,000,000 are reasonably normal; 6,000,000 are improperly nourished; 1,000,000 have defective speech; 1,000,000 have weak or damaged hearts; 675,000 present behavior problems; 450,000 are mentally retarded; 382,000 are tubercular; 342,000 have impaired hearing; 18,000 are totally deaf; 300,000 are crippled; 50,000 are partially blind; 14,000 are wholly blind; 20,000 are delinquent; 50,000 are dependent, and 10,000 are deficient.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

THE TIME IS BRIEF

*Because the longest life is brief,
I must be swift in keeping
The little trusts with kindness,
Before the time of sleeping!*

*I must be swift in reaching out,
To those whose hearts are yearning;
O, swift indeed to love them much
Before the long road's turning!*

*Before a sudden summons comes,
I surely must be saying
The words that I have failed to say—
The prayers I should be praying.*
—Grace Noll Crowell.

IN THIS NUMBER

Do Nothing Without Christ—Editor,	3
On the Up-grade through the Year
—Editor, .....	3
Editorial Review, .....	4
Africa the Last, Made First—L. W.
Kennedy, .....	5
Sunday School Valuation—Lillian E.
Bowers, .....	6
Studies in the Scriptures—C. F.
Yoder, .....	8
The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon, .....	9
Worship Program for January, 1931	10
Editor's Notes on the S. S. Lesson,	10
The Gospels at a Glance, .....	11
News from the Field, .....	12-16

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Do Nothing Without Christ

Jesus said, "Without me ye can do nothing." But it is hard for men to believe it. Many people, even Christian people, rush into undertakings with never a thought of prayer for guidance and never a yearning for divine help. They feel themselves sufficient for the task, or if not, it is merely a matter of improving their personal equipment until they are sufficient. It is self-dependence and not God-dependence that characterizes their attitude. It is an unfortunate attitude to adopt, for it is a false and insecure foundation on which it is based. Nothing can be done efficiently and well without a sense of dependence on forces outside one's self. This is particularly true with work that has to do with the improvement of human life and conditions. He who would help his fellowmen to a higher plane of living, must first know that all he does must be done in the name and by the power of the Lord Jesus Christ. Much is attempted without him, but it is ineffective, temporary and superficial. And therein lies the weakness of much effort at social betterment and therein is the primary cause for such just criticism as is being heaped upon it—it is not a spiritual service, it does not take Christ into account, it is entirely a human undertaking.

Jesus Christ alone provides the dynamic by which every urge to a better life can be made real and permanent and by which every ideal for social improvement can be translated into the actual. He is the sufficient wisdom and power without which there can be no real effectiveness, no abiding worth to human ingenuity and effort. Human effort and method are not to be lazily avoided under the guise of conviction that relieving distress and fighting the evils that prey upon human weaknesses are not the business of the church, but human method must be enlightened and inspired by divine wisdom and human effort must be accompanied and supplemented by the working power of God. The individual who may be the recipient of human betterment measures must not be allowed to feel that material improvement is sufficient, but must have pressed upon his soul the need of divine grace. At the same time that effort is put forth to make it easier for men to do right and harder for them to do wrong, effort must also be made to get individual men in touch with the renewing and empowering spirit of God. Social service must not be shirked by members of the church of Christ, nor on the other hand should it be allowed to become an end in itself, but should be only a means to an end and an expression of the Christian compassion we have for suffering humanity, after the example of our Lord.

Effort at social amelioration, when thus kept truly Christian in motive and method, will avoid, or should avoid, much of the criticism to which it is subjected, and no one will need to apologize to any man for engaging in it, seeing it is done in the spirit and power of Christ. If there are those who object to such practical and genuinely Christian service on the plea that it is outside the scope of Christian responsibility, such can only be prayed for, if perchance they may be led to see the light. But objection that is based on the lack of Christian spirit and attitude may well cause social service advocates to consider their ways, and to remember that without Christ they can do nothing. Failure to give attention to that fact has caused not a few churches to neglect a divinely enjoined phase of their ministry and has led some sincere souls to turn from it with disappointment.

The editor of The Presbyterian relates an experience and points out this truth. He says:

It was a privilege to be present as a young minister held his first service in a new charge. Among other things he thought it proper, and it was, to give a brief summary of his religious experience. He was brought up in a Christian home. At ten he united with the church. At sixteen he resolved to make his life of service to his fellow-men. That word "service" is so used and misused these days that it may mean much or little. After proper study, he went to Harvard to study sociology and to work in a Settlement House in Boston. Many good and helpful things were done in the Settlement House. Gradually it dawned upon him in his work and study in sociology that there was no power to really do more than help people outwardly. Jesus Christ was not in it, and he became more and more conscious of the lack. There was no salvation and no new power to give the people whom they tried sincerely to help. He saw the superlative need of Christ, and so gave up the work, going to the Biblical Seminary in New York to become a minister of the Gospel. That young man saw a great truth which some older men and ministers cannot see. "Without me ye can do nothing." That is true in all places. All the social ameliorations in the world will be as nothing without Jesus Christ at the center. Such testimony is helpful.

It should be helpful to us not by way of lessening our zeal for practical Christian service, but by way of reminding us of the absolute necessity of keeping Christ and spiritual aims uppermost. We cannot do any service that will be permanently helpful and wholesome if we fail to take into account the spirit and power of Christ. What our Lord said is everlastingly and universally true: "Without me ye can do nothing."

On the Up-grade Through the Year

Every worth-while person is ambitious. He wants to go forward, make progress, become better and better, achieve more and more. At the beginning of a new year people are very generally given to hoping for better things and yearning for attainments that lie higher on the pathway of life. It is a part of the makeup of every normal being to desire to keep on the up-grade, and more especially is it true of the Christian. Paul desired to forget the things that were behind, the failures and mistakes, and to reach forward to the larger attainment of manhood in Christ Jesus. Both he and Peter are especially urgent in their writings that their readers shall "grow in grace." But to wish for the larger things and to actually attain them are two vastly different things. How is one to keep on the up-grade through the new year? Every sincere soul may find it personally profitable to consider that question seriously before he gets far upon the new road.

First. By faithfulness. That is the most essential requisite to larger things in any field. Faithfulness to the little things that face us day by day leads us to larger things. Such faithfulness both prepares us for the doing of bigger things and makes others confident in our ability to do the bigger things. Thus it turns out that we are entrusted with larger things and so are on the up-grade in life. But Dean Farrar says that faithfulness not only leads to greater things, but "little faithfulnesses are in themselves the greater ones. The essential fidelity of the heart is the same, whether it be exercised in the mites or in the royal treasury; the genuine faithfulness of the life is equally beautiful, whether it be displayed in governing an empire or in writing an exercise."

Second. By Looking Beyond. There is always higher ground for him who is able to look up and on. Many people have their eyes so glued on the present that they have become wholly satisfied and have no vision of nor desire for anything that lies beyond. The onward march stops when aspiration dies. Some have allowed their desires to become so warped that they are engrossed in the common, or unworthy, or evil things of this world. They do not contemplate the good and the better. Others are filled with such a sense of reverence for certain visions of loveliness already seen that they do not look farther. But there is always something better for those whose eyes are turned toward the good and keep looking on to things beyond. We should embrace each good, but should not so tie ourselves to anything that we cannot look beyond to something better. For in such case, the good becomes enemy to the better and the best.

Third. Look to Christ. No man can keep continually on the upgrade who does not find the inspiration to progress and the strength to achieve in Christ Jesus. In every phase of life he will help a man to do his best and will guide him into the best. But particularly is this true in things moral and spiritual. And a person can hardly be said to be on the up-grade when he is not concerned about the finer moral and spiritual achievements. Henry Churchill King says:

"Christ seems to me to be the greatest in the greatest sphere, that of the moral and spiritual. It is hardly too much to say that this place is given him by the common consensus of all thoughtful men who really know his spirit and teaching. He sees the problem of living more broadly and more deeply than any other. No other has so grasped the full meaning of life. No other shows such delicate skill in applying moral and spiritual principles. If we have anywhere one who may be said to speak with full authority in the moral and spiritual world, that person, assuredly, is Jesus Christ."

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Send your White Gift offering promptly to Prof. M. P. Puterbaugh, 2210 Maple Avenue, Evanston, Illinois, and remember that only your best is worthy to be called a "White" gift for the King.

We are in receipt of a full report of the Illiokota district conference held at Waterloo, Iowa, October 6 to 8, 1930. Brother O. S. Prather is the efficient secretary and we appreciate the very careful manner in which he prepared his manuscript.

Brother Mark B. Spacht, who is now serving as pastor of the Mexico and Corinth churches of Indiana, finds his work starting off enjoyably and satisfactorily. He has initiated the publication of a monthly calendar in the interest of his circuit.

Dr. Shively informs us that he proposes to resume his monthly messages on the pioneer ministers as he knew them. This series has been so widely appreciated, we are glad to make the announcement, so that our readers may enjoy the anticipation of them.

Brother R. I. Humberd writes of his work in the state of Washington, where he held meetings at Spokane, Harrah and Sunnyside, of Bible lectures. He then spent a week giving his chart lectures to good audiences in gym room.

Brother R. I. Humberd dropped the remark the other day that only two Sunday schools had bought Home Department envelopes this quarter. What does this mean? That our schools are neglecting their Home Departments, or their Publishing House? Maybe too much of both.

Dr. Bame, the Sunday school editor, informs us that some new orders are being received for the Brethren Teacher, for which he is pleased, and also that inquiries were received for helps on lessons for Boys and Girls. The reply in brief is that such helps are to be found in the Brethren Teacher. Look it over, or send for a copy if you have none.

A correspondent from Osceola, Indiana, informs us that Brother Walter Gibson, the pastor, has just closed a three weeks' revival effort with the result that nine new members were added to the church by baptism and one reinstated. The attendance at Sunday school has been between seventy-five and eighty, and they are trying for the hundred mark.

Brother Charles H. Ashman, pastor of the First church of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, during a recent visit to Ashland, dropped in to see the editor and informed us that his work was going fine, the attendance at the several services and the activity of the different departments keeping up to a commendable mark.

Dr. C. F. Yoder writes briefly of his visit among the Ohio churches, and particularly of his stay at Dayton and Ashland, at both of which places he spent a week in Bible lectures and preaching. He has been very warmly received wherever he has gone, both because of the people's love for their pioneer missionary to South America and because of their desire to learn more about the missionary situation in the Argentine.

Brother C. D. Whitmer, who, along with his clerical work in South Bend and his writing of Christian Endeavor notes for the Angelus, is serving as pastor of the Brighton church in Indiana, reports a very successful meeting recently held in his church by Brother B. F. Owen, pastor of Nappanee, Indiana. There were twenty-three added to the church; twenty-two by baptism and one by letter. The work of the evangelist was much appreciated by both pastor and people.

We are in receipt of number 2 of volume 3 of "Riverside Beacon," a neat little three column-paged paper, published by the students of Riverside Institute, Lost Creek, Kentucky. Gordon Drushal is Editor-in-chief and Pryse Haddix is Managing Editor, and these have a full line of associates representing the various interests of the school. We commend the editors for the splendid appearance of their little school journal, and dare say it will perform a good service in the community of Lost Creek.

The Evangelist force was greatly encouraged by the very kind letter of a brother who has been a reader of our church paper for forty years. He is Brother H. J. Schrock, of Elkhart, Indiana. He began his connection with the Brethren Evangelist when it was under the editorship of H. R. Holsinger and has never allowed it to be broken in forty years. Such persistent devotion and loyalty through the years is inspiring and is worthy of emulation. Thank you, Brother Schrock, for writing.

Brother R. I. Humberd writes of his successful campaign recently conducted at Harrah, Washington, but the number of confessions is not reported. He speaks highly of Brother Fred Kinzie as a pastor, and of the justification of such commendation the progress of the Harrah work bears witness. Brother Humberd imparted to the Harrah brethren some of his zeal for distributing Gospel portions, tracts and mottoes. A new interest was also taken in the family altar. It would be a great spiritual boon if that almost extinct institution were to be restored far and wide.

Brother A. D. Cashman, pastor of the Second church of Los Angeles, writes of the successful evangelistic meeting held in his church by Brother R. Paul Miller, resulting in twenty-five being added to the church by baptism. A large number of the church members, some of whom had backslidden, expressed their determination to reconsecrate themselves to Christ more fully. The pastor speaks very complimentary of the life and service of Brother Miller, who has concluded his fifth campaign among the Southern California churches.

President E. E. Jacobs, in his College News this week, announces the resignation of Mrs. Elizabeth Lentz Leslie, who for six years has served efficiently as a teacher in elementary education and as dean of women. Dr. Jacobs commends her highly for her success in both lines of responsibility, and especially in the difficult position of dean. The teaching position thus made vacant has been filled by the appointment of Miss Beulah Woods, a member of the Church of the Brethren. Dr. Jacobs recently attended a meeting in Cleveland, of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and there met Dr. C. L. Anspach, until last fall, Dean of Ashland College.

Brother I. D. Bowman recently closed an evangelistic campaign of two weeks' duration at the Mount Olive church in Virginia, where Brother G. W. Chambers is the faithful pastor. Nine were added to the church by baptism and much interest in the meeting was manifested on the part of the church and community. This is Brother Bowman's old home church and the place of his first experience in helping to build a church almost a half century ago. Brother Chambers has successfully shepherded these people for eleven years and has seen the church grow into one of the largest numerically in the Virginia Valley. He has been a good preacher as well as a good pastor and the people love him. It is therefore most natural that his parishioners should view with genuine regret the fact that they must now give him up, he having resigned because of ill health. He lays aside his work here the first of January, 1931. We sincerely hope he will be able to recover his health after a season of rest, so as to get back into the pastorate again.

(Continued on page 9)

PRAYER REQUESTS FOR THIS WEEK—

The growing mission church at Osceola, Indiana, asks for the prayers of the brotherhood that the blessing of God may continue to be upon it.

Brother C. D. Whitmer asks for prayer for himself and his work at the Brighton church, Indiana.

Africa the Last, Made First

By Lester W. Kennedy

"And, behold, there are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last" (Luke 13:30).

We are well acquainted with our text:—the Messiah has come unto his own and his own received him not but as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God. Israel was spiritually proud because they had received first place in the mind of God, but upon rejecting their King the first became last, thus we see them (Gentiles) coming from the east, west, south and north and sitting down in the kingdom of God. When our Lord spoke these words he, without doubt, had in mind Africa as well as other Gentile nations.

We have chosen our text because we are dealing with a last people and we desire to show our optimism by making this last people first. God has a wonderful future for Africa and if that people respond to the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ the riches of God's blessing and Grace shall be meted to them as it has to every other nation which acknowledged God as their supreme Leader.

If you measure Africa in units according to other nations, you have one conclusion: Africa nationally is the last. China in the depths of her revolutions and strife for political control, has her own educational system. She has her standing army, her navy and regardless of the spiritual state we do not think of China as the last nation. Japan is growing nationally, her political ideas are growing higher. Japan can offer, because of her fine universities, one of the best of educations. India and Russia are not last on the list by any means, but come with me to Africa and I can introduce to you a people, nationally speaking, which are the last people on the face of this earth; politically speaking, the last; intellectually speaking, the last, illiteracy reigns supreme; morally speaking, the last; spiritually speaking, the last, they know not God. This is why we speak of Africa as the last country.

Let us deal with individuals. We have encountered the workings of God in that benighted pagan country and have seen the lowest of the debased raised out of their dissipation, out of their licentious, idolatrous and immoral life and made the first of their tribe. This is the way God works. He does the impossible to prove that only an omnipotent power can so transform the sinner and give him a jealousy for righteousness. David was the last of his family but he was made the first when God qualified him and made him the greatest King Israel ever knew. Amos was no prophet, neither the son of a prophet, but a herdman and a gatherer of sycamore fruit: yet God called him as he followed the flock and he became a model preacher—"THE PLUMBLINE PREACHER." It was Peter who was chosen to give that Pentecostal sermon. Come with me to England and see a man who could curse by note—curse until lewd men reviled him, until women shunned him, until the children fled and even the birds of the air hushed their singing. He was the last man of his town but this wicked man came to the cross of Calvary one day, cursing every step of the way. He saw his Savior in all his love, grace and saving mercy and it was there that this despised sinner was made a new creation; a red-hot coal from off the altar touched his lips and John Bunyan, the brazier, became the first of his country. The Bishops cast him in jail because he wasn't ordained and out from Bedford prison walls came Pilgrim's Progress. Pass by a gypsy tent, hear the moaning of a dying woman; pass her up, she is just a despised, loathsome gypsy woman, but in that tent is a little boy and God reaches down a hand of mercy, saves him and from the gypsy family there springs one of the greatest evangelists of our day. He has stood before potentates and people of all rank. It is just the last made first. Take the founder of our African work; he was a great man because God made him great. When God wanted a man to wait three long years at Brazzaville to endure the taunting and criticism and hardship he did not choose the president of some university, nor the most intellectual of our church but he chose a street car conductor from the city of Philadelphia. When Dr. Farrant, the Field Secretary of the "Sudan United Mission" passed by our Bassai Mission Station he asked me to direct him to Brother Gribble's grave; while standing there the silence was broken when Dr. Farrant bared his head under that tropical sun and said, "I consider it a great honor to stand at this man's grave, for truly he was a great man." Who made him great? God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit.

Let us consider the capability of this last people. Just before going to Africa the writer and his wife were invited into the home of a very outstanding music teacher of Philadelphia. She had never seen us and had formed an assumption that since we were going to Africa, we were some puny, skinny couple choosing Africa as the second best. This woman tried to show us our mistake by measuring her colored students according to her own blood. When she saw that it was settled, Africa was our chosen field, she said: "How the world would welcome you." Thus the world measures the African. James Bryan said, "Measure a man in units according to animal power and there are some animals stronger than man; measure a man in units according to intellectual power and you soon reach his limitation, but measure a man in units according to spiritual power and there is no telling what a man can do." And if we measure a native of Africa, regardless of his illiteracy, according to spiritual power there is no telling what will happen in that Kaare tribe, Banu or Baya tribes. A tribe will be led to a knowledge of God. People have asked whether the African is able to apprehend the Gospel. It is not the intellectuals who understand the simplicity of the Gospel but "babes and sucklings." This people who have such a capacity for sin, when saved, have just as great a capacity for righteousness. We have evangelists in our indigenous church who will listen to a thirty minute message, take that same message, give it in another language and one is able to note very little difference. This is a gift bestowed upon two of our evangelists, by the Holy Spirit, and is being utilized to the glory of God. I have found that people who have made a study of the African, his ways and customs, have deemed him unworthy of an education, let alone the Gospel. David Livingstone, who saw Africa in its primitive state, did not think so. Dan Crawford was willing to bestow his time, talents and education upon these people. When one of his best friends, a chief, spit a mouthful of beer in his face he was mortified beyond degree, but let us not be too hasty in criticising this chief. This was a time of feasting to the dead and he desired to bestow the highest blessing upon his friend, so a mouthful of beer. Great men have laid down their lives for the cause of Christ in a needy land. Every life given, every cent spent, is for the evangelization of Africa and for an eternal purpose. May God hasten the day when the 30,000,000 who have never heard shall hear and rejoice in the true and living way.

Now we shall give, briefly, three concrete illustrations which show how our African friends have become first in a life of prayer; first in Christian example; and first in a life of faith and reliance upon God.

I. Those who have become first in a life of prayer. Yaconenzi is the boy who sat at Brother Gribble's bedside until the last. He is not a great preacher but he is a great personal worker. He was a priest ere his conversion and taught the young boys the ways and customs of the tribe. In the mind of the African this is the highest position, but we who have encountered the reality of said position consider it the lowest. Please bear in mind that Yaconenzi was filled with witchcraft, superstition and all the beliefs of an African priest. When he saw Brother Gribble take his false teeth out of his mouth, superstition began to work, his eyes dilated and he left with no little speed. When Mr. and Mrs. J. Clark first arrived in the Belgian Congo, a witch doctor arrived too, and displaying some of his tricks, he told them if they did not leave their lives would be taken. Mrs. Clark said, "I can do one thing you can't do and if you can we will leave." The witch doctor got behind a tree and said, go ahead; Mrs. Clark then lifted out her upper and lower teeth, the witch doctor was gone and Mr. and Mrs. Clark worked fifty years and three days in Africa.

I never knew the depth of this man, Yaconenzi, until one time when on an itineration trip, I was awakened about ten o'clock by the constant pounding on the mud wall to find that Yaconenzi was burdened with a spirit of prayer. He knelt there on the clay floor, beating the floor with his fist and praying most earnestly for his father, sisters and brothers. His father, Nana, is now saved and others of his family have believed unto salvation. He has asked great things of God and he has received for the asking. Just before leaving the Karre we went to our own home, the writer was blessed beyond measure when Yaconenzi and he knelt behind an African altar and walked boldly unto the Throne of Grace. Here he was lifted out of the priesthood of heathenism and made a king and priest with Jesus Christ.

II. As a Christian example. Yama is esteemed as one of the noblest, truest and most faithful Christians we have in our African church. When he was but a babe in Christ his little boy was taken from him; the test was great and he resorted to his old heathen belief, witchcraft, to see who gave his baby the evil spirit. He went from bad to worse. He finally set fire to a building and then was sentenced to a life imprisonment. While in prison he was so wonderfully transformed, by Grace Divine, that the soldiers noticed it; officers remarked about it and he was considered such a phenomenal prisoner that when the Lieutenant Governor needed a gardener Yama received the job. Because of his obedience and righteous living he was released from prison at the end of two years. He returned to the mission and when the natives saw that he was received with opened arms they said, "The white man does not know the black man; if Yama loses another baby there will be another fire." Another boy was given to Yama and it seems that God said, "Yama, your people doubt your sincerity; you must prove yourself, let me have your baby." And when this boy was taken, all were on tiptoe to see just how this father would acquiesce. He said, as it were, like Job of old, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." He stood like the rock of Gibraltar; which has been standing there for centuries; the waves dash up against it and say, this time we will conquer it, but they only fall back in broken defeat. Walk with me into Yaloke church and see a man dressed in white, whose face shines like the sun—that is Yama. He is deacon and is one of the first. The name given him by his people means animal, but God has raised this last man up out of his witchcraft belief and sin and has made him the first of his own people.

III. There are those who trust God to undertake when death is seeking its prey. Goupendi was the first of his family to accept the Gospel. Shortly after he became a Christian his brother died and his people came to the conclusion that because Goupendi accepted the white man's God death had visited their home. One thing must be done—remove the cause, so while Goupendi was attending our Saturday morning prayer service his people were framing a plot against him. He left us in the best of health, but just an hour or so later word came to us that he had fallen to the ground dead. About fifteen minutes later another messenger came saying, "It is true, Goupendi was dead but we threw a bucket of cold water upon him and he got up again." Upon arriving at the village we found that he had been taken into their Punangalla house. Punangalla is their highest god and if he refuses to hear, of course the victim must die. Goupendi asked to be taken to the mission, his people opposed. Chief Mamadou opposed, but to the Glory of God he was taken to the mission. Chief Mamadou said after we left, "Your people will see that our way is right; our god is superior to the white man's God, Goupendi is going to die." But God took the challenge and after four weeks Goupendi walked back to his village. We could stand up on Bassa mountain and echo down through the valley, "The God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is the only God."

This all worked to the glory of God. Goupendi's father, mother and brothers, as well as other relatives saved beside him and saw God lend a hand and save a life from the grave. Today mother and brothers are enjoying God's salvation from sin and heathenism. Rom. 8:28.

We conclude that with God all things are possible. The Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation. God who has so wonderfully worked and taken from pagan belief and made the last first is ever the same, yesterday, today and forever, thus the future is filled with hope.

Lastly, if I did not support this work with my life I would not believe sincerely the Great Commission: "Go ye and make disciples of all nations;" I would not believe in the Apostles' Creed (Repeat it and see); I would not believe in the long meter doxology (Repeat it also and see). I would believe that two-thirds of the earth's population should perish without hope.

French Equatorial Africa.

Sunday School Valuations

By Lillian E. Bowers

(A paper read at the Northwest District Conference and requested published in The Evangelist.)

If the Sunday school should be removed from the church, if its influence should be withdrawn, would the church suffer loss? Would the community be affected greatly? If so, what are the valuations of the Sunday school? What work does it accomplish or what goals does it try to reach?

Perhaps it is trying to see how large a number of people can be secured for membership and has set a certain number as to the standard to be reached. Good teachers are secured, plenty of equipment is provided and the interest grows until finally that goal has been reached. Success seems to have been gained, but has that Sunday school made good? Has it succeeded because of a large number? Some parents feel that they have done their duty as long as the children are sent to Sunday school.

Numbers are good and a large Sunday school is very desirable but a large attendance is not the real goal of the Sunday school and unless the parents as well as the children can be vitally interested there is a great loss in true Christian growth and fellowship. A good motto for the school to have is, "Every church member in the school and every member of the school in the church."

Perhaps the school is trying to create more interest in Bibles and wishes to have the Bibles brought to the church on Sundays. Through songs and contests interest is aroused in carrying the Bibles until many Bibles appear. But a person could carry a Bible and even know that Bible without having a real love for its Christ, and again I ask, Has the Sunday school made good? Is this the desired end?

Perhaps it values the study of the lesson and has set a goal at having a certain percent come with a studied lesson. This is a little harder to reach but through questions and emulation in different classes even this might be secured without accomplishing the real end of the Sunday school.

Perhaps its aim is to have the school well furnished, well equipped with all sorts and kinds of apparatus for each department, books, magazines, etc., so the teachers may have ample supplies with which to work.

But a large beautiful church building and a well equipped school is not always the most valuable to the community. All these may be good but should be merely means to the real goal of the Sunday school.

Phil. 3:10 says, "That I may know him and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death." If Sunday school workers could hold that as the true goal and all the other aims subordinate, "that in all things he might have the preeminence" what a power the school would be in moulding the lives of all who come in contact with it. But how can such a goal be reached?

Some one has said, "As is the teacher, so is the school." So in the first place the teachers must know him, must have that desire to make him the center of each lesson.

There is an interesting story told about Scarborough, a city in England. It is a great summer resort where many people go each year. Years ago it was nothing but a little fishing village. There was an everflowing spring nearby to which people at first paid little attention. But once an old man who had been a long sufferer from a disease like rheumatism drank from the spring and soon regained his health. After that anyone who became sick drank from the spring and was wonderfully helped.

The fame of the spring spread abroad until many people came, many buildings were built, hotels, amusement places, etc., and this is the way the town was started.

But now, though the spring is still there, though it still has the same healing properties, there are comparatively few of those visiting that city who ever know of its existence.

What an illustration of Jesus Christ! The central figure of Christianity, Christ is the spring, the healing Fountain. We have built up around him all Christian institutions, but is not Christ, who is the inspiration and the reason for all the rest, too often forgotten?

Buildings, equipment and all kinds of materials too often take too prominent a place and the true goal is lost sight of.

Sir George, one time president of the Sunday School Union of England, put consecration as the first element of success in the Sunday school. He said, "Rooted in the profound conception of the value of the human soul, the matchless opportunities for impressing young life of the suitability of the message to be delivered, and fostered by earnest prayer, it (consecration) stands out in my experience as the one thing needful."

Consecration will send a worker early to school with a lesson well prepared. And what a vital factor preparation is in Sunday school work.

One can hardly over-estimate the importance of good preparation. Paul said, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." "Give heed to reading, to exhortation, to teaching," wrote Timothy. "Be diligent in these things," he continued, "give thyself wholly to them; that thy progress may be manifest unto all." No careless, half-way preparation is ever successful.

A noted evangelist once addressed the theological students of Glasgow College, recommending them to sometimes go into the pulpit, find a text on the spur of the moment, and preach, trusting in inspiration for the message. Prof. Denny was in the chair and he turned to the speaker and said with keen emotion, "We are here in this College, set aside by the church, to tell these men that there is no preparation too sacred or too solemn for the ministry of Jesus Christ and you come now and try to undo our work with these students. I think, Sir, you confuse inspiration with desperation."

There is no Christian service that is more worthwhile and none which brings greater happiness to the doer than Bible teaching. Upon what we know and are, live and teach, hinges what the children and youth who look into our faces will be.

Good preparation demands sacrifice of time and strength and energy, and there are times when it seems discouraging, but to show that teachers should never despair over visible results of spiritual endeavors, Dr. Watkinson gives this illustration: "During a visit to Johannesburg I visited a gold mine," he said. "There was immense activity, there were gangs of workers, clouds of dust, hissing steam, deafening stamps, heaps of quartz, torrents of water and caldrons of slime; but I came away without having seen one speck of gold. Yet when on my return journey our ship anchored at Southampton we discharged boxes of gold dust to the tune of a million."

Thus today our Sunday school work continues with much machinery, but the practical spiritual gain is often very doubtful.

No Christian worker ever knows or sees all that is accomplished by his effort and labor. The Lord himself wisely withholds that knowledge. Is it not enough to be assured in I Corinthians 15:58—"that his labor is not in vain in the Lord?" The result is as sure as the law of harvest.

(To be continued)

In the realms of earth or sky may our path lead from midnight to fairest morn, and from rosy dawn to highest noon. May we daily greet our friends, our foes, our fears with a "smiling Godward face," and our task with joy. May our sorrows, disappointments, and disaster work in us their enduring lessons. May a great purpose spur us forward with heavenly insistence until we scale the heights in front. May we distinguish the permanent from the transient, and hold fast the truth that abides. May the inspiration and fellowship of the world's noblest souls of every age be ours for all time. May a Heaven-sent vision reveal to us our truest, divinest selves and our immortal destiny. May the winsome, compasionate spirit of the man of Nazareth dwell increasingly in our hearts forever.—A prayer by Merritt Augustus Farren, Secretary of the Seaman's Friend Society.

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

EDITOR'S NOTE

We are pleased to begin the year with Dr. C. F. Yoder conducting the Bible Study department and to announce that he is to give us two very important series of Bible studies. The first will last through six or seven weeks and deals with the doctrinal problems connected with the observance of the Sabbath. Many of our readers will welcome this discussion as an antidote to the Seventh Day Adventist fallacy to which they are exposed, for as Dr. Yoder suggests, it is a live issue in some quarters. The second series will extend through most of the remainder of the year and in nature will be general Gospel instruction. More definite introduction to the series will be made at the time it is begun. We are having this series of studies on the Sabbath Question set in larger type in the anticipation that there will be a demand for its publication in pamphlet form. If there are any interested in this proposal, please drop the editor a line about it.—G. S. B.

(NOTE—The following pages were written in Spanish to satisfy the urgent needs of missionaries in Latin America whose work is besieged by a host of proselyters who prey upon the babes in Christ in the mission lands as well as in the homeland.

Written primarily for our Brethren missionaries, it was published by the interdenominational board of publication and is used by all the evangelical denominations.

Inasmuch as the churches in the homeland are also beset by the same misguided sect of Judaizers the tract has been translated into English and is now offered to Evangelist readers. It should be preserved for reference and used when an occasion of need presents itself. The reference is made to the original and marked to verify the statement.—G. S. B.

THE QUESTION OF THE SABBATH

The object of this study is to help all those who may have doubts concerning the proper day of rest and wish to know what the Bible teaches on the matter.

The laws of the country do not settle the question, because they follow popular opinion, which is not always correct. The most specific word that Jesus said was, "The sabbath was made for man and not man for the sabbath" (Mk. 2:27). The word "sabbath" is from the Hebrew and means "rest" without specifying a particular day.

From Genesis 1:25 to 2:2 we learn that God created man at the end of the sixth day, so that the rest that followed on the seventh, though it was the seventh of creation, was the first for the life of man. After that he began to work. This is the original order: first, rest in God, and then work with God. This symbolism does not change even though the "days of Genesis be "days of God" or long periods (2 Pet. 3:8).

The Seventh Day Sabbath

Fallen man was obliged to eat bread "in the sweat of his face" (Gen. 3:19) and we have no indication in history of any symbolic day of rest before the sabbath was commanded by God through Moses, and that at the end of bondage, was typical of the bondage of sin, and at the beginning of a new life of liberty, typical of rest from sin in Christ. The sabbath as a memorial commemorated the bondage as well as the deliverance, and was a symbol of the rest promised by the law as a reward of works. The exodus with its enormous work would not have occurred on a sabbath day already existing, but we know that the exodus did occur on the sabbath because the day was ever after celebrated by two feasts: the passover, an annual feast (Ex. 12:14-17) and the weekly day of rest (Deut. 5:15).

These days were "signs of the covenant" between God and Israel (Ex. 13:6-10; Ezek. 20:12, 13), but as Israel did not keep the covenant (Jer. 22:5-9) the mode of keeping of the sign became an "abomination" (Isa. 1:13) and the sabbaths were abolished (Hosea 2:11; Col. 2:14, 17).

As a memorial of rest from bondage the sabbath was no longer significant, for they had lost their liberty (Luk. 2:1), and the kingdom was temporarily taken from them (Matt. 21:43). As a symbol of spiritual rest it was equally useless, for they had lost that rest also (Heb. 4:11-18) and remained in the slavery of sin (John 8:34-36) in spite of their sabbaths. God, in his knowledge of the weakness of human nature, employed the method of the law only as a step in the preparation of the people for Christ (Gal. 3:23-26).

The sabbath was a part of the old covenant "of the letter" (Ex. 31:16, 17) which was replaced in its entirety by the new covenant "of the spirit" (Heb. 8:7-13; 10:9; 2 Cor. 3:6). When the whole of something disappears all the parts disappear. Therefore the seventh day sabbath disappeared with the old covenant of the letter.

But the institutions of the law were typical of the "better things" of the new covenant, and the spirit of them was better expressed in this new covenant of the spirit. The letter was the shadow, the spirit is the reality.

It is useless to say that the weekly sabbath is not included in these "shadows" which passed away (Col. 2:14, 17) on the ground that there is a difference between the "sabbaths" and circumcision and the weekly "sabbath." Such difference does not exist. If the weekly sabbath began before reaching Sinai (Ex. 16:23), so also did circumcision (John 7:22) and the sabbath of the Passover (Ex. 12:14-17). The weekly sabbath is referred to in the plural as often as the others are (Ex. 31:13, 14; Ezek. 20:12). All were given by God "by the hand of Moses" (Neh. 9:14); all are equally called feasts or sabbaths "of the Lord" (Lev. 23:3, 37); all are called "perpetual," but for that dispensation (Ex. 31:16; Lev. 16:29-34; all are called "holy" (Ex. 31:13, 14). The weekly sabbaths like the rest had sacrifices (Num. 28:10), convocations with accompanying "rites" (Lev. 23:3; Neh. 8:18) and were therefore plainly included in the "law of commandments and ordinances" which was "abolished" (Eph. 2:15).

Sunday, or The Lord's Day

The history of Israel is an allegory of the Christian life (Gal. 4:24; 1 Cor. 10:11) in which the exodus from slavery represents our liberation from sin (John 8:34-36) by the resurrection of Christ and our spiritual resurrection with him (1 Pet. 1:3, 4; Eph. 2:5, 6). The two memorials of the exodus (the passover and the sabbath rest) represented Christ who was "separated from sinners" (Heb. 7:26) and enjoyed the favor or rest of God (Mt. 3:17).

When the type came the antitypes, of course, were discarded, but these two memorials of the exodus have in the New Testament two corresponding memorials. Instead of the passover with the feast of unleavened bread we have the Lord's supper with its unleavened bread (1 Cor. 5:7, 8), which is a symbol of the separation of believers from sinners (vs. 11); and instead of the rest day in memory of the exodus, we have the rest day in memory of the resurrection. It is called "the Lord's day" (Rev. 1:10) and is a symbol of rest in Christ (Matt. 11:28) through a spiritual resurrection with him (Eph. 2:6) of tained, not by the works of the law, but by faith (Heb. 4:3).

The Manna and the Rest Day

The sabbath was given by Moses in the desert (Neh. 9:14) when God gave the manna, which was a type of Christ (John 6:31-34) and the rest, which was a type of the Holy Spirit (Ex. 16:23 with John 4:14; 7:39). For the manna which Moses gave, the people had to work first and then rest, but for the true manna which Christ gives, our works do not avail (Rom. 4:4; Gal. 2:16). Christ himself did the saving work, and our work consists in believing (John 6:29). By faith we enter into rest (Gal. 3:14; Heb. 4:3), and having begun by faith we are not so foolish as to return to the works of the law to perfect ourselves (Gal. 3:2, 3), as they do who trust in the sabbath of the law (Gal. 4:9-11).

Thus the Jewish sabbath represents rest in recompense for works (Rom. 4:4), and inasmuch as no one can do the works necessary to salvation by the law (Rom. 3:10), no one can enter into the promised rest by his own works. But the Lord's Day, the first day of the week, represents rest in gratitude for the work of another, Christ, and, having first rest in the Spirit, we may also work in the Spirit (Titus 3:5-8; Rom. 5:5; Acts 1:8).

The Christ that once walked the streets of Capernaum despised and neglected, and preached in her synagogue to dull and obdurate hearts, and whose voice was heard all over this beautiful region pleading in vain with a corrupt generation, still lives; and the spiritual kingdom in which those carnal multitudes saw no beauty, sways its power over hundreds of millions, and is indeed the most potent element among all the potential elements in earth's noblest forms of civilization, in the kingdoms and empires that sway the destinies of the human race. "The world passeth away and the lusts thereof; but the word of the Lord endureth for ever."—Isaac Errett.

Editorial Review

(Continued from page 4)

The First church of Long Beach, California, has an excellent plan of keeping the Evangelist on the Honor Roll. They require each and every subscriber to pay fifty cents and the church pays the other dollar out of its treasury for each subscription. Any one can afford to pay one cent a week for their church paper, and almost any church can afford to pay two cents a week for each paper that comes into its homes. Brother N. C. Nielsen is the very efficient Evangelist agent in that congregation and we are glad to note that he believes in the paper he so successfully sells to his fellow members. He said recently, "Every true blue BRETHREN should take his church paper so he will know what goes on in the church. You cannot hear Brother McClain, but you can read his sayings every week on the second page and the paper is full of good reading." Dr. Bauman followed up Brother Nielsen's statement the following week in the church calendar with a restatement of their proposition and said, "Surely there must be little interest in the work of the church to which you belong if the church paper is not worth one cent a week to you." And to those who must pay the full price of $2.00 per year, it only amounts to four cents a week. And to new subscribers during our special offer it is only two and seven-tenths cents a week. It is likely that most of the homes of our churches pay more than that each day for their daily newspaper, which features crime and immorality in almost every issue. No one can afford to be without his church paper. And no member can afford to have his fellow-members to be without it either, and much less can the pastor afford to have his people to be without it. Get your church paper into as many new homes as possible during the month of January, while the special offer lasts. $1.35 per year for new subscribers; $3.00 for one new and one renewal.

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Rev. 1:10-20; 22:16. From earliest childhood we have been fascinated by the beauty of the stars. In this respect the stars are a fitting symbol of our Lord, for he alone may be called a God of beauty. In contrast with the hideous idols of pagan lands and the sensuous rites of the beauty-loving Greeks, we see him who is the fairest among ten thousand, who holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, who is himself the bright and morning star. And there is nothing in all the world so beautiful as the love wherewith he hath loved his wayward people. Let us praise him!

TUESDAY

Psalm 139:7-12. There is no place on earth where the stars may not be seen. So it is with our God: he belongs to no one race or people, but may be seen at any time and place. Those in the uttermost parts of the earth may behold his beauty and know his matchless love even as we do, and he meets their every need even as he meets ours.

WEDNESDAY

Psalm 125. The stars are always with us. The sun may hide their presence by day or the clouds by night, but beyond them the stars may always be found. How like our God! Even in the "daylight" hours when we do not "need" him, he is ever near, and we may be assured that he ever shines beyond the clouds of trouble. If we have learned where to look for him we may find him at the first break in the clouds. In one respect, however, the stars utterly fail as a symbol of our God: he is not far removed as the stars, but "Just when I need him, Jesus is near."

THURSDAY

John 1:1-14. There always have been stars—at least so far as man is concerned. That first night in Eden, Adam beheld the stars already shining. Although we have learned much about the nature of the stars, there is still much that we do not know. In the same way, when man first appeared on earth he found God already at work in the world; we have learned much about him and his nature, although there is much more that we should know, and still more that is beyond our knowing. But let us not hesitate to accept him and delight in his beauty, and more than we refuse to believe in the presence and beauty of the stars.

FRIDAY

Psalm 147:1-11. The stars have names, even the faintest ones, and are known by name to our God. The modern astronomer also has a name for every star, some of them being the very names used by Job many centuries ago. What a picture of the loving care of God! To each one of us he has given a new name, and he calleth his sheep by name, tenderly caring for even the weakest.

SATURDAY

Phil. 1:1-6. Perhaps the most wonderful objects in the heavens are the nebulae. We may behold some of them as just masses of inert, gaseous matter, "without form and void;" others are quite evidently in revolution, and we may see new stars, new worlds, just beginning to form; others are quite plainly universes comparable to our own. In short, we may actually see God still at work in his world, creating new worlds for what great purpose we cannot even guess as yet (1 Cor. 2:9). As God still works in his universe, so he still works in the lives of his people. He has done great things for us this day, and will do more tomorrow, for he that hath begun this great work in us will perform it until the day of Christ.

SUNDAY

Eph. 2:11-22. The sun is nearly a hundred million miles from the earth, but the nearest star is more than 250,000 times as far away, and many of them are infinitely farther. Yet the distance to the stars is not so great as the distance between God and man, and some measure of his love is found in the vast distance which it spanned. Let us praise him for the greatness of his love (Rom. 5:8)!

W. I. DUKE,
President
Goshen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

Worship Program for January, 1931

Music—The hymns selected are from "The Church School Hymnal for Youth."

Prelude—An instrumental selection. An anthem by the school choir may be substituted occasionally.

Call to Worship—

"O give thanks unto Jehovah, call upon his name;

Make known among the peoples his doings.

Sing unto him, sing praises unto him;

Talk ye of all his marvellous works.

Glory ye in his holy name."

Gloria Patri—"Glory Be to the Father," No. 364.

Invocation and the Lord's Prayer—With grateful hearts we worship and adore thee, O God. In great love thou hast remembered us; thy blessings are like the sands of the sea, without number. Thou knowest all about us and in great kindness thou dost provide for all our needs. Draw very near to us in this season of meditation, prayer and praise, and help us to worship and serve thee with constant and increasing devotion. We ask it in the name of Jesus our Lord, who taught us to pray, "Our Father which art in heaven" (and so forth.) Amen.

Praise Hymn—"Come, My Soul, Thou shalt ever praise him," Hymn 20; "Thou, in the Father's house," Hymn 50; "Holy, Holy, Holy," Hymn 39; "Most High," Hymn 27; "Praise the Lord, ye Heavens Adore Him," Hymn 26; "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," Hymn 51; "Joyful, Joyful, We Adore Thee," Hymn 48; "Come, Sound His Praise Abroad," Hymn 46; "Sing to the Lord a Joyful Song," Hymn 41; "Come, Thou Almighty King," Hymn 24; "We Praise Thee, O God, Our Redeemer, Creator," Hymn 25; and "The Sun Is on the Land and Sea," Hymn 9.

Psalter Selection—"Dependence," No. 9; "Drawing Near to God," No. 11; "Courage," No. 8; "The Presence of God," No. 24; "Desire for God's Truth," No. 10; "Joy," No. 16; "Prayer for Forgiveness," No. 23; "Trust in God," No. 29; "Witnessing for God," No. 30; "Brotherhood," No. 5; "Assurance and Confidence," No. 3; "Self-Control," No. 26; "Taking Up the Cross," No. 28.

Sacrament of Silence—Introducing some thought related to the worship theme, or referring to some special need or interest of the school.

Response to Sacrament of Silence—Sing softly the "Sanctus," No. 367.

Scripture Lesson—Either the lesson for the day, or some other related Scripture.

Theme Hymn—"O Master Workman of the Race," Hymn 10; "A Thousand Years Have Come and Gone," Hymn 95; "Thou Didst Leave Thy Throne," Hymn 112; "I Would Be True," Hymn 225; "When the Golden Evening Gathered," Hymn 108; "In Christ I Feel the Heart of God," Hymn 141; "No Distant Lord Have I," Hymn 145; "Thine Arm, O Lord, in Days of Old," Hymn 107; "O Zion, Haste, Thy Mission High Fulfilling," Hymn 308; "I've Found a Friend; O Such a Friend," Hymn 191; "Into the Woods My Master Went," Hymn 121; "Stand Fast for Christ Thy Savior," Hymn 218; and "In Christ There Is No East or West," Hymn 314.

Message or Story—If stories are desired, the following books will be helpful: "Story Worship Programs for the Church School Year" and "More Story Worship Programs for the Church School Year," by Rev. Jay S. Stowell, and "Stories for Special Days in the Church School," by Margaret W. Eggleston.

Prayer Enforcing the Message or Story—By the leader, or some other selected person.

Offertory—While offering is being received, the pianist plays Hymn 277.

Dedicatory Response—"We Give Thee But Thine Own," Hymn 278.

Lesson Period.

Recall to Assembly—Using short musical numbers or chords.

Closing Hymn—Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life," Hymn 268; "As with Gladness Men of Old," Hymn 96; "We Bear the Strain of Earthly Care," Hymn 143; "To the Knights in the Days of Old," Hymn 219; "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go," Hymn 196; "Lord, Speak to Me, That I May Speak," Hymn 293; "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," Hymn 245; "Brightly Beams Our Father's Mercy," Hymn 292; "Fling Out the Banner! Let It Float," Hymn 316; "O Master, Let Me Walk with Thee," Hymn 182; "Now to Heaven Our Prayer Ascending," Hymn 239; "Just As I Am, Thine Own to Be," Hymn 181; and "Jesus Shall Reign Where'er the Sun," Hymn 310.

Benediction—"May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit be with us all evermore. Amen."

Silent Prayer—With very soft music.—The Westminster Teacher.

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for January 11)

The Childhood of Jesus

Scripture Lesson—Luke 2.

Printed Text—Luke 2:40-52.

Devotional Reading—Isa. 11:1-9.

Golden Text—Jesus advanced in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and men.—Luke 2:52.

Introductory Note

We omit this year the details of the birth of Jesus, the journey to Bethlehem, the crowded inn, the lowly stable, the shepherds and the angel's song. Also the visit of the wise men, which is recorded only in Matthew.

It is, however, not wise to ignore these utterly. There is no possibility of over-stressing this story for the deeper it enters our minds, the deeper impression it will make on our hearts and our lives.

But these aspects of the Christmas story have some emphasis each year whether we are studying the life of Christ or not, and this year we must stress the example of the growing youth,—the child who, though lord of all, was obedient to his parents, grew and learned and worked at his trade.

Beginning the Lesson

It is an interesting exercise to throw back into Jesus' boyhood some of the references of his recorded sayings: Did he not play games with other children? (Luke 7:31, 32); and as a boy like to watch the birds (Luke 8:5), the chickens (Matt. 23:37), the farmers at their work? (many parables) and study the flowers, perhaps in a little garden of his own (Luke 12:27), and the weather? (Matt. 16:2.) Or did he as a boy sometimes witness cruelties heaped upon poor prisoners in their hands by Roman soldiers stationed there in Galilee?—Adult Leader.

One's days may pass away like a shadow and leave not a trace behind. "How we spend hours that are sacred in things that are profane—which we choose to call 'necessities'—and then say, 'we cannot' to our Father's business!"—Florence Nightingale.

"O Jesus, Lad of Nazareth,

Help us this day to grow

In favor with both God and man,

As thou didst, long ago!"

—Ethel W. Trout.

The Boy Jesus in School

When Jesus was six years old his parents sent him to school.

The schoolhouse was in the audience room of the Synagogue—the Meeting House, the Jewish church. It was a day school and Sunday school in one. The school was for boys only. Jesus learned to read and write. He learned three languages: Hebrew, Greek and Aramaic, i. e., one form of Syriac, which was the common language of Palestine in that day. "He would have the same chance of learning Greek as a boy born in the Scottish Highlands has of learning English, 'Galilee of the Gentiles' being then full of Greek-speaking inhabitants."

The Bible was the chief text-book.

The method was (1) by audible study, (2) by committing to memory, "the children repeating words and sentences after the teacher, and learning certain passages by heart."

"After learning the letters and being taught to read simple words, the boys had repeated to them the sacred watchword of the faith of Israel: 'Hear, O Israel: Jehovah our God is one Jehovah' (Deut. 6:4), impressing on each child the fundamental truth of religion, that there is one living, true God, so deeply that though living among heathen they were seldom swept away from this rock foundation.—Illustrated Quarterly.

His Home Training

Christ's home was loyal to the Jewish law. Joseph and Mary kept it as the daily habit of their lives and taught it diligently to the children. Religion was of vital importance to them. It must have been one of the most natural, enjoyable and profitable features of their family life. Jewish children were taught the stories of those early servants of God who were their national heroes, as well as the basic truths and statements of their faith (Deut. 6:4-8). The home at Nazareth undoubtedly did more of this than was required of it, so that when, at the age of six, Jesus entered the synagogue school he had already had a good start in religious education. With what interest

Many must have watched over this spiritual schooling of the wonderful Boy!

Our children are our greatest gifts to the world; gifts beyond the giving of ourselves. And so gifts deserving of the very best endowment and training that it is within our power to give them. When we can present in them physical, mental and spiritual natures that are according to God's will and deal we have done our duty as parents. Then we must be willing to lose them; give them up to their visions, ambitions, decisions and futures, that, while still ours, they may enter into their full part in the world's work.—Dr. O. C. Brown.

In His Father's House

Every child should be trained to go regularly to his Father's house as one of the worshippers and learners.

The church service should be made interesting and attractive to children, and seating arranged to make them comfortable.

The presence of children in the preaching service tends to make the preaching more clear, simple, and vivid, and to make prominent the great essentials of divine truth. The great subjects always contain something for children. It is a bad sign not to see plenty of children in the church service.—Adams.

In early years (of Christian annals) children accompanied their elders to church. As early as possible you should get the boys to understand something of the history of our forms of worship, and keep on reminding them judiciously of what you have told them. How can you expect a fidgety boy of 12 to get much good from a service unless he knows why he is there, why certain prayers are used; and lastly, unless he feels that to subdue the inclination to incessant movement is part of his offering? I trust you will not fall into the error of supposing that by diminishing the obligation of praise and prayer you will guard a boy against the stubborn fashion of avoiding church services. If you accustom him to only one service on Sunday, how will he attend when he grows up? Teaching is what he requires. Something would be gained if boys were taught to regard sermons as not the most important part of the service. Strangely enough, people insist that if sermons were more attractive, young men would go to church in flocks. Perhaps they would, but what then? They would tolerate the worship and the supplications offered by others, in order to enjoy an eloquent or pungent discourse seasoned to suit their dainty palates. And no one is so fastidious about a sermon as a young gentleman who cannot abide being bored with prayers, etc., and who is restive under the average pulpit discourse.—Lytleton.

Lost in the Temple

Generally speaking it is a good place for a boy to be lost. But seldom does a boy become so absorbed in the Father's business that he gets lost in the Father's house. Most of them are lost to the Father's house. But how could Jesus have been lost to his parents in such a place? It is not difficult to understand if we consider the fact that Jerusalem was crowded with about three million pilgrims, among whom it was impossible to keep track of an active lad who had reached an age when he was responsible for himself; and our Lord was a self-reliant person, evidently trusted by his parents to take care of himself. And, left to himself, and being absorbed in the things of God, he turned to the Father's house as naturally as the plant turns to the light of the sun. The parents went on a day's journey when they discovered his absence and immediately turned back, doubtless searching the throngs, until they arrived at the temple where they found him, in the atmosphere that was his natural element. He returned to Nazareth and remained there, a loving, obedient son, until the day he began his preaching. He grew steadily in knowledge, and in the favor of God. His advancement did not require the stimulus of the temple and the Holy City or the guidance and instruction of the renowned rabbis of Jerusalem. There is never any question about men's approval and God's praise of a noble character.

"He was a boy—like you—and you,—
As full of jokes, as full of fun,
But always he was bravely true,
And did no wrong to any one.

"And one thing I am sure about,—
He never tumbled into sin,
But kept himself, within, without,
As God had made him, sweet and clean."
—John Oxenham.

The Gospels at a Glance

AUTHOR	MATTHEW	MARK	LUKE	JOHN
Occupation	Tax-Gatherer	Interpreter	Physician	Fisherman
Subject Matter	Narrative	Memoirs	Sketches	Drama
Record	Impressions	Facts	Motives	Doctrines
Key	1:1	10:45	19:10	20:31
Background	Palestine	Rome	Greece	Asia Minor
Viewpoint	Jews	Romans	Greeks	Universal
Theme	Messiahship	Ministry	Humanity	Divinity
Topics	Law	Labor	Love	Life
Arrangement	Topical	Chronological	Biographical	Metaphorical
Character	Messianic	Realistic	Human	Christian
Form	Sermons	Miracles	Parables	Conversations
Outline	Symmetry	Compactness	Order	System
Aspect	Orientalism	Imperialism	Hellenism	Christianity
Outlook	Prophetical	Practical	Intellectual	Spiritual
Quality	Power	Endurance	Sympathy	Wisdom
Style	Stately	Terse	Copious	Colloquial
Classification	Prophecy	Chronology	History	Philosophy
Time	Past	Present	Future	Eternity
Prominent Word	Fulfilled	Straightway	Compassion	Believe
Gospel	Sacrifice	Deeds	Womanhood	Teacher
Christ	Man of Sorrows	Wonder Worker	Healer	Shepherd
Office	King	Servant	Son	Word
Symbols	Lion	Ox	Man	Eagle
Interpretation	Strength	Service	Humanity	Vision
Portrait	Messiah	God-Man	Redeemer	God
Picture	Profile	Steel Engraving	Half-Tone	Life-Size
Quotations	45	22	24	15
Allusions	42	12	34	24
Passages Peculiar To	106	72	97	87
Pages	68	42	72	55
Peculiarities	42	93	59	92
Coincidences	58	7	41	8
Words in R. V.	23,407	14,854	25,654	19,007
Inscriptions on Cross	27:37	15:26	23:38	19:19
Conclusion	Resurrection 28:6	Ascension 16:19	Promise of Spirit 24:49	Second Coming 21:22

Published by permission of M. A. Stuckey.

Released November 11, 1930.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

AMONG THE OHIO CHURCHES

It was my happy privilege to spend nearly all of November and December among the Ohio churches and I was able to visit all but two,—Miamisburg and North Georgetown. Two others that I formerly visited are no longer functioning. Several others must awaken and be more evangelistic or they will lose their candlesticks also. I am glad to say however, that on the whole the churches in Ohio are progressing and were very kind to me and responsive to the plea for missions.

The New Lebanon church gave the most liberally of all the churches, due partly to the preparation beforehand by the pastor, Brother King.

At Dayton I spent a happy week in a Bible Institute in company with Prof. Stuckey of our seminary at Ashland, and enjoyed the hospitality of Prof. and Mrs. Brumbaugh and others at Dayton. Brother Barnard has a very appreciative congregation, eager to learn and active in service. Here there is a large number of talented workers who help to carry on the big program of the church. At Ashland also it was a joy to associate with former friends and fellow-workers while speaking daily to the students in chapel and to the church. I was impressed by the number and good character of the students at the college and the seminary and am sure that the faculty and students with good pastors and church members made for its success. Its professors are equal to the best anywhere.

I would like to write at length of each church and express my gratitude to the pastors for their hearty cooperation.

I am now at South Bend, beginning my visits among the Indiana churches which will keep me busy until February.

C. F. YODER,

Permanent Address, Ashland, Ohio.

A SUBSCRIBER FOR FORTY YEARS

Elkhart, Ind., Dec. 18, 1930.

Brethren Evangelist Promotion Committee,
Ashland, Ohio.

Gentlemen:

Your letter received reminding us that our subscription to the Brethren Evangelist will soon expire. Of course, we will renew as usual through our home church—Goshen. Let me tell you that we have been subscribers to The Brethren Evangelist for a long, long time—forty years or more. We took the church paper when Brother Holsinger was the editor.

I cannot understand why not more of the Brethren are taking the Evangelist. Comparing it with religious papers of other denominations, we wonder how our publishing house can afford to get out such a paper for the price now offered. There are no advertisements or continued stories to fill space as in most other religious publications. The contributions to our church paper are from our most able and influential men and women of the church.

Especially important is it that it should be in homes where there are children. We keep posted as to happenings in our vicinity and abroad by reading our home paper. Then why not keep informed as to doings in the brotherhood as well as having access to sermons and other articles of religious importance? Children will read and why not have them read something that will make of them real men and women. As Brother Reuben Miller said, "Sometimes one article in The Evangelist is worth the price of the year's subscription." They may say that we have our Bibles to read and that we can "listen in" to radio programs—but I am of the opinion that those who read their Bibles most, also read the church paper.

Yours for the good cause,

H. J. SCHROCK, 216 Kenyon Ave.

HARRAH, WASHINGTON

As the train slowly moved from the station and gathered speed, the notes of that old song, "God be with you till we meet again," were gently wafted in at my open car window. The music grew fainter and fainter and finally faded away as the train increased the distance between me and the little group on the station platform.

The message of that song has held true and God has been with both Brother Kinzie and myself and we have met again. Then, it was parting at Krypton, Kentucky; now it was meeting at Harrah, Washington.

Our meeting at Harrah lasted some three weeks and we thank God for the privilege of meeting with the good Brethren in this valley. They have a beautiful new building capable of seating a good sized audience in comfort. Seldom, if ever, do I have a house so well filled and such a steady audience from night to night. The interest was indeed good and we were made to rejoice that so many came out in a definite stand for the Lord in conversion and re-consecration.

The pastors are indeed few who make a more definite and thorough business of caring for their flock and for the community in general than does Brother Kinzie and his good wife.

A goodly number found their way to the prayer room before services each evening. One thing was especially noteworthy because it is such a rare quality and should be noted with favor by women who want to do something for the Lord. A sister said to me, "About all we women can find to do is to pray." Well, thank God for that. Little can they realize how much the success of the meeting depended upon their prayers, for it is still true that "prayer moves the hand that moves the world."

Miracles in the natural world may seem wonderful but they are not so great as the miracle of grace that can take a servant of Satan and translate him from the kingdom of darkness and into the kingdom of God's dear Son.

One young man was given the choice of home or Christ. He chose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. (Heb. 11:25). But God, who can take the wise in his own craftiness, turned this trick of the Devil into a blessing and gave him a far better home, a home where Christ honored and the family altar a reality.

One of the most effective methods spreading the Gospel, in our day, is by means of the printed page. Christians should place the Scripture in their own hear and teach it diligently to their children and write it upon the posts of their house (Deut. 6:6-9) and be instant in season and out of season in spreading the Gospel to those about them.

In response to the first, some twenty-five boxes of Scripture memory verses were purchased; in response to the second, many dedicated their homes more fully to the Lord by setting up a family altar; in response to the third, over sixty Scripture mottoes were purchased and in response to the fourth, some twenty-five thousand tracts were purchased to be used in personal distribution.

Babyhood is a critical time, and many who start out in the Christian life will find great joy in that it is no bed of roses because of the lack of the sincere milk of the Word (1 Pet. 2:2) they soon fall away and turn back to their wallowing in the mire (2 Pet. 2:22). In this case I have fears for Brother Kinzie uses the expository method of preaching and is very faithful in taking heed to his flock over which the Holy Ghost has made him overseer and he will faithfully care for and feed them out of the Word of God.

My parting message to the many good friends at Harrah is, keep "looking for the Blessed Hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior, Jesus Christ (Titus 2:13).

"God be with you till we meet 'out there.'"

R. I. HUMBERD

MILLER REVIVAL CAMPAIGN

We are anxious to report to our Evangelist family the high spots in our recent revival effort. Long before our evangelist arrived in Southern California, we had planned and prayed for his coming. After observing his work in four meetings in the district previous to our own campaign, it was to be expected that we should be more than anxious for our turn to come. So was not to our disadvantage to be the lesser. To be sure, the evangelist was coming physically tired, but he hardly lowered his hearers to even surmise that his strenuous activities were carried through to the very last night, and we gave God all the glory that he was so enabled to work.

In all the reports we have read concerning the qualifications and character of P. Miller as an evangelist, there has been nothing but the highest of praise. We need not, nor do we now, doubt the truth of the observations. Instead, we desire to give assent to the most complimentary things that have already been said. Only a life that is Christ-centered will allow itself to be poured out in such unselfish service. When so many evangelists have proved disappointing in the past, it is a relief to find in men like Brother Miller whose chief aim is to glorify God and to exalt Christ. To our pastors who worked with Brother Miller in campaigns previous to ours, his speaking of his work after their respective meetings said, "There is not a single criticism to make in either his life or work. These were fine tributes by pastors who have had experience with evangelists and know something of their professional characteristics which is so often disappointing to spiritual Christians. May God continue less Brother Paul in his work. We recommend him to any and all churches as an evangelist and Christian worker who will be a great blessing and help. He received an offering which was greatly out of proportion to the reputation of our church in re- turning outside help, but the offering represented only a small part of our appreciation of all the good which he did us.

We were thankful to God for the splen- dored weather which he granted us. On the night, a large crowd was on hand to give the first message. On the next day we got a taste of what rainy weather would do for our meetings. The next day, which was Thanksgiving, we experienced the rain and small attendance. Then came days of continuous sunshine and clear skies. All weather excuses from then on were blotted out. There was fine attendance throughout the last two weeks. As usual, there were splendid delegations from our neighboring Brethren groups which were greatly appreciated by us all.

As for results, we dare not measure them in view of our expectations. We do not always expect the higher and best things. Not that God gave us what we most needed and we had a revived church. Fifty-one members of the church responded at various times throughout the meetings to calls for consecration, full surrender and deeper spiritual living. A number of so-called "sliders" have come back with such new zeal that we cherish them more than first sessions if that be possible. We now are more capable to go into this needy world and be used of God to register many more victories for him.

There are twenty-five to be added to the church by baptism. Of this number, six are adults and the rest young people. Boys and girls will receive further instruction before they are counted. This is the best to us in this locality. Our guess is that there will be a substantial increase to the cause of Christ as a result of these meetings. Many prospects have been found and many valuable contacts have been made.

As a young man in the ministry, the writer wishes to express his appreciation of the valuable personal help given him by the evangelist. His hope is that his parishioners will discover that he is a better and more yielded co-worker for having associated with this man of prayer, of hard work, of power, of God.

A. D. CASHMAN.

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

The College recently debated with Mus- kum College here at the Chapel. The resolutions related to plans for reducing un- employment. Messrs Klingensmith, Shier, and Brown represented Ashland. No resolutions were employed, hence no decision given.

At the last meeting of the Faculty Club, Kirkland of the department of Educa- tion read a very acceptable paper on the general subject of Reading for Young Peo- ple.

It is with great regret that I announce that Mrs. Leslie, dean of women, has re- signed her position in the school, the resig- nation to take effect at the end of the pres- ent semester. Mrs. Leslie has been here for many years, teaching in the department of elementary education and also acting as dean of women. In both positions she has been exceptionally successful. The position of dean of women here is a most difficult one, or rather it has been so in the past, but under the very capable direction of Mrs. Leslie, the office has become a pleasure as well as a duty. She has exercised rare good judgment in dealing with the girls and has done so with little friction. I can not speak too highly of her work as dean.

Mrs. Leslie expects to go to Denver where she will make her home with a sister and after a period of rest, will likely take up work in the University of Denver. The entire College unites in wishing her the best of everything as she severs her relation with us.

The teaching part of Mrs. Leslie's work has been provided for by the employment of Miss Beulah Woods, a member of the Church of the Brethren. Miss Woods is a native of Ohio and has spent some time in India where she went as a missionary under her church board. She is now in Chicago University where she has taken her Master's degree and has some residence requirements towards the doctorate. She will come here at the opening of the second semester.

The work of the deanship has not yet been assigned.

The writer of these notes attended the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science held this week at Cleveland, where he met and stayed with Dr. Anspach of the Ypsilanti State College, (Michigan). The meeting was well attended and it was a distinct pleasure to see and hear men, some of whose text books are taught here in the College. There were also meetings of other learned societies which we attended. Beyond any doubt the American Association leads the way for scientific advancement and it sounded no pes- simistic note. The outlook for the ad- vancement of science and human learning is bright.

Professor Puterbaugh is here for the holi- days, and I gather from my conversation with him that he is getting along well at Northwestern. He plans to return here next fall, which is good news to the College. Pro- fessor Puterbaugh also attended the Cleve- land meeting, as did also Drs. Caldwell and Ullman.

School reconvenes Tuesday, January 6th.
EDWIN E. JACOBS.

BRIGHTON, INDIANA

It has been some time since the brother- hood has heard from the Brighton church, but we have been at work steadily prepar- ing for a great work to be accomplished for God this winter. We began our fall cam- paign by observing our Rally Day in Sep- tember, which was a success. We then de- cided to get ready for our revival campaign to be held some time in the fall or winter months. The people all got busy working and praying for this revival effort, and we succeeded in getting Brother B. F. Owen of Nappanee to hold our revival for us, begin- ning on the 8th day of December.

The meeting was begun and Brother Owen went to work in earnest as he always does, and a glorious revival was the result. At the close of the meeting of two weeks, there were twenty-three souls added to the church, one by letter and twenty-two by confession. On last Sunday afternoon the writer had the good pleasure of leading twenty-one people into the baptismal waters, and on Sunday evening Brother Owen and the writer took those twenty- one into the church. Of this number who united with the church, nineteen of them were young people, the majority of whom are in their teens. Thus the future of the Brighton church is assured.

Just a word about Brother Owen and his work at Brighton. He preached the simple old-time Gospel in the old-fashioned way, and souls accepted the call, as they always do when God's Word is preached. The peo- ple are hungering for the old Gospel preached in the old-fashioned way. The people here are well satisfied with Brother Owen's effort, and I know that by his seed sowing, there will no doubt be some more reaping for the church.

The writer did not have the pleasure of being with him very much, but he and the good people at Brighton managed things very acceptably.

Pray for us that we may be used to a greater advantage yet in the salvation of souls and that his Church may prosper.

C. D. WHITMER.

217 E. Dubail Avenue, South Bend, Ind.

MOUNT OLIVE, VIRGINIA

The Mt. Olive church is still on the map and doing things. Since our last report new carpet and a new piano have been pur- chased. The new basement is about com- pleted. Much credit is due Brother Walter Koontz, who was the manager. Also I would mention the fine spirit with which the mem- bership and others responded. At the call, out came pocketbooks; off came coats; picks, shovels and teams were in action and soon- er than expected we were able to begin us- ing the basement. The church building be- ing raised three feet above the old founda- tion affords plenty of light and ventilation.

In June, the Conference met at this place. A fine spirit prevailed throughout the con- ference and we are hoping that it will not be so long until we can be in a better con- dition to entertain our district conference. We shall enjoy having this appreciative gathering with us again.

On October 14, Brother I. D. Bowman of Leesburg, New Jersey, came to assist us in an evangelistic effort. For two weeks we enjoyed strong spiritual sermons, large crowds, and fine singing. The visible re- sults were nine confessions. We do not want to overlook the evangelist's son, Broth- er Joe Bowman, whose services at the piano were so much appreciated. After eleven years of service, because of failing health, we are resigning our pastorate at Mt. Olive to take effect January 1, 1931, praying that the failure of our physical strength may mean greater progress for Mt. Olive. Our present address is Rhoadesville, Virginia.

G. W. CHAMBERS.

MEETING AT MT. OLIVE, VIRGINIA

I just closed a short campaign in my old home church, the first church I ever had part in building, some 48 years ago. We only had four members in the community— father, mother, wife and myself. S. H. Bashor held a meeting in my school house at Sunnyside, some three miles away. He had 33 confessions. Father and I went to Pineville school house within a stone's throw of the site upon which Mount Olive church now stands. We obtained the school house here and Bashor conducted a successful meeting with 33 confessions. Mt. Olive has had a gradual growth until today it is pos- sibly the largest Brethren congregation in the Valley of Virginia. Brother Chambers has been its successful pastor for eleven years and it is in a better condition today than ever before. The Church of the Brethren, the largest congregation in this part of the valley, works hand in hand with the Brethren. The meeting was short, beginning October 14, and ending the 26th. The crowds were large from the beginning, until the close we had the largest crowds ever known here. The last Sunday night we seated 300 people in addition to the regular seating capacity, and then a number were turned away.

This field has been well worked, yet the interest became more intense until the very close. It seemed a pity to close, but we could not stay longer. Brother Chambers will report the number of confessions. The Church of the Brethren helped us much in attendance and special music. Brother Luther Good was the successful song leader. He has good piano players. My youngest boy did most of the playing for us during the meeting.

My youngest brother came 150 miles from Covington, Virginia over the last Sunday. We stayed the last night with another brother, and on Tuesday morning we bade farewell and my Brother J. S. Bowman and I drove 150 miles more to Vienna, Virginia, to visit my oldest brother who is afflicted, and just lost his noble wife a few weeks ago.

I will preach here in Mt. Olive Brethren church over Sunday, take midnight train and hope to land home Monday noon. I received a letter yesterday from my wife, stating that my house was struck with lightning. What a checkered experience is life! but all works together for good for those who love the Lord.

ISAAC D. BOWMAN.

SUNNYSIDE, WASHINGTON

Five weeks with Brother Flora at Spokane and Brother Kinzie at Harrah, continued my engagements in the great Northwest, but Sunnyside being near, Brother Fry took me to his home and for a week I gave my Bible Chart lectures in his church.

The Brethren at Sunnyside are well "fed up" on the Word and we were glad for the opportunity of meeting with these good people. Here we met Brother Earl Reed, who is doing a good work in his Bible classes.

Brother Fry seems to be just the man for the place, for since his coming, discord has changed to harmony. One pastor said, "He is the one man out of twenty who would fit in as he has."

Yakima

Yakima is a city of some twenty-two thousand souls with scarcely a Fundamental note among the large city churches. But God has his faithful remnant and through a Bible class and Laymans' Organization the light of truth has been kept shining.

Seeing my announcements, they took steps to have me speak in their city. A large room was secured in the Y. M. C. A. and we held a five day Prophetic conference.

I expected a few earnest souls to gather night after night, but I was greatly surprised at the size of the audience the first night. The third night chairs had to be brought in and the last evening we closed with a packed house.

I have never been received with such enthusiasm and I thank God that they are now planning on continuing with Bible Conferences from time to time. Five precious souls came out in conversion and reconciliation the last evening.

I can imagine the contents of a sermon that will be preached in one of the large city churches, for a pastor ventured in and saw some of his flock actually enjoying a message that rang true to the Word of God. He began his work before I left the room and I had to break it up.

I stayed in the beautiful home of Brother and Sister Harris where everything was done for my comfort and happiness. I also had the joy of being in the home of Brother and Sister Faw for a meal.

May the Lord mightily bless his people as they thus witness for him in the midst of the darkness of the apostasy in the churches of Yakima.

R. I. HUMBERD.

REPORT OF THE ILLIOKOTA DISTRICT CONFERENCE HELD AT WATERLOO, IOWA, OCTOBER, 6, 7, 8, 1930

Monday evening, October 6

Conference was called to order by Moderator S. M. Whetstone, who introduced Rev. E. Forrest Byers of Hudson, Iowa, who was our song leader during the conference. After opening song service the evening devotions were led by Brother J. F. Garber of Leon, Iowa.

The address of welcome to the Conference was brought by Brother H. H. Reitz of the Waterloo church. After response from the delegates Moderator Whetstone appointed the Nominating Committees and the Conference Membership or Credential Committees. All other business was scheduled for the Tuesday morning session.

Vice-Moderator C. C. Grisso brought the sermon of the evening. Topic—The Secret of the Power of Pentecost.

This is the nineteen hundredth anniversary of Pentecost. The church of that day was instructed to tarry until they should receive power from on high. They obeyed and received the promised blessing. If the church of today would tarry for God's blessing, instead of rushing madly from one thing to another, not listening to God's voice, we would receive the same blessing.

There are four fundamental things in the power of Pentecost.

First—Prayer.

It has been said that to keep on its feet a church must keep on its knees. Great power can be brought to a pastor and his church if the congregation keeps in touch with God.

Second—United Purpose.

They were all with one accord in one place. Great power may be obtained from a united church. One faction here and another there destroys the unity of the church and robs it of its power.

Third—Preaching.

Peter's sermon was very ordinary but Pentecost had changed him from the man who denied his Christ a short while before to a preacher of a glorified Christ with such force and conviction that many hearing him cried out, "What shall we do to be saved?"

Fourth—Practice.

They continued steadfastly in the apostle's Doctrine. The besetting sin of the church today is INDIFFERENCE and CARELESSNESS.

Closing hymn—Pentecostal Power.

Tuesday Morning, October 7

The hour from eight o'clock to nine o'clock was occupied with the group meetings of the Women's Missionary Society and the District Ministerium.

The nine o'clock session was opened with song led by Brother E. Forrest Byers, following which Brother George E. Cone led in prayer. The hours from nine to ten were taken for the general business session of the conference. Moderator Whetstone appointed the following committee on committees: Brother E. Forrest Byers, Brother R. Staley and Brother Ernest Myers.

The following is a directory of the Illiokota churches for the year 1930-1931 and complete list of the officers, Sunday School Department heads, District Mission Board, College Trustees, Conference Executive Committeeman, Ministerial Examining Board and District Evangelists.

Illiokota District Churches

Cerro Gordo, Illinois, Mrs. Lloyd Crow, Secretary; no pastor.

Dallas Center, Iowa, pastor, Rev. A. Staley.

Garwin, Iowa, pastor, Rev. A. L. Moyer.

Hudson, Iowa, pastor, Rev. E. Forrest Byers.

Lanark, Illinois, pastor, Rev. C. C. Grisso.

Leon, Iowa, pastor, Rev. Miles Taber.

Milledgeville, Illinois, pastor, Rev. Geo. Cone.

Pleasant Grove church, North English, Iowa; secretary, E. C. Lortz, Millersburg, Iowa; pastor, Rev. Homer Anders.

North English, Iowa.

Udell, Iowa; secretary, Mrs. Harold Spruiell, Centerville, Iowa.

Waterloo, Iowa, pastor, Rev. S. M. Whetstone.

ILLIOKOTA DISTRICT DIRECTORY

Moderator—Rev. C. C. Grisso, Lanark, Ill.

Vice Moderator—Rev. A. R. Staley, Dallas Center, Iowa.

Statistician—Rev. E. Forrest Byers, Hudson, Iowa.

Secretary-Treasurer—O. A. Prather, 19th Ave., S. W., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Christian Endeavor Supervisor—Rev. Miles Taber, Leon, Iowa.

Sunday School Supervisor—Miss Lulu Lister, Waterloo, Iowa.

Representative to Iowa Council of Religious Education—Mrs. F. A. Wisner, Waterloo, Iowa.

Representative to Illinois Council of Religious Education—Cora Livengood, Milledgeville, Illinois.

Sunday School Department Heads

Adult Department—J. O. Gring.

Young People's Department—Rev. E. Forrest Byers, Hudson, Iowa.

Children's Department—Cora Livengood, Milledgeville, Illinois.

Administration—Rev. S. M. Whetstone, Waterloo, Iowa.

Citizenship—Ray A. Emmert, 2937 Carpenter Avenue, Des Moines, Iowa.

Home Department—Etta Lichty, Waterloo, Iowa.

Educational Department—Rev. C. C. Grisso, Lanark, Illinois.

Missions—Mrs. Ray A. Emmert, 2937 Carpenter Ave., Des Moines, Iowa.

District Mission Board

President—A. A. Bontrager, Waterloo, Ill.

Secretary—Rev. Geo. E. Cone, Milledgeville, Illinois.

Treasurer—H. Bryce Puterbaugh, Lanark, Illinois.

Miles Taber, Leon, Iowa; J. F. Garber, Hudson, Iowa; G. T. Ronk, 1920 Grand Avenue, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

College Trustees

S. P. Hoover, Waterloo, Iowa; G. T. Ronk, 1920 Grand Avenue, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Ray A. Emmert, 2937 Carpenter Avenue, Des Moines, Iowa.

Conference Executive Committeeman—S. M. Whetstone, Waterloo, Iowa.

Ministerial Examining Board

Geo. E. Cone, Milledgeville, Iowa.

S. M. Whetstone, Waterloo, Iowa.

C. C. Grisso, Lanark, Illinois.

District Evangelists

Eastern District—C. C. Grisso, Lanark, Ill.

thern District—S. M. Whetstone, Waterloo, Iowa.

thern District—Miles Taber, Leon, Iowa.

Evangelistic Districts

stern Division: Milledgeville, Lanark, and Cerro Gordo, Illinois.

thern Division: Waterloo, Hudson, Garwin and Pleasant Grove church, North English, Iowa.

thern Division: Des Moines, Leon, Dallas Center and Udell, Iowa.

Reports of the District Statistician, District Mission Board, Secretary and Treasurer, and District Secretary and Treasurer are read and accepted as read.

At ten o'clock Moderator S. M. Whetstone brought the Moderator's address and recommendations to the conference. Following is the copy of his address:

Moderator's Address

Beloved Brethren in Christ:

It becomes my happy privilege to greet you in the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and to invoke his "Peace which passeth all understanding" to rest upon us as we assemble in this Illiokota Conference. We must come with profound gratitude to God our Heavenly Father, that he has spared us and blessed us with many precious gifts of life, that have made the year since we last met one of joy and gladness. We have been offered the "riches of God's saving grace." All the fullness of God's love in Christ may be ours for the asking and taking. All the beauty and the joy, the dignity and the grace, all the commissions of life that flows from clean, holy and Godly living, are freely given to those who "walk humbly before God." Brethren, what else can surpass the worth of this consciousness?

Following the custom which has always prevailed in our conferences, it now becomes my duty to direct our attention to some of the problems and tasks which confront us. In doing this I shall make some suggestions and also offer some recommendations.

Of the early church we read, "they continued steadfastly in the apostle's doctrine of fellowship, and in breaking of bread and in prayer." The Brethren Church came into existence in order to help preserve in this world those identical characteristics. However, by our constant connection with those who differ from our view-point, tends to destroy our own conviction. Therefore, we have the problem of maintaining in this city "the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints." With the passing of many of our older stalwart Brethren ministers there is less emphasis placed upon the importance of observing the ordinances they were delivered. I realize the spirit above the form, but we need both; for if we lay aside the form we are almost sure to lose the spirit. In view of this fact, I commend that our pastors give at least once a year a thorough exposition of the ordinances, as to their form; as to their purpose and as to their spirit.

Along with this spirit of the times to minimize the value of the ordinances, there is also a tendency to minimize the value of the teaching of the Scriptures. The fact is, we have put moral influence in place of the blood atonement; and some put "religious education" where regeneration belongs. Now religion is a very subtle and very often poses as an angel of light, making people believe that these are but "new forms of expression." Our own Brethren people have always been known as a people who have stood firm upon and square with the Word of God, and this is no time too become lax in this fundamental point. Therefore, I recommend that during the year we make clear the Great Bible Doctrines; such as the Doctrine of God; the Doctrine of Man; the Doctrine of Sin; the Doctrine of Christ; the Doctrine of Salvation; the Doctrine of the Church; the Doctrine of the Holy Spirit; and so on. Especially, would we urge that a course of this nature be used with our young people that they might have a good foundation to build upon. In fact, I see no great sin in departing from the International Series, to consider some of these great fundamental teachings.

I take this opportunity to call our church back to her first and greatest task,—THAT OF EVANGELISM. That church is doomed to failure that has lost its evangelistic appeal. The Brethren Church must be evangelistic. The gospel must be preached. I am fearful lest the church to which we belong shall fail to an alarming degree in this very task. We are not aroused to the danger of the lost men and women all about us. Many of the lost are our fellow-citizens; some of them are our neighbors, and some of them are of our very household; and yet we hardly think of them. That church that is not constantly winning souls is a dying church. Her days are numbered! We therefore recommend that our churches rekindle that evangelistic passion which has ever been blessed of God to the salvation of souls and the establishing of new churches.

If ours is to be a strong church in the future, we must look well to, and provide well for, the proper type of leadership. We are living in a time when real Christian leadership is a problem. Of that early church we read, "they continued in fellowship," but I assure you it was not the fellowship with the world. The greatest problem before the Christian Church today is the problem of leadership. May I say it here, and say it plainly, that the Brethren Church stands squarely for separation from the world. There is nothing more dangerous than the breaking down of the separation between the church and the world. We therefore, urge both MINISTRY AND LAITY to guard carefully your daily conduct that you "be not a stumbling block to others;" but rather, "Let your light so shine that others may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Our Interests—Missions

Since the closing of the Des Moines work last spring, our District has been without a mission point of its own to foster. This is not good for us as a District. We should have some place in this District where we could have a part in building a Brethren church. Perhaps this will be worked out during this conference. With our National Board coming before us with an aggressive program, which has as its aim the establishing of at least one new Brethren church each year, we recommend that our entire district get back of the new program to the limit.

Permit me just a word regarding our foreign mission work. We have all been greatly interested in this work and our interest shall continue with our very best support.

Ashland College and Seminary

The Brethren Church can well feel proud of both the College and Seminary. Both have made wonderful progress during the past year. Through the splendid help given by every church in the entire brotherhood, the College was able to meet the requirements of the North Central Association of Colleges. This gives Ashland College a standing she has never had before and makes her credits absolutely good.

The Seminary has also been standardized and strengthened in a way that will mean much to our churches in general. This gives promise of a better trained and deeper consecrated ministry for our churches through the years to come. However, with all this it does not mean that we can simply forget that our College and Seminary still has some needs. We must still give Ashland our loyal support throughout the years. Financial support we must give, but there is another type of support in which we are lax. I do not know what Dr. Bell will say to us during this conference along the line of the church and her relation to the College and Seminary. But there is one thing which is upon my heart very forcibly:—That is the OBLIGATION of Brethren people to send their young folks to Ashland College. Brethren young people do go to College, but they do not attend our own college as they should. We must do more than simply own the ground and buildings and equipment. Our interest must be more than merely financial. Ashland College is a challenge to the entire brotherhood to send to her the very best of our own flesh and blood. We therefore, urge that our leadership, both ministry and lay, do all possible to support Ashland.

Our Responsibilities

Just here I wish to add a word concerning our responsibilities. In these days the church is face to face with the problem of church discipline and it is a serious one. Christ's last message to the seven churches of Asia were addressed to individual churches, and to the UNFAITHFUL the message was, "Repent, or I will remove thy candlestick out of thy place." The Lord still expects discipline in his church, and we believe many a candlestick has been removed because of the lack of it. A worldly church will not attract! Neither sinners, or saints! Churches, as well as individual members, must learn that it is not necessary to follow every style and fad that comes along, but it is necessary to "keep unspotted from the world."

Our Great Need

What is it? We are forever talking about plans, but what the church needs most is not plans, but power! Spiritual power! Holy Spirit power! The early church continued "steadfastly in the apostle's doctrine, and fellowship, and in the breaking of bread," but also "in prayer." In other words it went to the right source for guidance and power.

Now in the light of this, what are our needs? Do we lack workers? The Word says, "Pray that the Lord of the harvest may send forth laborers into his harvest." Do we lack wisdom? The Word says, "Ask of God who giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not." Are any sick? "Pray for one another that ye may be healed." Are any fallen? The Word says, "Ask, and God will give life for them that sin not unto death."

Brethren churches and Brethren homes should be "tarrying" places for prayer, as well as for teaching. The devil can find no surer way to apostasy than to keep folks so busy they don't pray. Therefore, let there be a mighty campaign to MAKE and KEEP the church a power in prayer. That will make it a victorious church!

S. M. WHETSTONE.

At eleven o'clock Rev. A. L. Moyer of Garwin brought the sermon of the morning, on "Elijah, the Man of God."

Our ministry has depreciated to engineers of ecclesiastical machinery. The Bible does not tell us how we must stand in the pulpit or how we must talk but we are given definite instructions as to how to pray. If we follow these instructions we will get results. The people of Elijah's day had left God out of the program. God often undoes at one stroke all we have done without him. No one can defy the direct commands of God and retain the salvation of their souls. When man is entirely lost then God steps in. Man's extremity is God's opportunity.

Tuesday Afternoon, 1:30 P. M.

Song service led by Rev. E. Forrest Byers and devotions by Brother Ernest Myers of the Pleasant Grove church.

Dr. W. S. Bell brought us a message in regard to our college, our seminary and our publishing house. Our college is a part of our church the same as our missions, our publishing house or our old folks' home. The great need of our church today is competent leadership and only by training our leaders in our own college can we have the proper leaders. Our college is at the present time in very good condition as to standing, both financial and educational. This does not mean that we will not be called on to make any more contributions to it but we will have to stand behind it as the years go on to keep it in the front rank. The standards of the North Central Association of Colleges have been met and the college has a very high standing today.

Our seminary standards have been raised until they are equal to any other seminary.

Our publishing house is going forward toward a great future. It is a good investment and should give it our undivided support in every way possible.

At 2:30 P. M. the open session of the Women's Missionary Society was held.

Evening session at 7:15 opened by song service, led by Rev. E. Forrest Byers and devotions led by Brother O. A. Prather.

Special Music Numbers: Violin Solo—Martha Strayer, Hudson, Iowa; Musical Saw Numbers—Ernest Myers, Pleasant Grove church; Vocal Solo—The Holy City, Brother C. H. Gnagey, Waterloo, Iowa.

Brother H. F. Stuckman of Goshen, Indiana, brought us a message on Home Mission Interests.

The proper interest is not taken in our Home Mission work. There are churches in the brotherhood today that with a little help will make good, strong churches, but without help they will die. Nearly all of the large cities are filled with Brethren who are without a church home. Churches should be started at these points. In Cleveland forty-eight Brethren answered the first call to a meeting in regard to establishing a church there. This work is being started this year, but it will take $3,000.00 to carry it on. The Board is undertaking it with the faith that the brotherhood will respond and the work may be completed and a self-supporting church established at this point.

Wednesday Morning, October 8

The eight o'clock hour was occupied with the group meetings of the District Ministerium and the Womens' Missionary Society.

The nine o'clock session was opened with song service led by Rev. E. Forrest Byers, and devotions by Rev. G. T. Ronk of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Final report of the credential committees showed forty-one lay delegates and 10 ministerial delegates.

The time and place committee reported Dallas Center, Iowa as the place of the 1931 conference and recommended that the time be changed to Friday, Saturday and Sunday of the first full week in October. This report was later amended to start the conference on Thursday evening and get all conference work out of the way to leave Sunday for an inspirational meeting. This change in time was recommended to enable our young people to be present and participate in our conference. The report was adopted by the conference.

Motion was passed to assess each church 10 cents per member as per last statistical report, to defray the traveling expenses of our College Trustees to the annual meeting at Ashland, Ohio.

The report of the special committee appointed at the 1929 conference in regard to constitution and by-laws was read at this time. Constitution and by-laws and sections of the rules adopted by the National Conference were read. The report of this committee was adopted and the adoption of the same must be made by the churches before they can be seated at the 1931 conference. Brother S. M. Whetstone, Brother A. R. Staley and Brother E. Forrest Byers were elected conference trustees for the coming year.

Delegates were instructed to go home and have their churches adopt the constitution, by-laws and manual of procedure immediately and report same to the Conference Secretary.

We were favored with a vocal duet at this time by Brother and Sister C. C. Grisso.

Rev. Geo. E. Cone brought us the sermon of the morning in the form of a Bible lecture. Subject—Jesus Christ through the Ages.

The world has lost its sense of sin. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God and the Word was God." This same word was Jesus Christ. We have several appearances of the Angel of the Lord between the creation and the appearing of Jesus Christ in the flesh. This angel of the Lord was undoubtedly Jesus Christ. He appeared to Hagar; to Abraham in the case of destroying the cities of the plain; and to Moses in the burning bush. Other references are in Proverbs 10:19; James 1:26; Proverbs 24:9; Romans 13:23; 1 John 3:4; 1 John 5:17. Jesus Christ will be the same on through the eternities to come.

(To be continued)

DARWIN DISPUTED

Mme. Zavadsky, associate of Mme. Curie at the Institute of Radium in Paris, disputes the Darwinian theory of "the survival of the fittest." Darwin believed that nature experimented with various changes in living creatures, and chose the form best fitted to survive as the basis of a new species. But Mme. Zavadsky's experiment have led her to the conclusion that nature creates a brand new species spontaneously in a single individual without experimentation. She believes that nature is extremely conservative in these matters, and that outside forces cannot influence the formation of species. Which means, of course, that man is a distinct creation of God, as divine revelation teaches.

("I have created him for my glory, have formed him; yea, I have made him. Isaiah 43:7). —Rev. C. M. Elderdice, Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

3.5% INCREASE IN COLLEGE ATTENDANCE

Ramond Walters, dean of Swarthmore College, reports an enrollment of 871,184 in 431 colleges and universities in the United States, an increase of 3.5% as compared with the enrollment of last year.

According to Dean Walters, the explanation for the increase of 3½ per cent in the academic year "probably lies in the continuous faith of the American people in high education and likewise in present economic conditions. When business and industrial openings are lacking for the children, parents who have savings are disposed to send them on to college."—The Evangelical-Messenger.

The Hearst newspapers expect to save $100,000 a year by cutting out all large capital letters at the beginning of columns and other ornamental types. The saving will be in the time of linotype operator Mr. Hearst expects.

NEW AND RENEWAL

This is the Month to Press the Campaign for both new and renewal subscriptions to THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST.

Put your church on the Honor Roll. Or, if it is already on, keep it on and enlarge, if possible, the number of your subscriptions.

We urge every pulpit of the Brotherhood, both of churches on the Honor Roll and those not, to give The Evangelist some public notice during this month. Tell in a word of its service to the church and announce, where the paper is not in every home, our special offer to new subscribers.

$1.35 for new subscribers for one year.

$3.00 for one new and one renewal for one year.

$1.35 for new and $1.50 for renewals for churches being put on the Honor Roll during the month of January.

THE EVANGELIST is loyal to every church interest; be loyal to it.

Vol. LIII
Number 2

January 10
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

THE CHURCH PAPER

Keeps the membership of the Church informed on denominational matters.

Gives valuable publicity to the Church's programs and propaganda.

Discusses vital questions of Church life.

Challenges the Church to high endeavor and sustained effort.

Cultivates the spiritual life of the readers.

Encourages religion in the home.

Provides wholesome reading for the family circle, and for the children.

Carries messages of hope and cheer to the discouraged and distraught.

Maintains high ideals of Christian life and service.

Counteracts the vicious and unchristian teaching of newspapers and other secular literature.

Furnishes illuminating and interesting expositions of the International Sunday School lessons.

Records the home going of those whom God has called from this life.

Helps to fight the battles for morality and righteousness in civic and social life.

Brings information of the movements and events of Christianity in its world wide impact upon the forces of evil.

In short, it is devoted to the supreme task of establishing the Kingdom of Christ throughout the world.

BUT

Its ability to do these things is measured by the number of its readers.

Every congregation and community should be thoroughly canvassed for subscriptions.

No other interest should lie closer to a pastor's heart than that of the Church paper.

Every local church should make as one of its major objectives the placing of the official Church paper in every home of the congregation and as many others in the community as possible.

The time to do this is now, if it has not already been done!

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST FOR 1931 IN THE HOME WILL BE ONE OF THE GREATEST ASSETS THE CHURCH CAN HAVE.

—Adapted from The Evangelical-Messenger.

The American Association for the Advancement of Science

THE CLEVELAND MEETING

By President Edwin E. Jacobs, Ph.D.

In company with some of the other members of the College faculty, I attended the recent meeting of the above-named association in Cleveland. I had attended the last meeting held in Cleveland some twenty years ago and have been a member ever since and have watched its growth and read its proceedings with keen interest. The American Association is a very large affair, there being more than thirty-five other learned bodies associated with it.

Among these is the Association of American University Professors which held its meeting just a few days before the meeting of the general association. I was much interested in this meeting as these men moved to stop the perfectly devastating activities of certain mountebank politicians who, when they happen to be in power, set out to dismiss teachers from the state schools for reasons which are, in many cases, trivial and wholly unjust. Not only has this happened and is happening now, in the South but has happened elsewhere.

But the action of this association is by no means unique, as other organizations have such action in mind. The Association of American Colleges of which Ashland is a member, has had for years a standing committee on academic freedom, as they call it, and it reports regularly, at least so far as I can remember.

The program of the Cleveland meeting of the American Association was a book of 288 pages, listing hundreds, perhaps thousands, of papers and addresses. One could not possibly have attended more than a very small fraction of the various meetings. I confined myself to the departments of which I am a member, viz., anthropology, sociology, and biology. In these, as in other sections, the addresses dealt with the recent advances in the various fields by men who are in the vanguard of their respective departments. In these sectional meetings as in the general meetings, I was impressed with the following:

1. The utmost courtesy prevailed. While discussions were sharp and in some cases, somewhat tart, yet there was no ill-feeling developed and when the battle of ideas was over, the participants never for a moment thought of bearing one another ill will. Nor did any, so far as I know, ever accuse the other of any degree of chicanery or bad faith. No one impugned the other's motives. All were given a fair chance and no hatreds were developed nor suspicions aroused. There was full and open discussion in order to arrive at the truth,—a rather wholesome lesson for all of us.

2. There was a love and respect for accuracy. One not acquainted with the methods of science, can hardly realize the care taken in order to handle truth aright. Opinions are not highly regarded but proven facts have full sway. That does not mean that there were no speculations nor philosophies advanced, but it does mean that dogma had small place. (I mean here by dogma, the theory that something is true simply because somebody says so). Theories and opinions advanced upon insufficient grounds received but small attention, for who cares what anybody thinks unless he has a good and sufficient proof?

In other words, the scientific spirit prevailed everywhere,—a spirit which is open, above-board and fair, and all because, as

Admiral Byrd said when he set out on that arduous voyage to the South Pole, "men want to know." There was absolutely no other motive at work than that man wants to know. And what is more, he will know, all legislation and propaganda notwithstanding. I am profoundly convinced that nothing will stop or even check the advance of science, nor should it be stopped.

I heard men speak who had spent the year in Africa simply to determine some rather minor point in science. Some were there from Alaska, South America and other places. Several came from Russia whose statements on the Soviet were worth tons of ordinary newspaper prints upon that subject. And so on, and on.

3. And what struck me as a bit unlooked for, was that these savants are trying to make life better. In other words, they are trying to popularize science and this, by two methods. First, by putting the obtruse facts of science in simple words for the common man. Certainly Professor Millikan, in his president's address on the disintegration and synthesis of the atom, strove to make himself plain to the person without much scientific training and succeeded admirably. Then in the second place, science attempts to add the genuine enjoyment and good of living. Everything known about science is put to the use of human welfare. Disease, invention, the family, race and race friction, international affairs, and other various forms of social adjustment were topics for discussion and on which there are constructive programs.

On the other hand, there was not a word said that could possibly be construed as favorable to what we commonly call the ills of life, viz., war, intemperance, sex immorality, race hatreds, vice, domestic friction, etc. Nor would this powerful organization use its influence to advance any of these things. Hence in a very large way, the association has a very important moral influence.

4. It holds an optimistic outlook, at least so far as I could determine. It has few misgivings about the future, for it has a program outlined far into the future. There were scores of papers and discussions which were incomplete because the final results lie far ahead and those of us who may be privileged to attend these meetings in the future may well expect to hear the results of these findings.

Are these learned men blind, that they have such an outlook? I think not, for they believe that there are resident forces at our command with which we can, in part, subdue and control nature. Is learning over? It has only just commenced. Great discoveries lie ahead. It is good to be alive now. It will be better to be alive when my boys shall have become mature men and I shall have passed on. About that I have not the slightest doubt, and that I take to be the outlook of all scientific men.

In the face of these and many other facts, what about religion? Is it decadent? I heard no such implications at Cleveland. Doubtless some of these men are careless about religion, but on the other hand many are as Christian and devout and orthodox as any of us. At this meeting, they were not dealing much with religion as such. They were interested in pushing back the frontiers of ignorance, error, and superstition. Medieval obscurantism must fall before the white light of modern scientific search and as a result life will be more durable, happy, and wholesome. These are probably as far-seeing and alert as contemporaneous group of men in America today, and in so far as they find the truth in that far everybody is better off, for all "truth makes free," which, by the way, is the motto of one of the learned societies affiliated with the General Association.

And when we shall come to find that truth—all truth,—issues from one Fountain Head, we shall be done with some of the now trivial distinctions and petty bickerings, and then shall we not be more at peace with this Great Source from which all all power, and all energy proceed?

Ashland, Ohio.

Bibles Still Needed

In America there are still thousands of homes and many thousands of people who have never owned, or handled, or even read a Bible. Persons who live in older and well established sections of our country where the towns and villages are close together and where the rural areas are evenly populated can hardly comprehend the distances we separate the isolated settlements in our western states.

One of the American Bible Society's colporteurs reports that he found homes where there were sons and daughters twenty years of age none of whom had ever heard what the Bible was, didn't even know it was a book and when they saw it had no idea what it contained. He also found communities that were only ninety miles from the nearest railroad, but equally as far from the nearest point where religious service occurred. After preaching in some of these settlements and leaving Bibles he was assured that his service "was the best thing that had ever come to town" and was urged to return.

A Little Story from Real Life

A colporteur of the American Bible Society found a man, past forty years of age, living alone in a miserable little shack on the railroad tracks in a mid-western town who said to him: "Clear out if all you've got to do is preach."

(Continued on page 16)

IN THIS NUMBER

"Seek Ye First the Kingdom of God"

—Editor, .....

The New "Gospel Messenger"—Editor, .....

Editorial Review, .....

The Old Path in these Modern Times

—Frank Gehman, .....

Sunday School Valuations—Lillian

E. Bowers, .....

Studies in the Scriptures—C. F.

Yoder, .....

News and Views, .....

The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon, .....

Early Christian Characteristics—M.

G. Kyle, .....

What's In the Brethren Teacher?

—C. A. Bame, .....

Editor's Notes on the S. S. Lesson.

Conemaugh Christian Endeavor Society—Wadena Stormer, .....

News from the Field, .....

Announcements, .....

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

"Seek Ye First the Kingdom of God"

It was Jesus who said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." He never spake but wisdom of eternal import flowed from his blessed lips, but of all the golden words he ever uttered, none were truer than these, and none are more peculiarly suited to the men of our day. It is a warning against materialism, and never was such a warning more needed than now. The world was never so rich and prosperous and seemingly self-sufficient as it has become since the world war, and never was it so flooded with merry-making and pleasure-producing devices as now. Such a condition is not conducive to spirituality. When men grow rich and are given to pleasure, they soon forget God. When they seek "things" first, they do not seek God at all. And when they do not seek God, he becomes unreal to them and vanishes as an active, controlling force in their lives.

That these words of Jesus are intrinsically true, that the importance of seeking first the kingdom of God is established in the very nature of man, is well illustrated by the developments of our times. A lull has come in the world's prosperity when business is temporarily retrenched and the labor market is glutted, and because of it there has gone up a lamentation that some think is out of all proportion to the severity of the depression. Does that not indicate that men had been over-indulged materially and undernourished spiritually? We are not forgetful that material things are necessary to the physical life, nor are we surprised that men should seek redress from their grievances and correction of existing financial weaknesses and injustices, nor are we among those who would discourage, but rather are we with those who would encourage the proper expression of enlightened Christian conscience in such matters. The disturbing and disappointing thing is the spirit of bitterness, dejection and pessimism that a certain degree of distress can and has produced. We are concerned that there is so little reserve force on which to rely in a time like this. It points to the fact that in our prosperity we had largely forgotten God and that when the abundance of material goods was temporarily taken from us there seemed to be nothing left. We were wholly linked to the passing things of life; we had given first place to the seeking of "things," and now we have no faith, no religious anchorage to hold us steady and to give us assurance. It is no wonder that some far-seeing and spiritually minded men, even in the business world, are telling us again and again that what we need most is vital faith in God, rather than new schemes for the correction of wrongs. They are but re-echoing the truths of the Master Seer of the ages, when he said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

We have an interesting corroboration of God's truth as well as an instructive analysis of the present situation by one of the outstanding minds of our day in financial affairs, but one who also has not forgotten God. It is Roger W. Babson, who speaks, as he spoke a few weeks ago through the columns of The Living Church. After pointing out that men are not only tired out physically, but are discouraged and lacking in faith, he observes:

A great mass of wage workers, executives, and young business people have never before witnessed a severe business depression. Over since Germany declared war in 1914—with the exception of a very short readjustment period after the war ended—there has been a constant demand for labor. Not only was the supply of available labor reduced by the war; but an extra amount of labor was needed for rehabilitation work. Moreover, the willingness of American and other investors to purchase liberally foreign bonds as provided the funds for such rehabilitation. Today the situation is entirely different. A new generation—too young to enter the war in 1914 to 1918—has swamped the labor markets of every country; the rehabilitation work has largely been completed; and owing to the reluctance of investors to buy more foreign bonds, no money is available for new work.

In view of the steady work and easy profits which the above described condition made possible, this new generation has felt sufficient in itself. Sabbath schools and churches have been neglected, family prayers have been given up, and Sunday has been made a common holiday. Hence, unlike previous generations, a large percentage of the people now unemployed, or losing money in business, have no faith upon which to fall back. When employed or making money, they did nothing to store up spiritual reserves and hence have none to draw upon, now that employment and profits have vanished. As a result, great masses of people are discouraged and know not where to turn. The material wealth upon which they solely depended has gone. They have no spiritual wealth upon which to draw and they are tired out physically.

It is the old, old warning, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." Materialism has been found wanting in the hour of man's need. Will he be driven by bitter experience to seek and appropriate the teachings of Christ? Possibly not. But maybe in this distressed state of mind, he may be more willing to hear, more receptive of the truth, if the church will, with increased passion and evangelistic fervor, hasten to take the message of the Gospel to every heart and home.

Mr. Babson goes on to say that "What is true of individuals is also true of nations." And he illustrates by conditions in England, whose "courage and stability during the past centuries have been due to her religious faith." He admits that that faith was sometimes "intolerant," "abnormal," and "misled," but insists it was that faith, "crude as it was," that "provided the foundation for England's power, growth and prosperity." And he might have illustrated his point just as effectively by reference to the fact that it was a virile, vital faith that formed the ground-work for the mighty national structure of our own beloved land. But Mr. Babson suggests that the "real cause of England's present economic difficulties" may be "the lack of religious faith." And he is supported by a quotation from a famous English correspondent, Albert Peel, who, inspired by conditions in England, wrote an article entitled, "An Age Destitute of Faith." Mr. Peel said:

The other day I listened to a group of public men discussing the religious outlook in Great Britain. They were all of them men with peculiar opportunities for observation, and all had some claim to speak with authority on the subject. Some of them held that Britain could still be called a Christian nation, some that we should be wise to recognize that Britain was now pagan. But all agreed that the masses of the people now made no place for organized religion in their lives, and had no real religious faith. Many personal experiences were offered to illustrate the view generally accepted.

The churches still throw their doors open, but the people pass them by as they rush to their pleasures. Car and char-a-banc, golf and other games, fill up the day of rest and meditation, and millions live through Sunday as they do through the rest of the week, and never think of God at all. Truly, we live in an age destitute of faith!

Everywhere the same story is told, as every pastor could witness countless times over. One day it is a girl at college, who tells you that she is the only girl in her "set" who ever thinks of going to church. The next it is a youth, who believes that prayer is but the projection of one's own desires, and that life is controlled by instincts. The next two young married people, who ordered their married life without the slightest reference to considerations other than the physical and the material.

Twenty years ago Sunday schools were filled with children, whose parents, while perhaps making no religious profession themselves, yet believed it was well that their children should be taught the elements of the Christian faith. Now, in British cities, at any rate, we are surrounded by children and by young people in their teens who have never been near either church or Sunday school.

American pastors can judge whether that is a fairly accurate description of religious conditions in American cities, but Mr. Babson concludes that if it analyzes the situation correctly, "certainly preachers and churches can render a wonderful service at this time, both in England and America. More religion," he says,—"rather than more legislation—is the need of the hour. The solution of Britain's economic difficulties will come, as in the past, when a great religious revival sweeps the nation." And if that is true of England, it is also true of America. Her greatest need, as her prophets have been declaring, is for a great revival of religion, a revival that will start with the church and go on permeating the whole lump of society until it influences men in positions of power and wealth as well as in the common walks of life. It is not just a brief stampede of a community by artificial methods that is needed, but a revival that is heaven-born, a revival that is fostered by holy living, intercessory prayer, passionate preaching and personal evangelistic effort, a revival with a persevering zeal that never grows weary of seeking the souls of men and of broadening and deepening religious lives, a revival that aims to win them for godly living and faithful service as well as for a home beyond the skies. It is to "seek first the kingdom of God" that men need to be taught.

Ashland Theological Library
Ashland, Ohio

(Continued on page 8)

The New "Gospel Messenger"

With the first issue of the new year and the first number of volume 80, our old friend, The Gospel Messenger, appears in a new dress, having laid aside the long styles she has been wearing and taken on new clothes of the most modern and comely type. She now appears in magazine size of 32 pages, two columns each, the pages being slightly smaller in both dimensions than the Evangelist page. All the old and valued departments are retained and in addition the missionary magazine, for many years published as The Missionary Visitor, is merged with the Messenger. Another improvement is that the paper is printed on a nice stock of white paper. Altogether, it is a most attractive make-up, a convenient size, and a decided improvement in every way and we congratulate the editors on it. Still more important than the beauty and convenience of the new arrangement over the old, is the merging of the missionary magazine in the church paper, because it makes both for efficiency of service and economy in publication. Its constituency will now be served with missionary news and missionary articles every week instead of only once a month and this missionary material will go to all the Messenger readers instead of being limited as hitherto to Missionary Visitor readers, and more than all, the interest of the church will be centered in the one publication. It is a wise move and our Elgin Brethren are to be congratulated on having taken it. Other churches have done and are doing the same thing, and we will be wise when we begin to move in the same direction.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Brother W. S. Baker of Lydia, Maryland offers to exchange revival meetings with some pastor conveniently located.

We call the attention of Ohio pastors to the announcement and information regarding the Ohio Pastors' Convention and the Dunker Fellowship Meeting at Columbus, January 19 to 22, and also to the fact that all members of the two groups are requested to cooperate in making Brethren Headquarters at Hotel Columbus.

The Conemaugh Christian Endeavor society has been a real factor in the church's life for some time, but it is especially alive and active since the coming of Brother W. H. Schaffer as pastor. It is a splendid report they give us this week. We congratulate them, and we urge other good societies to send their reports to the editor of that department, Brother C. D. Whitmer.

Brother S. E. Christiansen writes of his work at Allentown, Pennsylvania, where he is giving his best service to a difficult field, and that, without apparent discouragement. While his members are small in numbers, yet they are loyal and devoted, and he has confidence in them. May God bless such men as he who are faithfully upholding the cause of the smaller but needy churches.

Brother B. F. Owen tells of the good meeting he conducted at Brighton, Indiana, where Brother C. D. Whitmer is the faithful leader, and who reported in a previous issue the twenty-three additions to the church and the church's appreciation of the service of the evangelist. Mrs. Owen added her singing talent to the meeting during part of the last week. Brother Owen is pastor of the Nappanee church and is now engaged in a meeting at the nearby Gravelton church. He requests your prayers.

"What's in the Brethren Teacher"? Dr. Bame, the Sunday School Editor, tells you on the Sunday school page. Be sure to read it for some of our people do not seem to know. Then, when you have read Brother Bame's article, read his publication and you will be delighted to discover how much really is in that Teacher's magazine and how much worth-while it is. Every Brethren Sunday school teacher who teaches a lesson that is set forth in our quarterlies, needs that "Teacher."

The last Sunday in January is Publication Day, when General Conference has authorized the Publishing House to come before the churches for an offering to apply on the purchase price of its building. It is the duty of every church to make a contribution to this worthy cause. Your Publishing House has no other source for appeal than the churches it seeks to serve. If you think on the service it renders, we believe you will be glad to respond as you are able on January 25th.

Brother R. Paul Miller writes of his evangelistic campaign at the Second church of Los Angeles, which is shepherded by Brother A. D. Cashman, who made his report in last week's paper. Though twenty-five were added to the church Brother Miller believes the real harvest is yet to be reaped, and is confident of the pastor's ability to take good care of the reaping. The church, he says, has a splendid field and under such worthy leadership, we may expect it to go steadily forward in the realization of its large possibilities.

If your church does not have your church paper on the budget so that it is going to every home of the congregation, we urge you to make an every-home canvass of your congregation before the month of January is past. During this month only the special rate to new subscribers is $1.35. Anyone wishing to renew his paper and make a gift of a subscription to one not taking the paper, may do so at $3.00. If putting the Evangelist on the Home Roll, all renewals will be $1.50. Do it now. Opportunity is passing.

Brother L. V. King writes of his work at New Lebanon, Ohio where he has completed five years of efficient ministry and entered upon his sixth year's service. The church building has been enlarged and the membership has been much increased during his pastorate thus far and in spite of the present depression the church is keeping pace with the progress of former years. The immediate objective, he states, is to build up the present membership in loyalty and in the faith, and in that he is following faithfully in the line of the true pastor's function. His church cooperated in the Miami Valley Bible Institute and observed the Christmas season by appropriate programs.

It is good to note that some churches are still reporting gifts to the building fund of our church in Washington, D. C., as the financial statement of Brother Elmer Tamkin, treasurer of the Building Campaign Committee, shows. Doubtless others who may have no offering, or who find they can make additional gifts, will find this Washington Committee in a receptive mood. Of course, we all expect to give them another lift—a real one this time—when called upon again according to the action of last National Conference. The Conference Committee in charge will notify us in due time, but until then, if any are considering adding to the showing of the first year's offering, be assured the cause is worthy of your best.

The Home Mission receipts for the month of December, as reported by the Secretary-Treasurer, Brother R. Paul Miller in this issue, show the neat sum of $5,545.82. There are some evidences of real sacrifices having been made to put the offering above that of last year, but in the main, it seems, the period of depression is having its influence on giving. Whatever the total results may prove to be, we believe it is safe to say that the cause of Home Missions has been laid upon the hearts of many of our people in a new and more intense way by reason of the persistent propaganda carried on by Brother Miller and his Home Board associates, and with this as but the beginning of a persistent campaign carried through the years, it must inevitably mean a stepping up of church extension.

The Old Path In These Modern Times

By Frank Gehman

Read at the Pennsylvania District Conference held at Pittsburgh, (October, 1930),

We pride ourselves today that we live in "these modern times." But is that a new pride? Has it belonged to us alone? I think not. Did not our fathers talk of the amazing progress of their "modern times"? And what of their fathers? To those who lived then it was a "modern" time when crude ways of transportation replaced till cruder ways; when still laborious methods of work replaced yet more laborious methods; when centralized industry began to do away with local handcraft; when the magic-believing and imaginative alchemist removed aside, not willingly but nevertheless removed aside, for the advent of the predecessor of the present day physicist and chemist. It was during a modern time that the monk of Vittenberg defied the machinations of Rome, and likewise when a Genoese sailor, sailing under the Spanish flag, conquered the superstitious fear of the western sea by sailing into it and returning. The Romans of Caesar's day talked of "modern times." And the Grecian civilization which had preceded it, was it not modernistic in its turn? Ancient Egypt of the Pharaohs was a "modern" nation once upon a time. Yea, and when reading of the recent discoveries of the remarkable achievements of the age-old civilization of Urr of the Chaldees one can almost hear them vaunting the modernism of their times. It was a modern day when the sickle displaced hand plucking of the spikes of wheat and barley, if there ever was such a day. It was a modern day when the hand sickle gave way to the scythe. Another such day when that wonderful improvement, the cradle, began to be used. And, then, in their modern times, our grandfathers welcomed the reaper. It was still a modern day when the self-binder came with its improvements. Then the eight-foot, then the ten-foot binder making possible formerly impossible acreages of grain. Behold, then, in "these modern times" the giant header and combine, drawn by from twenty to forty head of horses or mules; or by a powerful tractor, which cuts, threshes, winnows and sacks in one operation many acres of grain in a single day's time. All of which goes to say that by "modern times," we simply mean materially and industrially progressive periods of man's history. They are modern, not in relation to the periods which are to follow, but in relation alone to those which have gone before. Oh, these modern times!

Then there is the Old Faith. It is sublime. It is beautiful. It is saving. It is ever new and fresh to us, yet ever changing in its essence. Of course by the Old Faith we mean "the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3b). To speak of the Old Faith and to mean aught else is but the camouflage of tricksters. Paul emphasizes as the two cardinal features of his Gospel preaching the death and the resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ (1 Cor. 15:1-4). Thus, if we are subscribing to the Old Faith, we are insisting upon the truth of these two basic and fundamental facts of Christianity, namely, the death and subsequent resurrection of our Lord. We are confident believers in all their implications. And, if believers in, we are also devotees to their eternal truth. If we adhere to the Old Faith, we dwell in the shadow of the Cross and rise up daily in the glory of His Resurrection. The Old Faith, then, is nothing more, and not one whit less, than the faith of the New Testament saints. It is completely centered in Christ.

Now where does the Old Faith stand in "these modern times"? Some would confidently assure us that Christianity is now in its dusk, that its twilight hour has come. Modern developments in modern times, they say, have left no room for the antiquated things of a dry, and some say, doubtful, record of the past. The time of "kidding" ourselves along has ended, if we have sufficient intellectual attainment to see it, they, sometimes not too courteously, tell us. A modern world must have modern things. How ancient is this "modern" cry! Without hesitation, Christianity is ruled as anti-modern. We are reminded that we have leaned upon the crutches of Christianity too long already, and that these crutches are now hopelessly broken over the bar of man's increased knowledge. Of this they must inform us, for it seems evident to them that we do not know it. Alas, is there no place in modern life for the Old Faith?

To endeavor to answer this last question on a philosophical basis is a waste of time to all, unless it should chance to prove profitable to the philosopher himself. It must be answered upon a basis of recognition of God's revelation. Man's opinion may be of some import, but we do not know when it is trustworthy. God's revelation is always trustworthy. His Word tells us certain primary things about man. Adam sinned (Gen. 3). All since him have sinned (Romans 3:23), and fallen short of the glory of God. All are under the judgment of God (Romans 3:19). No man can be saved from under this judgment by his own good deeds, no matter what they may be (Romans 3:20). Thus we find man "having no hope and without God in the world" (Eph. 2:12). This is the picture of the natural man. It is God's picture from God's Word. Man would paint a nicer looking, even if a less true, picture of himself.

The Bible is an old book, as man's history goes, and these are modern times in which we live. Does not that alter these matters? To which I answer, emphatically, "No." Repeating: By a modern period we simply mean one which has, at this latest moment in history, attained a standard of material progress and advancement exceeding any and all preceding periods. It is essentially material. It is not spiritual. On the other hand, the fact of man's sinfulness is a spiritual fact. To be sure, in the one case the spiritual is affected by the material, and in the other the material is affected by the spiritual. Or, further, to be progressive in the material realm may alter man's spiritual capacities, whether for good or bad is not to be discussed here. Likewise, to prosper spiritually changes man's relation to the material. Yet does it not remain true that "these modern times" are primarily material, and that man's relation to God is primarily spiritual? That is easily admitted to be true.

Now let us go a little farther. Adam's first wardrobe consisted of fig leaves plucked from a convenient tree. Perhaps ours is made up of products from many distant parts of the earth. But it is still true that Adam sinned. Abraham walked, or rode a camel on that long tiresome journey from Ur of the Chaldees to the Promised Land. If we are in a hurry, we may eat dinner in New York city, board a fast night flyer and waken up for breakfast in Los Angeles shortly in the future. Abraham was one of those "all" who sinned and came short of the glory of God, and so is the man who may fly from the East coast to West in a few hours. A man may own the most expensive model of the wonder working radio. However, he still belongs to that "all" which is under the judgment of God fully as much as do the Indian runners who must relay messages from one post to another by means of their own fleetness. An engineer has just completed a new forty-eight cylinder automobile motor with which he hopes to break all existing speed records. Perhaps in a few weeks, though, a new engineer will build a yet greater one. But both are spiritually condemned unless they have individually found the Savior of men's souls. For a millionaire to endow an institution of learning does not of itself save the man. To instruct young folks in scientific and intellectual attainments alone gives neither instructor nor student God and hope in either this world or in the next. You see the point. We have made great progress in "these modern times," but men need salvation through Jesus Christ just as badly as ever.

Jesus Christ came to seek and to save the lost (Luke 19:10). He came to give his life a ransom for many (Matt. 20:28). While we were still enemies, "yet sinners," he died for us (Rom. 5:6ff). He was delivered up for our trespasses, and was raised for our justification (Rom. 4:25). His was a purposeful mission, ordained of a purposeful Father, attended by a purposeful Spirit to fulfill a purposeful end in a purposeful scheme of things. The mission was to redeem, to save men. Men were redeemed. Men have since been redeemed. Men are being redeemed today by the same Power. The sacrifice was made once for all (Heb. 7:27b). Salvation through Jesus Christ is eternal. Our Lord promised the dying thief forgiveness for his sins. The Apostles offered their hearers salvation through the Name. We have their testimony that they were saved. We have the testimony even in these modern times of the saving power of the Blood. Man's material progress cannot change the fact that man needs a Savior. Man's intellectual attainments do not lessen the fact that the blood of Christ has power to cleanse from sin. What are our modern times? Certainly they are convenient, but do they reconcile us to God? Reconciliation is through One, even the Son of God. Today, as then, there is no "other name under heaven, that is given among men, wherein we must be saved" (Acts 4:12).

Man is under judgment, and he cannot escape that judgment of himself. Jesus Christ can save all who believe on him, while man cannot even save himself. Here is a need nearly as old as the race and a remedy planned before the need was manifest to man. We cannot escape the need no matter how much we like to think ourselves above it. Why, then, should we try to close our eyes to and deny the remedy, the Shed Blood? Yes, there are modern times, but man's spiritual needs are as acute as ever they were. There IS a place, then, in these modern times for the Old Faith. Never has it been needed more, by which we do not mean to say that it has ever been needed less. "These modern times" are materially progressive, but spiritually retrogressive. They are unbalanced; they are off center. The Old Faith alone, centering as it does around the Person of our Lord, can restore that balance. Did you ever see a high speed emery wheel going gradually off center? More and more rapidly it wears and slips out of balance. Traveling at one, one and a half, or two thousand revolutions per minute the strain increases until with the shrillness of demoniac despair it lets go, driving, driving its pieces with relentless fury against all that is within its path. What was wrong? Just off center, just unbalanced. "These modern times" are off center. Why? Because they have left behind the Old Faith, their greatest need. If you would be the world's benefactor, if you would help meet the deepest need of "these modern times," join in making known to it the Old Faith, the faith of the New Testament saints, declaring with Paul, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth" (Rom. 1:16).

Krypton, Kentucky.

Sunday School Valuations

By Lillian E. Bowers

(A paper read at the Northwest District Conference and requested published in The Evangelist.)

(Continued from last week)

We must face the work and the discouragements with all the enthusiasm we can muster. So enthusiasm is another valuable asset in our work. If you are not enthusiastic in your work, then determine to become so. As though you were. Sit down to the preparation of your lesson with a smile and a cheerful heart, go to your class in the same manner and mood and before you realize it you will have become genuinely aglow with enthusiasm and your enthusiasm for your subject will enkindle in your pupils' minds a like enthusiasm, for enthusiasm is contagious.

The successful teacher is regular in attendance and early in arrival at school. The few moments of informal talk before the service begins you cannot afford to miss, as it gives such a good opportunity to come to know your pupils intimately. Practically all teachers who hold their pupils by winning their loyalty, give considerable time to them outside of class.

Rev. H. B. Whipple explains how he won the hearts of many railroad men when a minister in Chicago. He called on one of the chief engineers of one of the roads and asked for advice as to the best way to accomplish his object. "How much do you know about a steam engine?" the latter asked. "Nothing," he replied. "Then read Lardner's Railway Economy until you are able to ask an engineer a question about a locomotive and he not think you a fool. He followed the advice, and in due season went to the roundhouse of the road, where he found a number of engineers standing by a locomotive which a fireman was cleaning. Questions followed, and in less than an hour he had learned more than he had from the book.

In leaving he said, "Boys, where do you go to church? I would be glad to see you at my church, and if at any time you have an accident, or need me, I will gladly go to you." The next Sunday every man was in church.

Do we care enough about winning the respect, and interest and friendship of our pupils to go to do likewise?

To make good we must always be learners. A growing teacher does not have a closed mind. It is often taken for granted that the experienced teacher is necessarily the best teacher, but this is not the case. To the experienced and inexperienced alike the Book and the pupils must be fresh and wonderful. Methods must be bright and changeable and the preparation of each lesson, however familiar it may be, must be fresh and thorough.

A psychologist once said, "I want my pupils to drink from a running stream and not from a stagnant pool." An experienced teacher who relies upon already acquired knowledge of a lesson and upon teaching it in the same manner as it has been taught before, is not a good teacher, for a good teacher is always a learner.

A successful teacher never complains of inattention. He compels attention by making the lesson interesting. He is like to think of the small boy who was taken to hear Spurgeon and after sitting quietly in the pew for a time suddenly said to his companion in clear childish tones, "Is Mr. Spurgeon talking to me?" What a compliment to the great preacher!

A college student said of a professor one time, "He carries the ball too much himself in class." One of the greatest temptations that comes to a teacher is to carry the ball all the time himself. It is so much easier to lecture than to teach, so much easier to talk than to get the pupils to talk.

The value of pictures and illustrations for young pupils has long been conceded above price, but we are all children when it comes to pictures and illustrations. Pictures often suggest ideas more telling than can words. A returned missionary was giving a short talk in Sunday school. A small boy before him paid no attention to what was being said until the missionary held up a card with a black circle on it and a small white dot in the center. He said the black circle represented the heathen and the small white dot was the Christian workers who were trying to evangelize them. Years later the boy said he remembered no more of the talk but he did remember of saying that night that he might grow up to be a man and go to the heathen lands to help the little white spot be larger.

In planning our lessons let us use variety, for great is the interest of the unexpected. Perhaps you have heard the story of the teacher who believed in holding his scholars responsible for some share in the lesson period and always asked the same one about the geographical setting, another one about the historical setting, and a third about the Orientalisms, etc. Where is the lesson located? As the question Ned was always asked to answer, and when that was out of the way, he gave but listless attention, if any, to the remainder of the lesson. One Sunday after Ned had been absent the teacher asked instead, "Where were you last Sunday, Ned?" and Ned answered in an abstracted manner, "Nine miles southwest of Jerusalem." Certainly that teacher's method did not tend to give his pupils all there, minds nor bodies. So let us keep variety, doing things in different ways, with the pupils always listening to see what is next.

Jesus made great use of stories and illustrations. What would have been the result if, in answer to the lawyer's question, "Who is my neighbor," Jesus had said, "A Samaritan is thy neighbor?" The lawyer would likely have maintained firm in his conception that only an Israelite was neighbor.

What if Jesus had made an appeal to reason? Would the lawyer ever have made the admission he did? But instead Jesus appealed to the man's conscience by means of a story. By that story he made him see the truth and answer his own question. Stories are not for children only; they are for grown-ups as well.

Not only must we illustrate our teaching by stories and pictures, etc., but our lives must demonstrate the truths we teach.

Among the unfavorable moral symptoms of the day in which we live is that of irreverence and disrespect. All Christian workers have upon them a tremendous obligation to seek to correct this tendency. We must ourselves set at God's Word and his house with honor and reverence. The reverence and honor for God and his Word cannot be taught directly but chiefly by example. The whole atmosphere of the Sunday school should be one of reverence and honor for God.

It is a priceless heritage to have been brought up in an environment where God is loved and worshiped, where the church is revered and where ministers of the Gospel are spoken of with respect.

Someone has said that "actions speak louder than words" and that teaching, when not upheld by right living, is worthless. Again, someone says, "How can I hear what you say, when what you do rings so loudly in my ears"? Only that teacher who both is a Christian and knows why he is a Christian, who has a true and adequate knowledge of the Book as a whole, and has thought through, as well as lived through, its teachings, will be sure to get the meaning of each lesson and to teach it with effectiveness and power.

What is taught, if it is really of value, should be put into every day practice. Perhaps you have heard of the swimming school where the art of swimming is taught without any water. The youths are drilled in the correct movements to make when swimming. A young man who completed this course was asked what happened when he first tried to put his knowledge into practice in the lake and he replied, "Sank." So let's not have that as our method of teaching but rather teach the lesson combined with the true value of practice.

A small boy who saw a long worm on a sidewalk, said, "I wish I could kill them all dead, every one in the world!" His father told him how useful such worms are, told him how they burrow in the ground, making passages for the air and water and loosening the soil so plants can grow more easily. The boy suddenly started off and the father asked where he was going. The boy said he was going to put the worm on a stick and carry it to the garden for it might as well be working. That father had taught that lesson well.

The weak point in the work of many teachers is failure to lead pupils into actual Christian service.

The real value of the Sunday school is to prepare its members to live each day, in accordance with the spirit and standards of Christ, to bring out in each lesson the practical points for every day living.

Sunday schools exist to tell the good news of God as revealed in the life of Jesus Christ. They exist to make Christian characters.

Prof. Drummond was once asked to name three courses of study which might be recommended to Christians for spiritual profit. After a few moments of thought he replied: "I would recommend that they study first the Life of Jesus Christ; secondly, the Life of Jesus Christ; and thirdly, the Life of Jesus Christ." And was he not right? Can the spiritual life thrive without the continual study of the Life of Christ?

The spirituality, the penetration, the power of this marvelous Gospel will grow upon you with every fresh study of it.

True love for God and his Word can only be shown or taught through real living or doing. Jesus said in John 14:15, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." To live such lives prayer is indispensable. It can not be neglected without spiritual loss. When prayer is neglected spiritual weakness results. One cannot be useful and fruitful for God unless he spends much time in prayer.

Spurgeon said, "I owe my success in the Gospel to the Gospel I preach and to the prayers of God's people." Individuals and churches are powerful in proportion as they are prayerful.

Indeed the Bible school yields a far reaching influence for good and the Bible school teacher has a most blessed opportunity for far reaching service. Thousands upon thousands are being constantly helped and blessed through the faithful Sunday schools and eternity alone will reveal how many young lives have been saved through its instrumentality.

"Sow a thought, and you reap an act;
Sow an act, and you reap a habit;
Sow a habit, and you reap a character;
Sow a character, and you reap a destiny."

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

Part II

THE OLD TESTAMENT FEASTS TYPICAL OF THE LORD'S DAY

Among the sabbaths of the law, the feast of first fruits was typical of the resurrection (Lev. 23:10-16; 1 Cor. 15:20). The harvest feast of pentecost, seven weeks later, was typical of the Holy Spirit (Lev. 23:15-22; Acts 2:1-4). These feasts both came on the first day of the week, as did also their fulfillment in the resurrection of Christ and the coming of the Holy Spirit. They teach us that we must first find rest in God and then work for him. Risen with him we may labor with him.

So important is this teaching that it is also embodied in another rite, that of baptism which replaces circumcision (Col. 2:9-13). Baptism represents our resurrection with Christ (Rom. 6:4), and the "imposition of hands" which accompanied it represents the gift of the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:38; 8:14-18), the two together representing the beginning of the Christian life and the fruit of the Spirit which follows. In this dispensation of grace the new life is the first gift (Rom. 6:23) and the gift of the Spirit in whom we labor is the second (Acts 2:38; Titus 3:5-8). The Lord's Day of rest precedes the six days of labor.

If the Jews had accepted Christ the prophecies of his suffering would doubtless have been fulfilled by his being crucified by the Romans. His resurrection would have followed, and also (on the day of Pentecost) the complete fulfillment of the prophecy of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit (Joel 2) instead of only "the earnest of our inheritance" (Eph. 1:13, 14).

The last three prophetic feasts of Lev. 23 would then have been fulfilled in their order at once instead of awaiting the return of the Lord at the end of this dispensation.

The feast of trumpets (Lev. 23:22-25) is a type of "the last trump" when the Lord shall return, bringing the deceased saints with him and gathering the living saints to himself (1 Cor. 15:52; 1 Thess. 4:14-17; 2 Thess. 2:1). A writing attributed to Mathias, one of the seventy, says that this will occur on the Lord's Day. This is the day of the feast of trumpets (cf. Ex. 12:1-6); Lev. 23:21, lunar time). There can be no more fitting time for the Lord to return than on the Lord's Day when his people are gathered together to worship him.

Then, to announce the Jubilee year the "great trumpet" was blown on the day of atonement, nine days after the feast of trumpets (Lev. 25:9). The jubilee year was the first after each seventh sabbatical rest year for the land and thus corresponds to the eighth day or Lord's Day and is typical of the kingdom age. This will be ushered in by the regathering of Israel at the sound of the great trumpet (Isa. 27:13).

Then the Feast of Tabernacles (Lev. 23:39-43) was a memorial of the booths of the wilderness journey, to be observed in the kingdom age (Zech. 14:16), doubtless as a type of the coming city wherein God shall dwell with men (Rev. 21:3). But the feast of tabernacles began and ended on the first day of the week, the Lord's Day. It is prophetic of that new order in Christ who gives eternal rest. And the Lord's Day, which is its symbol, and the day of his glorious appearing to his church, and of the inauguration of the jubilee age of his kingdom will be the glorious independence day of the age to come.

The Light of Prophecy

The prophecies offer us a "sure word" but it is necessary to compare them, for they are not of "private," that is, separate, interpretation (2 Peter 1:19, 20; Luke 24:44; 22:37). In the prophecies both the rest and the day of rest for Christians is announced. Let us first study Isaiah 28:12-14. "This is the rest; give rest to the weary."

In this passage we may note the following points:

1. Comparing vs. 11 with 1 Cor. 14:21 we see that the prophecy refers to the coming of the Holy Spirit on Pentecost.
2. The Spirit brought rest because he gives life (John 3:5) and victory (Gal. 5:14-16, 22).
3. This rest is first necessary in order that there may be works (Luke 24:49; John 15:5).
4. We receive the Spirit, not by works, but by faith (Gal. 3:2, 14).
5. The Spirit came on the first day of the week, sanctify the Lord's day, the resurrection day, as the day of rest and worship for the Lord's body, the church (Acts 2:2; Lev. 23:15-22).

Let us next note Psalm 118:19-24, "This is the day that the Lord hath made. We will be glad to rejoice in it. Here we may note:

1. That the "door" of verse 19 is Christ (John 10:1) and the entrance is by faith (Eph. 2:17, 18; 3:12).
2. The "righteous" of verse 20 who enter, are clothed with the righteousness of Christ (Gal. 3:27; Rom. 9:30-33).
3. The praise of verse 21 is that of believers who through faith have entered into rest (Heb. 4:3).
4. The "stone rejected by the builders of verse 22 is Christ (Matt. 21:42).
5. He was "made the head of the corner" by his resurrection from the dead (Rom. 1:4; Acts 3:15). The resurrection day is therefore the day here prophesied. This was the first day of the week (Mark 16:9).
6. This day was to be celebrated. Speaking prophetically of believers the psalmist says, "We will be glad to rejoice in it." This cannot refer to the one day on which Jesus rose, for the church was not yet formed. Besides "the door" and the "righteousness" and the "stone": all of the entire dispensation. So must the joyful worship be. As the exodus from Egypt was celebrated the weekly day of rest, (Deut. 5:15) and was a perpetual memorial for the dispensation, so also the Lord's day is the weekly day of rest and worship and a perpetual memorial of the resurrection, which was the only sign given to the Jews (Matt. 12:39, 40). How can a sign be perpetual if it is not celebrated or continued perpetually?
7. Believers also rise spiritually (Col. 2:12) and enter the rest of God through faith (Heb. 4:3) and keep "the day that the Lord hath made." This is that "other day" of Heb. 4:8. Being "another day" it cannot be the same day as the previous rest day. Being "a certain day" it cannot be just any day of conversion. It is the day that the Lord made, and he made it by his resurrection: the gift of the Holy Spirit. Well may we be glad and rejoice in it.

"Seek Ye First the Kingdom of God"

(Continued from page 4)

Roger Babson's final paragraph is significant for those who are concerned about the improvement of material conditions, but have not thought of the spiritual:

People should understand that before prosperity can reach there must be a renewed interest in the spiritual life by both individuals and nations. Nations should realize that the world has always possessed raw materials and labor; but has been pros-ous only when the people have been actuated by a religious faith to use these resources for advancement and service. This is the law of life and now is the time when it should be taught in churches, schools, and colleges.

If a revival of religious life and faith is necessary to a return of temporal prosperity, how much more ought we to seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness, not primarily that God may add to us "these things" that are needed for the physical welfare, but that his kingdom may be advanced and his righteousness may prevail more and more in the hearts of men everywhere.

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

DO NOT FAVOR PROHIBITION REFERENDUM

National leaders of the prohibition cause have decided against the proposal to submit the question to a referendum. This is a wise decision. The difficulty and expense of holding such a referendum would be great. No provision is made in the Constitution for submitting an amendment to the people to obtain an advisory opinion concerning it. There is no reason to think that the wets would be any less determined to work for repeal than they now are, or that the dries would find less encouragement to continue their support under their new unified Organizing Board of Strategy. The fight will go on without any referendum.—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

A JUDICIAL DECISION

It would be foolish to deny that the decision of the United States District Judge William Clarke, declaring the Eighteenth Amendment illegally adopted, is very disturbing. Happily this young man, for we read he is under forty, has not the final word. Without claiming knowledge of Constitutional law, we read and we think the United States Supreme Court decided unanimously exactly counter to Judge Clarke's decision upon hearing the same arguments presented to them. There is no doubt that with ample means and great legal ability at their disposal, the repealers are going to pound, rattle and bombard every door to allow the entrance of the liquor trade. The pity is that so many of high standing are lending their respectability to the effort. When the United States Supreme Court decides, we will find out whether Judge Clarke is right or wrong according to law.

In the meantime, it behooves believers in prohibition to keep cool, work, give and pray, that the curse of legalized selling be not again put on our land. Abolish the Eighteenth Amendment, and the saloon comes back. Make no mistake about that. More than half the repealers want it back, and they will over-rush the respectables who think they can sell liquor without attendant evils, so they will not be heard of. This is a judicial decision, and we respect our courts. We will wait until the real court speaks at Washington.—The Presbyterian.

THE THEATER DISCUSSED BY A BISHOP

The strictest Puritan never gave utterance to a more vigorous denunciation of the stage than that recently hurled forth by Bishop W. T. Manning, of New York. To be sure, he defended, the theater is an ally of the Church in producing human goodness—a view which we do not at all share, but he vigorously declared that something must be done to put an end to the vile and filthy plays which now disgrace our stage."

He went on to denounce, along with "these filthy plays," "many of our present-day novels," "dwelling upon matters of sex" as "a sin against art, as well as against decency and against God." He declared that "our filthy shows are powerful educational forces for immorality and obscenity."

He advocated suppressing such plays, but we judge the Bishop has undertaken a difficult job. We have never believed that the theater could be used as one of the "greatest allies of the Church" or good. It is essentially unreal; and if it tries to portray reality that is just the point at which it usually becomes offensive. For, the stage will not draw unless it is sensational. That is just the opposite to that which causes people to go to Church. Probably there is no lesson attempted by the stage that could not be portrayed in a thousand-fold healthier way by the direct method of teaching and preaching.—The Christian Evangelist,

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Mark 11:15-19. The house of prayer. In these days of "programs" our churches are filled with such varied activities that we are again in danger of forgetting that primarily the church is after all a house of prayer. It would be well, in planning the various activities of our churches, if we would weigh against them the things that Jesus here so utterly condemned, and see if they are really worthy. Let us remember, too, that our bodies are really houses of prayer, and may we permit nothing that would in any way commercialize or de-grade them, lest we be called to account.

TUESDAY

Mark 11:20-26. The secret of answered prayer: sufficient faith, and God's will. Prayer is not a means of gratifying our selfish desires at the expense of others, "getting something for nothing." It is rather putting ourselves so in line with God's will that we may know that we shall be blessed in the working out of his will. This would, of course, include forgiveness for others, even as we hope for forgiveness ourselves. May thy will be done in our lives!

WEDNESDAY

Mark 11:27-33. At first thought we might wonder why Jesus did not give these jealous Pharisees a straightforward and unmistakable answer. The reason is quite obvious: namely, that he had done so so frequently that it would only stir up further strife to argue with them. If he said his authority was from heaven, they would immediately have accused him of blasphemy. May we have wisdom from on high today in dealing with the jealous ones, both within and without the church.

THURSDAY

Mark 12:1-9. The parable of the vineyard pictures exactly the Pharisees and those who had come before them. God had made them a chosen people, tenderly cared for them, sent his prophets to lead them, and finally his own Son, and all of them alike had been stoned and killed. This could only mean their own destruction. It would not be so bad if such deeds had perished with the Pharisees, but we fear that too much of the same thing is being done today. Lord help us that we may never withhold from thee that which is thy right!

FRIDAY

Mark 12:10-12. God's workings are many times beyond the understanding of human minds; although these verses make special reference to our Lord, there are every day many ways in which the things that men had despised and refused are still brought to pass.

There is nothing more precious than a conscience void of any knowledge of offence; there is nothing more damning than a conscience bearing certain knowledge of wrong doing. The Pharisees' own consciences were not slow to realize that this parable was meant for them, and their evil conscience drove them to still greater sins. May God help us to understand and work in harmony with his will!

SATURDAY

Mark 12:13-17. Again, Jesus' reply was not merely a clever trick of words, in order to escape the trap of the Pharisees; it was a statement of a vital principle of Christian living. The Christian has certain duties which he owes his government, and there are certain other duties which he owes his God. Properly, neither overlaps, and both are binding. God help us to properly discharge our duties to both!

SUNDAY

Mark 12:18-27. Our Father, may we this day forget our little quibblings and by a more perfect knowledge of the scriptures strive to realize more of the power of God. May we realize that the God who created and controls the universe is not a God of the dead, but a God of the living, who still works in the affairs of men. In Jesus' name, Amen!

W. I. DUKE,
President
Cohen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

Early Christian Characteristics

By Melvin Grove Kyle

"Early" is rather a far-reaching word when it pours itself out in centuries. It will be enough in this brief article to consider the first century, New Testament days, and the second century, the Apostolic Age, as early Christianity.

1. Early Christianity was Oriental. Christ was born a Jew; he lived and died an Oriental. The New Testament, like the Old, is Oriental in literature, manners, customs, and forms. Its modes of expression are thoroughly Oriental. This Orientalism was not of the essence of Christianity at all, but of its visible form; the Church consisted of Orientals Christianized. If Christ had been a Roman and the New Testament set in central Europe, Christianity would have been Occidental, as our Western Christianity is today.

Two things result from this Oriental characteristic of early Christianity. First, no one can ever fully understand the Bible and the Early Church until he knows the Orient and Oriental ways; a Bible interpreter cannot be fully prepared in the Western world. Our Eastern missionaries are our best exegeses, and not a little of their better exegeses they get from the very simple-minded people of those Eastern lands. The Orient understands the Oriental embodiment of Christianity. Second, both the missionaries and we of the Western world have forgotten too often the Orientalism of the Book and the Christ and the Gospel in our insistence upon Occidental forms and methods in Oriental lands, often mistaking Westernizing for Christianizing. Notwithstanding E. Stanley Jones' limping theology, in this respect "The Christ of the Indian Road" is absolutely right. The Orient is the home of Christianity; it does not need to be Westernized in order to be Christianized.

2. In expression of Christian thought early Christians belonged to their times. A quarter of a century ago it was thought that exegesis was an exact science. But the discoveries of B. P. Grenfell and A. S. Hunt and the finding of "The Teaching of the Twelve Apostles" upset New Testament exegesis almost as much as Copernicus upset astronomy. The writer's early teacher in exegesis, that brilliant thinker, Dr. W. G. Moorehead, taught us even then that New Testament Greek was as really a dialect of Greek as was the Attic. These later discoveries have vindicated the opinion which he held with others. New Testament writers simply expressed themselves in the literary forms prevalent in their part of the world. Attic scholars might talk of Alexandrianisms as British scholars talk of Americanisms. But the Alexandrians were as pungent in expression as is platform speech in America today. And the learned world now knows that the early Christians expressed themselves in the vigorous, pungent dialect of the witty Alexandrians, the koine, or the popular Greek dialect of that land.

In addition, some most recent discoveries near Ostia on the Tiber show that early Christians did not stop with dialect only in adopting the popular methods of expressions of the times. Not only was the New Testament a book in everyday language, but it adopted what we should call "newspaper methods." The first great reporter of Christian times was Caesar in his "Commentaries" on the Gallic campaign. When he became emperor, he taught the Romans his "modern" ways. He introduced daily papers, if we may allow such an anachronism to describe his notices. These were posted regularly in public places. Acta Diurna, "Daily Doings," and Acta Populi Romani, "Doings of the Roman People," gave decrees of the government, news of the imperial household, and incidents in the empire and the city. How perfectly early Christianity conformed to the ways of the time in Acta Apostolorum, "Acts of the Apostles," in which were recorded decrees of government and of the Church, news of Caesar's household, and of important persons in early Christianity, and incidental items of news. We no longer wonder at the mention of a needed cloak, or wanted parchments, or information concerning a runaway slave.

3. Early Christianity put the greatest emphasis upon piety. "The Teaching of the Twelve Apostles" dwells only incidentally upon doctrine, except the doctrine of God. Conduct, not creed, is set forth as the index of character. The formulation of creeds became necessary only in combating the heresiarchs. Heresy is the starting point of the formulation of creeds and the necessity for their continuance. Certainly there will be no need for formulated creeds in heaven, and just as certainly they are needed to meet the heresies of this turbulent age of sin. Too great simplicity of statement of Christian truth would be as fatal to Christianity as in our highly developed civilization it would be in civil engineering, physics, or astronomy. Creeds eliminate errors; errors cannot be disposed of by ignoring them.

4. Above everything else, the early Christians were loyal to a Person. They had no hazy notions concerning the personality of this Person, for to them he was very near. The present Christ held sway in that day. He frequently appeared in the earliest days of Christianity and might appear at any time, as testifies the theophany on Patmos at the end of the first century. As yet the pernicious doctrine of an absent Christ had not arisen at Rome. So devout obedience to a Person was set in the foreground of the Christian life. Nothing other than this can account for the treasuring up of all the fragmentary "Sayings of Jesus" brought out of the common life of the people in Egypt by the discoveries of Grenfell and Hunt. These were copied, distributed, and treasured as precious mementos of the great Leader. It was an age when not many could have copies of the Gospels, but these "Sayings" were as Christian tracts carrying the blessed message of the Master to many who could not possess the whole Bible.

Then, to the early Christian, this Person so devoutly obeyed was Lord, and had, they possessed our literary devices of today, they would have written it always with a capital "L." Here the most startling evidence of the deity of our Lord comes to us through the dry-as-dust philological studies of the koine, or common speech of the Alexandrian dialect. In that dialect the word kurios had come to have a most definite and exalted meaning. It is the Greek title of the emperors who arrogated to themselves deification. "Lord Caesar" was the acknowledgment of that deification. No wonder Polycarp chose rather to suffer martyrdom than to say, "Lord Caesar." In contrast with that imperial title we have in the New Testament "Lord Jesus," instead of "Our Lord Caesar," we have "Our Lord Jesus Christ." Of equal import is a discovery announced by William Phillips Hall that the New Testament equivalent of the ineffable name "Jehovah" or Yahweh of the Old Testament is this same kurios, "Lord." Thus, long before heresies made it necessary to define the deity of the Savior of the world, the common life and even the martyrdom of the early Christians had proclaimed him LORD. —The Westminster Teacher.

What's In the Brethren Teacher?

By Dr. C. A. Bame

Inquiries coming to our offices tell us plainly that too many of our people do not know what we have in our publications. A letter today, asked about help in the methods for the teachers using the Boys' and Girls' Quarterlies. Now, it so happens that this is one of the fine features of our Brethren Teacher. I have just finished proof reading the work of Mrs. Nora Bracker Davis offering helps and suggestions of varied kinds for just the thing asked for in today's letter. She spends a good deal of time trying to do for teachers in these grades, what I am trying to do for the higher ones. It seems quite a travesty that so good a help as this should go unknown by any Brethren needing help—and which one does not?

Indeed, I know of no reason why our youth should not be studying the work of our own writers instead of much material that misses so widely the mark of good Biblical material and interpreted by writer who do not know us nor the genius of our people. WHEN WE work together in this WE'LL GET SOMEWHERE.

May I tell you more about this help that seems so unknown? The Brethren Teacher has four features that we believe will make it very worth the place it ought to have and which we hope it soon will obtain: first these, let us say, is the one above referred to. The second is the special articles on difficult subjects for each month. So far, we have found a good reason to spend some extra time in the discovery of the deeper aspects of lessons on "Divine Healing," which has a distinctively Brethren aspect; on the "Temptation of Jesus" one of the most difficult of all doctrinal questions; one on "Missions and Money" comprising the two lessons for March; and next, "The Resurrection" which will be featured in the April Teacher. Space will not permit these discussions in the other Quarterlies and so, we put them where the teachers, at least, can have them.

Third; not the least of the helps that come only in the Teacher is the answer to difficult questions on each lesson answer in connection with the Questions offered in both the Quarterlies and the Teacher. This is for the help of the teacher as well as for proper guidance in difficult places. These answers are to be hunted by all but teachers.

Once more, there is the discussion of the "Lesson in Life," by Dr. Jacobs. His is not the slant of the theologian. I have not been so well acquainted with his work until lately, in this field; but the few lessons we have made together this year tell me that he has many a fine insight which all do not have and can not have without the particular training and scholarship he has. It would seem that Brethren everywhere should seek this feature of good things brought by one so devoted to the truth and so loyal to the heritage of Brethren peoples. I have no doubt that were we to pay a price for this material commensurate with its cost to any other Teacher's Help, it would cost as much as the whole Brethren Teacher. The same could be said of the work of Dr. Miller, but of course his work appears in other quarterlies. Altogether, we believe that it will become increasingly a necessity for our people to use our own publications and for our teachers to know and appreciate the work of those of their own fellowship who labor and sacrifice for them that we may grow together in Christ Jesus and keep the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace; no longer tossed about by every wind of doctrine. Eph. 4:13-16. "Now, I beseech you, brethren, through the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment" 1 Cor. 1:10.

Ashland, Ohio.

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

The Ministry of John the Baptist

(Lesson for January 18)

Scripture Lesson—Luke 3.

Printed Text—Luke 3:7-17.

Devotional Reading—Isa. 40:3-11.

Golden Text—Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance.—Luke 3:8.

Introductory Note

Here for the first time we have a three-day narrative, one account in each of the apocryphic gospels. Read each one, perhaps beginning first with Mk. 1:18; then Mt. 3:12, and lastly our lesson assignment of Luke 3, comparing Isa. 40:3-11. Try to simply get a composite picture of all three narratives.

Always in considering John the Baptist we should keep in mind Christ's statement about him in Luke 7:28: "Great? yes, very great! but the 'lesser ones' in my church are greater than he." This should be a revelation to the Christian of his high privilege and honor. Shall we say that the difference is that John had not seen the cross and the resurrected Lord—as we have? The top of the first flight of stairs is an elevation; but it is only the bottom and first step of the second flight.

John the Baptist

John the Baptist appeared as a public teacher and preacher, as suddenly and mysteriously as his great predecessor Elijah the Tishbite, whom he so much resembled. In the wilderness where he lived and taught is the wild region north and west of the Dead Sea, a vast and horrible succession of steep cliffs and barren ravines called the Arabah. This valley through which the Jordan flows is the deepest chasm in the earth's crust, and possesses the hottest climate in all the world.

"In this great and terrible wilderness John supported himself by eating locusts—the literal insect, which is still greatly esteemed by the natives—and wild honey, which abounded in the crevices of the rocks; whilst for clothing he was content with a coat of coarse camel's hair, such as the Arab women make still; and a girdle of skin about his loins. A cave, like that in which David and his men often found refuge, sufficed him for a home, and the water of the stream that hurried to the Dead Sea, his beverage. Can we wonder that under such a regimen he grew strong?" Nor that he was bold and defiant against those in authority. He had nothing but his life to lose—and that was long held consecrated to God.—Illustrated Quarterly.

Insincerity Denounced

"Who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? v. 7. This is the only motive some people have for professing Christianity: it is simply to avoid hell and to get to heaven at last; while they make free to do as they please in the meantime. Such persons are an insult to the Lord and a disgrace to the church of Christ.

A Christian young lady tells how, once years ago she was staying in a country home and helping her friends prepare for a fancy ball. She herself had adopted the standard of the worldly Christianity around her, instead of the separateness of the Bible. Her cousin came into one of the reception rooms where she sat, and said, pointing to an "Ecce Homo": "Will you help me cover that picture with flags?" "Why?" "Oh, you know we could not leave it uncovered, it would not be quite the thing." Presently the mother came, and was asked her opinion. "Certainly," she said, "I meant to have its face turned to the wall." But the father, who joined the group, insisted on its being taken down and carried out of the room.

That night this young Christian began to meditate as she had never done before: "What!" she asked herself, "do these worldly people feel they cannot do as they please under an imaginative picture of my Lord? And yet I have been accustomed to go into these scenes of gayety, while professing to belong to him, and to realize his presence always by my side." It was the turning point of her life; she forsook worldliness, and separated herself unto God, living a blessed life of consecration; one that was in harmony with the constantly realized presence of her Savior.—The Illustrator.

Repentance and Baptism

"Repentance is to leave the sin you loved before, and show that you in earnest grieve, by doing so no more."

Two lads stole some apples. They did not taste as good as those that had been given to them. Tom said, "I am sorry we stole these, they sort of choke me." Ned said, "So am I, and I am going to take them right back and confess and ask the man to forgive me. It is the last thing I will ever steal. It don't pay." But Tom kept his and ate them. Simply being sorry for sin is not repentance.

A little girl ate some cake and it made her sick, she said, "I am not sorry I ate the cake, but I am sorry it made me sick and sorry that you found it out." Sorrow for the sad consequence of sin is not repentance. They only repent of sin who forsake it. Then is the fruit "meet for repentance."

The prodigal son repented when he left his swine and went back to his father willing to take the place of a servant. Luke 15:18-21.

The magicians repented when they burned their costly books. Acts 19:19. A friend of mine repented when he took $300 worth of tobacco and burned it in the public square and in his grocery put up texts of Scripture where the tobacco signs had been.—Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

Repentance, when honestly professed, was to be followed by baptism as a witness to the world of their desire to be new and

(Continued on page 16)

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Dubail Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
--	--	---

Conemaugh Christian Endeavor Society

We are glad to give a report from the Conemaugh Christian Endeavor Society. When Rev. A. R. Staley accepted the charge in Iowa last year, our Christian Endeavor kept on working with God's help. For nine months we continued without a pastor. During this time our society supervised the mid-week prayer services.

When the churches of our town had union meetings, our society, we are proud to say, had the most young people at church. We had Christian Endeavor, and then went to church in a body.

When Rev. W. H. Schaffer accepted the charge here, there were only seven or eight faithful ones left, but now our society has 19 members with as high as 10 visitors at prayer meeting.

Lately, the Christian Endeavorers were responsible for the Rally Day Program in our Sunday school.

We have found a means of relieving the monotony of the old routine of taking part every Sunday night. The society is divided into three groups, each group having a leader. Every third Sunday it is the duty of one of the leaders to appoint a person in his or her group to act as leader—giving parts to only the ones in his or her group.

In August we gave a gift of $10 to our church and in November, $10 to Krypton Missions. We also pay our tithe quarterly.

Most of our members, we can almost say all of our members, are active Sunday school and church workers.

We are praying for you. Will you pray for us?

WADENA STORMER,
Secretary of Conemaugh Society.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

REVIVAL AT THE SECOND CHURCH OF LOS ANGELES

From the First Brethren church of Los Angeles where Brother A. B. Cover is pastor, we came to the Second church at 60th and Compton Avenues where Brother A. D. Cashman is pastor. This field was another where many former friends reside and worship. Needless to say it was a very happy experience for me from first to last. It was a real privilege to work with a pastor such as Brother Cashman, who is such a fine sample of the caliber of our younger ministers in the Brethren Church fully alive to the tragic days we are living in and yet vitally loyal and jealous for the truth of Christ. This young man is a hard working, devoted servant of the Lord. He is unsparing of his own strength and time, is a great house to house visitor, who although he has been on the field but a few months knows his field like a book. He is a good student of the Word and loves it and continually maintains a high standard of faith in life before his people. The more I see of our younger ministers, the more confidence I have in a future of great promise for our Church.

During these three weeks spent in this church the attendance was very faithful, while at no time did we have capacity attendance, yet the attendance and interest were always good. These people have learned to love the Word and manifested it in their spirit and eagerness with which they received it. Some of our folks from Whittier, from First church of Los Angeles, and from South Gate were frequent attendants at the services during the meetings and gave us a great deal of encouragement and cheer.

I do not feel that we reaped the real harvest in this community at all. There seemed to be a conviction on the part of all that the real harvest had but begun when we were compelled to close. All communities are not alike, some present problems much more difficult to overcome than others do, some communities can be reached in three weeks and all visible possibilities realized while in other communities three weeks of services merely serve to get people to thinking about the things of Christ. I trust that the pastor will have the joy of bringing in the results later on. One thing is certain if they are to be gotten he will get them.

The hospitality that was shown me in this church could not be surpassed. My home while working in this church was at Brother and Sister Alhert Ncher's, who have been friends of mine since I was but a lad of twelve years old. It was a rare privilege of mine to spend these three weeks in this splendid Christian home. The continuous round of hospitality that was extended from the various homes of the Brethren in this church was a great delight to me. I cherish the love of these people very highly.

This church stands in the midst of a great field of possibilities. I do not know of any church that has a greater opportunity right at its doors than this. To be sure the people living round about it are not crowding the church to press their way into its membership, there is indifference and worldliness all around, but these same elements are found in any field anywhere. Yet constant and faithful efforts to live, love, and pray the unsaved to Christ this church may realize the most tremendous growth of any church in our brotherhood. They have a fine building here well equipped and capable of caring for a great growth.

If our meetings resulted in arousing a real vision of what could be done in this community I would feel content that it has accomplished a great purpose. I shall be watching every report from this congregation with great interest and anticipation.

I am now at home at Berne for a short stay before taking up my evangelistic work in January again.

R. PAUL MILLER,
Berne, Indiana.

BRIGHTON, INDIANA, REVIVAL

The First Brethren church of Brighton, Indiana, under the able leadership of Rev. C. D. Whitmer is on the upgrade. Brother Whitmer is doing a wonderful piece of work for his Lord and Master in Brighton and the people in general have great respect and the highest regards for him.

He asked the writer to conduct a two weeks' revival campaign for him and his faithful members extending from December 8-21, 1930. We went into the fray, trusting the Lord Jesus Christ and he has blest Brother Whitmer in his labors. For when you consider that Brother Whitmer gives only one Sunday in two weeks to this field I assume he has achieved mightily, in that 23 individuals answered the call of Jesus and accepted him as Lord. Twenty-one of these have been baptized, one by letter, making 22 already in the church and the other waiting baptism, hoping to have father and mother come also. This goes to prove Brother Whitmer has proven himself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

This Brighton church has a fine group of loyal members who are true to the Brethren Church. They are worthy the best consideration and care. They treated the evangelist splendidly in every way. Even the highest respect was paid to us by those outside the church. In fact, one soon discovers that the people in and around Brighton are fair minded and respond readily to worthwhile challenges. They know how to care for one that he might be fit and anxious to give his best. They were good to me and I tried to render the best service in return. I shall always remember the Brighton folks, both inside and outside the church.

Mrs. Owen came to my assistance the latter part of the last week and took care of the singing. The church wished that she might have been with me all through, but home duties keep a minister's wife from getting away and doing some things they would like to do. She is a splendid help and I wish I could have her in all my evangelistic work.

We thank one and all for their cooperation in these services and pray that the influence of the service may continue through all eternity.

I shall be with the Gravelton, Indiana church beginning January 5, 1931. Remember us to the Lord.

BENJ. F. OWEN,
Nappanee, Indiana.

NEW LEBANON CHURCH NEWS

A report has not appeared since the account of the rededicating of our church building so we will start the new year right and give a report and summary of our work here.

As in most fields we have felt the financial depression and unemployment situation, but as a whole the church has kept pace with the progress she has been making in former years. With the heavy burden the church building program has brought us the financial condition of the church is one that we might hope it to be.

Our average attendance at Sunday school has experienced a nice gain over last year. The attendance at the evening services not what it might be.

As far as adding new members we do not have many to report since the large gathering of the revival efforts of Rev. R. Paul Miller in the spring. Since the meeting we have made as an objective the enriching of the spiritual life of the present church members. If we could count on our present membership we would have more than we could seat, even in our new and enlarged building. So we believe when on the membership gets set on fire for God there will be a continuous inflow of unsaved seeking Christ as their Savior.

We shall continue this objective as far as the near future is concerned. So some time in the latter part of March we hope to have a 10 days' meeting with Prof. M. A. Stuckey as the principal speaker. Pray for the meeting and for a deepening of the spiritual forces of this congregation.

Two special features of the fall program should be mentioned here. Our church joined with the other Brethren churches in the Miami Valley in the Bible Institute held at the Dayton church, November 23 to 27 with Prof. M. A. Stuckey and Dr. C. Yoder as the speakers. We are sorry however that not more of our members availed themselves of this Institute. Those who attended were wonderfully pleased with the way the speakers presented their different messages. The Institute was a real treat for all concerned and we are looking forward to another institute of the same nature during the year 1931.

Dr. C. F. Yoder was with us for two services on November 16th. This indeed was a rare treat to the congregation here. The offering given him was an indication of the appreciation by the people of his message and fine Christian spirit. The children should not soon forget him and the work in South America.

During the Christmas season two programs were rendered by the Sunday school. On Sunday evening before Christmas the Choir and adult members of the Sunday school rendered a program, and White Gift in the nature of clothing, etc., were brought for the needs of our Kentucky Mission field. On Christmas eve, the children of the Sunday school rendered their program and regular White Gift Offering for the National Sunday School Board was lifted. (The people have responded splendidly during this Christmas season in relieving the poor and remembering the needs of others.

We have ended five years of ministry and in on our sixth year with this church. All has been accomplished that we might have desired. Much is left for the years ahead. But we believe under the guidance of the Holy Spirit some worthwhile things have been accomplished. We have a foundation has been laid that will enable the Church to do more effective service for the community, for the brotherhood large and for the Christ we love. Pray for the work here.

L. V. KING, Pastor.

WASHINGTON CHURCH BUILDING FUND

(Fifth Report)

Previously acknowledged .....	$1,781.33
Waterloo, Iowa .....	33.54
Easttown, Pa. (Second church) ..	1.00
San Francisco, Calif. ....	22.50
Easttown, Pa., .....	8.00
Eastland, Ohio (additional) Mrs. Portense Wertz .....	2.00
Eastland, Ohio .....	10.00
Eastwood, Maryland .....	10.00
Eastersdale, Pa. ....	11.50
East Johanna Nielsen, S. America ..	5.00
East Folgis, Goshen, Ind. ....	4.00
Total offering made by brotherhood ..	$1,888.87
Offering by the Washington church ..	2,101.13
Total to date .....	$3,990.00

Fraternally,

ELMER TAMKIN, Treasurer, Washington Building Campaign Committee, 1018 E. Street, N. E., Washington, D. C.

ALLENTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

Dear Readers of the Evangelist:

We have often been asked, "Well, how is Allentown?" My answer is that although many things have been said unfavorable about this flock, yet I can say I never had a better people in my ministry. Our membership consists of fifty-nine. Fourteen of these are in their teen age. Many of the parent ages are on the outside waiting for the Spirit to move them. The attendance at the regular services averages between seventy-five per cent of the membership.

In the last year we have had several visitors of whom five are steadily attending services. Some of these people have been led as to the doctrine of the church. They have stated, "We like your church. It is a very friendly church. We like the Gospel." After showing the Bible teaching, the practise of the same by the early church to them, they all so far have acknowledged the teaching for which the Brethren Church stands as being more in accord with the Bible than that of the church to which they belonged, yet for such reasons, as, "My mother would not want to join," or "Not while mother lives," "My wife thinks our baptism right," "I refuse to obey the Gospel. Some, on the other hand ask, "Where in the world do you get Feet Washing?" I reply, "None in the world, but in the teachings of Jesus and the Apostles." Allentown is a town of about 110,000 and that seventy-five per cent of these are Lutherans. The impact of Lutheranism upon them seems permanent. Once in a great while one turns, they die hard to their former faith. Never when they are turned they become faithful to the word and loyal in service.

During the last ten years some of the evangelists of our church have visited here with the best of messages, and have had large audiences, out of which many came forward and even were baptized, but kept their membership in the church where they previously belonged. This inconsistency still holds among several of the people in this city. They acknowledge that the church teaches and practises the truth, but they themselves are joined to those whom they say do not practise the truth, and by their acts show that we who practice the truth are wrong. Yet, they say, "No one can say that the Brethren Church is not both Biblically and historically right." "Then why not practice these truths with us, and help us spread the truth to others?" is our reply.

As a minister of the Gospel of Jesus Christ I can not cheapen the Gospel and be true to my Master at the same time. I am just a messenger to deliver what he gave to be told to the lost world. Jesus said, If ye love me ye will obey my Word. Though weak and erring, let us set him first.

I do appreciate these faithful folks who for years has borne the load and through all kinds of opposition have stood true unto God and his Word, and held the work together. Some of the readers will recall the names of some: Sister Deifer (formerly Harley) and Fehnels, Klines, Hargraves, Jacobys, Schaffers, Silbermans, Oswalds, Muselmans, Zelnors (now Kameo) Liser, Stout, Mrs. Shorts (formerly a Harley). All these for years stood the taunt and scorn of the people for their faith and their obedience to the Bible's peculiar teachings, as some call them. I am glad to know that these people know the word of God and will not take a substitute for it.

Pastor and people hope that the by-gones may be gone and that by the grace of God we may together more fully dedicate ourselves to the doing of God's will in God's way in order that our lives may be so fragrant and influential with others that many this coming year may be saved and caused to rejoice in the salvation of our Lord Jesus Christ. The door of 1931 is ready to open.

There may be some, who read this article, before whose heart's door Jesus has stood knocking, trying to get that heart to surrender all to him. Would you not read Revelation, chapter 3 and verses 8 and 20, and say yes to him, laying all on the altar and begin the year of 1931 aright? There is no joy in doing it half-way. Brethren, will we importune God this year to open unto us a great door? People's hearts which seemed to have been closed to us this past year, may open this year. There is nothing that makes God open new doors, like the heart which is wholly dedicated for the Master's use. That is a heart that holds nothing back from God. You and I may, like Paul, want to go into several places, but as God shut doors that seemed pleasing to Paul, so he may close several doors to us no matter how important we think they may be. He knows what is best and for what we are best fitted. Will we say, "Not my will, but thine, O Lord"? Last Sunday morning, giving the eighth in a series of sermons on the Holy Spirit and the subject being, "In Communion with the Holy Spirit," I said to my congregation, "Brethren, for the last several years there has been a longing within my heart for a fuller manifestation of the Holy Spirit's power, in and through this heart of mine." For there is no doubt in my soul as to what God did for thousands of saints in years gone by, he can do the same for us today, if we meet his conditions. He is "the same yesterday, today and forever." He is the same today in every way as he was. I can say with John Fletcher, "Oh to be filled with the Holy Spirit."

As I read the biographies of the early saints, beginning with Acts 2, I am inspired and recommend the same reading to others. Read the third and fourth chapter, also see the requirement for the church officers in Acts six. And read chapters 8 to 12, also read Ephesians and do not leave out the fourth chapter. See Tertulian on Baptism, chapter 4; Irenaeus on Prayer for the Holy Spirit; Theophilus of Antioch, on Acts 11: 26; Clement of Alexandria, Book III, Chapter 17—"The Filling of the Spirit." Also read Huss, Savanarola, Fenelon, George Fox. Bunyan, the Wesleys, Whitefield, John Fletcher, Christmas Evans, P. Cartwright, C. G. Finney, Bray, A. B. Earle, D. L. Moody, D. Brainerd, J. Edwards. There is one book which gives the lives of these men and many other in a brief way and yet sets forth the highest and best in each. I do not know of a more helpful book to any minister or teacher, and especially to the Brethren. The title is, "Deeper Experiences of Famous Christians." The author is James Gilchrist Lawson, Evangelist. The book is published by Glad Tidings Publishing Co., 602 Lakeside Building, Chicago, Illinois.

I confess there is no book that I set nearer the Bible than this. This is the statement of several others.

May our suggestive motto for the year be, "Abide in Jesus." See how often Jesus urges this in the Gospel of John, Chapter 15:1-15. Let us read this. The more we read this, the more we shall see the absolute necessity of abiding in Jesus Christ, our Lord, our King, our All and in all.

See Romans 4:11. Dead ... but alive. ... Do we practice it? Again, "Be not drunk with wine, ... but be filled with the Spirit." In accordance to the fulness within, so we express ourselves. Are we free to express ourselves for our Master? May our fellowship more than ever be with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ. May the Holy Spirit our teacher and communicator, our guide and helper, be pleased with our yielded lives for the Master's service and mightily through us lift up Jesus before those with whom we come in contact this year and make us fruitful for him.

In this field we are looking to the Lord to be used of him more this year than ever hitherto. We are weak and erring, but our Lord is mighty, and through him we can do all things for, he strengtheneth us.

S. E. CHRISTIANSEN.

REPORT OF THE ILLIOKOTA DISTRICT CONFERENCE HELD AT WATERLOO, IOWA, OCTOBER, 6, 7, 8, 1930

(Continued from last week)

1:30 P. M.

Song service led by Rev. E. Forrest Byers. The Women's Missionary Society officers for the coming year were installed by Moderator S. M. Whetstone.

The Sunday school hour was in charge of Mrs. F. A. Wisner of Waterloo who is the representative to the Iowa Council of Religious Education.

A model Sunday school worship hour was conducted, built around a picture of the boy Jesus with the doctors in the temple. We as church workers must be about our Father's business. Our music in the Sunday school must be sacred. Art of many kinds can be used to bring the message of Christ to our Juniors. Have decision days in our Junior department. The age of conversion has dropped. If we save our children before they are twelve years of age we will not have to pick them out of the pitfalls at seventeen or eighteen. Let's be intelligent Sunday school workers and use the methods which will obtain results.

Brother C. H. Gnagey of Waterloo brought us an inspirational talk on Sunday school work.

Why are Sunday schools important? To bring Christianity to a world that needs it. Our present day conditions of dense population need Christianity. The world will not be safe for Democracy until that Democracy is Christian. It is the job of the Church to teach religion, not the job of the public school. The lack of home influence is the greatest contribution to the criminal field today. The fact that the majority of our criminals today are mere boys and girls is due to lack of home training and the proper influence in the home.

Brother S. M. Whetstone brought a stirring message on the educational side of our Sunday schools.

What we need in our Sunday schools is greater leadership. Our vision is limited. We must have a desire or vision to accomplish things for Christ. We need a larger and stronger faith. Our young people today do not understand the great principles of the Bible. We need a deeper consecration. If we will lead our children to the home school they will reach the Father's home. Brother Whetstone also presented a brief outline of the budget and plans of the National Sunday School Association.

Plans for the coming year were presented by the Women's Missionary Society, the District Mission Board and the College Trustees.

Final reports of committees and all final business of the Conference were disposed of at this time.

Closing Session, Wednesday, October 8,
7:30 P. M.

Rev. C. H. Gnagey of Waterloo had charge of our evening song service and devotional period. Special number by the Waterloo choir, Processional—Holy, Holy, Holy. Congregational singing, Responsive reading, followed by prayer.

Antiphon—'I'm a Pilgrim and I'm a Stranger' Waterloo Choir. Two special numbers were rendered by Ernest Myers, Pleasant Grove church, Musical Saw; Martha Strayer, Hudson, Iowa, Violin; Mrs. E. Forrest Myers of Hudson, Iowa, Piano.

Quartet—The Depths of the Riches of God. Male Quartette of Waterloo church.

8:00 P. M.: Closing sermon of the conference brought by Rev. A. R. Staley of Dallas Center and Vice Moderator Elect.

Text from 2 Corinthians 6:14-15. "What concord hath Christ with Belial?" If the church is going to join the world what is the need for the world to join the church?

Subject—Compromise.

Christ's command was to "Come ye out and be ye separate." God Makes no compromise with sin and neither can we if we are to do God's work. Holiness is one of the great outstanding things in God's word. Paul was willing to commit all to Christ. Jesus promised at the ascension that in carrying out the great commission his presence would be with them always. Matthew 28:20. In Hebrews 13:6 Paul in his writings tells the Christians to so live and conduct their lives that they may say the Lord is their helper. It is not God's will that men sin. Adam and Eve were instructed as to their conduct in the garden but they disobeyed God and they were ejected from this paradise. As soon as we accept Christ, Satan steps in to carry us back to a life of sin. Satan is always putting obstacles in the way of the soul that would serve Christ. As long as we advance the Devil backs away, but the moment we stop, he advances. God needs you now, not tomorrow. Let us return to our homes with a strong resolve to make no compromise with sin.

Conference closed with singing of "Blest Be the Tie that Binds" and the benediction.
O. P. PRATHER, Secretary.

REPORT OF RECEIPTS FOR HOME MISSIONS DURING DECEMBER, 1930

Note—All amounts are for General Fund excepting those designated as follows: (K) Kentucky Fund, (E) Church Erection Fund.

1st Br. Ch., Turlock, Cal.
Mr. & Mrs. W. W. Heltman, Oakland, Calif. ....	$ 25.00
1st Br. Ch., Elkhart, Ind., cong. ..	100.00
Rubie Garrison, Stockton, Cal. ....	1.00
1st Br. Ch., Ashland, Ohio
Mr. & Mrs. C. L. Anspach, Ypsilanti, Mich. ....	10.00
Mr. & Mrs. W. O. Ringler, Somerset, Pa. ....	2.50
1st Br. Ch., New Troy, Mich.
Sunday school .....	8.00
Mr. & Mrs. W. B. Taber, Long Beach, Calif. ....	50.00
H. C. Hostettler & Family, Star Route, Oakland, Md. ....	3.00
H. C. Hostettler & Family, Star Route, Oakland, Md. ....	K 2.00
Mr. and Mrs. Charles Himiller, Washington C. H., Ohio .....	5.00
1st Br. Ch., Portis, Kansas
Mr. & Mrs. T. N. Garner .....	100.00
Rev. S. Lowman .....	E 10.00
G. H. Wolters .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. B. D. Thompson and Belle .....	3.00
Mr. & Mrs. B. D. Thompson and Belle .....	K 2.00
Congregation .....	20.00
Congregation .....	K 2.50
Sunday school .....	6.00
Total .....	$148.50
Mrs. E. G. Goode, Harrisonburg, Va.	10.00
A Member, Bellefontaine, Ohio ...	3.00
Riverside Institute, Lost Creek, Ky.
Tyrol Noble .....	5.00
R. M. Hadden .....	5.00
McKinley Campbell .....	5.00
Bessie Hooks .....	5.00
Congregation .....	11.70
Total .....	31.70
Alice B. Longaker, Long Beach, Cal.	5.00
Alice B. Longaker, Long Beach ..	K 5.00
Total .....	10.00
1st Br. Ch., Beaver City, Nebr.
G. B. Seibert .....	15.00
Mrs. Emma Atwood .....	5.00
Anna Manley .....	5.00
Total .....	25.00
1st Br. Ch., Mexico, Ind.
Congregation .....	43.06
Congregation .....	K 9.50
Congregation .....	E 5.50
Total .....	58.06
Mrs. Annie C. Martin, Waynesboro, Pa. ....	5.00
1st Br. Church, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Mrs. W. G. Gans .....	10.00
Rev. Claud Studebaker .....	5.00
Mr. Edw. Sefton .....	5.50
Mr. S. N. Wilcox .....	5.00
Mr. E. C. Wilcox .....	10.00
Mrs. John A. Rishel .....	5.00

Mr. & Mrs. J. Burner .....	5.00
Congregation .....	74.10
Total .....	120.00
Middlebranch Br. Ch., Middlebranch, O.
E. S. Correll .....	10.00
Mary Hooks, Mosgrove, Pa. ....	K 5.00
Mrs. J. Y. Hooks, Mosgrove Pa. K	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. James D. Price, Tucson, Arizona .....	2.00
Miamisburg Br. Ch., Miamisburg, O.
Congregation .....	K 4.00
1st Br. Ch., New Paris, Indiana
Congregation .....	14.00
Williamstown Br. Ch., Williamstown, O.
Mrs. Melinda Thomas .....	5.00
Rev. Conard Sandy .....	5.00
Congregation .....	K 5.00
Total .....	15.85
1st Br. Ch., Ardmore, Indiana
Congregation .....	25.00
T. C. Lyon & Family, Elmhurst, Ill.	25.00
M. Alice Ward, Del Mar, Calif. ...	5.00
1st Br. Ch., Muncie, Indiana
Mrs. Susie Garrett .....	5.00
Mrs. E. W. Garrett .....	1.00
Mrs. Maude Cross .....	2.00
Mrs. Hamilton & Mrs. Arthur ..	2.00
Anonymous .....	1.00
Church Offering .....	25.00
Total .....	34.25
Arthur Baer, Muncie, Indiana ....	1.00
Mrs. S. J. Davis, Altoona, Pa. ...	10.00
Mrs. Irene Sollenberger, Altoona, Pa. ....	5.00
2nd Br. Ch., Johnstown, Pa.
Mrs. John Griffith .....	5.00
Rev. Geo. Jones .....	5.00
General Offering .....	6.00
Total .....	16.31
Jane Letcher, Wells Creek, Pa. ...	K 2.00
1st Br. Ch., New Lebanon, Ohio
Dora Conover .....	25.00
W. M. S. ....	1.00
Mr. & Mrs. Geo. W. Kinzie ....	1.00
Rev. L. V. King & Family .....	1.00
John C. Eck .....	1.00
Susie Vaniman .....	1.00
Mr. & Mrs. Frank Weaver .....	1.00
Mr. & Mrs. Harvey Dafler .....	1.00
M. M. Hoover & Family .....	1.00
Miscellaneous .....	3.00
Total .....	109.14
3rd Br. Ch., Johnstown, Pa.
H. H. Link .....	2.00
Geo. Benshoff, family & sister ..	2.00
Catherine Benshoff .....	2.00
Beginners' Class .....	2.00
Mr. & Mrs. Floyd Benshoff .....	2.00
Mrs. Clara Smith .....	2.00
Mrs. E. J. Burkhart .....	2.00
Wm. Keifer .....	2.00
Catherine Keifer .....	2.00
C. L. Figart .....	2.00
Anna Mae Hickman .....	2.00
L. S. Stutzman .....	2.00
Mr. & Mrs. Jas. Carthen .....	2.00
Rev. & Mrs. J. L. Gingrich .....	2.00
Sara Stutzman .....	2.00
Mr. & Mrs. D. W. Wagner .....	2.00
Merle Wagner .....	2.00
Leslie Stutzman .....	2.00
D. F. Benshoff .....	2.00
Cash .....	2.00
Total .....	112.50
Co-Operative Br. Ch., Columbus, O.
Congregation .....	2.00
Center Chapel Br. Ch., Peru, Ind.
Mrs. Geo. Huddleson .....	2.00
Mrs. H. G. Hoy, Berlin, Pa. ....	2.00
1st Br. Ch., Martinsburg, Pa.
Mrs. Clare Hagey, Detroit, Mich.	2.00
Mrs. Sara Snider .....	2.00
Mrs. H. K. Replogle .....	2.00
W. M. S. ....	2.00

Rose Circle S. S. Class .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. Floyd Moine .....	3.00	Mrs. Cora Stacy .....	5.00
Ladies' Bible Class .....	5.00	Lloyd Hoover .....	1.00	Miss Mary Stacy .....	5.00
Ever Faithful Class .....	5.00	Mrs. H. B. Houck .....	5.00	Mrs. Mollie Griffin .....	5.00
Mrs. S. L. Wisler .....	5.00	E. B. Niswonger .....	1.50	Loyal Women's Class .....	5.00
Mrs. J. L. Hampton .....	5.00	E. O. Frank .....	2.00	Mrs. Idella Walters .....	1.00
Mrs. Mary E. Klepser .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. H. C. Brickel .....	1.00	Mr. Dawasky .....	1.00
Mrs. J. E. Dilling .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. Floyd Hoover .....	1.00	Elizabeth Moser .....	1.50
D. M. Klepser .....	5.00	Loose Offering .....	8.50	Loose Offering .....	11.50
Loose Offering .....	35.00	Total .....	43.75	Total .....	60.00
Loose Offering .....	9.00	1st Br. Ch., Dayton, Ohio		E. A. Myer, Flora, Indiana .....	5.00
Total .....	109.00	W. M. S. .....	25.00	W. M. S. Society, Wooster, Ohio ..	10.00
Br. Ch., Milledgeville, Ill.		L. F. & Dollie Burkett .....	50.00	M. M. Funkhouser, Strasburg, Va.	5.00
Mrs. Ethel Straka .....	10.20	R. D. Barnard .....	25.00	Mr. & Mrs. Chas. F. Schwab, Hat-	25.00
Geo. E. Cone & Family .....	10.00	Roy C. Kinsey & Family .....	25.00	boro, Pa. ....
Mr. & Mrs. J. E. Miller .....	10.00	Home Builders' Class .....	25.00	Mr. & Mrs. Banner H. Bush, Belle-
Ladies' Aid .....	10.00	Golden Rule Bible Class .....	17.50	fontaine, Ohio .....	5.00
Mable Schilling .....	5.00	Dr. E. W. Longnecker & Wife E	11.00	1st Br. Ch., Carleton, Nebr. ....	12.50
Alice Livengood .....	5.00	Dr. E. W. Longnecker & Wife .	5.00	Alice Garber, Anga & Emma Gar-
Fannie Walker .....	5.00	Mrs. Belle M. Ewing .....	5.00	ber, Leon, Iowa .....	13.00
Mr. & Mrs. W. L. Miller .....	5.00	Mrs. Belle M. Ewing .....	5.00	Loree Br. Ch., Loree, Indiana ....	40.55
Dessie Hanna .....	5.00	Mrs. Belle M. Ewing .....	5.00	Mrs. Frank Wood, Eaton, Indiana	1.50
Samuel Livengood .....	5.00	Perry Bowman .....	12.50	Mr. & Mrs. Harvey J. Schrock,
Madden Crouse .....	5.00	Mrs. Edith Kem .....	10.00	Elkhart, Indiana .....	5.00
Welcome Class No. 3 .....	5.00	Blanche Hamburger & Daughter	10.00	Mrs. Bessie Suman, Fairplay, Md.	5.00
Prof. Ward P. Beard .....	2.50	Mr. & Mrs. Roy A. Patterson ..	10.00	Yellow Creek Br. Ch., Hopewell, Pa.
Prof. Ward P. Beard .....	2.50	Mr. & Mrs. G. W. Brumbaugh ..	5.00	Sunday school .....	6.00
Loyal Daughters' Class No. 4 ..	5.00	Mrs. Emma Bowman .....	5.00	First Br. Ch., Warsaw, Ind. ....	57.83
Loose Offering .....	46.95	L. E. Forsyth .....	5.00	1st Br. Ch., N. Manchester, Ind.
Loose Offering .....	1.00	Mr. & Mrs. Geo. W. Wogaman ..	5.00	Rev. J. R. Schutz .....	8.00
Total .....	138.15	A. C. Smith & Family .....	5.00	Miss Grace Ebbinghouse .....	5.00
Br. Ch., Dallas Center, Iowa		Mrs. C. W. Abbott—for Erythian		Walter Loucks .....	10.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. T. Row .....	10.00	Bible Class .....	5.00	Ezra Frantz .....	5.00
W. M. S. .....	5.00	E. A. Reinhart .....	5.00	J. W. Dewey .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. E. B. Robinson ....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. W. E. Moist .....	5.00	E. Jay Hippensteel .....	5.00
J. W. Herr .....	3.00	Mr. & Mrs. Howard Bolender ...	2.50	J. K. Latzenhiser .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Conrad Greif .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. Howard Bolender E	2.50	Mr. & Mrs. F. E. Reed .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. D. F. Hoover .....	5.00	Sunday school .....	32.00	Union Ohmart .....	5.00
Mrs. H. Randall .....	3.00	Junior C. E. ....	5.00	Loose Offering .....	73.29
Mr. & Mrs. Noah Hawbaker ...	5.00	Roy & Lydia Macher .....	3.00	Total .....	126.29
Loose Offering .....	18.75	Elizabeth Campbell .....	3.00	1st Br. Ch., Masontown, Pa.
Total .....	59.75	Geo. W. Snell .....	2.50	R. A. Swartzwelder .....	10.00
Carleton Br. Ch., Carleton, Nebr.		W. A. Gearhart .....	2.00	Mrs. C. L. Sangston .....	5.00
R. A. Lichty .....	5.00	Loose Offering .....	21.50	Mrs. Amanda Griffith .....	5.00
Carleton Br. Ch., Garwin, Iowa		Total .....	355.00	Mrs. Emma Keener .....	5.00
Mrs. Fetter Hall .....	5.00	1st Br. Ch., Berlin, Pa.		Mrs. G. W. Honsaker .....	30.00
Congregation .....	5.56	A. B. Cober .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. Chas. Johnson ....	5.00
Total .....	10.56	F. H. Meyers .....	5.00	Miss Melvina Williard .....	.50
ush Valley Br. Ch., Kittanning, Pa.		Mrs. E. S. Kimmel .....	5.00	Loose Offering .....	12.50
Eva B. Williams .....	5.00	Minnie E. Dickey .....	5.00	Loose Offering .....	2.00
Eva B. Williams .....	5.00	Fred F. Platt .....	5.00	Total .....	75.00
Total .....	$10.00	Mary J. Meyers .....	5.00	1st Br. Ch., College Corner, Ind.
ckie C. Smith, R. F. D. No. 1,		Mr. & Mrs. J. H. Glessner ....	5.00	Tried & True Class .....	25.00
Bedford, Pa. ....	10.00	Mr. & Mrs. M. O. Barkley ....	5.00	Loose Offering .....	31.40
Br. Ch., Krypton, Kentucky		Mr. & Mrs. A. M. Cober .....	5.00	Total .....	56.40
A. C. Whitaker & Wife .....	2.00	Mrs. Harry Shultz .....	5.00	1st Br. Ch., Lanark, Ills.
Elizabeth Bates .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. J. M. Musser .....	5.00	Builders' Class .....	5.00
Bertha Combs .....	5.00	Mrs. C. P. Baer .....	5.00	Mrs. Fanny E. Flickinger .....	1.00
General Offering .....	2.00	Mr. & Mrs. D. C. White .....	5.00	Mrs. Fanny E. Flickinger .....	2.00
Lyda Carter .....	2.50	Loose Offering .....	71.25	Mrs. Fanny E. Flickinger .....	2.00
Lyda Carter .....	7.50	Total .....	136.25	R. M. Flickinger .....	5.00
Frank Gehman .....	8.33	Olive Bayles, R. F. D. No. 1, Chili,		George Garber .....	35.00
Total .....	32.33	Indiana .....	3.00	Rev. & Mrs. C. C. Grisso .....	5.00
aurertown Br. Ch., Maurertown, Va.		Mr. & Mrs. N. J. Buckland, Oak-		Mr. & Mrs. Roy Greenawalt ...	5.00
Congregation .....	152.22	land, Calif. ....	10.00	Emma Hinkel Estate .....	50.00
om a Sister in Spokane, Wash...	1.00	1st Br. Ch., New Paris, Ind. ....	1.00	G. C. Lamp .....	5.00
a E. Schwartz, 227 Noreg Place,		Fairhaven Br. Ch., West Salem, O.		Mrs. Rilla Lower .....	15.00
Brooklawn, N. J. ....	5.00	Mrs. James Crawford .....	5.00	Mrs. Sadie Puterbaugh .....	25.00
in Street Br. Ch., Meyersdale, Pa.		Mrs. Julia Sechrist .....	5.00	Mrs. Sadie Puterbaugh .....	25.00
Berean Class .....	5.00	W. C. Martin .....	5.00	H. B. Puterbaugh .....	25.00
Emma Olinger .....	10.00	Loose Offering .....	22.14	Spencer Peterman .....	5.00
Kate Olinger .....	10.00	Total .....	37.14	Mrs. Florence Truman .....	25.00
Mr. & Mrs. W. E. Ronk .....	5.00	1st Br. Ch., Oak Hill, W. Va.		Mrs. Florence Truman .....	25.00
Woman's Missionary Society ...	10.00	Dr. H. A. Duncan .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. Earl Wilkins .....	5.00
Loose Offering .....	28.40	Mr. & Mrs. Geo. Simpson .....	10.00	United Workers' Class .....	11.00
Total .....	73.40	Rev. & Mrs. Freeman Ankrum ..	10.00	Miscellaneous .....	24.10
Br. Ch., Rittman, Ohio		Mr. & Mrs. Rosser Miller ....	5.00	Miscellaneous .....	2.50
Andrew Blatter .....	1.25	Loose Offering .....	18.00	Miscellaneous .....	1.00
A. C. Moine .....	5.00	Loose Offering .....	2.00	Total .....	303.60
Mr. & Mrs. Fred Blatter .....	5.00	Total .....	50.00	1st Br. Ch., South Bend, Ind.
Mr. & Mrs. A. S. Petit .....	2.00	1st Br. Ch., Uniontown, Pa.		Mr. & Mrs. M. V. Batchel .....	5.00
Priscilla Bruny .....	1.00	Mrs. Matilda Antram .....	5.00	B. H. Baxter .....	5.00
Mrs. D. W. Brenneman .....	5.00	Mrs. Matilda Antram .....	10.00	Mr. & Mrs. C. S. Jackson .....	5.00
V. Kime .....	.50	Mrs. Matilda Antram .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. N. V. Leatherman ..	5.00
F. Hatfield .....	1.00	Mrs. J. H. Thompson .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. E. E. Stickler .....	5.00

Miss Eva Whitmer .....	4.00
Charles Hultgren .....	3.00
Maude Wingard .....	2.00
Mr. & Mrs. T. J. Foraker .....	2.00
Miss Lillie Jester .....	2.00
Mr. & Mrs. Frank Cover .....	2.00
Mrs. Byron Christian .....	2.00
O. Ringer .....	1.50
Mrs. Luella C. Kebert .....	1.00
Miss Lillie Garwood .....	1.00
Mrs. Edith Kilmer .....	1.00
Mrs. Alma Cissne .....	1.00
J. C. Burns .....	1.00
Mrs. Flora Snider .....	1.00
Loose Offering .....	6.10
Total .....	55.60

R. PAUL MILLER, Secretary-Treasurer,
The Missionary Board of the Brethren
Church, Berne, Indiana.

(To be continued)

He who thinks only of himself has his train of thought on a sidetrack.

The best way is to follow Christ, who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

Sunday School Notes

(Continued from page 11)

clean. John's baptism was immersion in the waters of the Jordan and may have been suggested by the Jewish rite practiced by converts to Judaism. These proselytes, as they were called, were compelled to plunge, or immerse, themselves in water immediately following their (adult) circumcision. It has been suggested by some that John's baptism implied that the whole Jewish nation was disfranchised and had to be re-admitted into the spiritual Israel by the same ceremony by which members of heathen nations were admitted. Christian baptism, however, is not dependent of this course, but on our Lord's teaching and command and the practice of the Apostles. The principal passages in the New Testament, in which baptism is described, are as follows: Matt. 28:18-20; Mark 16:16; John 3:5; Acts 2:38; 8:12, 16, 38-39; 10:47-48; 19:1-5; 22:16; Rom. 6:4; 1 Cor. 1:14-16; 6:11; Eph. 4:26; Col. 2:12; Heb. 10:22, 23. Briefly stated, Christian baptism, as Brethren people understand it, is triune immersion, forward action, once into the name of each member of the Trinity, for the remission of sins, and it is invariably followed by the laying on of hands and prayer for the reception of the Holy Spirit.

Preparation for the Messiah

All his preaching and baptising was in preparation for the coming of the Messiah. That was the one purpose of his life and he never lost sight of it. In the mountain regions, the washing of the hillsides by the winter rains destroys each year a large portion of the best laid roads. In the desert regions the shifting sands, and in the more fertile regions the abundant growth of weeds and shrubbery, make Eastern roads well nigh impassable, unless care is exercised for their frequent and special clearing. In many parts of the East the ancient roads were prepared or repaired only at the special call of the king, or for his special service on an exceptional occasion. So the hearts of God's people had become overgrown with worldliness and their eyes blinded by self-righteousness and their ears were deaf to the divine voice, and there was need of a preparation that they might be made ready to receive their promised Messiah. That was John's mission.

BIBLES STILL NEEDED

(Continued from page 2)

to do is peddle Bibles. I never saw one and I don't need one."

"By the looks of things you haven't gotten very far without the Bible," said the colporteur. "Why not give it a try?" This friendly and completely disarming answer permitted the colporteur to tell him about God and to read from the New Testament. Finally the man said: "Mister, that there Book sure sounds good to me. I'll take back what I said and if your price ain't too high I'll buy it." When told it could be had for five cents he insisted on paying ten.

Two weeks later the colporteur decided to make another call on this man and was gladly received. They sat and talked about the teachings of Jesus for the man had faithfully read his Testament. He told the colporteur that he had made up his mind "to get a steady job, cut out the booze and live like a human ort to live." He thanked the colporteur for calling and said that in 20 years no one had taken any interest in helping him to be a better man.

American Bible Society, Bible House,
Astor Place, New York City.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

LYDIA, MARYLAND

At our business meeting just held, the congregation asked the pastor to conduct the third consecutive evangelistic campaign in this pastorate. However I was given permission to exchange meetings with some other pastor if possible to do so.

If there is a pastor within reach of St. James, who would be willing to make an exchange of meetings I should be glad to correspond with him.

Address W. S. BAKER,
Lydia Maryland.

To All Brethren Ministers of Ohio

Both of the Church of the Brethren and the Brethren Church

We are calling your attention to a two-fold event of unusual importance. It is the annual Ohio Pastors' Convention and the Interdenominational Fellowship Luncheon and meeting of the ministers of the two branches of the Dunker fraternity.

The date of the Ohio Pastors' Convention is January 19 to 22, and we are glad to say that the tentative program promises a spiritual treat of rare interest and helpfulness. We must be frank to say that last year's convention did not seem to some of us to be as inspiring and practical as on previous years. But this year, in response to demand, we have offered us a program that excels all previous ones in real helpfulness, built, as it is, around the general theme: "The Technique of an Efficient Minister." It deals with the minister as pastor, as pulpit man, as educator, as leader of worship, as reformer, as administrator and as student of affairs (exemplified in Jeremiah). Some of the outstanding speakers are Daniel A. Poling, John Timothy Stone, Merton S. Rice, Frederick B. Fisher, Bishop Edgar Blake, and others of equal prominence. This convention offers extraordinary opportunities of gaining inspiration and instruction from men who are among the country's most trusted, most spiritual and most successful ministers of the Gospel.

The date of the Interdenominational Luncheon and meeting of the Church of the Brethren and Brethren Church ministers is Thursday noon, January 22, and this has been the biggest drawing card to Brethren ministers of any phase of the Pastors' Convention. It promises to be of unusual importance this year. Besides the luncheon, a program is being arranged that will continue throughout the afternoon, during which there will be not only special addresses, but an open forum on the reunion of Dunker forces.

HEADQUARTERS AT HOTEL COLUMBUS

The Brethren Luncheon and Meeting will be held at Hotel Columbus, just two blocks north of Memorial Hall, where the Convention is to be held, and this hotel on the corner of Long and Fifth streets will be Brethren Headquarters. We advise you to put up here. It is the best hotel at the most reasonable prices that we were able to locate in the city. We feel the more confidence in recommending it because its new manager, John W. Welch, is well known to many of our ministers as the efficient manager of Winona and Westminster Hotels at Winona Lake, Indiana. Select the kind of room you want and write Mr. Welch for reservations, and for your convenience, here is some further information about the hotel:

HOTEL COLUMBUS

(Brethren Headquarters)

Two short blocks north of Broad on Fifth. Corner Long and Fifth Streets. Fireproof. 200 rooms. Running water, telephone in all rooms. Single rooms, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50. Double—$2.00, $2.50, $3.00, $3.50. The best hotel in the city for the price. Dining room and Coffee Shop. Fireproof garage next door—Storage, 50c. John W. Welch, Manager.

We hope to see a large number of you at Columbus on January 19-22 for the Pastors' Convention and especially on Thursday noon, January 22, for the Dunker Luncheon and meeting. As the disciples were all together in one place in Jerusalem, so may we be all together in one place in Hotel Columbus, in the capital city of Ohio, on the above dates. We are your servants. The Fellowship Luncheon Committee,
Geo. S. Baer, Chairman,
J. Perry Prather, Secretary.

*Bath.

Mrs. Herman Varner, Oct.-30-31
Conemaugh, Pa.
RFD 1.

Vol. LIII
Number 3

January 17
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Just Another Glimpse of the Building

WHICH IS THE HOME OF YOUR PUBLISHING HOUSE AND WHICH YOU ARE ASKED TO HELP MAKE FREE OF DEBT BY A GENEROUS OFFERING ON

Publication Day, January 25

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

ON Vacation Last Week

Decided some time ago that all loose ends of work would be cleaned up during the two weeks of Christmas vacation, but discovered by the middle of the second week it couldn't be done, so left the rest undone and drove south to visit friends in the vicinity of Dayton. Some of our most prized friendships were formed here 1915 to 1918 while attending Xenia Theological Seminary and pastoring the churches at Bear Creek, Salem and Miamisburg. No matter how hard the times are, hospitality down here never fail-eth and there is always fried chicken for the preacher.

We made our headquarters at the Wilson King home near West Alexandria and found opportunity to visit a few others—the Murrs, the Millers, the Beeghleys, the Teeters, and friends in Xenia. But the time was too limited to see others we wanted to greet. Brother Barnard, pastor of the Dayton church, asked me to preach Sunday morning and there we greeted many friends.

The passing of the years brings many changes—the world passeth away—but the fellowship of those who confess Jesus as Lord and Savior remains the same. Mother King, one of God's choicest saints, is not in the best of health. Let the believers who read this unite in prayer for her. God is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think.

Because of our absence from Ashland, the "Signs of the Times" department was omitted from last week's paper.

THE Gloomy Scientists

It was not my privilege to attend the remarkable meeting held in Cleveland last week, although I had fully expected to attend some of the sessions if possible. So, as Will Rogers would say, all I know is what I read in the papers and what my friends tell me. However, allowing generously for lop-sided reports, it may be said with assurance that not all the scientific prophets were agreed as to the future. Some find the outlook rather gloomy. One man, commenting on the various speeches, said that in spots they reminded him of the Book of Revelation.

Dr. Kidders, an important authority, speaking before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said that our present civilization will collapse and another race will succeed us. He bases this prediction on a scientific study of the history of human civilization, and having plotted the civilization curve he finds that we are nearing the danger point right now.

Dr. White of the University of Michigan, speaking before the American Anthropological Association, said that the social order of the industrial work is beginning to disintegrate; that the margin upon which capitalism has been operating is rapidly diminishing, and that collapse is inevitable; that "any one who has any vision and grasp of cultural processes must realize that war is not only likely but even imminent," that capitalism produces war and "war will eventually destroy the system that promotes it"; that capitalism will soon be "fighting for its life" and will be destroyed.

Professor Calvin B. Hoover of Duke University, speaking before the American Economic Association, declared that capitalism and Communism cannot exist in the same world together and that the survival of the Soviet through the next two or three years spelled the beginning within a decade of a desperate conflict."

Space will not permit further quotations.

IT Makes a Difference Who Speaks

It should be kept in mind that the gentlemen quoted above are scientists, not theologians. And although they may disagree as to details, they are agreed the world is moving toward an unparalleled catastrophe and that in the immediate future.

Now this is nothing new to the intelligent Christian. For some years careful Bible students have been predicting the approach of such a catastrophe involving the break down of civilization. But, of course they are not scientists and not much attention is paid to their warnings. For the most part, they were put down as obscurantist opinions with no basis in fact.

However, we cannot afford to be sensitive about this state of affairs. Truth is truth, no matter who utters it. And if the world will hear the warning better from the lips of the scientists, we should thank God for the scientists. The main thing is to sound the alarm. Perhaps it will even awaken some of the preachers and theologians. The rather ominous thing is that the world would rather get its prophecy from the lips of men than from the Word of God.

EVEN over the Radio

The writing of this material was interrupted by the call to luncheon, and afterwards I switched on the radio to see whether I could find something cheerful. Aside from jazz music, which is one of the saddest things in modern human existence, I could find nothing but the League for Industrial Democracy broadcasting from a meeting in New York City. After getting off a couple of rather good jokes, the chairman introduced Dr. John H. Gray as an authority of some note and former President of the American Economic Association. I decided to listen, being not wholly destitute of the scientific interest.

From Dr. Gray I learned many things: that the shrinkage in values during the late financial crash was in the neighborhood of forty billion dollars, and that this amount passed from the hands of the poor and middle classes into the pockets of the very rich; that the ruling economic interests in every age control the government; that the big business and financial interests control our own government, and that its leaders are steadily growing more ignorant as the complexity of the task increases; that our foreign loans and investments have entangled the United States in foreign affairs more than political membership in a thousand Leagues of Nations; that capitalism has passed its high-water mark of efficiency, will never again function as well as in the past, and will come to a complete end, but we must suffer a great deal more from it before the end comes.

It was a most remarkable speech, delivered with all the authority of a Moses lately descended from the mount of economic learning. As an amateur in this field, I had known that conditions were not so good, but this man spoke as a veritable prophet of doom. If I had any money, I would not sleep well tonight.

A MORE Cheerful Prophet

After listening to Dr. Gray I was so impressed that I read my Bible for a while coming at last to a very comforting passage in Isaiah:

"For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former things shall not be remembered, nor come into mind. And they shall build houses, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them. They shall not build and another inhabit; they shall not plant and another eat . . . They shall not labor in vain, nor bring forth for trouble. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain." (65:17-25)

Not all in the Bible is so cheerful. The prophets of the Old Testament predict so gloomy times ahead for the world. But there is always light in the midst of darkness. The night surely cometh, but beyond the night is the morning bright with the glory of a redeemed society, a righteous social order, a new humanity, under the government of One who is perfect in wisdom, justice and mercy. And best of all, coming of the morning is certain.

No man in his right senses will scoff at the service rendered the world by efforts of true scientists. They have improved many phases of human life amazingly, and doubtless will continue to do so. But mark well there is one thing science cannot do. It cannot guarantee the stability of its own work in human life. It cannot prevent man from pulling down the temple, so laboriously erected by science, upon his own head, the ruin of civilization. Man has more than once destroyed his own work. These cries the anthropologists have noticed, called them cycles of civilization. Judging from the past, which is all science knows about human destiny, there is no reason to suppose that the rise and ruin of civilization

(Continued on page 15)

IN THIS NUMBER

The Plea of the Publishing House

Again—Editor, . . . . .

Editorial Review, . . . . .

Publication Day, January 25th—J.

C. Beal, . . . . .

The Why of the Publishing House—

A. D. Gnagey, . . . . .

Pay Off the Indebtedness—C. L.

Anspach, . . . . .

Making Bricks Without Straw—Dyoll

Belote, . . . . .

The Fullest Cooperation Desired—

W. S. Bell, . . . . .

"Is There Not Some One?"—C. A.

Bame, . . . . .

Studies in the Scriptures—C. F.

Yoder, . . . . .

The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon, . . .

Winning the Children for Christ—D.

P. Thomson, . . . . .

Editor's Notes on the S. S. Lesson,

Christian Endeavor Week—E. M.

Riddle, . . . . .

Tithers of the C. E., Attention—H.

W. Koontz, . . . . .

Financial Secretary's Report—Gladys

Spice, . . . . .

News from the Field, . . . . . 1

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

The Plea of the Publishing House Again

The Publishing House is again presenting its plea to the brotherhood for the offering authorized by General Conference. That offering is called for to help pay the purchase price on the building in which the church's printing plant is operating. The church has owned that building now more than eleven years and during that time interest has been paid each year on the money borrowed to purchase it. If some one, or if a number of persons, had given the church the cash at the time, you can see that a lot of interest money could have been saved and that might have been turned into improved equipment or improved publications. But no one did, and had to be bought on faith—faith that the whole membership of the church would go together and make up the required amount. That faith was based on the pledge of Conference that our people would do that very thing, but to date that faith has been only partially fulfilled. We do not say it was unjustified, but some have been slow in making good, and we are still paying interest on an unpaid amount of that debt. To get that amount has been the purpose of these offerings from year to year, and that is the purpose of our appeal this year.

We do not intend to argue the responsibility for meeting this debt. It seems to us too clear a case to need argument. People do not need to be convinced of their responsibility for meeting their own obligations—for paying their own debts. The church purchased a building in order to have an adequate publishing house in which to make its denominational literature, and the church must pay the price agreed upon, and every member of the church shares in the responsibility for that debt.

That is our simple story, so often told that many of our readers know it by heart. But it must be repeated, for we are always getting some new members each year who need to hear it, others seem to have gotten a very vague, indefinite conception of the need, and still others seem quickly to forget. So, as with every general interest of the brotherhood, the story of our needs must be told over and over again. Whether the story comes to you as an old, familiar one, or whether you seem not to have heard it before, we hope it will give it your courteous and sympathetic attention. We come to you with this appeal because it is a part of the commission we have placed in our hands. This paper is to speak the voice and aims of the church to its members. We hope you will receive our statement and appeal as you would that of a faithful and trusted steward. We have told many times and in many ways of the needs of the Publishing House, but we do not grow weary, rather continue to importune, because the needs continue to be present and the problems continue an unsolved, ever-present reality. We hope that with this new telling the plea may come to you with a strange newness of urgency and that the need may be made to rest upon your heart with a fresh sense of responsibility.

WHAT SOME OF OUR MEN HAVE SAID

A goodly number of our leaders are beginning to awaken to the needs of our Publishing House, but some have been cognizant of these needs for some time, and it may be of interest to refresh our memories concerning what some of them have said. We call up more freely what some of our men have said because they are not weakened in their conviction in any particular, but have increased their interest and concern for the Publishing House.

Dean J. Allen Miller said in 1922, "Of all the institutions of the church there is none that serves the WHOLE CHURCH so consciously and efficiently as the Publishing House. Every week of the year, yes, one may with much truth say, every day of the year, many in the church are being served by the press. Of all the institutions of the church we have done the least for the PUBLISHING HOUSE."

Dr. Charles A. Bame said in 1922 in a Bicentenary Movement message: "Propaganda is what we need to stress. We need brilliant treatises on the peculiar doctrines of the church; we need books setting forth our place of prominence and originality along right lines; we need to herald it to the world, and thus we need to stop the outflow of interest money into rich men's pockets and speed the inflow into just such propaganda."

Dr. R. R. Teeter in 1923 wrote: "A good publishing house is as necessary to the progress of the church in these modern times as a college or a missionary society. But a good publishing house cannot be established without the aid of capital, and about the only place one can consistently look for the capital is to the people or the church the house serves. We can make it possible for the Brethren Publishing Company to serve the Brethren church successfully only when we INVEST sufficient capital in it to equip it adequately to the needs of the church."

Dr. A. D. Gnagey, appealing in 1923 for an endowed church paper, said: "The church paper is not a business institution. Its mission is to publish and disseminate news and enlighten and encourage the church. Its aim is to enter the best families of the denomination and to unite them in enthusiastic devotion in the things that pertain to the extension of the kingdom of Jesus Christ. It does not pay in dollars and cents. But it does pay immensely in the larger activity and the encouraged devotion of the people of the church. For this reason it is just as proper that men and women of means in the church should assist in endowing the church paper as they do in endowing colleges and seminaries." But he concluded that now the Brethren Evangelist was "not asking for endowment. But it is asking, that on the coming Publication Day the friends of the Publishing House will respond liberally to the appeal and place the publishing business on a financial basis where it can take care of itself."

In 1923 Dr. E. E. Jacobs, president of Ashland College, wrote: "Living in Ashland as I have for nearly twenty years and having had an opportunity to observe the Publishing House and making use of its services almost weekly for this extended period, I venture to say that it gives the church not only a service away beyond any legitimate demand that could be made of a commercial enterprise thus equipped, but moreover a service upon which depends much of the vitality and efficiency of all the other interests of the church."

The year following we find this testimony in an article written by Dr. Jacobs: "I regard therefore the work of our Publishing House as second in importance to no other interest in the church, for from it flows streams which tend to unify us, make us think common thoughts and give us common ideals."

Dr. W. S. Bell, for many years a member of the Publication Board and for a period of years its president, declared in 1924: "The Publishing interests are second to none in the church. What would we do without the Evangelist and the Sunday school literature? This is the most important agency of the church and we owe it our best support."

Dr. C. L. Anspach, Vice-President of the Publication Board, wrote in 1924: "I know of no agency in the church that can do more to hold our denomination together than The Brethren Evangelist and the other church publications. ... Again our Publishing House is the one agency that is serving the church well, not only in its power to mold Brethren thought, but through its power of holding isolated members."

Again in 1925 Dr. Bell declared: "One of the greatest agencies in our age to voice God's message, to evangelize, unify and educate, is the press. To cripple and hinder the work of our publishing interests is suicide."

Dr. C. F. Yoder, missionary, educator and a former editor of The Brethren Evangelist, said in 1925: "The Publishing House is a lighthouse for the church. It is a community house for the brotherhood. It is a filling station for pilgrim travelers. It is a clearing house for the thinkers and a rest house for the weary. It has made a record that compels confidence and asks very modestly only what it should be a pleasure to give."

George F. Kem, Dayton banker and former member of the Publication Board, wrote in 1925: "One of the most essential things for a church to have next to that of an educated ministry is that of a virile, well edited and spiritual church literature. ... We have an editorial staff serving us capably and devotedly, ... Now the church at large owes quite a debt to our publishing interests. ... What better thing could we plan to do by means of our Publication Day offerings than to pay off the debt on the building so that the full income therefrom could go each year to augment the usefulness of our church literature?"

Rev. Robert F. Porte, a former member of the Publication Board, wrote in 1926 this positive statement and appeal: "It is unthinkable that we should do without the printed page. The church without a successful publishing house is a slow growing church. The press is the agent of progress and development and whoever has anything worth teaching to the world must turn to the service of the press. ... I wish to appeal to our people for a friendly attitude toward our Publishing Company. ... It is an asset and not a liability. The removal of the debt will simply mean that profits now spent for interest will be spent for the good of the Brethren church. The sooner you pay the debt on your Publishing House, the sooner the Publishing House will be able to pay a liberal dividend back to your church."

Brother A. B. Cover gave this enthusiastic word of appreciation in 1926: "We as members of the Brethren church, enjoy and appreciate the excellent contribution the Publishing Company is constantly making to the successful development of our church. In every department of our work we are aided by the printed matter from our publishers. The plant has grown from a struggling little affair to the present well equipped and adequately housed Brethren Publishing Company. We are proud of the achievement. Our literature is constantly improving and has reached the place where it compares favorably with that of larger denominations. ... May we take as seriously this debt as though it were personal. In a real sense it is, for the Publishing Company is OURS."

Brother Quinter M. Lyon, for seven years the faithful Sunday School Editor, added in 1927 his witness to the importance of a debt-free publishing house in these words: "If the Publishing Company owned the building in which it operates one great handicap would be removed. The money that goes for interest now would then go for improvements. ... The printed page would then stand a good chance of doing for the Brethren church what it has done for other churches and for the enemies of the true church."

Brother Dyoll Belote, a member of the Publication Board and one time business manager of the Company, wrote in 1928: "There is no question as to the fundamental necessity of maintaining our Publishing Interests. Some way we must continue to keep our congregations in touch with the plans and accomplishments of the various auxiliaries of the church, or we shall lose out. ... And to insure the continuation of what we have already attained, as well as to make growth possible, we must have an increased and loyal support of the Publishing Interests of the church."

Thus the story runs through the last ten years—one continual pleading for a larger support of the Publishing House. It is hoped that our churches will heed these appeals and will make an offering commensurate with the need and the worth of this vital agency of the church. A gift to this interest is a benefit to every other.

A GOOD SUGGESTION

We are glad to note some responses to our request that some notice be given to the Evangelist in all our churches during the month of January. We did not ask pastors to conform to any cut and dried plan of promotion. We rather preferred that they should use their own initiatives and follow their own desires in the matter. And now we have a personal report from Brother H. H. Rowsey, pastor at Falls City, Nebraska, and being given the privilege of making use of it, we are passing it on to our readers. He says:

For the first two Sundays of the month we are having one of our young people speak on "What's in our Church Paper," taking ten or fifteen minutes to point out all the departments and articles in The Evangelist, summarizing some, quoting others and in general giving the chief excellencies of the paper. Other Sundays we are having a young person to speak on "What Appeals to me most in this Week's Church Paper." We hope in this way to receive more subscriptions, and also to cause some who are receiving the paper but not reading much, to really read it.

We are grateful to Brother Rowsey for this good suggestion. We hope many other pastors are planning in their own way to put the Evangelist before their people. Remember, your church paper is an institution and in this request we are asking for attention to be given to one of the most important institutions of the church and not to any particular individual who may have some responsibility in producing the paper. The Evangelist is bigger and vastly more important than any individual connected with it. It is the brotherhood's means of communication and expression of denominational interests, ideals and aims. It is on behalf of the institution that we are appealing.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

We notice the name of Brother H. H. Rowsey on the Executive Committee of the Nebraska State Pastors' Convention, and some outstanding spiritual leaders, among them Dr. Nehemiah Boynton and Bishop Edwin Hughes, are scheduled to appear on the first annual convention of that state to convene at Lincoln, January 19-21. Iowa and Kansas pastors are welcomed to this convention.

Dr. Charles A. Bame informs us he will broadcast from static W A I U, Columbus, Ohio, Monday, January 19th at 9 A. M. He will also attend the Pastors' Convention and will speak at the National Convention of salesmen of Food Mills to be held in Columbus. On January 22 he will deliver the commencement address at Elyria, Ohio. He is also booked for three revivals during the remainder of the year. He also reports preparation of the second quarter's lessons nearing completion.

The Sunday school orchestra of our aggressive church at Ellettsburg, Ohio, will broadcast a half hour's program over station W A I U, Columbus, Ohio, Saturday, January 17th at nine o'clock in the morning. So the pastor, Brother Floyd Sibert, informs us. This is the Pocket Testament League hour and many of our good Brethren will want to listen in to one of their own orchestras.

Christian Endeavorers should not fail to read their department this week. They will find there messages from their president, Brother E. M. Riddle, and another from Brother H. W. Koontz, Stewardship Superintendent. Miss Gladys Spice, Financial Secretary, gives a report of financial receipts. Brother Whitmer informs us that he expects to keep this page alive with matters pertaining to Christian Endeavor, so keep your eye on it from week to week. The plan of financial support of Christian Endeavor, a splendid undertaking at Krypton, Kentucky is a giving of a tithe of earnings during Christian Endeavor week. We bespeak the support of all loyal young people.

The Business Manager informs us that Brother N. C. Nielsen, the Brethren Evangelist agent for the First church of Long Beach, California, has sent in sixty new subscriptions in addition to the renewals, and this in the face of a depression concerning which Brother Henry Wall says he has not seen it worse in his twenty-six years' residence in California. Brother Nielsen believes in the commodity he was selling and he had the support of his pastor.

Dr. K. M. Monroe writes of the splendid work of the Gospel Teams in his Seminary Notes. In the First church of Johnstown and in the Conemaugh church, of Pennsylvania, these teams have been functioning in a most creditable manner. Those conducting services in the Johnstown church were all boys and girls of the local church put into service by the pastor, Brother Ashman. Brother Schaffer of the Conemaugh church speaks highly of the work of the Gospel teams.

Brother James S. Cook writes of holding preparatory service and conducting communion in both the New Enterprise and Raytown churches in Pennsylvania. These churches are without pastoral services at present and Brother Cook is giving them what care he can along with the work of his regular pastorate—Martinsburg and McKee circuit.

Brother R. I. Humberd tells of his experiences at the Long Beach, California, church, where he was impressed with the great serious activity in that great church plant. He pays a compliment to Dr. Bauman's great work and influence. He found their home there very hospitable and the people kind. He summarizes the results of his trip in various types of religious activity and concludes it very successful and enjoyable.

An Offering From Every Church on Publication Day

Publication Day January 25

By Dr. J. C. Beal, President of the Publication Board

Dr. J. C. Beal

There is nothing more effective in creating and maintaining faith in any cause than the printed page. This fact is recognized by the various cults which are promulgating false doctrines. That the use of the printed page does bring results is evidenced by the hold on the minds of the public of Russellism, Christian Science, Spiritism, etc. This truth is in the mind of the religious bodies in the distribution of tracts and religious literature.

There is nothing that so makes for a definite faith in our distinctive church doctrines as presentation of these doctrines in our own publications. This does not minimize the teaching of these doctrines on the part of our ministers but the printed page has the advantage of furnishing the opportunity for definite study in the home and in this way truth grips in a measure not possible by any other means. We hear the statement that no church can long survive without a college in which to educate the young people of the church. This is entirely true but it is also just as true that no church can long survive without the presentation of the distinctive doctrines of that church through the printed page. Many times more people are reached in this way, in the quiet of the home, than can be reached through the work of a college. Only a select few are privileged to attend college but the printed page can find its way into homes where it is impossible for the college to directly make its influence felt. Our own church has recognized the need and National Conference authorized the purchase of a building to house our own publication interests and also authorized the setting aside of the fourth Sunday in January of each year and designated it as "Publication Day." In the purchase of this building the church was compelled to assume an indebtedness. The Board is doing its utmost to make the publication interests serve the best interests of the church but until the indebtedness against the building is removed our work will continue to be hampered. If the brotherhood will lift this indebtedness there will be an income from the building which can be used in the further extension of our work.

The goal for the College Endowment has been reached. Home Missions and Foreign Missions have been given special attention. In these accomplishments we all rejoice. It is but logical that the brotherhood should at this time give serious thought relative to the very important matter of our publishing interests and give it a place in our church planning. As I have already stated, the fourth Sunday in January has been designated "Publication Day" at which time each congregation is to make an offering to this most worthy work. There has been cooperation in the past and we are sure you will recognize the need for unusual cooperation and needed sacrifice at this time that this debt may be met that our work need no longer be hampered and that there might be made possible the necessary expansion. While it is true that the burden of the work of our local congregations may be felt a little more than usual just at this time, we have never yet come to the place where we have made a really definite sacrifice for the work of the Lord. Instead of curtailing our gifts to the work of the Lord let's begin retrenchment in the things we have been showering on ourselves, the things which answer the appeal of the flesh. When we do this we shall be able to take a forward step that will mean much in the advancement of the work of The Brethren Publishing Company and also a step in advance in our general work as a church.

I have confidence in the membership of our own church. They have met every crisis and I feel confident you will not fail us in this time of our need as a board. Do your best in this matter and you will have the approval of your own heart, the approval of the Publication Board, and best of all, you will have the approval of him who has purchased us with his own blood and made us partakers of his holiness.

Canton, Ohio.

The Why of the Publishing House

By Dr. A. D. Gnagey, Member of Publication Board
And for Many Years Editor of Brethren Publications

Why a Publishing House for the Brethren church? Is it for the same reason that a child wants a "rattle",—something to play with? Our Publishing House is not a "rattle," though we have been trying to amuse ourselves with it. Nevertheless, we need to remember that the rattle, the doll, the bat and the ball are essential in the child-life, at least they are a very important part in the educational and training program of every child. The Publishing House is the legitimate child of the church, and, though it has long ago passed out of the adolescent period, it is now, and always will be, under the fostering care and support of the church in whose interest it operates.

The most effective, the most potent human factors in the educational program of the church are the College and the Publishing House. They are the essential handmaids of the church's missionary program, without which the latter will not only be greatly handicapped but rendered futile. The most convincing argument the writer can think of for an adequately endowed, well equipped and effectively organized Publishing House is that none of the now large denominations has succeeded without it. Surely it is nothing more than plain logic to any one with a grain of intelligence to see that what others could not do that we can not do. The Publishing House has become an essential and permanent factor in the growth and development of all the larger religious bodies in this country. Among the most potent agencies, humanly speaking, in the educational program of all the larger churches, is the Publishing House. For the last one hundred years and more, the Christian school, the Publishing House, and the missionary enterprises of these churches have grown and developed simultaneously, and neither one would have gone far without the other. For good or for evil, the printing press is today the most influential single agency in the country. It is but reasonable foresight, common sense, and wisdom to harness this agency for good. When once we have made it possible for Jesus Christ to lay his pierced hands on the printing press the splendor of the millennial dawn will color the eastern sky with its crimson and gold.

Dr. A. D. Gnagey

Dr. C. L. Anspach

It is folly to reject what is old simply because it is old, but it is worse than folly, it is stupidity to refuse what is new simply because it is new. The church needs to lay her hand on the auto, the radio, the flying machine and consecrate them as messengers for him under whose benign influence they have been made possible. There is a Latin proverb which I can not quote from memory, but it is something like this: "The church has given birth to riches, and now the child disowns and destroys its parent." It remains for the church to seize the great factors in the industrial, commercial and educational world and consecrate them for the glory of God. Among these is the printing press. There is no other single agency just like it. The church that fails to utilize it for the propagation of the Christian faith will have to take its place in the aged and dying past instead of the living, yet hopeful, yet youthful future.

What will we do about it? In an age of material progress and achievement which make one dizzy to look on, the church dare not stand idly by and allow these mighty agencies monopolized by the forces of evil. There is a profoundly psychological reason for the effective maintenance of the Publishing House. One can easily count a dozen men in the Brethren church who should be authors of books issued by the Brethren Publishing Company and on sale by "all booksellers or from your own Publishing House,"—that is a quite familiar statement to those of us who purchase books. There is no better and no more telling advertisement for any church than just that, "for sale by all bookstores."

Let us pay off the Publishing House building debt, free it from its encumbrances and unite with our prayers and influence and MONEY to make our Publishing House, what, under its capable management, and above all, under God, it can be and should be. Will we do it? I know of no better investment in church life and progress than just that.

Altoona, Pennsylvania.

Pay Off the Indebtedness

By Dr. C. L. Anspach, Vice-President Publication Board

The Community Chest Committee of Ashland in making a drive for funds adopted this slogan, "Be glad you can give." The same slogan will serve very well in appealing to you for support of the Publication Day offering. The majority of the members ought to be glad they can give. While we are not a wealthy church, the majority of our members are not in a position of want and can well afford to give to this national interest.

Everywhere we hear the cry of hard times. There is no escaping the fact that many people are in want and in many cases the needs are many and the appeal for aid urgent. But in spite of all this, we can be thankful that we are in a position to give something to the Great Cause. We certainly ought to be glad that we can give.

It is our duty to give to the interests of the Church for regardless of the depression the work of the Kingdom must go on. Hard times in church finance . . . it is hard to believe that the present condition is much different from the normal as far as the church is concerned. Times are always hard as far as the church is concerned. Times are always hard to hear some people tell it when approached by church authorities for assistance. We have no space for debate, but we do know that our Publishing House needs money. We have appealed so many times that those in charge of the Publishing House are often forced to ask, Shall we try it again? And then when they look back over the years that have passed and the progress that has been made, the property accumulated and the great contribution that is being made to the cause of Brethrenism, they take heart and appeal to you again. In making their appeal, they need make no apology, for they are asking us to protect our own property. The Publishing House belongs to us and it is the responsibility of the Church at large to provide means for the elimination of the indebtedness. In the next place they owe no apology for the present indebtedness is due to expansion caused by the purchase of the building in which the plant is now located. If they were asking us for money for current expenses we might have cause for complaint. But this is not the case, they are asking us to invest some money for the Church. The property was purchased below value and has increased in value. The foresight of those in charge has made that possible. Now they are asking us to place our money in a project that has proven its worth. We are merely investing a few more dollars in a growth of concern belonging to the general conference of the Church.

It was said by the writer last year that our indebtedness could not be paid off by the profits from church literature. The publication of our church literature does not result in profits; it results in losses. Some one says this is poor business. It does look like bad business to publish church literature and lose on almost all the publications. That isn't the fault of the Publishing House: it is due to two factors, the size of our Church and the limited circulation in the Church. If the Church gave us an offering of $3,000.00 a year it would be just about paying for the deficit on the literature. We must remember that we can't run a Publishing House and not expect to pay for it any more than we can build hard surfaced roads and not have our tax bills go up. If we want Brethren literature we must pay for it.

GIVE THE PUBLISHING HOUSE A CHANCE. PAY OFF THE PRESENT INDEBTEDNESS. IT IS OUR RESPONSIBILITY. LET US ASUME IT.

Ypsilanti, Michigan.

Abraham served his people and us by giving a demonstration of the possibilities of a consecrated life of faith.

Rev. Dyoll Belote

Making Brick Without Straw

By Dyoll Belote, Secretary Publication Board

The other day the Business Manager called my attention to a letter which came giving commendation to the literature being produced by the editors of the Brethren literature, but wondering why we do not put covers on our Quarterlies and use colored pictures, etc. That letter set me thinking, and I am convinced that a major portion of the members of the Brethren Church do not understand the first principles of printing and of how such little additions as covers and colored pictures and such like add to the work and the expense of producing any literature.

The above train of thought also set me thinking that the Israelites of old when the Egyptians wanted them to make brick and get their own straw, folks who want so many improvements in the literature do not realize that they are asking an impossible thing of the people whom they have called to make their literature when they suggest such improvements. I would hasten to assure any and all that the Brethren Publishing Company is as anxious to make a literature that is at once both Brethren and beautiful as any member of the denomination. BUT WE CANNOT MAKE BRICK WITHOUT STRAW. For all the years that the writer has known the Brethren Church there has never been a year that there was not some other interest or auxiliary of the church clamoring for first place in making plea to the church for support. The Brethren Publishing Company is always had to be content to accept a day and make an appeal through the Church paper—which is not even aided by a fair proportion of the membership of the fraternity, because the subscription list is too small, and the appeal is not heeded by a fair proportion of those who do read the paper. And in addition to this is the fact that many of the ministering brethren never present an appeal to their congregations and canvass the membership for subscriptions to the Church paper. This may cause some of the ministering brethren to take issue, but if so I would advise them to have a care, for letters have been filed for years with the Company from laymen who declare that their pastors never said a word about the Church paper. If the contents of the Brethren Evangelist are not always all from Brethren sources it may be that you are asking the editor also to "Make Brick Without Straw" because you send neither church news nor articles of your own on topics of Brethren concern with which he may fill the columns of the Evangelist. The Brethren Evangelist may not be the best religious publication extant, but it is the BEST Brethren Church paper in existence, and as such should be taken and read by Brethren everywhere.

To the certain knowledge of the writer there are a too large number of Brethren who are reading other publications to the exclusion of the church's own publications. Now we do not object to the outside reading, for we too read some half dozen other publications, but we do feel that our people should be urged to read their own Church paper FIRST, and the ministry should set the example. And the same truth holds for the Sunday School literature. Just so long as ministers throw out the Brethren literature and put in the product of non-denominational—other—publishing houses, the Brethren Publishing Company will never be able to run its business on an approximately self-supporting basis. When even some officials of the Company do not use its products (a seeming possible anomaly, but a too evident fact) it is no wonder that the people do not give to the support of the work. Of course I should hasten to say that we do not promise we should be able to run the business on a self-supporting basis even if the present plant were free of debt, for the publishing houses of the larger denominations do not keep their business going from the profits from the subscriptions to their church papers, and the patronage of their Sunday school literature, so why should a small institution like ours try to do what such houses cannot? But we should have a fairer chance to approach the records of other publishing establishments if the support of our own literature were more general and wholehearted.

If for once the Brethren Church would treat her Publishing House as she treats the other auxiliaries of the church, and allow the Board to ask for—and then give them—an offering of a dollar per member, we should be able to at least "break even" for a year or so, and after that the Board could take its "dole" from year to year through the annual Publication Day offering. But with the balance on the building to pay and only the "silent messenger" appeal which it has a chance to make to the brotherhood it will have to continue to eke out the same precarious existence which has marked its progress thus far. My brethren, these things ought not so to be. Let's make it a real offering this year. And if we will give liberally to this cause we shall have larger interest in the outcome of its enterprises and so will pay larger attention to its publications to see that our investment is well used.

It may be that you feel that the members of your Board are not acting wisely in the expenditure of the funds entrusted to them, or that the choice of employees has not been such as suits you. Kindly remember that your Board would be only too glad to talk matters over with any of you or to correspond concerning these matters, but for the present we cannot make changes, and loyalty to the Church suggests—yea—demands—that we give our undivided support to the workers we have and the products of their labors. The Board does not feel that it needs to apologize for its workers, it only asks for the same honest, loyal support for its work that is given to the other enterprises of the Church,—College, Missions, Sunday School Board, etc.

Ashland, Ohio.

Dr. W. S. Bell

Fullest Cooperation Desired

By Dr. W. S. Bell, Member Publication Board for Many Years

The VOICE OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH is the Publishing House and its literature. If the message of the church is to be made known and its faith propagated, it is highly important that the Publishing House and its literature be given loyal and unrestricted support.

Numerically small as we are, there must be the fullest cooperation, in purchasing our own church supplies for the Bible School and church from our own House. The first religious publication that any Brethren home should consider is the organ of the church: The Evangelist.

If we are to survive as a people; if we desire to make possible a greater future; it is imperative that the general interests of the church, that are representative of the entire church, be not looked upon as a burden, but as the channel through which the entire church is carrying out its program of EDUCATION, MISSIONS AND LITERATURE—WITHOUT WHICH WE WILL PERISH.

The Publishing House has gradually enlarged its service equipment and property holdings the past few years without burdening the church. The only appeal it is making is for an offering from the church that may be applied on the building debt. The price of a movie or baseball ticket, a box of cosmetics, an automobile ride, or a fountain treat, if given to this offering by the members of the church would bring us an encouraging amount. We are asking for a reasonable gift from which no one will suffer in the giving. We cannot ask for less and we justly expect every pastor to present this before his congregation and for every member of the church to have part, even though it may be a small gift. Do not disappoint us. Ashland, Ohio.

"Is There Not Some One?"

By Dr. Charles A. Bame, Sunday School Editor

Dr. C. A. Bame

Instantly when I was asked to think on this question, there came into my mind this question put in the heart of a very tender story and incident: A preacher was conducting his own revival meeting. One evening there sat in the audience, his own prodigal son and although he appealed for repentant sinners to come to the altar, none came. Singing and praying and testifying the service was continued and the minister pleaded and pleaded, exhausting every emotion and every method he knew, he finally addressed the congregation with a continued cry, "Will not some one come?" "Will not some one come?" Over and over he repeated the question, but no one moved. Continuing until the congregation was exhausted, restless and vexed, he still pleaded, "will not some one come?" When finally, after so long, his son moved to the altar and made the good confession. With tears of joy, racing down his cheeks he said to the congregation, "I felt that it was tonight or never with my son. I could not stop though I knew of your embarrassment. Now I am rewarded."

Now we have come to the "I-wonder-what-one-it-is" appeal for the publishing interests. Several years ago I had the privilege of circulating appealing for seven major interests of the Brotherhood and this was one. Several times in the afternoon as a member of the Publication Board, I have appealed in some vein for the loyalty of the Brotherhood for the better and nicer literature we need for the promotion of our great Cause. Just yesterday, I received a fine commendation from one of our Sunday school patrons about the Bible Class Quarterly, for which I am most grateful. It closed with this hope: "May the Publishing House Office be good, so that you can make it according to the desires of your heart." But that can not be now. It can not be for a long time, unless some one can and will see the great need and help more than most of us can in times like this.

(Continued on page 10)

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

PART III

JESUS AND THE SABBATH

As a "minister of the law" (Rom. 15:8) Jesus was circumcised (Luke 2:21-24) and kept the sabbath of the law until he had fulfilled the law (Matt. 5:17; Luke 24:15; Acts 13:27-30). Then when he by his work had provided salvation, he established his church with the door of faith, and the "righteousness which is by faith," and works as the result of previous rest or salvation (Tit. 5:8). Rest first and works afterwards is the order of grace.

Jesus established the first day of the week as the day of rest and meeting for worship by appearing to the disciples on that day. Not once do we read that he appeared to them on the seventh day, but at least seven of the eleven appearances mentioned, occurred on the first day. This is not mere coincidence.

Besides, the church, guided by the Holy Spirit, continued to meet the first day of the week (Acts 20:7; 1 Cor. 16:1). We do not read of a single meeting of the church on the seventh day. The apostles, to be sure, improved the opportunity to preach to the Jews who met on the sabbath day, but the church met on the Lord's day. It was taught that to return to the rites and dead works of the law was to reject Christ (Gal. 5:4, 5).

What rest is permanent?

Let us compare the seventh day and the first with reference to their permanence as a day of rest.

1. The sabbath of the seventh day was for "Israel according to the flesh which perishes" (Ex. 31:13), but the Lord's day is for spiritual Israel or the church (Eph. 1:3; 1 Cor. 6:17; 12:13) which abides forever (Eph. 19-22).

2. The seventh day sabbath was of the old covenant which was not perfect (Heb. 8:7) and therefore passed away (vs. 13) with its priesthood (Heb. 7:12), its temple (Matt. 24:1, 2), its sacrifices (Heb. 9:8-10), its tables of the law (2 Cor. 3:3-6), and its sabbaths (Col. 2:16, 17). But the Lord's day is of the new covenant which remains forever (Gal. 4:21-31).

3. The seventh day sabbath was a symbol of rest in an earthly land wherein we are pilgrims (Heb. 11:13), but the Lord's day is the symbol of rest in "heavenly places in Christ Jesus" (Eph. 1:3) from which we shall never be cast out (Rom. 8:38, 39; Rev. 3:10).

4. The seventh day sabbath was celebrated as a day of rest after six days of labor, and the people returned to labor and to hunger; but the Lord's day is a day of rest of grace, not of pay, a symbol of the manna from which we return not to labor and to hunger (Jn. 6:28-40).

5. The seventh day sabbath is from Mount Sinai. Believers do not go near that mount (Heb. 12:18) because we are of the new Jerusalem (Heb. 12:22-25) and therefore have "a kingdom that shall not be moved" (vs. 17).

6. The seventh day sabbath was for the Israelites and their proselytes (Ex. 31:13; Isa. 56:6), but the kingdom was taken from them and given to others (Matt. 21:43; Luke 12:32; Heb. 12:28) with a different day of rest (Heb. 4:8).

7. The seventh day sabbath was of the law of the letter, which kills (2 Cor. 3:6) and which passed away

, but the Lord's day is of the new covenant of the spirit (Rom. 8:2), which vivifies and remains (Jn. 8:35; al. 4:30, 31).

If the Jews wish to enter the rest of God they must repent as do others (Acts 2:38) and enter by the gate of faith (Gal. 3:26-29). Christ will never be replaced by Moses, nor the Gospel by the law, nor the Lord's day by the Jewish sabbath.

The Mark of the Beast

A favorite argument used by some to frighten the ignorant is the false statement that, the papacy being an antichrist (2 Thess. 2:3, 4), guilty of changing times and laws (Dan. 7:25), changed the sabbath which is called sign, and put his own sign (the first day) in its place; and therefore all who keep the first day have the sign or the mark of the beast.

It is a serious thing to use this argument. When the Jews accused Jesus of casting out demons by Beelzebub he told them that the sin against the Holy Spirit hath never forgiveness. To attribute to antichrist what the work of the Holy Spirit is a fatal sin. It was the Holy Spirit that put the prophecies of the Lord's day in the typical feasts of the law, and in the book of Isaiah and the Psalms. It was the Holy Spirit in Christ who led him to establish the first day as the meeting day with the disciples... who raised the Lord from the dead on that day; who came in power to the church on that day; who guided the church to worship on that day, and gave to the royal name of "the Lord's day." It was the Spirit who established the three great memorials of the resurrection, the church, the Gospel and the Lord's day. To deny his work is the mark of antichrist (1 John 2:23).

The Lord's day was observed by the church from the first, but there was no pope until four hundred years later.

The Didache (Teachings of the apostles), written while some of the apostles were yet living, says: "Each Lord's day gather yourselves together" (ch. 14).

Ignatius, of the same age, says, "We no longer keep the sabbaths, but we keep the Lord's day" (Ad. Mag. 3:3). Tertullian a little later, says: "We keep the day following the sabbath."

There was a Judaizing sect that kept both circumcision and the sabbath, but they were condemned. A few Christians to be on the safe side kept for a time both the seventh and first days, and a few misguided believers still follow their blind guides in keeping that part of the law while rejecting the other rites.

The term "Lord's day" is very frequently employed in the early writings, but never of the seventh day. To make the keeping of the Lord's day, the mark of the beast is inexcusable ignorance or deception.

On the contrary, if Sunday is the day of the sun, then Saturday is the day of Saturn, and the Babylonian name for this god is Stur, which in Greek has the numerical value of 666, the number of the beast. Let those "who say they are Jews and are not, but do lie" (Rev. 3:10 with 14:1) take warning. The resurrection being the one sign given to prove that Jesus was the Christ (Matt. 12:3, 40; Rom. 1:4) the perpetuation of this sign by the proper celebration of the Lord's Day, is the mark of allegiance to Christ. It is an open, perpetual testimony of the church to her resurrection and union with her living head. "This is the day the Lord hath made," but the enemies of the Lord continually try to destroy it. As Jesus came "that he might destroy the works of the devil," so the mark of the devil-energized beast will be seen in the effort to destroy the work of Christ. Let believers beware of being found with that mark.

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Mark 12:28-34. This scribe found that Jesus answered these vexing questions well; so we, if we bring our problems to him today, will find that he still answers every question well. Nor does he exact a blind and unreasonable obedience: here they were reasoning together, and in Isaiah we read, "Come now, and let us reason together."

How the world needs to learn these two commandments today; yes, how we need to learn them ourselves! There is one God, and him we should serve with all our heart, in every department of our lives. To serve him thus we must serve our neighbor too, and love him even as we love ourselves.

TUESDAY

Mark 12:35-37. The scribes were unable to grasp the nature of the Christ for whom they professed to be looking. They expected him to be of the line of David, a great national deliverer. Yes Jesus reminded them that he was to be more than just of David's line: he was to be very God, for David called him Lord. Let us praise God for a Savior who was God, with the power to save, and who was also the Son of David, with the experience that enables him to sympathize with his fellow creatures.

WEDNESDAY

Mark 12:38-44. What a contrast in these two pictures: on the one hand the scribes, with their hypocritical love of show while they stole and preyed upon the incomes of defenseless widows; on the other hand the poor widow, with her seemingly insignificant offering. In an intellectual way the scribes knew so well what they were doing that Jesus said they should receive so much the greater damnation. But the widow, out of her great love for God, gave all. Surely she could claim the promise of Mark 10:29, 30. May our faith be more like the widow's, less like the scribes'.

THURSDAY

Mark 13:1-5. The temple must have been a beautiful building, and undoubtedly Jesus was not unmindful of its beauty. But even that, as we know, was soon destroyed, and all we know about its glories today is what writers of those times have told us. As we consider present world conditions, it seems not unlikely that we shall soon be in the midst of equally troublous times ourselves. The lesson is that we should be less concerned with the buildings that can be so easily destroyed, and more concerned about the building of our spiritual house in the heavens.

FRIDAY

Mark 13:9-13. Again we are reminded that as Christians we cannot expect easy sailing in this life: we are repeatedly warned that we must suffer persecution. We can only be thankful that in America we have so largely been spared persecution for so many years. But whatever comes, we should in all things yield to the Spirit's guidance, allowing him to speak through us and use us as he will.

SATURDAY

Mark 13:14-23. There is great difference of opinion as to the interpretation of this passage. This much is certain: a time of terrible tribulation and of great religious uncertainty is foretold; our own day is not to be compared to that time, but even now we need to know whom we have believed, and commit everything to his keeping, for he alone is able to keep!

SUNDAY

Mark 13:24-37. As we read our newspapers and daily see prophecy relating to the return of Christ being fulfilled before our eyes, surely we must believe that the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. What a difference that event will make in the world! What a difference the certainty of it should make in our lives now! There is no more solemn warning in all Scripture than this: Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away. My word is that ye take heed, and watch, and pray, for ye know not when the Master cometh. Let us watch and pray!

"Is There Not Some One?"

(Continued from page 8)

Is there not some one? Will not the heart of some one who can never have such an opportunity but once, leap forward and take this load off of the shoulders of those who now bear the burden and carry it around with them?

Just an hour or so ago, I finished the study of the Parable of the Pounds which you will study in a bit more than three months from now. In it, we are told, that the nobleman gave ten pounds to his servants and went into a far country and that he will return to reckon. One by one, we shall pass before him and he will reckon with us concerning the wealth we have. Can all of us give a good account? We may be very near that day; we are told to watch for it and be ready for it. What shall the account be? Surely, we have those who will never have a bigger or better opportunity for investment in kingdom work than to clear off this debt and then, our profits will not go into the banks for interest. It can be put into print matter, more beautiful, more usable, more available than we can possibly offer now. Is there not some one who will? Is there not some one? Who will?

Ashland, Ohio.

W. I. DUKER, President Goshen, Indiana E. L. MILLER Vice-President Maurertown, Virginia	NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N. MAGAZINE SECTION M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR, ASHLAND, OHIO	N. V. LEATHERMAN, General Secretary South Bend, Indiana M. P. PUTERBAUGH, Treasurer 2210 Maple Ave., Evanston, Illinois
---	---	---

Winning the Children for Christ

By D. P. Thomson

Evangelism finds its finest and most fruitful field among the young life of the world, and the readiest and most eager response to the appeal of Jesus will ever be made by those who stand on the threshold of life. For them the great adventure is only just beginning, and the unknown future is full of dimly realized possibilities. As the powers of mind and body expand, and the prospect of life in all its many-sidedness begins to unfold, there come home to the hearts a sense of longing and a consciousness of need that give Christian parents and teachers their unique opportunity of presenting Christ as the Lord of life, who alone can satisfy its deepest needs and fulfill its loftiest ambitions, who is worthy of all the passionate and devotion and loyalty of youth, who will prove adequate to every demand it may make.

The results of modern psychological research have been assimilated and applied with such eagerness and whole-heartedness by Christian thinkers and workers that we are in little danger today of underestimating either the peculiar problems of the adolescent period or the unique opportunities it presents for effecting far-reaching decisions in the sphere of character and motive and for the definite organization of life round a distinctively Christian center. But the vital work of winning the young for Christ cannot safely be left till the storm and stress of the adolescent period have commenced. Children of tenderer years can be led into a very real experience of the love and power of Christ.

A Need for Self-Decision

It is our belief that even children born in a Christian country, brought up in a Christian church and surrounded by all the gracious influences of a Christian home, need to be won for Jesus Christ; that only by a conscious and voluntary choice of their own wills can they enter into the full enjoyment of fellowship and service in the redeemed family of God. To say that such a child needs to be won for Christ is not to gainsay the value of a spiritual heritage and a Christian upbringing, nor is it to deny the fact that boys and girls born into a redeemed world and consecrated to God at birth by believing parents enjoy unique privileges and opportunities. It is simply to recognize the right of every individual to exercise his powers of judgment and to determine the bent of his own character. It is to do no more than justice to that power of self-determination which the soundest philosophy will not allow us to abandon, and which the most scientific psychology is forced to recognize. It is to take account of what is only too patent to even the casual observer: the utter spiritual indifference, the abject moral failure and open and unashamed vice, of many who enjoyed in childhood's years all the privileges of Christian nurture and upbringing. It is to plead for the child's right of determining his own relationship to Christ when he comes to the age of responsibility and of entering into the conscious enjoyment of his divine inheritance by the exercise of his own will. It is to concede his equal right to reject the gift of God's love and to refuse his proffered grace if he so determines.

The Importance of Winning Children

We may further cherish the conviction that boys and girls can be won for Christ in childhood, not merely that they can be prepared for intelligent and whole-hearted decision during the later adolescent period. Children under fourteen years of age can and do enter into a very real experience of the presence and power of Christ and give evidence of just as genuine and whole-hearted a discipleship as many in later life. Even the child of comparatively tender years is capable of appreciating in a childlike but very real and exceedingly effective way, something of the beauty and moral value of the kind of life Jesus lived, of choosing by an act of will to serve and follow him, and of loving the Savior with all the affection commonly bestowed on a mother or father. It is surely better that, before the stormy adolescent period comes, the young life should be firmly anchored in Christ and committed to his care than that the frail bark should be thrust out on those troubled waters without the firm hand of the heavenly Pilot on the helm and the inspiring leadership of the great Captain to insure success in life's great adventure. Children have their burdens and sorrows—often very real and very great—and they need a Savior to share them. They have their hours of loneliness and fear and they need a Friend to help them. They have their fight with temptation and sin, and only in his strength can they conquer. They often lose father or mother or both before their journey is begun, and they need the comfort of heavenly Father's love and the consciousness of a heavenly Father's presence. It is not the memory of forced and unnatural preadolescent religious experience blind to the opportunity—nay, to the necessity of winning to Christ the boys and girls of tender years. "Suffer the little children come unto me, and forbid them not; for such belongeth the kingdom of God."

Importance of Early Years

A resolute attempt must be made to win the children of our land for Christ. The best brains in our churches must be given to this task; the most devoted and enlightened service must be directed to that goal. It is, as Lionel B. Fletcher remarked, a great thing to have the testimony of a dozen of sixty redeemed from a life of sin and shame and rejoicing in the Savior's power; but it is a far, far greater thing to get a dozen boys of twelve into real, living touch with Christ. The testimony of the former is to the power of Christ to save from the worst; the lives of the latter witness through the years to the power of the same Savior to keep from sin. No generation can afford to forget the dictum of Henry Drummond that Christianity is simply a religion for rebuilding human nature but even more emphatically and essentially a religion for preventing men and women from ever becoming ruins. If that prevention is to be effective it must be insured in childhood years. The lawbooks of today, full of statistics of juvenile, of court cases in which children of eleven and twelve years are the offenders. The psychologists have been forced to the conviction that the reformatory years belong to the preadolescent period, and the church of Jesus Christ no longer afford to remain blind to the opportunities it is losing if it fails to reach after the child and does not seek to win for Christ.

Modern surgery, we are told, "has proved the value of caring for child life in the tenderest years, when deformities and personality can often be permanently set right and abnormal developments brought back to normal." Modern education is pushed back its activities to an earlier age stage in each generation and is even influencing the home so that the environmental influences may be studied. Modern eval-cannot afford to lag behind here. If the ritual side of the child be neglected during these years, an opportunity is lost which never come again, and incalculable injury may be done to the growing life.

*Reprinted with permission from "The Children for Christ in the series of Handbooks of Modern Evangelism (Thompson and Cowan, Glasgow).

The Home Has Chief Responsibility

The first and greatest responsibility for winning of the children to Christ rests on the parents. It is at once the duty and privilege of Christian fathers and mothers to bring their boys and girls into happy whole-hearted Christian discipleship, to kindle in their young hearts a love for the Lord that will deepen and strengthen with the passing of the years. Few parents—few realize this, and comparatively few children have the joy of truly Christian upbringing. Parents whose anxiety for their children's welfare leads them to lay good foundations for everything else never seem to realize the necessity for laying the foundations of the spiritual life in early years, or they do not realize it they display a strange reluctance to undertake the task themselves, betraying a surprising willingness to relegate this duty to the Sunday school teacher or the minister. Christian parents who so neglect that responsibility and forfeit their children the loss of one of the rarest joys of life store up for themselves a possible harvest of misunderstanding and resentment. The sweetest and most natural spiritual experiences of children are those induced by the loving heart and words, by the example of a father's life or the Christlike example of a mother's love; and the happiest and most truly Christian homes are those where boys and girls are fitted within the sacred circle of the earthly family to enter the larger fellowship of the Father's home.

The Teacher's Opportunity

Next to the parent the Sunday school teacher has the best opportunity of leading the child to Christ. Thousands of children in our Sunday schools come from utterly non-Christian homes; hundreds from Christian homes where parents fail in their obligation to forfeit the right of themselves winning young lives for Christ. Here, then, is the unique opportunity of the Sunday school teacher; here his greatest joy is to be found. One outside the circle of the home is brought into more intimate or happy relationship with the child, no one so wins his love and affection, and no one can so easily and really lead him to the Savior. It is the mission of the Sunday school—and ought to be its clearly recognized and defined aim—not merely to lay the groundwork of a thorough Christian education and introduce the young mind to the world of spiritual reality, but "to bring every pupil to realize a personal relationship to Jesus Christ, a personal responsibility for active membership in the church, and a personal obligation to advance the Redeemer's kingdom by diligent and consecrated effort." Anything less than that is failure.

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for January 25)

Jesus Tempted

Scripture Lesson—Luke 3:21 to 4:30.

Read Text—Luke 4:1-13.

Devotional Lesson—Rom. 8:31-39.

Golden Text—In that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted.—Heb. 2:18.

Led by the Spirit

Our text says Jesus was "full of the Holy Spirit." The Spirit was within him, causing him to move with inward compulsion. Mark says Jesus was driven by the Spirit into the wilderness. And that Spirit never left him and he never failed to work in harmony with it. Dr. Owen C. Brown remarks:

"All that Jesus does is under the driving, compelling influence of the Spirit. With his anointing at the baptism the obligations of his life-work have come upon him like a flood. They grip his whole thought and ambition and urge him into the wilderness, where alone for forty days he is to count the cost, to make the start, and to measure swords with all the hosts of hell. This testing is preliminary to his Gethsemane. It is also typical of our own life-experiences. Great visions and high purposes are not without their perils and counter-currents. If this was true in Christ's life, surely it is in ours. Let us learn from him the only safe way through such experiences.

His Temptation Real

Some one will raise the question whether the temptation of Jesus was real but we should not be long in giving an affirmative answer. The glory of Christ does not reside in his inability to sin, but in the fact that he did not sin—"in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." It was no sham fight, no mere form for example's sake, but a real battle in Christ's soul, with no foreordained victory. For, in the words of President Woolsey, "Why was he tempted by a sagacious tempter if he could not by any possibility be led into evil? And, if he himself knew that he could not sin, what could the transaction have been to him but a mere formality? Or how is he an example to us, if his temptation is an unreality? No! They dishonor Christ's work who think thus."

Professor Jowett well says, "Whatever else my Lord shall be to me he shall not be a counterfeit man, exposed to counterfeit fire, a mere stage fire, a man played upon by harmless sheet lightning, and never moving amid the dreaded bolts and forked flame. His shall not be the sham fight, and mine the actual struggle, or he can be no leader for me. He himself 'suffered being tempted.' He felt the real heat of the fire, he felt the fascination of the real seduction. ... Jesus of Nazareth had the real devil to meet and the real battle to wage, and the garlands of his noble brow were nobly won.

"To Jesus evil was a force and an intention outside of man, though it had allies within him. It was a power bigger than man himself could breed; which hungered for the souls of men and could finally have them for his own with the same absoluteness as he the Son of God and Savior of the world longed to make them his. Temptation is a downright battle for life, with a strong and inexorable foe."

His Answer to Temptation

There is inspiration and guidance for us in the way in which Jesus met and answered temptation. The Holy Spirit-reinforced word of God is mentioned in Ephesians 6:17 as the best weapon of offense or attack in the Christian's accoutrement. In fighting off the devil our Lord uses the same weapon and so doubtless thought it the best at his command. He was supremely concerned about doing the will of his Father and ever made use of the word of God. Dr. Frank D. Slutz writes concerning these temptations as follows:

"The first temptation of Jesus was the temptation of comfort; the second was the temptation of power; and the third was the temptation of favoritism, of special privilege. Who has not heard it whispered to him by his own mind that he is an exception, that he can escape detection for this

(Continued on page 15)

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Dubail Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
--	--	--

Christian Endeavor Week

(Special No. 1)

Endeavorers: Scarcely can we realize that the hour is so near at hand to celebrate Christian Endeavor Week again. In addition to the regular meetings, every union or society should plan a special observance of Christian Endeavor Week, January 25th to February 2nd. An unusual demonstration should be held on the night of February 2nd, it being the date of the Fiftieth Anniversary of this great YOUTH MOVEMENT.

Watch the Christian Endeavor World, the Angelus, and this page for suggestions in observing the special week.

Your President,
E. M. RIDDLE.

Tithers of the C. E. Attention

NOTE—In this issue of the Evangelist, we are pleased to give to you an article fresh from the pen of Brother Herman Koontz, our Stewardship Superintendent of Christian Endeavor.

This article is given at this time in order to interest our young people in the giving of our TITHE to the KRYPTON MISSION. The tithe is to be given during the week of January 25th to February 2, 1931. Please read Brother Koontz's article very carefully, and then remember Krypton on above dates.

C. D. WHITMER.

(Article 1)

A great opportunity to use the money God has intrusted to you presents itself for the week beginning January 25 and ending February 2. You know that our Christian Endeavor has taken the Krypton work as its special missionary objective, and that it is highly worthy of your support. Your national officers have decided upon the tithing plan to provide Krypton with the aid it needs. Other years they have asked you to make a pledge; this year they come with the request that you set aside the tenth of your income during Christian Endeavor Week and place it in a special offering for Krypton work.

Also, this is a splendid opportunity for any Endeavorer who has never tithed before to pay the Lord his tenth, and to discover the blessings, hitherto missed, that he will receive.

Don't fail to pass on this plan to any who might not have access to the pages of the Evangelist.

H. W. KOONTZ,
Stewardship Superintendent,
Masontown, Pa.

FINANCIAL SECRETARY'S REPORT JANUARY 1ST, 1931

Balance on hand 8/20/30 .....	$199.20
Received on 1929 pledges .....	10.00
Received on 1930-31 pledges:
Oakville, Indiana .....	5.00
Whittier, Calif. ....	6.00
Conemaugh, Pa. ....	10.00
Maurertown, Va. ....	10.00
Pittsburgh, Pa. ....	15.00
Interest on Savings account .....	1.57

Total Dr. ....	$256.77
Expenses:
100 Banquet programs printed ....	$ 1.00
Tickets for Banquet .....	1.50

Postage and Postals .....	2.50
Printing of Envelopes and Letter-heads .....	9.01
R. Paul Miller, Home Mission Secretary .....	200.00
Postage and Cards .....	1.50

Total Expenses .....$215.51

Balance on Hand, January 1, 1931 $ 41.26
The Home Mission Board is expecting not less than $500.00 from the National Christian Endeavor this year toward the Krypton, Kentucky project. Don't forget that Christian Endeavor Week (in February) has been set for the time when we observe tithing week and send your tithes to the National Secretary, Gladys Spice, 2301 13th Street, N. E., Canton, Ohio, to meet this goal. There are 60 reported societies. Will your Christian Endeavor respond to the letter mailed you just recently regarding this work, or are you going to be content to "let the other fellow carry and bear your responsibility?"

GLADYS SPICE, Secretary.

and they seemed to appreciate the service. The worst feature of it all, it was too short for the best results. These good brethren like New Enterprise and Yellow Creek, and a pastor on the field. In the meantime will do all we can for them.

J. S. COOPER

LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA

Leaving Yakima Washington on Friday evening I arrived in Los Angeles on Monday morning. Brother Paul Bauman met me at the station and took me to the beautiful new church on the corner of Fifth and Cherry, Long Beach.

When I visited Long Beach eighteen years ago there was no Brethren church in the city. Today a marvelous plant stands as witness to the drawing power of the Word of God when preached by a man of power in the Holy Spirit; a man whose influence not only makes this "the most spiritual church in the city" and surrounding community but to whom many Brethren churches in the whole United States owe their very existence; a man to whom I can point as the one great source of strength and encouragement in the years of my ministry. I thank God for man.

This church is a maze of activity and activity is not "much ado about nothing" but is carefully guarded and cared for by those who love the Lord.

During my stay among these people made my home with Brother and Sister Nielsen, the old standbys of the Brethren church in Southern California. This is the home of Miss Nielsen who is serving the Lord in South America.

One of the high points of this trip on Christmas day when I was invited to the beautiful home of Brother and Sister Wall for Christmas dinner. Brother Wall is doing a great work in the Bible League and also through the use of the printed page.

Another member of our Christmas dinner party was Brother Harry Cassel, one of the foundation stones of the Brethren church in Philadelphia. Brother Cassel is a man of prayer and I was indeed glad to learn that my name was among those who are daily wafted to the heavenly throne from his lips. Only God knows how the success of the meetings in Washington depended upon the prayers of the saints in other places.

Brother Bauman only has two children (he ought to have a dozen) but they exploded the old theory that "Preachers' kids are always bad" for they are both actively engaged in the services of the church.

I have never met a man who was carrying such a load as Brother Bauman and a man who is so kind and considerate to the individual. With the great load of Home Mission weighing heavily upon his shoulders with the endless calls upon his time for the church work here; with the great amount of mail constantly streaming into him from pastors and churches over the brotherhood, yet he takes times to stop and enter sympathetically into conversation with the people who are seeking more light for their pathway that leads to glory.

Brother Bauman has written a new booklet on the "Tongues Movement" which should be in the hands of thousands of God's people everywhere, for I know of no work so plain and convincing as this booklet. Orders should be sent to him at

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a 'great correspondent

SEMINARY NOTES

Brother C. Ashman, pastor of our Johnstown First church, has the commendable practice of using his college young people in the church services when they return home on vacation. During the recent Christmas vacation four young men had charge of one evening church service and four young ladies had charge of another evening. Six were members of our College Gospel Teams, one a former member now living at home in Johnstown, and one from Ann Arbor, Michigan. The four men were Messrs. B. Tilley, who brought the message; T. Hammers, J. Kyler and T. Kyler. On the next Sunday evening Misses L. Carter and R. Groves conducted the singing and led devotions, and F. Cobaugh and M. Ashman brought messages. In reporting the services to the writer, Brother Ashman complimented the work of both teams highly and expressed the opinion that those in attendance enjoyed the services very much.

Brother W. H. Schaffer, pastor of our First Brethren church of Conemaugh, Pennsylvania, enclosed the following excerpt from "The Daily Tribune of Johnstown" in a letter to Professor M. A. Stuckey: An Ashland College Gospel Team, composed of Norman Uphouse, Tom Hammers and Benjamin Tilley, conducted the entire church services at the First Brethren church, Second and Oak Streets, Conemaugh, yesterday morning.

Ashland College Gospel teams are noted over many states for their straightforward Gospel preaching. Every year there is a great demand for both the men and women's Gospel teams from all denominations, from Iowa to Pennsylvania, and from Kentucky to Michigan. Their services are always evangelistic in nature and many converts are won to the Christian faith yearly. These teams are composed of students in the college and seminary who are willing to spend week-ends and vacation periods preaching and teaching the Gospel wherever they are called.

Mr. Tilley led the song service, Mr. Hammers conducted the devotions and Mr. Uphouse delivered the message, using for his text and subject, "Prepare Ye the Way of the Lord." Mr. Uphouse spoke on the simplicity of the Gospel message, the reality of the Christian life and the sincerity of the born-again believer.

A good-sized congregation received this Gospel message and was well pleased with the entire service. All of the young men are natives of Johnstown and are taking college and seminary training in Ashland College and Seminary.

The work of our Gospel Teams is referred to by Brother Schaffer in his letter thus: "I feel proud myself to think that Ashland can send out such splendid representative groups. I always have considered the Gospel Teams as the finest representation Ashland could possibly have." We hope every pastor coming in contact with our teams will be able to say essentially the same.

K. M. MONROE.

NEW ENTERPRISE AND RAYSTOWN

The New Enterprise church called me for a short meeting the last week of November. Beginning on Wednesday and closing Sunday evening with communion service. The crowds were not large, but we had our first spell of winter at this time, and there was quite a lot of sickness in the community. Brother Adam Beach was hindered some from attending on account of the illness of his wife, but he managed most of the time to get some one to stay with her at the hour of services. Brother Beach is one of our faithful workers, also his brother Jim and family. We always enjoy ourselves with these New Enterprise Brethren.

I went to Raystown on the evening of the 12th, preached Friday evening, Saturday evening, Sunday morning and closed Sunday evening with communion service. This was my first opportunity to preach for these Brethren, but we got along lovely together, h, California, 1925 E. Fifth Street, 20c copy.

y the Lord mightily bless the work pastor at Fifth and Cherry until he

Whittier

ad the joy of meeting with Brother and r Mayes and their people at Whittier, Wednesday evening. Brother Mayes to be getting along fine and I thank for it, he is a loyal brother in the Lord.

Recapitulation

looking over the results of this trip to West I find that it has resulted in the bution of some forty-seven thousand hundred tracts (47,300); seventy-two ssed conversions and reconsecrations es those who were the result of private rsation; eighty-two (82) new mottoes grace the walls in the homes of God's e; sixty-six (66) persons have a new mination to memorize more Scripture; family altars were erected, several eld Bibles and other good Christian ture was purchased. We give God all lory for we well realize that it is only gh him that we were permitted to have fruit.

Home Again

is has been a most enjoyable trip in st every way but it is still true that is no place like home. Seven is God's ct number and why shouldn't I be glad t home, where seven people await my g to give me a perfect welcome. I God for my helpmeet and I well know when the rewards are given, Over Yonshe will share in the harvest, for our rewards both those who go into the ct and those who remain so faithfully
he stuff" at home.

anks be unto God for his unspeakable
R. I. HUMBERD.

PORT OF RECEIPTS FOR HOME MIS- SIONS DURING DECEMBER, 1930

ote—All amounts are for General Fund ting those designated as follows: (K) cky Fund, (E) Church Erection Fund.

(Continued from last week)

r. Ch., Louisville, Ohio ....	30.40
r. Ch., Waterloo, Iowa
M. S. ....K	25.00
day school .....	20.97
araim Hoover .....	15.00
Maggie Peck .....	10.00
ry H. Miller .....	10.00
& Mrs. S. M. Whetstone ...	10.00
py Workers' Class .....	8.00
& Mrs. D. G. Lichty .....	5.00
& Mrs. E. B. Schrock .....	5.00
& Mrs. H. A. Gnagey ...	5.00
& Mrs. A. E. Smith .....	5.00
Maude Hady .....	5.00
s Grace A. Pollard .....	5.00
& Mrs. John B. Harbaugh ..	5.00
& Mrs. L. L. Rulon .....	5.00
s Ethel Lichty .....	5.00
ellaneous .....	62.08
al .....	206.05
t. Ch., Roann, Indiana
& Mrs. O. P. Comer .....	10.00
& Mrs. B. E. Goltry .....	5.00
& Mrs. Sam'l Anderson ..K	5.00
ah Teague .....	5.00
& Mrs. C. E. Baker .....	5.00
& Mrs. Monroe Jones .....	5.00
I. Lowman .....	5.00
s Mabel Shillinger .....	5.00
& Mrs. G. L. Maus .....	5.00
r-Faithful S. S. Class .....	5.00
e Blue S. S. Class .....	5.00
day school .....	23.89

Sunday school .....	K	5.00
Total .....		88.89
1st Br. Ch., Leon, Iowa
Miles Taber .....		5.00
Loose Offering .....		16.51
Total .....		21.51
1st Br. Ch., Allentown, Pa.
Mr. & Mrs. Geo. Silberman ...		12.00
Mr. & Mrs. Geo. Silberman ...K		35.00
Mrs. Wm. Hargraves .....	K	5.00
Winifred Hale .....		2.00
Elsie Orcusto .....		1.00
Mrs. Lizzie Kamoie .....		1.00
E. E. Fehnel .....		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. John Ogden .....		5.25
Loose Offering .....	K	1.00
Total .....		67.25
1st Br. Ch., Burling, Indiana
Sunday school .....		22.38
1st Br. Ch., Fort Scott, Kansas
Mr. & Mrs. Thurman Orr .....		5.00
Rev. & Mrs. L. G. Wood .....		5.00
Addie Cochran .....		.25
Total .....		10.25
1st Br. Ch., Sergeantsville, N. J.
Mr. & Mrs. Jos. D. Wilson ....		10.00
Miss Bess E. Fisher .....		5.00
Mrs. Charles W. Johnson .....		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Frank Whitlock ...		5.00
Miss Ida S. Leigh .....		5.00
Miss Margaret H. Wilson ...K		3.50
Mr. & Mrs. Emmert R. Wilson .		3.00
Mrs. Marietta Leigh .....		2.00
Mrs. Anna Sylvester .....		1.00
Albert Sylvester .....		1.00
Church Offering .....		9.50
Total .....		50.00
Woman's Missionary Society, Hope- well, Pa. ....		5.00
Summit Mills Br. Ch., Summit Mills, Pa.
Mrs. M. W. Werner .....		10.00
Mrs. Austin Miller .....		5.00
Cogregation .....		10.00
Total .....		25.00
Roanoke Br. Ch., Roanoke, Ind.
Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor .....		5.00
Denver Br. Ch., Denver, Indiana
Congregation .....		6.45
1st Br. Ch., Hamlin, Kansas
N. P. Eglin .....		15.00
Mrs. Anna Eglin .....		15.00
Mr. & Mrs. F. R. Cloud .....		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. E. C. Blanchard ...		5.00
S. A. Shannon .....		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. G. F. Berkley .....		20.00
W. M. S. ....		10.00
Mr. & Mrs. B. M. Berkley .....		10.00
Mr. & Mrs. S. I. Miller .....		10.00
Mrs. R. C. Berkley .....		2.00
Virgil Hess .....		2.00
J. F. Hornbeck .....		1.00
Church Offering .....		2.71
Total .....		102.71
Smithville-Sterling Br. Ch., Smith- ville, Ohio
Mr. & Mrs. S. S. Fouch .....		5.00
Reuben Steiner .....		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. E. E. Beery .....		5.00
H. J. Hartzler .....		10.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. C. Weigley .....		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. John Dintaman ...		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Boyd Hostetler ...		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. F. C. Long .....		5.00
E. L. Steiner .....		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. H. S. Rutt .....		3.00
Mr. & Mrs. H. S. Rutt .....	K	7.00
Christie Graber .....		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. W. G. Fouch .....		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. H. J. Amstutz .....		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. E. A. Swinehart ...		10.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. K. Plank .....		5.00
F. B. Hartzler .....		8.00
Anna Fetter .....		5.00
Loose Offering .....		13.25
Total .....		116.25
Nell Zetty, Phoenix, Arizona ....		1.00
Calvary Br. Ch., Pittstown, N. J.
Miss Florence Butler .....		2.00
Mr. & Mrs. L. Barrick .....		1.00
Mr. & Mrs. S. F. Weber .....		5.00
Mrs. Edith Schubiger .....		1.00
Mrs. Elizabeth Tharp .....		5.00
Albert A. Hann .....		5.00
Mrs. Ella Race .....		5.00
Miss Vianna Hackett .....		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. E. C. Hackett ....		5.00
Loose Offering .....		2.00
Total .....		36.00
1st Br. Ch., Mansfield, Ohio
Mr. & Mrs. D. Garber .....		5.00
Mrs. Chester Lantz .....		1.00
Mrs. James Hoover .....		1.00
Mrs. Benton Beal .....	K	1.00
Sunbeam Class .....		1.65
Mrs. Fred Boss .....		2.00
Mrs. Ralph Miles .....		1.00
Total .....		12.65
Edw. W. Reineck, Spokane, Wash.		5.00
1st Br. Ch., Lathrop, Calif. ....		20.00
1st Br. Ch., Goshen, Indiana ....		97.36
2nd Br. Ch., Los Angeles, Calif.
Young People's C. E. ....K		15.00
Young People's C. E. (Ford Fd)		15.00
Total .....		30.00
Bethlehem Br. Ch., Harisonburg, Va.
Mr. & Mrs. Jacob Swartz .....		7.00
Mrs. B. F. Landis .....	K	.50
H. A. Logan .....		5.00
Helen Spitzer .....		1.00
Browning Lee Spitzer .....		1.00
Mrs. Fred Spitzer .....		7.00
Mrs. W. H. Randolph .....		1.50
G. O. & Mrs. Showalter .....		2.55
Elder J. M. Bowman .....	K	8.00
H. E. Bowman .....	K	1.00
G. C. Dowell .....		1.00
Sunday school .....		7.40
Loose Offering .....		1.23
Loose Offering .....	K	1.00
Total .....		45.18
1st Br. Ch., Ashland, Ohio
Mr. & Mrs. Dyoll Belote .....		5.00
Miss Amy Worst .....		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. R. A. Hazen .....		2.00
Paul Hazen .....		1.00
Mr. & Mrs. Loren T. Black ...		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Ira D. Slotter ....		10.00
Courtney Abbott .....		.25
Mr. & Mrs. Andrew Miller ....		2.00
Mrs. Sarah Keim .....		2.00
Mrs. Hilda E. Carpenter .....		3.00
Mr. & Mrs. Jos. E. Stookey ...		2.00
Elizabeth Leslie .....	K	1.00
Mrs. Hayes Sloan .....		3.00
Mrs. R. M. Abrams .....		1.00
Anna B. Holmes .....		.75
Lyda Wertman .....		1.50
Alva J. McClain .....		5.00
Esther Abrams .....	E	10.00
Belle P. Kilhefner .....		25.00
Mr. & Mrs. Martin Shively ...		10.00
Mr. & Mrs. G. J. McDonald ...		2.00
Mr. & Mrs. A. L. DeLozier ....		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Eugene Rumbaugh ..		1.00
Mr. & Mrs. B. Frank Zercher ..		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. W. A. Beeghley ...		5.00
Mr. & Mrs. H. B. Viers .....		2.00
C. C. Louder .....		1.00
Chas. A. Bame .....		5.00
Mrs. Chas. A. Bame .....		5.00
Miss Dorcas Bame .....		5.00
Don M. Bame .....		5.00
Carrie D. McCoy .....	K	1.00
Mr. & Mrs. E. J. Worst .....		5.00
Miss Helen Garber .....		2.50
Miss Helen Garber .....	K	2.50
Mr. & Mrs. Benj. F. Zercher ..		1.00

Virginia V. White .....	10.00	Mr. & Mrs. G. C. Welte .....	K 1.00
Mrs. Ethel Harley & Ruth Harley .....	3.00	Christian Dunyon .....	2.25
Mrs. Earl McKean .....	1.00	Mrs. C. Spicer .....	1.50
Mrs. W. L. Zimmerman .....	1.00	Sunday school .....	50.00
Elizabeth Ralston .....	K 5.00	Total .....	152.25
Mr. & Mrs. J. S. Hazen .....	2.00	1st Br. Ch., Flora, Indiana .....
Wilma Baer .....	.25	Lester Fife .....	5.00
Willis Baer .....	.25	Katharine Miller, Jones Mills, Pa. K .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Geo. S. Baer .....	10.00	Linwood Br. Ch., Linwood, Md. ..	15.00
Mr. & Mrs. K. M. Monroe .....	5.00	1st Br. Ch., Washington, D. C. ..
W. S. Bell .....	10.00	Mrs. Carrie Boyd .....	10.00
Miscellaneous .....	19.06	Mr. & Mrs. R. Donaldson .....	15.00
Total .....	214.06	Mr. & Mrs. H. C. Dooley .....	5.00
Daniel Crofford, Hallandale, Fla. ..	5.00	H. R. Dooley .....	5.00
1st Br. Ch., Los Angeles, Calif. ..		Miss Alice Gilbert .....	5.00
Senior C. E. .....	K 15.00	Mrs. Martha Keller .....	5.00
Gratis Br. Ch., Gratis, Ohio .....		Rev. & Mrs. H. A. Kent .....	5.00
N. G. Kimmel .....	5.00	Robert Merrick .....	K 5.00
Stella Zimmerman .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. Munich .....	5.00
Miscellaneous .....	24.46	Mr. & Mrs. R. F. Myers .....	5.00
Total .....	34.46	Mr. & Mrs. B. F. Newcomer ..	10.00
1st Br. Ch., Brookville, Ohio .....		Mr. & Mrs. F. E. Simmons .....	10.00
Congregation .....	1.50	Mr. & Mrs. Elmer Tamkin .....	15.00
Congregation .....	K 2.50	Mr. & Mrs. Guy Tamkin .....	7.00
Total .....	4.00	Mr. & Mrs. Oscar Taylor .....	5.00
Glenford Br. Ch., Glenford, Ohio ..	4.00	F. M. West .....	5.00
1st Br. Ch., Fort Wayne, Indiana ..		Senior C. E. .....	5.00
Mrs. Strasburg .....	2.00	Congregation .....	42.50
Mrs. Ben Elder .....	.50	Total .....	164.50
Chas. Agler .....	2.50	1st Br. Ch., Fremont, Ohio .....
Rev. & Mrs. Adams .....	5.00	Mrs. John Baringer .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. H. Waters .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. D. W. Campbell .....	10.00
Mr. & Mrs. A. Etter .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. Wm. Garber .....	10.00
Mrs. C. Francis .....	1.00	Mr. & Mrs. Oliver Winter .....	5.00
A. B. Rian .....	2.00	Rev. W. S. Crick & Family .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. H. Holderman .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. Garden Gonawins ..	3.00
Total .....	28.00	Mr. & Mrs. J. L. Feck .....	3.00
1st Br. Ch., Hagerstown, Md. .....		Mrs. George Legacy .....	2.00
Junior Dept. S. S. .....	30.00	Loose Offering .....	3.20
J. S. Reneter & Family .....	15.00	Total .....	46.20
Miss Fannie Schindler .....	15.00	1st Br. Ch., Manteca, Calif. .....
Mrs. Ella N. Rovey .....	10.00	Laura Larson .....	1.00
Ira Downey .....	10.00	Frank Larson .....	1.50
C. Frank Myers .....	5.00	Chris Pearson .....	1.00
Mrs. C. Frank Myers .....	5.00	A. C. Colony .....	1.00
Miss Olive Myers .....	5.00	Raymond Johnson .....	.35
Miss Ethel Myers .....	5.00	Dr. W. L. Wilson .....	5.00
Mrs. J. P. Spodden .....	5.00	J. R. Coykendall .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. N. E. Fahrney .....	5.00	Mel Stoner .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. C. Shank .....	5.00	Nathan Johnson .....	5.00
Mrs. Reulah Lewman .....	5.00	Congregation .....	2.50
Mr. & Mrs. J. L. Carmochan .....	5.00	Total .....	27.35
Mr. & Mrs. H. C. Keplinger .....	5.00	1st Br. Ch., Johnstown, Pa. .....
Mrs. J. E. Laughlin .....	5.00	Dorcas S. S. Class .....	25.00
Allen Long .....	5.00	Loyal Women's S. S. Class .....	25.00
Mrs. D. W. Reichard .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. S. F. Powell .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. M. R. Ridenour .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. Albert Trent .....	5.00
Mrs. E. G. Cost .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. J. B. Gunter & Family ..	5.00
Mrs. Geo. M. Hedrick .....	5.00	J. C. Lockey .....	5.00
Roy Sprocher .....	5.00	Mrs. E. B. Wissinger .....	5.00
Church Offering .....	40.59	Mrs. Lucy A. Ripple .....	5.00
Total .....	205.59	Miss Bess Wissinger .....	5.00
2nd Br. Ch., Philadelphia, Pa. .....		Rev. C. H. Ashman .....	5.00
Mrs. A. Potts .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. C. E. Albert .....	10.00
Junior C. E. .....	5.00	Mr. & Mrs. Sam Strackman .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. L. S. Kolb .....	5.00	Mr. Robert Sigg .....	K 5.00
Mrs. John Horst .....	5.00	Mrs. C. J. Heilman .....	5.00
Eda Schaffer .....	K 5.00	Mr. & Mrs. F. M. Gochmour ..	5.00
Helen Scheek .....	5.00	Mrs. Berwyn Evans .....	5.00
Beginners' Class .....	5.00	Miss Gertrude Lake .....	5.00
Mrs. Raymond Adams .....	5.00	Intermediate C. E. Society .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. G. Struth .....	5.00	Sunday school .....	20.89
Mrs. C. H. Lord .....	K 5.00	Miss Margaret Cook .....	.50
Jacob Muller .....	5.00	Miss Mildred Parry .....	.50
Mrs. F. Kalesse .....	5.00	First Brethren church .....	143.11
Fred Kalesse .....	K 5.00	Total .....	300.00
Fred Kalesse .....	E 5.00	1st Br. Ch., Conemaugh, Pa. .....
Caroline Marshall .....	5.00	John Leidy .....	5.00
Senior C. E. Society .....	5.00	W. H. Schaffer .....	10.00
Mr. & Mrs. W. Steffler .....	5.00	Mrs. S. E. Borasough .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. H. Emhart .....	5.00	W. G. Knavel .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Schutze .....	1.00	Grover Snyder .....	5.00
Mrs. G. C. A. Remig .....	2.00	Mrs. Grover Snyder .....	5.00
P. Vessey .....	2.50	Miss Rose Snyder .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. G. C. Welte .....	2.00

Mrs. George Smith .....	5.
George Smith .....	5
Loose Offering .....	40
Total .....	90.43
1st Br. Ch., Winchester, Va. .....
Church Offering .....	27
Sunday school .....	10
Total .....	37.00
Minnie Patterson, Philadelphia, Pa. ..	2
W. S. Livengood, Meyersdale, Pa. ..	5
W. S. Livengood, Meyersdale, Pa. K ..	5
Total .....	10.00
H. H. Merritt, Roann, Ind. ....	5
Total Receipts for the Month of
December, 1930 .....	$5.54
R. PAUL MILLER, Secretary-Treasu
The Missionary Board of the Breth
Church, Berne, Indiana.

MODERATOR'S ADDRESS OF THE PENNSYLVANIA DISTRICT

By Willis E. Ronk

(EDITOR'S NOTE—We have two special addresses given by District Conference Moderators, but the limits of space in the General Articles department and the present lull in church news leads us to publish them here. Otherwise publication would be delayed unduly.)

To the Brethren of the Pennsylvania District in Conference assembled, I bring greetings: Upon the Moderator of this Conference falls the duty, as well as the privilege of taking stock of our common resources, of noting our failures, and of making suggestions for the future. To this task, I address myself with reference both to Doctrine and the practice of the Church.

May we be reminded first of all, that we are assembled here in Conference under direction and guidance of our Heavenly Father, through the saving grace of Lord Jesus Christ, and under the leadership of the Holy Spirit, who indwells us. To the Triune God, we lift our hearts and voices in praise and gratitude for the keeping of another year and that we are permitted to assemble again in annual Conference to greet each other, and to plan the future work of the churches.

We are living in a day of unrest,—political, economic, social, and religious. This is a condition which we cannot afford to overlook in seeking an understanding of our problems, but which too often, we have overlooked. We Brethren are looking at our problems as though they were all peculiar to our own denomination. As a matter of fact, many of them are common to all denominations of the day. We are, all of us, affected by the world unrest, and consequently, the churches of which we are part are affected in the same degree. The fact lies at the heart of our problems, we shall see.

To take note of our resources and to cover our failures with an eye to future improvement, we must give consideration of all to questions of doctrine. For many years, it has been the custom among Brethren, when referring to doctrine, to say what we sometimes call our "peculiar doctrines," which strictly speaking are not. Doctrine as used here has reference to belief. I wish then to give attention to Brethren Doctrine.

For many years past, the Brethren have been very slow in attempting any definition of our doctrine, and there is a sense in which this is the correct attitude. Any interpretation of the Bible must, in a way, be inferior to the Bible. The changes of years bring changing conditions and changes interpretations; so the next generation if a choice is to be made,—would better have the Whole Bible than our views of the Bible. This fact, together with our father's observation of the effect of man made deeds on the larger churches of Europe, caused them to declare that our creed could be only, "The Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible." At the time of the adoption of this as a Creed or motto it was a distinctive cry, but it is no longer so. Does not the battle cry of another denomination sound strangely familiar? "The Whole Bible, for the whole church, for the whole world." There are our preachers who can say quite as glibly Brethren preachers, "The Bible is our rule of Faith and Practice," and yet in spite of this,—their beliefs and practices differ greatly from ours. They do not practice Triune Immersion, or observe the ordinances of feetwashing and the Lord's Supper, or Love Feast. Our plea no longer makes us a distinctive people. Shall we change our plea or motto? No, by no means! But if the plea is to mean more to us than to others who use the same words, we must define what that more is. To fail to do so is to court disaster.

There has been prevalent in the church many years past, the impression that to make any doctrinal statement of any sort, apart from our motto, was to betray the leaders of the Church, and to make a radical change from our historic position. A little thinking on the subject will show that this is not the case. As a matter of fact, from our earliest days, we have made statements of faith and practice. If we go back to the beginning of the Tunker movement in Germany, we will discover that Alexander Mack and his co-workers were called on to define their position; and they did. They taught Triune Immersion as Apostolic baptism and they practiced it. They taught that the Love Feast was an Ordinance to be kept by the Church and they practiced it. This defining of their beliefs and practices cost them much suffering by way of ridicule and persecution; and therefore is not to be discounted. They further defined their position in answering the many questions submitted to them by certain Church leaders of their day; and in PUBLISHING BOTH QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. In Mack's book, in which the above mentioned questions and answers may be found; there is also, "A Conversation Between a Father and Son," which is merely a statement of belief of the Brethren on such subjects as, Baptism, the Lord's Supper, Ex-communication, Oaths, Love, Marriage, and other subjects. Coming now to the Conference of 1882 which was held in Ashland,—certain Declarations of Principles were adopted. Among them this one stood: "Resolved, that it is the sense of this convention that, as we are the true conservators of the doctrines of the Brethren Church, and have never strayed from the Church founded by our fathers, nothing done at this meeting shall be construed as secession or departure from the original church organized in Germany, in 1708, or from the principles of the Gospel as INTERPRETED by our fathers, until the intervention of human tradition and usurpation of authority by men in control of Annual Meetings. In every principle of non-conformity to the world and the practice of the Gospel ordinances, we stand where we have always stood, and by the grace of God always will stand." What is this but a reaffirmation of original beliefs and practices, and the recognition of the need of interpretation. I have only called attention to a few of the statements which have been made during our history, but enough for the purpose in view: namely to show that any statement of doctrine is not a departure from our historic position, nor a betrayal of the fathers of the Church.

(To be continued)

We may either smother the divine fire of youth or we may feed it. We may either stand stupidly staring as it flares into the intermittent blaze of folly or we may tend it into a lambent flame with power to make clean and bright our dingy city streets.—Jane Addams in The Spirit of Youth and the City Streets.

Supplement to Business Manager's Corner

Something to Remember

While we are asking for $10,000 to complete the payment for our building it should be remembered we have not asked for one penny for operating expenses since right after the close of the World War when print paper had advanced more than 200% in price.

Four years ago we installed two new Intertype machines at a cost of approximately $9,000.00 for which we have just completed payment from the earnings of the business, which goes to show that it is not to meet operating expenses that we are asking for this Publication Day offering, but to pay for the building we occupy, YOUR building, for any individual member of the smallest congregation in the entire brotherhood owns as large a share in The Brethren Publishing Company as any other member of the largest congregation, and the personal responsibility is the same. Will each of us bear OUR OWN responsibility? Sunday, January the twenty-fifth will tell.

R. R. TEETER, Business Manager.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

(Continued from page 2)

will not go on forever. Perhaps this accounts of the gloomy predictions of some scientists.

BUT the Christian Knows

The Christian views the future more hopefully. He knows, if acquainted with his Bible, that human civilization will not go on breaking down forever. One more great catastrophe is ahead, and then God will break into the stream of history by the Second Coming of his Son to establish a righteous Kingdom upon earth which will endure forever.

It would be well for all men, scientists included, to read the Book of Isaiah once a year. If read with an open and believing mind, it would guard them from an unwarranted optimism on the one hand and from hopeless pessimism on the other.

Sunday School Notes

(Continued from page 11)

or that risk? One's splendid reputation, one's ability, one's cleverness, one's popularity can lead him into believing that God's law will make an exception of him. This very temptation is the cause of the failure of many geniuses. An inspiring sense of one's mission, of one's call to a task may trip him up on this assumption of favoritism. Jesus was not interested in dramatic short cuts. He proposed to proceed by the laws of God. He did not resort to magic. God is not to be tempted by the arrogant person who strains laws to their limit. Thackeray's Becky Sharp ought to be an example to all who would try to walk on the brink of a precipice.

"Jesus answered all these temptations magnificently by measuring them against his loyalty to God. He asked in each case what God's plan, God's wish would be. This mighty loyalty shifted all other matters into their correct places in the scene. This is the secret of meeting temptations."

Help from the Heights

The Word says Jesus was tempted of the devil. Let no man think he shall escape such temptation. The temptation is sure, but as our Lord received help from above, so may we, and the re-enforcing strength that comes down from the Father of all is all-sufficient. The pull of temptation cannot be felt when we dwell with God in the heights.

Frank W. Boreham passes on a story told by Handley Page, the air-man. When Page landed at Kobar, in Arabia, a large rat managed to get into his aeroplane. When Page was in mid-air he discovered the rat's presence by the sound of gnawing behind him. Alarmed at the thought of the damage which those pitiless teeth might do, the aviator remembered that a rat is unable to survive in high altitudes. He determined to soar, and rose until he found difficulty in breathing. At length he ventured to descend to a lower level and upon landing he discovered that the rat was dead.

There is help for the tempted here. When we feel ourselves endangered by the pests that molest our souls, we need only to rise to a loftier level of Christian living and of Christian attainment.—New Guide.

"Filled with the Spirit"

That is the secret of victory and leads into the larger life made possible in Christ Jesus. We never really know Christ until we have the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. "He shall glorify me," so we read. Dr. J. H. Strong says, "That is the second great truth taught by the Scriptures concerning the Spirit. The Holy Spirit does not work apart from truth, and he does not choose any or all truth indifferently. The Holy Spirit is a teacher, and Jesus Christ is the lesson he teaches. The work of the Spirit is to make Jesus a bright reality to the spirit of man. That means first of all regeneration, a new life in the individual. It means also the opening of the gates that lead to a divine companionship. It means also guidance, in thought, prayer, and action. It means finally the glorification of the human personality, when the redeemed spirit and the raised body are reunited at Christ's coming."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

COLUMBUS, OHIO

The Cooperative Brethren church of Columbus, Ohio, will hold a communion service on Sunday evening of January 18th, and an urgent invitation is extended to all of like faith, both in the Brethren church and the Church of the Brethren, to attend and share our fellowship.

MRS. A. O. HORNE.

PUBLICATION DAY JANUARY 25th

(Business Manager's Corner)

"LINE UPON LINE"

The Business Manager Himself

Doubtless none of the Old Testament writers ever heard of psychology, and they likely would not have known what it meant if they had heard of it, but some of them either consciously or unconsciously were real psychologists nevertheless; and they applied the fundamental principles of psychology in a most effective manner. Thus when Isaiah said "precept must be upon precept, line upon line; here a little and there a little," he was stating one of the fundamental principles of education that no modern system has been able to discard.

One statement of fact, one presentation of an argument, one appeal to either the reason or the emotions seldom gets the results desired. There must be statement after statement, argument after argument, appeal after appeal before adequate results can be secured. And this is why the editors of our publications, the members of the Board of Directors and the business manager of our Publishing House must write one appeal after another, one year after another to get results along the line of support of Brethren publications and of the Brethren Publishing Company.

This year we sent letters to all the subscribers of The Brethren Evangelist together with other printed matter appealing to them to give loyal support to all our publications and urging them to make a really worth while INVESTMENT in THEIR OWN publishing house on the day set apart as Publication Day, and thus free the building from all indebtedness.

One might think the appeal of these letters would be sufficient, and that nothing more would need to be said; but experience has taught us that it is not, and that the old prophet was exactly right when he said "precept must be upon precept, line upon line; here a little and there a little." And it is in harmony with this principle of psychology that we make these many appeals year after year.

What of the Results

Some of the results have been very satisfactory, while others have not been so much so. There are a number of members of the Brethren church that are as regular in their yearly payments toward the liquidation of the debt upon our building as they are in paying their taxes; and there are a number of congregations that are equally regular.

We could name a number of churches that have made contributions of sufficient amounts so that if every congregation in the brotherhood had done equally as well according to their membership the indebtedness would have been cancelled five or six years ago; and while it seems like "whipping the willing horse" to urge them to continue in their liberality, yet apparently there is nothing else to do. There are always some who won't and some whose burdens must be borne by those who will.

The Widow's Mite

The commendation by the Master of the poor widow who cast her all into the Lord's treasury was based upon a principle that is as eternal as time itself; and in the years we have been serving as Business Manager of the Brethren Publishing Company, we have seen this principle demonstrated time and again. For several years we have observed that a large portion of the individual contributions that are received to apply on our indebtedness comes from widows. We have already received a number of such contributions since sending out our Christmas letters.

Just a few days ago we received a letter from one such good sister with a five dollar bill enclosed together with the statement, "this bill was given to me for a Christmas present and I am sending it to you for a Publication Day offering." This is an expression of her faith in her own Publishing House and of her love for her Master whose work the Publishing House is trying to carry on. One might be justified in applying to her the words of our Lord when he said "I have not found so great faith, no not in Israel."

We feel certain that what a number of these widows have done could be duplicated many times over by thousands of our members who are not widows, and what a blessing such gifts would be, not only to the Publishing House but to the givers themselves.

R. R. TEETER, Business Manager.

A GENEROUS OFFERING FROM EVERY CHURCH

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Heart Throbs of Our Church Leaders

XLIX—SPIRITUAL LIFE

By H. H. Rowsey

At the World's Missionary Congress a few years ago one of the foreign leaders arose and said, "We do not want the kind of Christianity you have here in America. You of America have only a mild form of religion. With this you would inoculate the rest of the world against the real religion of Jesus Christ; just as a physician takes a mild form of smallpox and inoculates a patient against real smallpox." (Washington, 1925.)

This statement should cause serious consideration and concern on the part of those vitally interested in the cause of the Lord Jesus Christ. We believe the statement is too general. Yet we know some profess but do not possess. Some have a form of godliness but deny the power thereof (2 Tim. 3:5). Many are lukewarm (Rev. 3:14ff). There is enough worldliness in the church to cause even the most optimistic to see the great need of a crusade with Christ for the deepening and quickening of the spiritual life of the church.

And this crusade should begin with personal examination and reconsecration. The Committee on the Spiritual State of the Churches could give impetus to such a crusade by presenting a challenging cooperative program. In the meantime, heart-searching and rededication on the part of all, from the leaders to the least, should take place. We should be careful and prayerful, that in promoting the cause of Christ our methods and attitudes shall not be unchristian. We should so live that all with whom we come in contact may "take knowledge that we have been with Jesus" (Acts 4:13). If our loving Lord could give his life on Calvary's cruel cross, surely we should so live that our lives may be as lights set upon a hill. And, "all things are possible through Christ who strengtheneth us."

Falls City, Nebr.

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

GETTING Ready for the Next War

General Pershing, writing his personal memoirs of the late war, declares that the great conflict might have been ended decisively in 1917 with the saving of thousands of lives and billions of dollars, if the United States had been prepared.

Immediately following Pershing's statement, Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley informs the public in an interview what is being done to avoid such a situation in the future. "We have not failed to profit," he says, "by the lessons we learned in 1917 and 1918."

For ten years since the war, expert army officers have been surveying the country's probable needs in the next war, and careful plans have been drawn up for the mobilization of resources of both industry and labor. "For years," he reveals, "we have been searching out and listing factories suitable for the production of guns, planes and the many items on our list." Plans have been drawn up in detail showing exactly what alterations are to be made in converting factories to desired war uses.

Raw materials, power and transportation facilities are included in these sweeping surveys and plans. "Labor leaders are assisting" in developing the program. "Industrial interests" are cooperating in formulating the broad and intricate plans which have been worked out or which are in course of preparation.

In the next war "every citizen must do his full duty to the nation in its time of need, whether he be assigned to a lathe back home or to serving a cannon at the front."

EUROPE in the Meantime

Is trying to organize a Federation of European States, obviously for the double purpose of avoiding war among themselves and to present a solid economic front toward "rich Uncle Sam." Briand, versatile French statesman who initiated the scheme, is finding the path beset with obstacles. German and Italian representatives insist that Russia and Turkey must be included in the plan, lest Europe be divided into two great armed camps.

Presiding at the opening session of the conference at Geneva, Briand frankly warned its members of the danger if they fail to get together. "We must avert a rupture of post-war equilibrium because, in view of the prevailing spirit, there is danger of the disappearance of Europe's civilization," he said. "Never at any moment of post-war history has the menace hanging over European economics stood out so strongly."

From the standpoint of European welfare and safety, it will be essential to secure a united Europe. But from the standpoint of American safety, it will be hoped that the proposed federation will fail.

No matter what the outcome is, whether Russia is shut out or taken in, she will do as she pleases. The present Russian government has but one guiding principle, the ultimate world triumph of the Communist State. When the League of Nations was in process of formation, Trotsky was asked whether Russia would join it. He answered, "Yes, if we can use it."

France, in mortal fear of both Russia and Germany, struggled for armed security. Germany, fearing Russia less than she hates France, contends for equality of armament among the nations. Mussolini has but one ambition, the exaltation of Italy. England cannot join an economically solidified Europe without trouble with her dominions. The United States, confident of her own ability to care for herself in any crisis, watches developments and prepares for the worst.

THE Tragic Paradox

Nobody wants war. Everybody knows that the next one will involve the world and will probably leave civilization in ruins. But all nations continue frantically to prepare for war. The ambassadors of peace ironically scrap a few obsolete battleships while the chemists go on creating new poison-gases. And the wise men have discovered no formula to prevent the nations from destroying themselves.

Twenty-five or more centuries ago, a Biblical prophet with high irony described the situation thus:

"Proclaim ye this among the nations;
Prepare war;
Stir up the mighty men;
Let all the men of war draw near.
Let them come up.
Beat your plowshares into swords,
And your pruning-hooks into spears;
Let the weak say, I am strong.

* * *

Let the nations bestir themselves.
And come up to the Valley of Jehoshaphat;

For there will I sit to judge all the nations round about.

Put ye in the sickle;
For the harvest is ripe:
Come, tread ye;
For the wine-press is full,
The vats overflow;
For their wickedness is great.
Multitudes.

Multitudes in the Valley of Decision!

For the day of Jehovah is near in the Valley of Decision."—Joel 3:9-14 ARV).

A MODERN War Chariot

On January ninth the speediest armored tank ever built was exhibited before United States Army experts. It is powered with a 338 horse-power airplane engine, carries a crew of two men behind steel armor with machine gun and cannon, and is able to travel at a speed of ninety miles an hour. The inventor has spent ten years in developing the machine. Even traveling across rough country it can make 45 miles an hour on its caterpillar tracks.

What would an old-fashioned army do in the face of several thousand tanks of this kind?

Perhaps Nahum saw some of these modern war chariots in his astonishing vision of the latter times. Read the description in chapter two, verses three and four: "The chariots shall be with flaming torches in the Day of his preparation. . . . The chariots shall rage in the streets; they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways: they shall seem like torches; they shall run like the lightnings."

If such prophetic visions seem incredible, do not forget that Zechariah described the very animal upon which our Lord would ride into Jerusalem, and recorded it several hundred years before the event took place.

WHAT shall we do to be saved?

This is the question upon the trembling lips of the world today. Scientific discoveries have given man a control over his material environment which is almost incredible, bringing to us a vision of the possibility of an economic millennium. But no war has been found to prevent man finally from using his own scientific creations to destroy himself. Is there no hope for a solution?

The divine answer was once given, and has never been altered: YE MUST BE BORN AGAIN. Apart from the Life and control of Jesus Christ, the world is doomed. Science and human learning have improved life immeasurably, but they cannot create anew the hearts of men. Only Christ can do that. If the Church has spent more time declaring the saving power of Christ, and less time on a thousand lesser things, the prospect might be more hopeful. But the Church, intrigued and awed by the evanescent success of a material civilization, has too often turned aside from her exalted calling to worship lesser gods. Gold in its place is a useful commodity, but when turned into the form of a calf and worshipped it debases human life. All the work of material science in its own proper place is altogether worthwhile, but when exalted as a substitute for the spiritual power of the Son of God it will at last destroy the very thing it sought to improve.

YE MUST BE BORN AGAIN—is our formula that will never be changed. Even when Christ comes back to earth, as he will one of these days, to completely establish his rule and Kingdom, it will still be true "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

Jesus Christ was our Substitute, but there is no substitute for Jesus Christ. He alone can save. Until men learn this they know nothing in spiritual concerns.

IN THIS NUMBER

Call Jesus Lord by the Holy Spirit

—Editor, . . . . .

Editorial Review, . . . . .

Some Brethren Church Leaders—M.

M. Shively, . . . . .

They Have Given! Have We?—F.

C. Vanator, . . . . .

God's Dealings with His Own—Florence Gribble, . . . . .

The Voice of Blood—Robert Strong,

Significant News and Views, . . . . .

Studies in the Scriptures—C. F.

Yoder, . . . . .

The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon, . . . . .

The Art of Teaching—K. M. Monroe, . . . . .

Editor's Notes on the S. S. Lesson, . . . . .

Christian Endeavor Week—E. M.

Riddle, . . . . .

A Week's Tithe for Krypton—H. W.

Koontz, . . . . .

The General Secretary's Appeal—

Gladys Spice, . . . . .

Letter from Miss Carter, . . . . .

News from the Field, . . . . . 12-

The Tie that Binds, . . . . .

In the Shadow, . . . . .

Announcements, . . . . .

Business Manager's Corner, . . . . .

GEORGE S. BAER

Editor

R. R. TEETER

Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Call Jesus Lord by the Holy Spirit

Paul declares that no man can call Jesus Lord but by the Holy Spirit. In other words, the natural man cannot really know Jesus; by the Holy Spirit can reveal him. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. Paul knew this by experience. Had he not been acquainted with Jesus the man and looked upon him as a great teacher, but could see no more in him? And when Jesus did not behave as a mere man should and when his followers treated him as a man, did he not become incensed over what seemed to him a pious fraud and set out to crush the heresy? But in the midst of the trial of his persecution, the Holy Spirit laid hold of his heart and he became suddenly able to hear the voice of Jesus and to call him "Lord." Henceforth he was to Paul very much more than a teacher; in very truth he was the Son of God and his Savior and Lord. Learning cannot enable a person to know Jesus so as to call him Lord. If any man should ever have been able to know the Lord Jesus by means of the abundance of his intellectual attainments, that man was Saul the Pharisee, who had been schooled in all laws and customs of the Jews and in all the philosophies of the Greeks. He was possibly the greatest intellectual giant of his time and undoubtedly the most scholarly man among the Jews, outstripping in his famous teacher, Gamaliel. But with all his learning he did see nothing more in Jesus than an ambitious, well-meaning, misguided Jewish teacher. It took the Holy Spirit to open his eyes to the real truth and cause him to see and to call Jesus Lord. It is just as futile for men of learning today to attempt to figure out who Jesus is, except for the Holy Spirit. The worldly educated man, however learned, can no more look into the face of God and see the revelation of the Father without the interpretive influence of the Spirit of truth, than the naked eye of man can behold the fact of the distant star and read the character of its light and the course and speed of its flight without the aid of the telescope. It is simply beyond his powers of perception. No man can hope to answer by much learning the question as to who Jesus is or to teach men concerning his Lordship, if his mind has not been enlightened and his heart warmed by the presence of the Holy Spirit.

Where knowledge of the Scriptures will not enable one to call Jesus Lord. One might learn the Scriptures by heart and become familiar with every event in his life and every recorded word that came from his lips and yet not know Jesus as Lord. Saul the Pharisee knew the Hebrew scriptures as few men did and doubtless was acquainted with the Messianic prophecies and the claims of Christ as proclaimed by Stephen and the Apostles, but could not call Jesus Lord until he had experienced the renewing and revealing power of the Holy Spirit. Jesus as Lord is not a mere fact of history that one may know and evaluate as one might know Caesar or Napoleon. The historicity of Jesus is beyond question, but the fact that at the center of the Christian religion there is a living person is of no small significance. But to know all that can be known about the historical Jesus does not thereby enable one to call him Lord. Jesus as Lord is far more than a person of history; he is a great spiritual Being, a living Presence, a vital reality in the daily life, made perceptible by the operating influence of the Holy Spirit. He who has not given place to the Spirit of God has not known Jesus as Lord.

One may be a member of the church today and yet not know Jesus as Lord. To be sure one of the usual requirements of church membership is to confess Jesus as the Lord and Savior of mankind, but not all such confessions are made sincerely and intentionally, and not all are made in faith. If with the mouth confession is to be made unto salvation, with the heart a man must truly believe unto righteousness, or the whole process is empty and meaningless. He who joins the church in thoughtless insincerity is entitled to nothing thereby. He has the form of godliness, but lacks, the power and vitality thereof. If the soul speak not the words, the tongue had better keep silent. If the heart has not laid hold on the Son of God by faith, the lips cannot truly call him Lord, and no membership in the visible church can change the situation.

We need to know Jesus as Lord and Christian people need to be able to present him as Lord. We need that more than anything else. A speaker recently emphasized the need of presenting Jesus as man, a man much like the men of our day, claiming that by so doing his power over men would be increased. If he was right, then Paul was wrong. It is true that the humanity of Jesus must not be forgotten in our teaching, but if we allow him to rest on the plane of a mere man, he will fail in his mission as Savior and Lord. It is not the man but the God-man who saves men, and no one can call Jesus Lord but by the Holy Spirit.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

"God hath made of one blood"—that is the touchstone of brotherhood.

Sacrifices are necessary to emancipate the soul from selfishness and from the love of and dependence upon physical things.

The liquor traffic is a lawless institution; it never obeyed the law and never will.

However we may wish to explain the purpose of baptism, still the words of Jesus remain, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

The Business Manager has a message in his department this week. Among other things he announces the mailing of the Annuals this week.

Brother Frank Gehman of Krypton, Kentucky, says he is unable to send clothing bags to folks who fail to send both name and address. Some one please help him out by sending the address you failed to send.

Sunday school workers, especially adult workers, will be interested in the article that Prof. Stuckey provides this week for his page. Dr. K. M. Monroe, Adult Division Superintendent, is the writer and his theme is "The Art of Teaching."

The editor is pleased to resume this week the monthly messages of Dr. Shively on "Brethren Leaders of Yesterday," but is sorry not to have been able to secure a cut or picture of the late Brother R. Z. Replogle, who is the subject of Dr. Shively's sketch this week.

Send your offerings taken on Publication Day, January 25th to Brethren Publishing Company, Ashland, Ohio, and mark them "Publication Day Offering." Do it promptly after the offering has been lifted and you will make glad the heart of the Business Manager, Dr. R. R. Teeter.

Brother Homer Anderson has not written for the Evangelist for a long time, but he writes an interesting letter this week. He has been serving the Pleasant Grove, Iowa, congregation for more than two years as pastor. During the year just closed, nine were added to the church by baptism. He says interest is increasing of late and signs of new life are to be seen in this old but staunch and fruitful rural church.

The first reminder of the year about General Conference comes to us this week from Brother Freeman Ankrum, secretary of the Executive Committee. He is right when he says it is not too soon for the various organizations that are to have a place on the Conference program to begin formulating their departmental programs. It has been said that a hint to the wise is sufficient. Wonder if it will be?

We are informed that all money for the Benevolence Board is to be sent to Rev. G. L. Maus, Roann, Indiana, who is the newly elected secretary of this Board. Rev. Fred C. Vanator is the president of the Board and Mr. Frank Roseoe is the treasurer. But do not forget to make a note in your memorandum book that the money for the superannuated ministers is to be sent to Brother Maus at the above mentioned address. Every pastor and church treasurer should have this address.

Brother R. I. Humberd has placed in our hands a neatly printed pamphlet of 18 pages, which he has written on "The Virgin Birth," illustrated with a chart. This is an important item of our common faith and is a doctrine on which many are seeking more light. Many of our readers will recall Brother Humberd's treatment of the theme in his "Studies in the Scriptures" last year. Those desiring a copy of this thoughtful study may secure it directly from Brother Humberd, as per his advertisement in this issue.

Brother L. A. Myers, the faithful pastor of the church at Morrill, Kansas, reports his church having gotten started off well in the new year. The pastor and family were given an expression of good will at the Christmas season. The church and its various departments are maintaining good interest. Four new members have been added to the church recently, two by letter and two by baptism. The Sunday school and the W. M. S. are given special commendation for their successful leadership in their lines, and helpfulness to the church.

Brother H. H. Rowsey, of Falls City, Nebraska, in a personal note to the editor, says the work of his parish is moving forward in an encouraging way. The attendance at the church services is "better than ever before," he has "received more members by baptism than ever before, the Sunday school is taking rapid strides forward" and "the Sisterhood of Mary and Martha hopes to be the largest in the brotherhood soon." He says they "have always had a flourishing W. M. S. and his good people are giving him the most loyal and hearty cooperation. The enthusiasm of Brother and Sister Rowsey must be contagious, they are getting it, and that certainly means success.

Brother W. S. Crick writes of the progress of the work at Fremont, Ohio, where he is the much appreciated pastor. Important among the events reported was the Annual Homecoming and Anniversary service, when Brother S. C. Henderson was the special speaker of the day and when $336.50 were raised to apply on the building debt. This is not a large church, but it is large in courage and strong in determination to keep steadily on whittling away at their church debt, and one of these days they will have it down to the point where they will be able to take care of themselves without the aid of mission money. The church closed the year with all bills for current expenses paid and with plans effected for insuring against deficit for months to come.

Brother D. R. Murray, pastor of the Cooperative Brethren church at Columbus, Ohio, is not only making good use of his Rotospeed by sending out monthly messages and announcements of the month's church program, but is making use of some of the masterpieces of religious art printed in colors. His pastoral letter announcing the communion service has a beautiful multi-colored reproduction of DeVincenti's painting of the Lord's Supper pasted in a tasteful arrangement at top of his letter. That reminds us that Brother H. H. Rowsey of Falls City, Nebraska, used colored inks in reproducing Christmas and New Year's illustrations in the church calendars he ran off on his Rotospeed. We mention these by way of suggestions to other pastors.

Christian Endeavor department is considerably extended this week over what it customarily is, and it is primarily due to the fact that Christian Endeavor Week is just ahead of us and there are many things that need to be said about it by our national officers and others interested. This week not only do President Riddle, Stewardship Superintendent Koontz, and Secretary Spice have messages, but a very interesting letter is published from Miss Lyda Carter, Endeavor-Missionary at Krypton, Kentucky. A real Christian Endeavorer will certainly find it hard to maintain his standing before his own conscience and the eyes of fellow Endeavorers without cooperating in the tithing program for Christian Endeavor Week.

Of more than ordinary interest is the fact of the death of Mrs. John A. Myers, or Mother Myers, as she is widely known. Brother G. T. Ronk records it this week among the obituaries and her pastor, Brother H. W. Anderson, makes comment about it in his new letter. She passed to her reward on December 4, 1930, and a rich reward it must have been, judging from the contribution she made to the kingdom of God. She has given two daughters to foreign missions and one son was an applicant for service abroad. Her daughter, Estella Myers, was one of the group to pioneer the missionary enterprise in Africa. May God bless the memory of such a mother to the good of all, as well as to the inspiration of her children. This obituary, along with others, has been delayed in publication for three weeks on account of the crowded condition of the news department.

If you are planning to put your church on the Evangelist Honor Roll, do it now. If you cannot complete it before the close of January and will write us, we will allow you the special rates for new subscribers, if you will complete your canvass of homes in the very near future. To Christian Endeavorers who may wish to put the Evangelist in the homes of their members, we will extend the special rates through Christian Endeavor week. One new subscription $1.35. One renewal and one new both for $3.00. Renew your place on the Honor Roll at the regular Honor Roll rates and if you do it immediately, all new subscriptions included may be paid for at the $1.35 rate. One man recently paid for nine new subscriptions out of his own pocket for the sake of the cause. Others are making gift subscriptions at the special rate, but only one new with each renewal is allowed at the special rate. Let us have every church canvassed that is not now a 100 per cent subscriber. Your time is short. Do it now.

Brother George A. Copp, prominent leader among our Virgin churches, writes that he has been a subscriber to The Evangelist for forty-six years. We congratulate him on his record. The late E. L. Yoder and Brother A. L. Garber were the editors in 1885 when he became a subscriber, and Brother Garber, we are glad to say, is still actively engaged in the printing and publishing business in Ashland. He also calls up some interesting early experiences in Maryland and Virginia and in doing so he does a service to all of this later generation. It is both interesting and helpful to be made acquainted with the pioneering experiences of those who laid the groundwork for present-day success and convenience. Those who shared in those early experiences are becoming few with each succeeding year, but we are glad to note that as many remain as do. Perhaps there are other long-time readers who have some interesting experiences to recount. Thanks to you, Brother Copp.

Brother W. R. Deeter writes of his work at Carleton, Nebraska, where both he and his wife are linked up with a heavy and varied program. We are glad to note that all the special days have been observed and offerings lifted. The financial depression has hit the section rather hard, but the church is not despairing under the weight of it. The Methodist and Brethren churches of that village have decided to cooperate under the services of one pastor and Brother Deeter is serving the two, giving half time to each church and the churches going 50-50 on the expenses. Each church is maintaining its own distinct organization and denominational doctrines and practices. But it appears that they have a conservative theological viewpoint in common. This is not a wholly unique experiment of this sort within our church, but it is still quite new and we shall be interested in observing how it pans out. It is producing increased interest, and doubtless a lightening of financial burdens, and if the spirit of loyalty to denominational ideals can be successfully maintained with such an arrangement, it may point the way to the solution of problems for others of our hard pressed village churches. May God bless the faithful pastor in his leadership.

Some Brethren Church Leaders of Yesterday, as I Knew Them

XXV—Elder R. Z. Replogle

By Dr. Martin Shively

He is remembered by men of my own age as a long time resident of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, an enthusiastic and everlasting champion of the prohibition of the liquor traffic, a faithful and helpful member of all the general conferences, and district conferences of his own state, a thorough believer in and lover of the whole Book, a wholehearted and constant friend of all who responded to the name of "Brethren." He was born near New Enterprise, Pennsylvania, in 1846, and spent his early life there, on a farm, and by the way, his early relations to the church are indicated by the fact that the Annual Meeting of 1877 was held on that farm. During all the later years of his life, his home was in Johnstown, and after the terrible flood of 1889, in which he and his family were among those caught in the swirl of waters, he resided in the Westmont section of the city, high above the possibility of harm from the Conemaugh river or Stony Creek. But he lived over, again and again, that tragic event, as he recited the experiences of that catastrophe, inquiring friends, the horrors of which he and his family had faced, as his home was swept from its foundations, whirling round and round in the mad waters, until lodged against a solid school building, into which he and his family escaped. But not all in the house were so fortunate, for a guest in the home was drowned.

Brother Replogle became a Christian in 1876, and one gets an indication of his standing in the church in the fact that four years later he was chosen by his brethren to serve in the ministry, a field of service into which he entered with enthusiasm at once, and with much evidence of God's blessing. Early in his ministry there developed the church differences of opinion, which led at last to the unhappy division, a result which he with others tried hard to prevent, but when it came in spite of them, he cast his lot with the Brethren, and to the end of his days on earth, he remained a loyal son of that church. He attended all of the early conferences of the denomination, giving his counsel in the formulation of its policies, and serving as pastor of his home congregation at New Enterprise, and later served the church in Johnstown for a year. Still later he entered secular fields of endeavor but never wavered in his primary interests, which were always found in the church and its effort to evangelize the world.

I cannot recall just when I met Brother Replogle first, but I am pretty sure that it must have been at my first general conference, which was held at Ashland in 1887. I saw much of him in after years, for our paths crossed at each succeeding general gathering of the church, and it was my privilege to be a guest in his home at least several times. Next to his church, which stood as the visible representative of his God, he gave unstinted devotion to his family, rejoicing much with its members in the successes which crowned the efforts of each. The good that was in him was due to his loyalty to the God who made him, and the Redeemer who saved him, a fact which was peculiar to him alone, but is equally true of us all.

His last years were made less joyful to him because he had fallen a victim of apoplexy, which left him crippled, until the Lord called him from labor to reward. His body lies in the beautiful cemetery near his late home, and as he rests from his labors, and his works do follow him.

Ashland, Ohio.

They Have Given! Have We?

By Rev. Fred C. Vanator, President Benevolence Board

Yesterday they were presenting the message of the Gospel of the Son of God from our pulpits. Today they are waiting and watching to see if the church has forgotten their effort and sacrifices. Many of you who read these lines owe the fact of the impulse of the love of Christ coming into your heart to the preaching of these men of God who now have passed from the active ministry to what is known to us as the superannuated. Not because it is their desire, but rather because force of circumstances has compelled them to give up the active work.

Think back, if you will, a few years and see what they have done for the work of the church. Some who have been receiving the meager pittance which is supposed to stand for the appreciation which we as a church have voted to them, have already passed to the greater and better reward which the Lord has for his servants. But there are others who are still looking to us as a church to express our appreciation through the dollars which we give at the time of the Benevolent offering in the month of February. What are YOU going to do about it?

Not many days since I received a report of the distribution of this fund for the quarter ending in December. Permit me to let you brethren into a secret. Only about one-fourth of sufficient funds are available for the payment of the coming quarter. Now the Benevolence Board is your servant. But we can only distribute that which YOU SEND US TO DISTRIBUTE. We realize that this is a very close time. But we also realize that never before has the purse-strings and the heart been so touched as during these past days. We have given of both our abundance and out of our want. We have helped those who were less fortunate, feeling that it was a call of God to help. The task before us this year is to feel this next call of God to help our brothers and sisters who have given their best days to the propagation of the "Faith, once for all delivered to the saints."

Brethren, we know not what we might say that would draw your attention to this needy field of labor. We simply say, put yourself in their place and then do as you would like to be done by. Share with them that which God in his infinite mercy has seen fit to deliver to you for your work as a steward of the manifold mercies of God.

As I said in the beginning, some of these for whom we ask your assistance are undoubtedly men and women who have meant much to your lives and Christian experience. Would you turn them away now? Would you forget their need?

We are asking that the offering for Benevolences be taken either February 15th or 22nd. When sending in your offering please note that the Board has been reorganized and all money for the Benevolences, (some call it the Superannuated Fund), is to be sent to

Rev. G. L. Maus Secretary, Roann, Indiana.

Do not send it to anyone else for it will make it necessary to forward such money to Brother Maus. Please note this and inform your officers as to the change.

Brethren, we leave the matter in your hands. Give in Jesus' Name.

Peru, Indiana.

The value of the Bible lies in its message. A Christian may spoil his testimony by a single mistake in living; the Bible message stands as it is written, and shines by its own light.—Shearer.

God's Dealings With His Own

By Dr. Florence N. Gribble

God is a God of benediction. He loves to bless. He has many ways of visiting blessings upon his own, and yet many as are these ways, we may perhaps form of them a brief and simple classification.

God deals with his own in addition. In Acts 2:41 we find one stupendous example of his addition. On the day if Pentecost there were added to the church three thousand souls. Further on in the chapter we find that "the Lord added to the church daily, such as should be saved," and in Acts 5:14, "and believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women." In Acts 11:24 again we find a reference to God's beneficent dealing with his own in addition—"much people was added to the Lord."

But God is not alone a God of addition. He is as well a God of subtraction. Job learned this when he said—"The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord." Are we willing to receive God's blessings in addition and not in subtraction? Yes, we are willing, had we our own choice, that he should not deal with us in subtraction. The bride who stands joyously at the altar, as the joy of home and husband is added unto her, shrinks from the subtraction of the grave. The mother who receives with loving arms the little one tenderly laid therein on the day of its birth, shrinks as later she stands by the death-bed of that same little one. Yes, we long for addition, we shrink from subtraction. We only learn true depths of Christian rejoicing when we realize that God's thoughts are not as our thoughts. For him oftentimes subtraction is addition. When our loved ones for example are absent from the body, they are present with the Lord, added unto him. The sorrowing mother who stands tremblingly by the sick bed of her darling child, can find swift and sweet comfort, whatever may be the outcome of the illness, if she will but remember that sweet and precious promise "they also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Thus her child is added, not only to God himself, but in his perfect time again to her in the fullest and completest restoration.

And then, God deals with his people in multiplication. In Genesis 17:2 we have the promise "I will multiply thy seed," and in Genesis 22:17 "in multiplying I will multiply thy seed." We are willing that God should multiply. Let him multiply our friends, let him multiply our comforts, let him multiply our blessings, let him multiply our usefulness, let us walk before him rejoicing. And this is well. Let us accept multiplication when multiplication is God's will for us.

But are we willing for the division and separation which comes when loved ones leave us for mission fields, especially for those regions beyond which are found the remotest frontiers of the earth? If not, let us learn that God deals with his own in division. Not alone in permitting separation, but in many other ways. In 1 Cor. 12:11 we find, "dividing to every man severally as he will." In Galatians 2 we find that not only does God divide his gifts, but that he sometimes calls upon us to stand in defense of his own principles and his highest will, although it may mean seeming division from beloved and honored fellow workers in the Lord. What if Paul at Jerusalem had said "I will go with the majority?" What if he had been unwilling for the division which placed him with the Lord Jesus alone? What if he had been unwilling to say "I will hold to the Head," but had held to some lesser part of the church which is his body? What if the long array of martyrs had felt that schism in the church was a thing not to be tolerated, had yielded to the major and bowed to the edicts of man? Let us rejoice that they were willing to suffer death, to suffer martyrdom, in order that God might be magnified. "Religion," said a famous French woman, as she went to the scaffold, "hundreds of crimes are perpetrated in thy name." Let us remember that one and God are a majority, let us remember that unity is essentially with the Lord Jesus, and while we never divide ourselves because of personal preference or opinion from our brethren, let us cling to him at whatever cost what division or separation it may from others.

Yes, God deals with his own in all the processes of arithmetic, and, as we have seen that with God subtraction is often addition, so we shall see that with him also division is often multiplication. Thus has it become that throughout all ages "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church." The division of the soul from the body; the division of the beloved member of the family from home; the division of one who holds to the Lord Jesus from the erring remnant of the church; all these things have always been and shall always be eternal multiplication.

There is a glad day coming when all subtraction shall be reversed; when all division shall be inverted; and when added to the Lord, we shall rejoice throughout eternity in his presence, in company with his multiplied and completed church, when we shall forget that God ever had deal with us in subtraction and division, and when we shall cry, "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honor and glory forever and ever."

The Voice of Blood

By Robert Strong

Delivered at the First Brethren Church, Long Beach, California

It is said that the ropes and cords of the British navy in the days of sailing ships were identified as his Majesty's property by a red strand woven in their center. Wherever a rope was cut, the red thread would be seen. The Word of God has a red line of another kind running through it: the red line of blood. From Genesis to Revelation the subject of blood finds a prominent place; it is one of the chief elements revealing the marvelous work of the Holy Scriptures.

The Pattern

The first direct mention of blood is in the story of Cain and Abel, Genesis 4. Abel by faith offered an acceptable sacrifice to God. Cain's was rejected and he himself was rebuked by the Lord. In a fit of jealous rage Cain struck his brother down, killing him. And the Lord said to Cain, "What hast thou done? The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground." The first human blood spilled in a wilful act of violence became a voice crying to God for justice and judgment.

From that day to this the voice of blood has appealed to God for retribution. Every drop of blood shed in crime and violence has cried out, as did Abel's, to be avenged. War has exacted a fearful toll of blood. Still on the great battlefields of France, the Somme, the Marne, Verdun. Silent and peaceful they may now seem, yet had we but ears to hear we should be deafened by the awful cry going up from them. It is the voice of blood of thousands upon thousands of slain soldiers crying, "O God, avenge our blood upon the instigators of this horror, war!" And even the blood of the gentle martyrs, many of whom died forgiving their persecutors, appeals to God for justice upon the unrepentant. In Revelation ions 6:9, 10 we hear them say, "How long, O Lord, y and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood?" e universal cry of the shed blood of the human race is judgment. The voice of blood is a vengeful and morous one; its din is ever increasing. Perhaps the y of God's answer to it is not now far distant.

The Plea of the Blood of Christ

There is one exception to the rule that the cry of shed od is always an appeal for retribution. The plea of the od of our Lord Jesus Christ is for mercy, not jus- e; for forgiveness, not vengeance. Hear the very e; for forgiveness, not vengeance. Hear the very words the Savior as the blood spurted from his wounded l-pierced hands and feet: "Father, forgive them." ose divine words are a key to the meaning of Calvary. ontrast to the voice of Abel's blood, the shed blood of rist appeals for mercy; and it secures it. By virtue of e shed blood of his Son, God can and does forgive sin- s, whose sin caused Christ to die for them. "The blood Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7).

The Purpose of Its Shedding

It is sadly true that there are many who profess to see te a different meaning in the death of Christ. Some nk he died a martyr to a sublime ideal, a helpless vic- n of persecution. Others hold that Christ died as an ample of the love of God and that his life, not his uth, is of foremost value to the world. The Scriptures tain no such teaching. They set forth a very differ- purpose behind the shedding of Christ's blood.

From earliest times man, estranged from God by sin, roached him through the blood of sacrifice. Why was hat God respected Abel's offering and not Cain's? Abel faith came to God through the shed blood of a lamb. ay did the angel of death spare the firstborn of Israel he night he slew the firstborn of Egypt? Israel was der God's protection, which was symbolized by the od of a lamb sprinkled upon the doorposts. The whole the Old Testament system of worship was based on the d-ordained principle of blood atonement given in Levit- s 17:11: "the life of the flesh is in the blood: and I ve given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement your souls; for it is the blood that maketh atonement the soul." God's Word says that "without the shed- g of blood is no remission" (Heb. 9:22). Every Old tament sacrifice was an acknowledgment of the guilt attendant penalty of sin and of the substitutionary sacrificial aspect of atonement. The Passover and all ceeding sacrifices were as index fingers pointing ahead the one perfect Sacrifice of Calvary. And how strik- ly these sacrifices testify of Christ! The burnt offer- , for example, speaks of our Savior suffering the fires death for his own. The sin offering foreshadows One p should bear in his own body our sins. The peace ring typifies him who made our peace with God ough his atoning death.

Hebrews 10:4 teaches us that such animal sacrifices ld never "take away" sins. These sacrifices availed, ever, to "cover" them (which is the meaning of the brew word translated "atone") in anticipation of the rifice of Christ, the Lamb of God. That was why sac- ces had to be continually made; new sins required new rifices. But when the infinite, sinless Son of God died the cross, his death made possible for all men final complete salvation from sin. Thus we learn from He- ws 10:14: "For by one offering he hath perfected for- v them that are sanctified."

The Preciousness of the Blood of Christ

The blood is the life, the Scripture says. When the Lord Jesus shed his blood, he gave his life (the life of the Second Person of the Godhead!) as a sacrifice for sin. This gives to the blood of Christ its inconceivable value; it is the price paid for our salvation. So it is we can say: "In him we have redemption through his blood" (Eph. 1:7); for we believe in "Christ Jesus whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood for the remission of sins" (Rom. 3:25). True believers know through definite experience the soul-cleansing power of the Blood. It avails for them today as effectually as for the apostles of old.

The shed blood of Christ has made peace between us and God; has opened a new and living way of access to the Father; has washed us from our sins; has made it constantly possible to obtain cleansing from the sins of each day; has purchased our very bodies which are one day to be endowed with immortality. It is little wonder that Peter speaks of it as the "precious blood" of Christ (1 Pet. 1:19). We joyfully echo his words, for we know that every spiritual blessing that is ours was made avail- able for us by the shed blood of our Lord Jesus Christ.

If we esteem the blood of Christ, much more does Heaven. There our risen Lord by virtue of his atoning work ministers effectually as our Advocate with the Father, ever making intercession for us. And as we see in Rev. 5:9, it is the fact that he shed his blood for the world that will make the Lamb worthy to open the "sealed book," the "title deed" to the Earth, and assume the hon- ors pertaining to his terrestrial Kingdom. Christ "be- came obedient unto death, wherefore God hath highly ex- alted him."

It is eternally true that the Blood of Christ appeals to God for mercy upon all who by faith claim itt sin-cleans- ing power. Let no man, however, dare to hold the Sav- ior's blood in light esteem. It was a fearful price to pay for human redemption and God's righteous wrath will be visited upon the one who dares to disdain the precious blood of his Son. "He that despised Moses' law died with- out mercy. . . . Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing? It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." There, in Hebrews 10:28-31, we have God's esti- mate of the blood of Christ. Only through the Blood is there salvation. Faith in Christ who gave his blood, his very life, for man's sin, alone can save. Whoever spurns God's mercy in Christ, upon him irrevocably will come God's wrathful judgment.

An English preacher riveted the attention of every per- son in his congregation one Sunday morning when, in con- cluding a sermon upon the subject of salvation from sin, he said, with telling emphasis and deliberation: "There is a question asked in the Word of God that the demons of Hell, if we could put it to them, could not answer. Neither is there a man upon earth who could reply to it. And if, somehow, we should be able to enter Heaven this morn- ing and reverently ask Almighty God to answer it, he would say, 'It is unanswerable!' My friends, this is the the question: 'How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?'" That same question needs to be challeng- ingly asked today of every individual: FRIEND, HOW WILL YOU ESCAPE IF YOU NEGLECT SO GREAT SALVATION?

Long Beach, California.

Missionaries have brought the nations of the East in closer touch with the nations of the West. They carry only the good of the West to the East. It is commerce that carries the evil.—Anon.

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

CRIME COSTS UNITED STATES FIVE BILLION DOLLARS A YEAR

Dr. William Healy, of the Judge Baker Foundation, of Boston, and the Yale Institute of Human Relations, in an address at Wesleyan University, December 5, speaking on "The Psychological and Social Origins of Crime," said that at any one time 100,000 persons in this country were in correctional institutions, and he placed the annual cost of crime to the nation at $5,000,000,000.

"Crime is peculiarly a phenomenon of companionship and of youth," he said. "Delinquent trends appear between the ages of fourteen and sixteen and crime reaches a peak in the age group between twenty and twenty-four. The extent to which it is a phenomenon of companionship is shown by the fact that 90 per cent of juvenile delinquents commit their offenses in companies of two or more. Crime also is a phenomenon of youth. The great majority of offenders repeat their offenses. There is always a large similarity between their early crimes and their last."—The Evangelical-Messenger.

NEWSPAPER PUBLICITY

We were pleased to learn that Mr. Lindbergh had at last protested in good earnest against a certain kind of newspaper publicity he and his family had been receiving. When some reporters followed him on his honeymoon and for eight hours, in a noisy motorboat, circled about his boat at anchor in a New England harbor, it was vulgarity of a bestial stripe. And when another reported attempted to bribe a servant with $2,000 to "betray family secrets," it is regrettable that he could not have been indicted and jailed.

The newspapers have greatly aided Mr. Lindbergh in his promotion of air travel, but there is a line to be drawn between that and personal curiosity. We are not surprised that some reporters should be found willing to do such work, but we are certainly surprised that editors would give space to their indecencies in their columns. It gives us another opportunity or occasion to say that our estimate of public men if gathered only from newspapers, ought commonly to be held in abeyance until we learn more.—Moody Monthly.

IS YOUR RELIGION CATCHING?

Religion is contagious. Perhaps that sounds as if religion is a disease. But this would be a sorry world indeed if disease were the only thing that could be caught. Good things are as contagious as bad things—even more so. You catch smiles, don't you? When a child smiles at you, the most natural thing in the world is to smile in return. One would have to be badly soured if he did not respond in kind to a smile. When you are all gloom and you meet a cheerful person, your gloom vanishes in spite of yourself, and you have actually caught the sunshine from the heart of your friend. You catch cheer because cheer is catching. And it is something to which you are susceptible. When you meet a religious person you begin, pretty soon, to be religious also—if you are not already religious. It is to be admitted that there are some kinds of religion one is not likely to catch. But the kind one does catch is the kind he will want to catch—the attractive kind that makes one want to be good, that warms the heart and drives away the blues. If you have that kind somebody is sure to catch it from you. If your religion isn't catching, there is something wrong with it. And it is well enough that the wrong kinds of religion are not catching.—Religious Telescope.

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

What is the origin of the day of rest?

"God blessed the seventh day and hallowed it" (Gen. 2:2,3).

How did man lose his rest?

"Inasmuch as thou hast eaten of the tree ... in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread" (Gen. 3:17-18).

When was man again given the day of rest?

"On Mount Sinai thou didst ordain thy sabbath" (Deut. 5:13, 14).

What special day did the seventh day sabbath commemorate?

"Remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that Jehovah thy God brought thee out with a strong hand and outstretched arm; therefore Jehovah commanded thee to keep the sabbath day" (Deut. 5:15).

From what works must we rest in order to enter the kingdom of God?

"For he that hath entered into his rest hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his" (Heb. 4:10).

How then are we saved?

"Not by works of righteousness that we have done, but by his mercy he saved us, by the laver of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit" (Tit. 3:5).

Why must we abandon the righteousness of the law in order to have rest?

"Not by works lest any man should boast" (Eph. 2:9).

Why did not the Israelites enter into this rest?

"They did not enter because of disobedience" (Heb. 4:2-6).

When they lost their promised rest did they also lose the symbol of that rest, their sabbath?

"I will make to cease your joy, your feasts, your solemnities and your sabbaths and all your festivities" (Lev. 23:38).

Why was the sabbath called "perpetual" if it was to be abolished?

"Let no man judge you in respect to ... the sabbath, which are a shadow of things to come, but the body of Christ" (Col. 2:16, 17).

What prophecy indicates that there will be a perpetual spiritual rest?

"From month to month and from sabbath to sabbath shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the Lord" (Isa. 66:23).

In making the seventh day sabbath to cease did God change his word?

"If thou wilt not hear the voice of Jehovah, not among the nations shall thou rest" (Deut. 28:15).

"My sabbaths they greatly profaned" (Ezek. 20:13).

When their sabbath ceased did the promise of rest cease?

"There remaineth a rest for the people of God" (Heb. 4:1).

Who are the people of God?

"Begotten to a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from among the dead, ye who in time past were no people, now are the people of God" (1 Pet. 1:3; 2:10).

Does "the people of God" include both Jews and Gentiles?

"By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether Jews or Greeks" (1 Cor. 12:13).

How, then, do we enter into that rest?

"We who believe do enter into rest" (Heb. 4:3).

Do believers have the same day of rest as before?

"If Joshua had given them rest he would not then have spoken of ANOTHER DAY" (Heb. 4:8).

By whom was this other day announced?

"He (God) again determines a certain day, saying through David" (vs. 7).

Where does David speak of this "another day" of rest?

"This is the day that the Lord hath made. We will be glad and rejoice in it" (Psalm 118:24).

To what day does he refer?

The day when "the stone which the builders rejected"

the same is become the head of the corner" (vs. 22).
Who is the stone rejected by the builders?
 "Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom God raised from the dead ... is the stone set at naught by you builders, which become the head of the corner" (Acts 4:10, 11).
Why was the stone placed as head of the corner?
 "Was declared to be the Son of God with power by his resurrection from the dead" (Rom. 1:4).
Was the resurrection a sign to the Jews?
 "No sign shall be given to this generation (race) but the sign of the prophet Jonah, for as the prophet Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth" (Mt. 12:39).
What relation has the resurrection to our salvation?
 "He hath regenerated us to a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead" (1 Pet. 1:3).
Why should we worship God in this new day of rest?
 "The true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth" (Jn. 4:23).
What is the way in which John kept the day?
 "I John was in the Spirit on the Lord's day" (Rev. 1:10).
What is this communion of the Spirit the rest that was promised?
 "In strange tongues will he speak to this people to whom he said: this is the rest" (Isa. 28:1-12). "When the day of Pentecost was fully come ... they were all filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak in other tongues" (Acts 1:1-4, 11).
What is this rest in the Spirit manifested?
 "The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made us free from the law of sin and of death" (Rom. 8:2).
Why does he liberate us from the law of sin?
 "Walk in the Spirit and ye shall not fulfill the law of flesh" (Gal. 5:16).
Why does he free us from the law of death?
 "If ye are guided by the Spirit ye are not under the law" (Gal. 5:18).
What is this dispensation do we have work first or rest first?
 "Ye are saved by faith (first), created in Christ Jesus unto good WORKS (second) (Eph. 2:8-10).
What is the order of the law?
 "Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, saying that the man who DOES these things (first) shall LIVE by them" (second) (Rom. 10:5).
What fatal error do they commit who keep the Jewish Sabbath?
 "Being ignorant of the righteousness of God, and going about to establish their own righteousness, they have not subjected themselves to the righteousness of God" (Rom. 10:3).
Why is the error fatal?
 "Ye are empty of Christ ye who would justify yourselves by the law; ye have fallen from grace" (Gal. 5:4).
Why do believers fulfill the law?
 "All the law is fulfilled in one word, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" (Gal. 5:14).
What should we do when Judaizers try to make us return to the law?
 "Debates concerning the law avoid for they are unprofitable" (Tit. 3:9).
What does Paul call the law?
 "Be not entangled again in the YOKE OF BONDAGE" (Gal. 5:1).
What is the yoke that gives us rest?
 "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls" (Matt. 11:29).

(To be continued)

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Mark 14:1, 2; Matt. 23:13. How different might have been the history of the Jews, and of the whole world, if it had not been for the jealous scheming of the priests and scribes! The common people were so eager to follow him that the priests feared an uproar if it should become known that they had taken him. The woe pronounced in Matthew 23:13 was spoken against all who place any obstacle whatever between men and their Savior. Dear Lord, may we never, by word or deed, do anything that will rob men of their Savior; may we rather go forth proclaiming that the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which is lost.

TUESDAY

Mark 14:3-9. There are many mentioned in the Scriptures who are remembered only because of the cruel indignities they heaped upon the Son of God. From John 12:1 it appears that the woman who anointed Jesus was Mary, the sister of Martha and Lazarus. How much better to be remembered because we have done the best we could with what we had than to be remembered for our blasphemous mistreatment of the Master! May he be able to say of each one of us in that day when we shall all stand before him, that we have done what we could!

WEDNESDAY

Mark 14:12-16. Jesus knows just where every disciple of his may be found, knows his circumstances, and just how willing he is to give of his self and substance for the cause of the Master. He told his disciples just where they would find such a man, gave them a sign by which they would recognize him, and when they had gone they found everything even as he had told them. The unknown disciple furnished the room and undoubtedly helped prepare the passover meal which Jesus never ate, and he too is remembered for this blessed service. It is reassuring, too, to remember that no matter what the errand, when we go at his command we shall find everything even as he said.

THURSDAY

Mark 14:17-21. What a season of uneasy heart-searching must have followed for the twelve, at Jesus' words! Probably none of them suspected Judas any more than they suspected themselves. To be sure, none of the eleven thought they would ever do such a thing, but Jesus had said it would be one of them. May we ever search our hearts, making sure that we shall in no wise betray our Lord and Master!

FRIDAY

Mark 14:22-25. What a precious symbol Jesus left for the Christian church in this ordinance! Whenever we take part in it we call to mind the sufferings of Jesus, his body that was broken in place of mine, his blood that was shed for me. With this precious symbol he has linked an equally precious promise: some day he will drink a new covenant with his people in the kingdom of God. How all who love him should look forward to that day!

SATURDAY

Mark 14:26-31. How we should love him as we realize how well he knew what lay just before him and yet went forth calmly that he might give his life a ransom for us all. He spoke of his death and of his rising again, and yet they sang a hymn and went out!

As we think of Peter's bitter experience, we are reminded how false is any hope placed in ourselves; let us trust only in him, and in his strength!

SUNDAY

Mark 14:32-42. We are not here concerned with the sleepy disciples, although they may well typify the church today. Let us rather think of Jesus' sorrow for the sin of the world—sorrow so great that he spoke of it as "unto death." Let us never forget that sin that could cause such sorrow and suffering to God's son is very real, a thing to be ever on guard against in our own lives, a thing to save others from. Let us, like the Master, pray!

W. I. DUKER,
President
Goshen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

The Art of Teaching

By Dr. K. M. Monroe, Adult Division Supt.

This is a subject in which every Sunday school teacher should be interested. There is a science of teaching which can supply us the mechanics of success, although we must have, along with the mechanics, the message of God's Word and a personal experience of Christ. Teaching is an art that cannot be mastered in a day nor a year. It is a life long study. Some teachers are born and others are made. Very often the teacher made is greater than the teacher born.

I. The Greatest Need of the Sunday School

1. A teacher with a definite experience of Christ as his Savior and Lord is needed for every Adult Bible Class. This need, we are sure, is fulfilled in the schools of our brotherhood and, therefore, it is not the greatest need of the present day.

2. A teacher with a prayer life in which he upholds before the throne of Grace, not only his own problems but also those of his class. Our teachers, realizing their responsibility in standing before their class Sunday after Sunday, and also cognizant of their imperfections and inabilities petition, doubtless day by day, for guidance of the Holy Spirit in presenting the Word. Prayer is needful; we do not have too much of it.

3. Every adult teacher should carefully prepare his lesson before endeavoring to teach it to others. All teachers could well study the Bibles more and yet, for the most part, the teachers know sufficient of the Bible to teach others.

In discussing the greatest need of our Sunday schools we have mentioned, in a negative way, three very important prerequisites of an adult teacher.

Positively we believe the greatest need of our Sunday schools is teachers who teach. Obviously it is true that a person may be called a Sunday school teacher and not be able to teach a class. His name may be on the record book as teacher because he has accepted an invitation to teach, but this fact does not make him a teacher in the true sense of the word.

Amos R. Wells splendidly sets forth our point in the foreword to his commendable little book entitled, "Teachers that Teach." He says, "There are teachers that do not teach. To say that they are in the majority would be to get oneself into trouble; therefore I will not say it. But, to put it in another way, there are multitudes of pupils that are not learning; and where the pupils are not learning, teachers are not teaching. The only evidence that a teacher has taught is a pupil who has learned."

II. What is Teaching?

1. Teaching is not telling. One of the most common errors on the part of Sunday school teachers is the tendency to think that telling a thing is teaching. It may be a part of the teaching process. "If you talk to a person and he does not hear, if you use language he cannot understand, if you tell him but he does not learn—there has been no teaching."

2. Teaching is not hearing a recitation. A person can only recite something he has previously learned. Recitation on the part of the class members may enter into the process of teaching but it, in itself, is not teaching.

3. Teaching is not commenting on the lesson. Many teachers accept the Sunday morning hour by commenting on the lesson sentence by sentence and verse by verse. Again this is an important step in the procedure but alone it is not teaching.

Does a teacher really teach when students do not learn?

If we accept the definition, "teaching is giving an opportunity to learn," we may answer that a teacher may be said to be teaching even if no one in the class is learning. However, rejecting the definition as being inadequate, we are compelled to confess that we do not teach unless our scholars learn. We would rather agree with H. Clay Trumbull who writes, "Teaching is that part of the twofold learning-process by which knowledge which, is yet outside of the learner's mind is directed toward that mind; and learning is that part of the same twofold process by which the knowledge taught is made the learner's own." This leads us to note that both the teacher and the student must be active upon the lesson. Part of the teaching process is to induce this activity on the part of each member of the class.

III. Essentials of Teaching

1. Know who you are to teach. Adult psychology should be studied by those who teach adults just as adolescent psychology must be studied by grade school teachers who instruct our children. This alone is a life long study but one that abundantly repays any who are willing to pay the price of mastery.

2. Know what you are to teach. Not only the immediate lesson under discussion, but gain a comprehensive knowledge of the plan, history, and spiritual teaching of the whole Bible. This requires hours and hours of systematic Bible study, but no teacher of adults should be content until he gains these objectives.

3. Know how you are to teach. It is just as important for our Sunday school teachers to know how to teach the Word of God as it is for our grade school teachers to know how to teach reading, writing and arithmetic.

As a Sunday school teacher you may believe yourself to be handicapped. Do not be discouraged! Do not give up! Handicaps are normal. Accept yours without surprise and make up your mind you will succeed in the art of teaching in spite of them.

Books are indispensable in the process of the mastery of the art of teaching. On the Gospel of Luke, which we will be studying almost entirely until next July there are two books we wish were in the hands of every Adult Bible Teacher of the brotherhood. First, "The Gospel of Luke," by C.

R. Erdman, $1.00. Second, "Studies on Four Gospels" by W. S. Moorehead, $2.00.

Also we may add that Ramsay's "Luke the Physician," $3.50, is most scholarly and gives late archaeological material bearing on the Gospel. It is well worth the price of careful study.

"Teachers that Teach" by Amos R. Wells, $1.00, will make any teacher, who cares to study same, better. These may be purchased from our Brethren National Sunday School Association, Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio.

Ashland, Ohio.

A TEACHER'S ODE TO LOVE

Though I teach with the skill of the greatest of teachers,
And have not love,
I am become a thing for mere display,
A discordant note in my School of Religion.

Though I am an artist in story, music, drama,
And though I have the keenest understanding of modern theories
Regarding democratic processes;
Though I have all faith so as to overcome the most stubborn obstacles to progress
And have not love,
It profiteth me nothing.

Though I give all my time and my resources to teaching,
And though I consume my strength in my work,
Yet have not love,
It profiteth me nothing.

Love suffereth patiently and is kind;
Love knoweth neither envy nor jealousy of other teachers,
Love is herself teachable;
Is not boastful of success.
Does not behave unbecomingly when methods are proposed,
Seeketh not to exploit the child for personal prestige;
Is not easily overwrought;
Doth not brood over slights,
Rejoiceth in that which is genuine and true.

Love patiently beareth discouragement.
She trusteth the best in children, her pupils,
for the best,
And confidently waiteth for the best to come.

Love never faileth.
Whether there be liberal or conservative theologies, they shall be changed;
Whether there be variant ideals of education, they shall be reconceived.
For we know but little and we teach imperfectly.
When that which is better is discovered, that which is surpassed should be discontinued.

When I was but a child in my own religion I spoke as a child,
I felt as a child and I thought in childish patterns.
Now that I am striving for religion worth of my years,
I should put away the prejudices of childishness.

Even yet I see as through a darkened mirror.
Some day I shall see clearly.
Now I know but in fragments
Then I shall know fully, even as fully as I am known.

abideth faith, hope, and love, these three, the greatest of these is love. Adapted by Sophia L. Fahs from the writings of St. Paul in the thirteenth chapter First Corinthians.

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for February 1)

Jesus, the Great Physician

Scripture Lesson—Luke 4:31 to 5:39.

Printed Text—Luke 4:38-44; 5:12-16.

Devotional Reading—Isa. 53:1-6.

Golden Text—Surely he hath borne our sorrows, and carried our sorrows.—Isa. 53:4.

Introductory Note

A gap of at least three months occurs between our last on the temptation of Jesus, which John inserts the early Judean ministry, John 1:19 to 4:54. There is also a transformation from Christ's preparation to actual accomplishment of the ministry. It is introduced by the Synoptics by a propylaeum of Jesus' message. Mk. 1:14-15; Mt. 4:12—ch. 7; Lu 4:14—ch. 5. Luke, instead of giving a summary of Jesus' teaching, inserts a sample of it in the Nazareth discourse, 4:16-30. After this he follows up the historical course of the life of Christ.

After being driven out of Nazareth he had spent nearly 30 years of his life. Jesus came to Capernaum, a city of Galilee, 4:31, and from that time on it was the point of departure on his missionary journeys, and to which he often returned. Mt. 9:1.—Illustrator.

Comments on the Text

Capernaum, 4:31-44. The leading incidents here are the casting out of a demon, 4:35; and the healing of Peter's wife's mother, vs. 38, 39; both of which are recorded in Mk. 1:21-31; the latter also in 3:14-18. Christ made his home at Capernaum, as simply stated by Mt. 4:13, and Lu. 4:23 tells us why he did so. As the case of demons, vs. 35, 41, notice: Demons know their ultimate fate. 2. They will not receive their testimony to Jesus though it be true, v. 35. 3. There is a distinction between them and the people they inhabit and control. But why are the people amazed? v. 36. To cast out demons was not new, Mt. 12:27; but Jesus' way and power which Jesus cast them out was altogether new. Jn. 3:2. Notice in 4:41, "He laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them," and also v. 43. "For labor it represents!"—Christian Work-Commentary.

Verse 38.—He rose up from the synagogue, in Capernaum, where he had been teaching on the Sabbath day. There were centers of worship in every village containing ten men. They were used also for day schools, and, since the elders were members of the community, centers of government too. Jesus' listeners had been astonished by his teaching. They were even more astonished at the evidence of his power and authority in his casting out "the spirit of an unclean demon" (verse 33). The house where he was a retreat and a home for him in Galilee. Andrew lived there too. Jesus was married, and afterwards took his journey on his travels (1 Cor. 9:5). Verse 39.—Matthew and Mark say that he took her hand. But Luke states that he did the same in the case of the fever as with the demon (verse 35)—rebuked it. These comments do not contradict but supplement each other. The physician-narrator was also impressed by the suddenness with which her strength returned. Her immediate ministering to them, at the table, and so on, was proof that the fever had completely left her, and none of the customary weakness remained.

Verse 40.—The sun was setting, marking the close of the Sabbath. Strict Jews could now bring their sick on pallets and beds. So solicitous was the Master for their relief that he laboriously laid his hands on every one of them as a symbol of the transmission of healing virtue. But he had no need to touch them. Sometimes he used only a word, especially in the case of demoniacs, and sometimes effected cures at a distance.

Verse 41.—Demons also came out, as well as diseases. Luke carefully distinguishes between diseases of mind and body, and "lends no support to the view that possession is merely a physical disorder." Professor Plummer says: "Our sources of information clearly, consistently, and repeatedly represent Christ as healing demoniacs by commanding demons to depart out of the afflicted persons."

He forbade their further testimony to his Messiahship. The time for such proclamation was not ripe, nor did he desire such testimony from demons. Besides his object was to relieve misery, not glorify himself.

Verse 42.—It was day, but so early that Mark says it was yet dark. Jesus came out of the house and sought the silence and solitude of a desert place, perhaps some retreat in the neighboring hills. The multitudes stirred by his teaching and healing, eagerly pursued him. Luke is fond of dwelling on the crowd's keen zest for following after Jesus. Notice that they persisted till they reached him, and then tried to prevent his going away.

Verse 43.—To the other cities also comes first in the text, emphasizing the Master's broader sense of moral obligation (I must). It was a rebuke to them, not for interrupting his preaching, but for trying to monopolize him. The subject of his preaching was the kingdom of God. This term is preferred by Mark and Luke, while Matthew is partial to the rabbinical "kingdom of heaven." The two are, however, interchangeable. Both were "good tidings."—Condensed and adapted from Church School Journal.

Verse 5:12. Full of leprosy. The physician was interested in the severity of the case—not a mild case but one of the most severe and advanced. Some who had contracted the disease might be cured by human means; a case like this was hopeless. He fell on his face. Mark says he knelt; Matthew that he worshiped. All three are expressions of the same act. Kneeling down he bowed his face to the ground, the common way of worshipping. If thou wilt thou canst. He has no doubt of Jesus' power to heal. His faith as to this was perfect. But he was not so sure that it was his purpose to concern himself with the outcast class of lepers.

Verse 13. He touched him. To aid his faith, to show his friendship in spite of his repulsive disease, and to teach him whence the healing came. This actual touching of a leper is a proof of the character of Jesus. The Jews were forbidden to do so, except the priests, who were the physicians. It made them unclean—the touch which would render a human being unclean would in his case heal and cleanse that which it touched. Notice that here again the cure was immediate and complete.

Verse 14. Tell no man. Jesus was not (Continued on page 15)

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Dubail Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
--	--	--

Christian Endeavor Week

(Special No. 2)

Aside from emphasizing the goals of the International Society, Brethren Endeavorers are placing emphasis upon the Krypton mission field in Kentucky again this year with renewed zeal. The officers of our union are convinced that we have a needy field and a worthy goal. Therefore, we have designated Christian Endeavor Week as the time this year for our Endeavorers and friends to bring their tithe for this one week, to support our pledge to Krypton, Kentucky.

Announce it, plan it, pray about it, give to it.

E. M. RIDDLE, President.

A Week's Tithe for Krypton

(Article No. 2)

Have you ever experienced the thrill in taking out a tenth of your income for the Lord? And, have you marvelled that the nine-tenths goes as far as the full amount and that you still have extra thank offerings to place in his service? Tithers from among every Christian Endeavor society will testify to the joy of practicing the stewardship of God's money. None would be willing to go back to the old method of giving God the left-overs.

As stewards of God's wealth we have the privilege of choosing where the tithe shall be used. Sometimes we waste God's money by our poor judgment. Our Christian Endeavor comes to you with a proposition that should appeal to every member as a good place to put a portion of his tithe. Christian Endeavor week comes this year January 25 to February 2. Your national officers are asking that each member of Christian Endeavor set aside his tithe for this week, the money to be used in support of the Krypton missionary work.

Many will not read this announcement concerning Christian Endeavor week. You who read it, make sure that every single member in your society knows about this wonderful opportunity to have a definite part in God's work.

H. W. KOONTZ,

Stewardship Superintendent.

Masontown, Pennsylvania.

The General Secretary's Appeal

Canton, Ohio,
January 12, 1931.

Dear Endeavorers:

The NEW YEAR 1931 faces us! When we consider the successes and also the failures of the old year it makes us wonder just what this one holds for each and every one of us.

The enclosed letter from Miss Lyda Carter, one of the workers at Krypton (and certainly a most consecrated Endeavorer) will give us a vision of what happened at Krypton, Kentucky during the past months. BUT THE FUTURE DEPENDS ON YOU AND ME! Let us not be content to know that God somehow does accomplish things "without" our help, but let us remember that it is a real privilege and a great joy to be able to be instruments in his hands, channels of blessing which he can use to accomplish his will.

Will YOU see that these letters are read to your whole society at once, and that action is taken to meet the goal set at National Conference last fall, to have all Endeavorers observe C. E. week, (January 25th to February 2nd) as Tithing Week, and forward said tithes to your National Secretary-Treasurer for the Carrying On of this missionary work at Krypton?

The Home Mission Board is expecting not less than $500.00 toward the support of this project this year. Last year we had a little over $200.00 with only 15 societies cooperating. IF EVERY ONE OF THE 60 REPORTED CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SOCIETIES would help just a little, we could very easily meet this $500.00 goal!

CAN WE DEPEND ON YOUR SOCIETY? "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, LOOKING FOR THAT BLESSED HOPE AND THE GLORIOUS APPEARING OF the Great God and our Savior Jesus Christ who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people, ZEALOUS OF GOOD WORKS." Titus 2:11-14.

Awaiting your prompt reply, at which time I would appreciate the name and address of the President of your C. E., I remain,
Sincerely yours,

GLADYS M. SPICE,
Secretary-Treasurer.

2301 Thirteenth St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.

Letter from Miss Carter

Krypton, Kentucky,
January 12, 1931.

Dear Christian Endeavorers:

I'm glad for another opportunity to talk to you because C. E. is one of the finest organizations in the world. Christian Endeavor is a place where young people get an insight and vision of the possibilities of service that lie buried within any consecrated young person. Praise God for C. E.!

I'm hoping that a few words about our work here may be of interest to you. First and foremost, God has wonderfully answered prayer. When Brother and Sister Kinzie left, it seemed as though things fell flat. Nothing remained,—in fact it was rumored in certain churches that "There is nothing at Krypton now." But somehow faith remained. Mrs. Srack came up and stayed with me that summer the Kinzie's left. Satan put in every possible stroke to make the outlook dark and the load heavy. BUT FAITH REMAINED! Somehow God is good to give one assurance about things when from the human standpoint, there is no ray of hope.

Mrs. Srack returned to Riverside,—school began here. I was alone. But day by day though apparently forsaken, all our needs were met. As I look back now I realize that today I cannot do as much work in a given time as I did then. It is because it is no longer necessary for me to do it. God gives strength in proportion to our need! I never have had a need that he has not supplied.

After Christmas vacation Mrs. Elizabeth Bates, a sister of one of our finest women here, consented to come and do our cooking for us for a small sum each week. There were four boarding students then, and this help was very welcome. So we struggled on to the end of the term, always praying for more help. At Easter time a fine Gospel Team from Ashland visited us. These young men became our staunch friends, and they have been responsible for some of the good things which have since come to us. Vacation came again. We spent it in making improvements on the place so far as our scant savings would allow. We also made a two hundred dollar payment on additional property. Schools opened again last year. We had an additional teacher, Miss Be Banks. She was willing to come on for three months she taught the 1st grades and I had the upper grades. My fellowship with her has proved to be one of the treasures of my life. During that time our Brothers Paul Miller and Frank Ankrum, Secretary and Vice-President of the Home Board visited us.

Since then God has sent us shower blessings. He sent us Rev. and Mrs. F. Gehman from Uniontown, Pennsylvania. They are proving to be most efficient workers here. It is wonderful to see Brother Gehman go ahead as he does with all of his work. It is fine to note the words of encouragement given and efforts to help by the Home Board. Things now take a far different aspect from what they were a few months ago. I thank God for great faithfulness. I am also thankful to the dear friends all over the Brethren who during our period of hardship, for us, sent us clothing and Christmas gifts and money. The battle is not yet over still need the help and prayers of the Brethren people. You have undoubtedly read the needs as listed in a recent number of the Evangelist. But the prospect is brighter and our hearts are lighter, as we trust IN HIS NAME.

Yours in HIS service,
LYDA CARTER

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

METHODISTS AND BRETHREN CO-OPERATE

(The following article was written by a member of the Brethren church at Carleton, Nebraska. He is commenting on the new plan of Union Worship services in small town and community, which is an example of the transition of the usual custom from days gone by.—W. R. Deeter).

On October 1st, 1930, the Methodist and Brethren churches of Carleton, Nebraska undertook a new plan of joint worship services, whereby Rev. W. R. Deeter of the Brethren church assumed the pastorate of both churches. This movement was made possible by the decision of each church bearing the expenses (sharing the pastor's salary equally) in common. However, each denomination retains its identity in every other way. The plan has proved to be very beneficial to Carleton and surrounding community. A new interest has been quite obvious, and though the denominational doctrines of each institution have been kept intact, the firm foundation of the new project is the Fatherhood of God and the reign of Jesus Christ on earth. A cordial welcome is extended to all, and the goal towards which we are striving is a bigger and better world with a deeper spiritual understanding of the Bible.

Services are held on alternate Sundays in each church. A union choir has rendered very effective and inspiring service. It is no doubt very gratifying to the pastor to note the response, and to him belongs a great deal of credit for the wonderful progress that has been made since the inception of the united plan of worship. We recommend this policy to villages having churches with inadequate membership who are having some difficulty in balancing budgets. In union there is strength not only that, there is also a finer and more spirit of cooperation and good fellowship which is so vitally important to religious institutions.

HARLAN W. FOULKE

FREMONT, OHIO

Our check-up at the end of the year closed that we have not reported the situation at Fremont, Ohio since April of last year. While nothing spectacular has occurred during the events of the swiftly passing months, it has not been without significance.

Our church determined not to discontinue Sunday evening services during the summer months, nor to admit our inability to continue alone by uniting in the local union services. While the attendance was small, it was the only church in this city of 1,000 population which "carried on," which is the type of folk Fremont Brethren are.

One of the milestones in the year was the Annual Homecoming Anniversary service held November 30th. Brother S. C. Henderson, four years the successful pastor of the church, was the guest speaker. He preached the Thanksgiving week-end visiting brought three strong messages on Sunday. The all day services with basket dinner in the basement were carried out without the presence of this writer who was confined to the house with "mumps." But the membership responded liberally to the appeals and pledges, bringing the total short-pledges up to $336.50. Brother Hendonly commended the church for the commendable manner in which it is reducing the long standing debt, and declared that after an absence of three years, he finds the work in excellent condition with a bright future.

It was our privilege to have with us over the week-end of December 21st, Dr. Chas. E. Yoder. He was a genial guest at the parsonage from Saturday until Tuesday, and we regret that his visits cannot come at us once every year, instead of once in a few years. His scholarly exposition of the Bible, giving "meat in due season," and his presentation of the work on the mission were illuminating and deeply inspirational.

At the quarterly and annual business meetings of the church have seen the membership plan for the year ahead and select its church personnel. Reports at the end of the year showed all current bills paid, and we were worked out which it is expected to insure against a deficit for several years to come. The Home Missions offering this year is equal to the average for the church for the last ten years. The church ordered the second annual revision of the membership list which was carried out, the parsonage has been roofed with a new roof material, and rubber runners have been laid in the aisles of the church auditorium.

The latest addition to our work has been the Junior Missionary Society which has been organized by the Woman's Missionary Society. The Church school and Christian Endeavor society are launching upon the new year with more intensive programs. We are endeavoring to "go forth sowing the seed" in the hope that this church will experience a bountiful harvest with the leadership of Brother R. P. Miller in the evangelistic campaign next May. This year we are endeavoring to sustain our list of Evangelist subscriptions.

Brethren, pray for us!

W. S. CRICK.

MORRILL, KANSAS

The Christmas holidays are now past and we are making a good start into the New Year. The Brethren here followed their Christmas custom of remembering the church and family on Christmas Eve. Even in this is our fifth Christmas spent here and the annual custom was followed with as much freedom and gratitude as the first. Fellowship and spirit of good will among the members of the church, including the pastor, make the work a pleasure, and the service a privilege.

The present depression in industry and commerce have had a tendency to slow up our activities in some lines while in others they have increased. In most respects the church is in good condition and its life fruitful results. The usual good roads and weather have added much to both the church and Sunday school since our last report. We have received four into the church, two by letter and two by baptism. Sunday evening services are being attended by the largest crowds since we have been here.

The Bible school has made much progress in its methods and means of bringing the church and life in contact with the Word of God. The superintendent is constantly presenting new methods, or principle which keeps the church under obligation. The result is a wholesome spirit prevailing. This is one of the large factors in the growth of the work of the church. One of the outstanding features of the school is the Young Men's Class, taught by D. E. Wagner. It is encouraging to see such a fine group of young men file into their class room each Sunday. While not all remain for the church service a goodly number is present most of the time.

The W. M. S. is also active, and contributes much to the life and activities of the women of the church. They not only hold their regular monthly devotional meetings but sustain two work meetings a week through a greater part of the year. Their fidelity and loyalty to the church is always manifesting itself. The Sisterhood, although very much reduced in numbers because of some getting married, others going to school, and others taking up lines of employment in other vicinities continue their regular meetings and also function in other lines of service.

The church assumes its responsibilities in the various religious activities of the community. The meeting of the week of prayer recently closed with a good average attendance at each service. Plans are now being made for the service during passion week. These are usually the most spiritual and uplifting of all the religious services of the year.

The Lord has blessed us in that we have had but few removals this year, and no loss in membership. Mrs. Thelma Lydic was married to Harvey Rummel in the month of August and now lives in Hiawatha, but both are present in many of the services of the church, although they have some distance to come. Her immediate presence in the community and church is missed, but her touch with the church continues.

We ask an interest in the prayers of the brotherhood, that the coming year may represent a continuance of the good work.

L. A. MYERS, Pastor.

CARLETON, NEBRASKA

It has been a long time since we have appeared in the Evangelist columns, but I presume we are to blame and we are not going to "make excuse."

However, we returned from the good Bible Conference and our own Conference last summer, much refreshed in every way. We have taken off our coat and rolled up our sleeves (so to speak) and have undertaken some heavy tasks which not often are presented to a minister. We have not been "afraid" of them in the least—but we did feel our inability and weakness a bit—and we resolved that if it was "the call of God, to a great work" I should not fear, but trust in him, and he would see us through.

We have observed all the special days and offerings and in some respects have made progress. The financial depression which began in the east about a year ago, did not reach us till along in the summer, and the most severe time was in the fall months. Finances have been a bit slow in coming in but we feel we shall pull through in some way, though it may be unseen just now as at this time.

Carleton has three churches, Brethren, Methodist and Lutheran. This is largely a German settlement and a larger percent of them are Lutherans. However the Brethren and Methodist churches are on just the opposite corners of the street from each other. We can hear them sing, and they can hear us sing. Literally we are located close to one another. However, after some months of prayer, planning, and readjustment, the two made a common agreement to share 50-50 on the minister's salary, for one year, and he to divide his time equally among the two churches. (See article below).

Our church school averaged 90 during the year 1930. New officers were recently elected, and we hope to go on, growing better and better.

The W. M. S. and S. M. M. are both quite active, and doing good work. The two Christian Endeavor societies are doing a commendable work also. The Senior Christian Endeavor is not as large in membership as it once was, but we are among the few in the county who are still holding on.

Our community work has been more or less heavy all fall, and we still have plans lined up for weeks ahead. Our third Annual Father and Son program will be held the 29th of this month. We are carrying on our usual work with some twenty boys in town and country.

Just now we are promoting "Go to Church Day" for Sunday, January 25th. We are praying for a record day.

The city has just completed a new water system, and our W. M. S. is financing installation of city water in the church kitchen and the parsonage. Our women DO things, here in Carleton.

Next week we attend Nebraska's first "Pastors' Conference." We think it will be a GOOD one.

In his name and for his Kingdom.

W. R. DEETER.

FORTY-SIX YEARS A SUBSCRIBER

Editor Evangelist:

I notice a brother out in Ohio, I believe, who can boast of being a subscriber to the Evangelist for forty years. That is a good record and I feel proud of it, but I think I can do one better, as well as some others. I have taken the Evangelist since 1884, or forty-six years in all. E. L. Yoder and A. L. Garber were the editors then. Brother Garber and I had many difficult controversies in the Evangelist at that time, I contending for many Scriptures in their spiritual meaning and he taking a different view, but he always accorded me the kindest consideration and manifested a most beloved Christian spirit. I was often surprised at his willingness to publish my diverse articles when they were so foreign to his views, especially when he owned the Evangelist as his property.

I have a copy of the Evangelist of April 8, 1891, when it was published at Waterloo, Iowa and Brother H. R. Holsinger was its editor. In that issue is recorded the minutes of one of our first conferences of the Maryland and Virginia churches. This conference was held at Funkstown, Maryland, in a union church, February 10, 1892. At this conference there were twenty-one delegates and all these are now dead with the exception of T. J. Fahrney of Downsville, Maryland; Sister Laura Hedrick, of Florida; D. C. Moomaw of Sebring, Florida; Mr. and Mrs. G. Harry Haun of Woodstock, Virginia, and the writer. At that early date we had only one church building in the district and we held our conferences in union churches. The first conference of the Brethren was held at Reliance, Virginia in an old log union church where some of the thinking had fallen out and only about eight delegates were present and we had no church buildings of our own. The next conference was held at New Market, Virginia, in the Methodist church, the pastor of which is still living here at Strasburg. He often speaks to me of that meeting as he entertained my father and mother in his home.

In those early days we Virginians wore boots and in going to the conference we often got new boots and these were hard to pull off. At home we had boot jacks to aid in pulling off a boot, but at the conference the host did not furnish us with these contraptions and the best we could do was to use a brother roomer for that purpose. There was noise enough made sometimes in pulling off one of these new boots to have the host make a personal examination of the premises to see what was going on.

In closing I want to say that there is a member of the Church of the Brethren in Congress. I suppose he is the only Dunkard ever elected to Congress. His name is Jacob A. Garber and he represents our district, that is, the 7th here in Virginia.

GEO. A. COPP.

PLEASANT GROVE, IOWA

Pleasant Grove is not dead nor is her pastor. For about three years we have been silent but at work. For one year we took a rest, after leaving Mulvance, Kansas. Closing this year we baptized nine, 8 of these having been converted by Brother Mayes in the meeting he held at Pleasant Grove. The other one was a young man of the age of those converted by Brother Mayes.

On October 1, 1928 the Pleasant Grove church extended to us the call. Since then we have been preaching every two weeks when roads and weather permit. The work has been at a standstill, but there are those who can exist even when the sun does not shine. But the tide has changed and the oldest church in Iowa is showing signs of new life. The attendance is improving and there exists that state of interest that satisfies.

We need not boast to say that though Pleasant Grove is the little among the thousands, yet she has sent more workers for God into the field than many of our strong churches. She has three missionaries on foreign soil—Sister Estella Myers, Sister Grace Byron, and Sister Ethel Myers. And Brother Lester Myers has been doing mission work in Chicago for a number of years. I esteem it a pleasure to preach for these worthy Brethren, and to pastor them through what has been thought to be a pastorless period. During these silent days we met with a loss that is gain to one, when God called away Sister Myers, the mother of Ida and Estella, Ethel, Ernest, John and Lester. We lost her from our midst and we missed her because she was a faithful attendant at church. But we gained much from the splendid Christian family that she left. And like Jesus said, though she be dead, yet she liveth. If all the mothers of our land would have been like Sister Myers this world would not be filled with robbers and bootleggers. The Brethren church has too few such mothers. She set a good example. She gave to the world two missionaries, and if we could have seen the burden of her heart we could have seen the African mission field. She paved the way to salvation for thousands of those in Africa. She was a strong woman. When she took sick she called for her pastor. We hastened to her bedside, and prayer that God would remove her suffering and anoint her. From that hour God answered our prayer and Mother Myers passed on like Jacob and Abraham. She went to sleep. I have anointed many but never witnessed such a scene. So many think that anointing is a healing ordinance and when we anoint the patient should get well. But when God calls, anointing will not prolong life, but if they have committed sins their sins shall be forgiven them. The anointing is then a cleansing ordinance also. If I were sick I would call for the Elders not alone to heal my body but to cleanse me and make me a fit subject for death.

For three years, Brethren, I have read your field news, and now you have heard from me.

I am still Brethren, a fundamentalist and love to see the Brethren Church crave for more churches. When Zion travails she shall bring forth children. Pray for me.

H. W. ANDERSON.

MODERATOR'S ADDRESS OF THE PENNSYLVANIA DISTRICT

By Willis E. Ronk

(Continued from last week)

Our plea, "The Bible, the Whole Bible and nothing but the Bible," serves the purpose admirably as a plea, but we must not be too literal in its interpretation. We have sometimes erred in its interpretation, in that we have passed hurriedly over, "THE WHOLE BIBLE" part, and emphasized the part which says, "NOTHING but the BIBLE." If we emphasize that part too strong, we cannot live up to it. Are we literally to have nothing but the Bible? Then we are inconsistent with the facts of life. Here is my personal Christian experience, does it mean nothing to me? Here is my reason,—shall I give no place to it? Verily, I must give them place, for they are a part of me. Here is Church Government, shall I give it no place? BUT WE MUST HAVE GOVERNMENT.

Let us note, however, if I overemphasize my experience to the exclusion of all else, I become a mystic. If my reason is not checked, I become a rationalist. Church Government given full sway leads to a self-centered hierarchy. This hierarchy was the fly in the ointment in 1881-82. The Bible alone will lead to a dead formal religion. MEN DO NOT RUN RIOT WITH THEIR EXPERIENCES, with their REASON, and with their AUTHORITY, and they must be held in check. My experience, reason, and authority must be tasted in the light of the Bible. Others may believe that the Church, or reason, or experience are supreme; but for us the BIBLE IS ABOVE ALL ELSE. Nothing must contradict it nor supercede it. Whatever does not agree with it is error, or else we do not correctly understand the Word. In this sense we can say nothing but the Bible. Something of this nature must have been in the minds of the Brethren in 1882 when they passed a certain section of the Declaration of Principles. Let us read, "We hold that in religion the Gospel of Christ and the Gospel alone, is a sufficient rule of faith and practice; and that he who ADDS TO THE GOSPEL, TAKES FROM IT, or in any way BINDS upon men anything different from the Gospel, is an infidel to the Author of Christianity and a usurper of Gospel right."

I hold that from time to time, it is necessary to define our position, or else the very inconsistency of our beliefs and practices in different congregations will be our undoing. But, NEVER, NEVER, must we permit our definition or statement of a Faith to supercede nor in any wise contradict the Bible. Our plea must still be, "The Bible, the Whole Bible and nothing but the Bible," and thus each succeeding generation will have the right which we cherish,—the right of interpretation. And yet, it must not be forgotten, that no generation stands as a unit in itself. EACH SUCCEEDING GENERATION BUILDS UPON THE FOUNDATION OF THE ONE PRECEDING. To reject the wisdom of other generations, because it is not our own, is the height of folly. We are building upon the foundation laid by Alexander Mack and his co-workers may we also leave a doctrinal foundation for those that follow after, but granting unto them their right of interpretation.

I find myself in agreement with Professor McClain's statement as given in his Moderator's address at the late General Conference, to the effect that the Brethren of old days emphasized the truth which was being neglected, and that we should emphasize our day those things which are being neglected, in addition to the things which they emphasized. I feel not only that a frequent restating of our beliefs is not contrary to the spirit of the fathers and permissible but that statements are necessary, in order that there may be unity of thinking and feeling, at least so far as the great essentials are concerned. Of all the statements which one might present at the present time, I am of the opinion that none could be found as agreeable to as large a body of our people as "The Message of Brethren Ministry." I believe that it accurately defines the position of a large percentage of the Brethren. It hardly seems necessary to read the statement; but reasons which I have in mind I desire to do so. It reads:

"The message which Brethren minister accept as a Divine Entrustment to be added to a lost world, finds its sole source and authority in the Bible. The message is one of hope for a lost world and speaks with finality and authority. Fidelity to the Apostolic injunction to preach the Word demands our utmost endeavor of mind and heart. We, the Members of the National Ministerial Association of the Brethren Church, hold that the essential and constitutional elements of our Message shall continue to be the following declarations:

1. Our Motto: The Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible.
2. The Authority and Integrity of Holy Scripture. The Ministry of the Brethren Church, desires to bear testimony to the belief that God's supreme revelation has been made through Jesus Christ, complete and authentic record of which relation is the New Testament; and to the belief that the Holy Scripture of the Old and New Testaments, as originally given, are the infallible record of the perfect, and authoritative revelations of God's altogether sufficient in themselves as a rule of faith and practice.
3. We understand the Basic Content of our Doctrinal Preaching to be:
  - (1) The Pre-existence, Deity, and Incarnation by Virgin Birth of Jesus Christ, Son of God;
  - (2) The Fall of Man, in his consequent spiritual death and utter sinfulness, and the necessity of his New Birth;
  - (3) The Vicarious Atonement of the Lord Jesus Christ through the shedding of his own blood;
  - (4) The Resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ in the body in which he suffered and his subsequent Glorification at the Right Hand of God;
  - (5) The Justification by personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, of which obedience to the will of God and works of righteousness are the evidence and result: the resurrection of the dead, the judgment of the world, and the life everlasting of the righteous;
  - (6) The personality and Deity of the Holy Spirit who indwells the Christian and is his comforter and guide;

) The Personal and Visible Return of Lord Jesus Christ from Heaven as King of Kings and Lord of Lords; the glorious for which we are taught to watch, and pray;

) The Christian should "be not contented to this world, but be transformed by renewing of the mind," should not engage in carnal warfare and should "swear at all";

) The Christian should observe, as his duty and privilege, the ordinances of our Lord Jesus Christ, among which are, (a) baptism of believers by Triune Immersion; (b) Confirmation; (c) the Lord's Supper; (d) the communion of the Bread and Wine; (e) the washing of the saints' feet; and (f) anointing of the sick with oil."

The accepting of this statement seems to be a conservative brotherhood. We are only are a conservative people, and it is not take this statement to make us so. The plea, "The Bible, the whole Bible and nothing but the Bible" is a conservative in itself, if taken seriously. If we do want to be considered conservative in terms of doctrine, the only consistent thing to do is to change our plea. You may not accept this particular statement. Finally I do, and I hold that it is the best of our resources,—so great in fact that all others sink into insignificance in comparison. But in this statement there are dangers, and in some respects I fear we are failing. The great danger is that we accept this statement or some other creed, and think of it as our resource for that for which it stands. It is not a statement which is of fundamental importance, but the living reality for which it is, it is God, Jesus Christ, his Son, the Holy Spirit, who indwells and comforts, and leads into all truth; and we might continue throughout the statement. Creeds have a tendency of becoming incrustated with age, and the vitality of the living truth. We watch!

Another danger lies in the fact, that we use the statement or some part as a cry, without looking to its meaning, seeking to make it clear to others. How many of us preachers are guilty of referring to the Deity of Christ, the Deity, the Deity, it becomes monotonous to our hearers, and yet are guilty of having never preached on the subject. The same is somewhat true with reference to the Virgin Mary to the Second Coming, to feet washing, and any other of these precious doctrines. There is a suspicion that the work would go along more smoothly, if we mentioned incidentally less and preached about more. A tireless, senseless repetition only becomes monotonous, but may convince the hearer against the truth.

Another danger lies in the tendency of preachers to pick out of our belief those which appeal to them, and to preach constantly to the neglect of others of equal importance. This danger is especially serious since not only do the ministers naturally more drawn to one truth than another, but churches have their preferences. We have heard the complaint by churches, that their preachers were not Brethren because they did not preach on Baptism and Feet Washing, but on other subjects as the Resurrection and etc. But there are other considerations, which much prefer the Incarnation and the Second Coming to Baptism and Feet Washing. There are still many who prefer the social implications of the Gospel. Now, one of the purposes of the statement of Belief was to promote unity of belief and practice; but as matters now stand, we are still teaching the parts which have a special appeal for us. We ought to remember that in our plea or motto, the most important part IS NOT, "Nothing but the Bible," but rather "THE BIBLE, THE WHOLE BIBLE—," and we must shun not to declare the whole counsel of God. Our appetites should demand a well rounded Gospel and our messages should contain such a Gospel.

(To be continued)

Sunday School Notes

(Continued from page 11)

willing to advertise more than he could help. Priest ... cleansing ... Moses. There was a regular procedure when lepers were healed. Jesus did not wish him to break the law. Also this would be necessary if he were to mingle again with his family and friends. It was like the inspector removing the quarantine.

Verse 15. But the healed man could not keep still—perhaps even the sight of this outcast now in clean and good health was enough to bring the great multitudes to Jesus. They came to hear as well as to be healed. Always the cure of the body makes an opening for the cure of the soul.

Verse 16. He withdrew. There is no indication that he refused healing to those who came. But as soon as it was possible, perhaps as darkness fell, he slipped away to a place where he could be alone, and prayed. Always after, and before, days of strenuous work Jesus prayed, gaining strength and renewed power for his human frame from communication with God himself.

The rest of the chapter tells (1) of the paralytic let down through the tiled roof; (2) the call and the feast of Levi, Matthew; and (3) the teaching of Jesus that new ideas cannot be grafted upon worn-out customs.—Illustrated Quarterly.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

PARCELL-HOSSLER—On December 31 at the home of Brother and Sister Joseph Hossler at 6:30 P. M., at Napanee, Indiana, the marriage of their daughter, Martha Rebecca Hossler to Ferrell Jerome Parcel took place.

The bride is well known throughout the brotherhood due to her connections with the Sisterhood of Mary and Martha. She is an accomplished young lady and is loyal to her church and its cause.

The groom, a promising young business man, is also well known throughout these parts, and we are looking forward to his coming with his wife into the activities of church life. The best wishes of their many friends go with them as they journey together through life. BENJ. F. OWEN.

IN THE SHADOW

BYERS—Abraham Byers who has been known for many years as a sawyer and lumberman to Jackson Township, Pennsylvania, died Monday afternoon, September 22nd in the South unit of the Youngstown City Hospital, Youngstown, Ohio. Death was the result of pneumonia following an operation for gall stones. He was in his 88th year.

Abraham Byers was the oldest son of Old Elder William Byers, one of the pioneer Brethren ministers of the Conemaugh Valley, Pa., and was a member of the Brethren Church since a young man. At the time of the division, he with his father cast his lot with the Progressives. He was born near the present site of the Hinkstone Run Dam, or Rosedale, Johnstown, Penna., on Feb. 8th, 1842. When he was nine years of age his parents moved to Jackson Township along the William Penn highway near what is known as Munday's Corner, where they remained until death.

In May, 1863 he married Catherine Jane Burkhart (who was drowned in the Johnstown flood of '89). To this union were born the following children: John P. Byers; Lewis P. Byers of Youngstown, Ohio; Mrs. Geo. Fox of Clearfield, Pa.; Mrs. William Pergum of Rochester, N. Y.; Rev. E. F. Byers of Waterloo, Ia.; Chester A. Byers of Johnstown, Pa. In addition to the above named children he is survived by the following brothers and sisters—George Byers of Mineral Point, Pa.; William and Leah Byers and Mrs. Mattie B. Strayer of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; Rachel Devlin of Johnstown, Pa., and Mrs. Albert Gabe of Butler, Pa. There are also 17 grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

Mr. Byers was a veteran of the Civil War, a music teacher and an old time fiddler.

Funeral services were conducted Sept. 25th, in the Munday's Corner Brethren church, where the family had attended services when he was a boy. Sermon by the Rev. Geo. Jones of Johnstown, assisted by Rev. Chas. Ashman of the First church of Johnstown and Robert Ashman, pastor of the Munday's Corner church. Burial in the Byers' plot in the church cemetery.

E. F. BYERS, Waterloo, Iowa.

WATTERS—On Tuesday evening, November 4th, at 4:45, Mrs. Sam Watters of Hudson, Iowa, passed from this life at her home in Hudson. Death was due to embolism. She was one of an old time pioneer family of Pennsylvania, and a life long member of the Brethren Church.

Mrs. Watters, whose maiden name was Susan Strayer, was born in Somerset County, Pennsylvania, more than 74 years ago. She came to Iowa with her parents when she was but twelve years of age and remained here until death. In 1878 she and Samuel Watters were united in marriage, and she became the mother of seven children, of whom four, viz., Ralph, Arthur and Ray Watters and Mrs. Verna Wilson, preceded their mother in death. Mrs. Chas. E. Boldt of Waterloo, Iowa, Lee and Earl Watters of Hudson, with their father, survive. Three grandchildren (children of Mrs. Verna Wilson), Beulah, Blanche and Albert Wilson have made their home with their grandparents since childhood.

Mrs. Watters was a splendid type of Christian woman and the Watters' home was a typical old-fashioned Brethren home in which one could go at any time and feel perfectly at ease and at home, knowing that he was welcome.

Funeral services were conducted Friday afternoon following at 2:30, in the First Brethren church of Hudson, by the undersigned, assisted by the Rev. Whetstone of Waterloo. Burial in Hudson Cemetery.

Sermon from Psalms 116:15. E. F. BYERS.

MYERS—Anna V. Stoner-Myers, daughter of Emmanuel and Maria Stoner, was born in Carroll County, Maryland, April 10, 1856, and was called to her reward, December 4, 1930, aged 74 years, 7 months and 24 days.

She came with her parents from Maryland to South English in 1876. Here she married John Addison Myers on May 27, 1880. To this union were born seven children, Mrs. Ida Miller, Estella, Ethel, Ernest, John, Lester, and Vester, who died in infancy. Several other children found a home with her.

She and her husband organized the first Progressive Brethren church in Iowa. Her husband was pastor for 37 years. She was the last charter member of the Pleasant Grove church.

She gladly gave her children as volunteers to the mission field, Estella being missionary in French Equatorial Africa; Ethel being in France in preparation for the same field.

Myers was a life of service and vision, and she has gone to her reward. Funeral services by the writer.

G. T. BONK.

CULP—Ralph Grant Culp departed this life at 8:30 o'clock, Saturday morning of December 19, 1930, at the tender age of two months. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Culp of Fort Scott, Kansas. Aside from his parents the infant is survived by eight brothers and sisters. They are Martha Belle, Dorothy Ellen, William, Edward, Woodrow, Virginia, Charles and Douglas. Funeral was conducted from the Brethren church at 2:30 P. M., Sunday, December 20, 1930. Burial was made in the Pleasant View Cemetery, conducted by the writer. L. G. WOOD.

ERICKSON—Mrs. Sarah Erickson was born in Sweden, October 27th, 1843, and departed this life at her home in Fort Scott, Kansas, December 19th, 1930, at the age of 87 years, one month and 22 days. Mrs. Erickson was the widow of the late Andrew Erickson. She had lived in America 50 years, and in Fort Scott, 32 years. Mrs. Erickson was confirmed in the Swedish Lutheran church in early childhood and remained in that faith until death. The deceased is survived by the following children: Charles Erickson, of San Jose, Calif.; Mrs. J. W. Gwinn, Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. W. E. Cotton of Los Angeles, Calif.; Mrs. P. D. Tainton, Chicago, Ill. She also leaves nine grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren. A double funeral service was held, one at the undertaker's parlors of Fort Scott, Kan., and another at the home of Mrs. Gwinn at Kansas City, Mo. Interment was made in Forest Hill Cemetery at Kansas City, Mo., conducted by the writer. L. G. WOOD.

BLACK—Dorothy Elnora Joffel, daughter of William and Catherine Joffel, was born June 24, 1892, and was called to her eternal home, June 22, 1930, lacking but two days of being 38 years of age. On June 14, 1882, she was united in marriage to William Calvin Black. God bless this union with three children, a son and two daughters, all of whom are living.

She, with her husband who survives, united with the Corinth Brethren church of Twelve Mile, Indiana, more than forty years ago, where she remained a faithful member until her death. Funeral services were held in the Corinth church, conducted by the pastor, the writer, and assisted by Rev. Ditch of Mexico, Ind. Text: 2 Timothy 4:7, 8.

MARK B. SPACHT.

MOSS—Cora Mae Woodhouse, daughter of Philip and Naomi Ellen Woodhouse, was born in Jewell County, Kansas, August 6, 1881. Her parents the following year moved back to Indiana. At the early age of fifteen she united with the Corinth Brethren church, where she faithfully served her Savior until God called her home, December 5, 1930. On Sept. 1, 1906 she was united in marriage to Clyde A. Moss. To this union was born one daughter, Ethel Lavonia, who preceded her mother to the glory world.

She leaves to mourn her passing, her husband, mother, two sisters, a brother and three nieces and two nephews, besides many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were from the Corinth church, conducted by her pastor, the writer. At the request of the deceased, the text used was John 14:2. MARK B. SPACHT.

ORAM—Benjamin Franklin Oram, son of William H. and Mary Oram, was born Sept. 29, 1857, at Hagerstown, Wayne County, Indiana. He departed this life December 9, 1930, at his home near Logansport, Indiana. On Feb. 22, 1887, at Chattanooga, Tenn., he was united in marriage to Elizabeth Stroop. To this union was born one son, Pliney E., who preceded his father to the great beyond just a year ago to the day.

He united with the Corinth Brethren church twenty-five years ago, which he faithfully served and supported until his Heavenly Father removed him from the activities of life. He leaves to mourn his departure, his wife, two grandsons and a granddaughter, a daughter-in-law, one brother and three sisters, many other relatives and friends. Funeral services were conducted by the writer in the Pine Creek Church of the Brethren, assisted by the pastor of that church, Brother Thomas Shively. Text: Gen. 1:1, "In the beginning God."

MARK B. SPACHT.

WILKINSON—Brother Franklin P. Wilkinson was born in Franklin County, Indiana, on March 6th, 1853, and departed this life at his home in Eaton, Ohio, November 21st, 1930, at the age of 77 years. Brother Wilkinson came into the Gratiot Brethren church during the pastorate of Brother Starn. He was a man of quiet, consistent life, honorable, fair minded, a good neighbor, and a good citizen. His immediate survivors are his wife, a son, and 2 brothers. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor, the undersigned, in the Eaton Church of the Brethren, with a large concourse of friends and neighbors present. Brother Wilkinson was the type of man who is always missed.

WM. H. BEACHLER.

HURLISS—Mrs. Rosella Hurliss was born in Pike County, Ohio, and died at the home of her daughter in Dayton, Ohio, on December 11th, at the age of 56 years. Sister Hurliss became a member of the Fairview Brethren church back in the pastorate of Dr. J. M. Tombaugh, but being a non-resident member for many years prevented her enjoying close contact with her church. The funeral service was in charge of the undersigned at the home of her daughter in Dayton.

WM. H. BEACHLER.

GOSS—Mr. John Goss, 81 years of age, departed to be with his Lord at Naval Hospital, Washington, D. C., December 24, 1930. He was born in Maryland, but at an early age came to Washington where the most of his life was spent. He was a member of the First Brethren church of this city. Surviving, besides his wife, Emma, to whom he had been married 58 years, are the following children: Mrs. Emma Steinbraker, Mrs. Florence Totten, John, Jr., and Arthur. Also there survive a sister, Mrs. Maggie Learion, and a brother, Ellsworth. Funeral services were held by his pastor at his home and interment was made at Arlington Cemetery.

HOMER A. KENT.

BYERS Brother Lewis Byers, son of the late Abraham Byers, a member for many years of the Second Brethren church of Johnstown, passed away in an automobile accident at Youngstown, Ohio, December 15th, 1930. Our brother had lived for more than twenty years in Youngstown, and still retained his membership in the Johnstown church, hoping that in time to come he might be able to become active in its own denomination. While in the city of Youngstown he identified himself with the Reformed church and Sunday school, but not as an enrolled member. The funeral sermon was preached by the undersigned in that church, with the assistance of the Reformed church pastor. Brother Byers leaves to mourn his untimely departure three sons and a daughter, with his wife. His brothers are prominently active in our denominational work. Brother Forrest Byers, one of our pastors, and Chester, actively interested in our Johnstown work. One sister also survives. We sincerely sympathize with the grief stricken family in their sudden loss.

GEORGE A. JONES.

BOWEN—Brother Charles Bowden, a member of the Second Brethren church of Johnstown, Pa. passed to his eternal reward on Tuesday, December 30, 1930. He is survived by his widow and one son, who mourn their loss, with a host of friends. Brother Bowden was 54 years old and died from heart leakage, of which he had been a sufferer many years. Funeral by the pastor, the undersigned, on Thursday, January 1st. Interment in Grandview Cemetery.

GEORGE A. JONES.

DRISCOL—William P. Driscoll was born April 10, 1851, and died at his home near Williamsport, Md., December 25, 1930, at the age of 79 years, 8 months and 15 days. The evening before his death Brother Driscoll retired in his usual health. On awaking the next morning he complained of a pain in his arm. Sister Driscoll came downstairs for some liniment with which to bathe his arm. On returning to his room she found him dead.

On May 16, 1883 he was united in marriage with Mary Virginia Hemphill who survives him. Brother Driscoll united with the Brethren church at St. James, Md., 34 years ago.

Funeral services were conducted in the Downsview Church of Christ by his pastor, assisted by the Rev. Joshua Long.

W. S. BAKER.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

WHO ASKED FOR CLOTHING BAGS?

The two clothing bags requested in the postal card communication of January 9th, will be immediately and gladly sent forward if the person requesting them will kindly send address to which to post them.

FRANK GEHMAN,
Krypton, Kentucky.

CONFERENCE REMINDER

To heads of all Auxiliaries of the Brethren Church who have a section of the Conference program. It is not too soon to get your organization under way so your program can be formulated and the completed program mailed to the Secretary. Don't put it off! Get busy immediately. The Executive Committee is working but you must do your part.

FREEMAN ANKRUM, Secretary,
National Executive Committee.

FOR SUPERANNUATED MINISTERS' FUND

All money for the Superannuated Ministers' Fund is to be sent to Rev. G. L. Maus, Secretary, Roann, Indiana.

Business Manager's Corner

CONFERENCE MINUTES

Occasional inquiries have been coming into the office concerning when the minutes of the last General Conference will be ready to mail.

We are glad to report that barring all delays occasioned by "strikes, lockouts, fires, floods or any other act of Providence" as usually written into contracts by firms that want a good alibi for failing to meet the time element in the contract, the Conference Minutes will be in the mails before this paper reaches our readers.

The only alibi we wish to offer for the lateness of the publication of the Minutes is the lateness in receiving the copy.

We would state further that we do not blame the Conference Secretary either, for he can not send to us what he has not got, and we know he had a great deal of difficulty in getting reports of different organizations of the church into his hands so he could send them on to us.

Another cause for delay is being compelled to wait until the reports from our district conferences which are held in the month of October are received before the publication can go to press.

When all these reports came in from our last conferences we were in the midst of making our Sunday school quarterlies and that work could not be laid aside for the minutes.

It seems to us these reports of the General Conference would be received with a great deal more interest, if they could be off the press and in the hands of the churches within thirty days after the close of the Conference. Of course this sort of arrangement would exclude the possibility of including the reports and organization of the district conferences whose annual meetings are held in October. It might be well for the General Conference to appoint a committee to investigate the matter and to see if some plan might be worked out that will prove more satisfactory.

Bigger and Better

This year's report is the "biggest" and we hope it is the "best" that has been published for many years. The booklet contains just one half more pages than the reports for the last two preceding Conferences contained, so our readers will be getting that much more for their money. And in these days of close figuring in all financial transactions that should count considerably.

As for the "better" part of the report, that will have to be left to the readers to decide; but our shop foreman, who is a Methodist instead of a Brethren says there are two addresses in the report that are well worth the price of the whole. Of course it would not be proper to state what two they are, because other speakers might feel slighted or our readers might just read those two, and we want them all to be read.

Who Gets These Minutes

We would like to send copies to every pastor in the church, for we feel that every congregation should have a goodly supply. BUT experience has taught us that a few pastors become so VERY FORGETFUL about sending in the money they receive from the sale of the Minutes that it never reaches our office. We keep a record of such, and it is our plan not to send any copies to a pastor who forgot to pay for the copies sent him the previous year. Of course we are not infallible, and we may inadvertently miss some one who should not be missed. Should this occur and show our attention be called to it we will gladly forward the omitted pastor as many copies as he can use with apologies that will reach all the way from our office to his parsonage no matter whether it is in New Jersey or California.

Please sell these reports at twenty-five cents each and if you think it is worth a nickel just keep that much out from the price of each copy and send us the balance. But when that is done it means just that much more of a deficit for the General Conference to make up, and we have to wait until next September for our pay.

Publication Day, etc.

We would like to write a column or more yet to boost the Publication Day offer, but we haven't the space, without intruding upon the editor. So we will only say we hope it will be one of the best ever made for it is surely needed.

As for the etc. that means Evangelical subscriptions and an up-to-date report of Honor Roll. We could make a mighty report along this line but we will be compelled to postpone that for another week, maybe next week, if the editor has room.

But the thing we want to emphasize is the necessity of selling Conference Minutes with the zeal of a Hoover or a F. B. I. salesman. When we take our religion as seriously as these salesmen take their jobs success will crown our efforts.

R. R. TEETER, Business Manager

P. S. Another Widow's Mite—As opened our mail this Monday morning third letter gave us the most agreeable surprise we have received in a long time was a check from a good sister who belonged to that blessed class of widows who have real love for their Master, and the amount of the check was FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS for the Publication Day offering. We can only say God bless you, dear sister, and may your kind increase.

THE VIRGIN BIRTH

By R. I. Humbert

Orders have been filled from the booklet from many states, Canada and England.

Dr. Howard Banks, Litt. D. says "This masterly study is the best I have ever seen on this vital subject."

Eighty of these booklets were purchased by the First church of Lake Beach, California, after the writer had given the message on Sunday morning.

Prices Postpaid
10c each. $1.00 per dozen. $7.00 per hundred

Order from R. I. Humbert, Lake Odessa, Mich.

Vol. LIII
Number 5

Jan 31
February 7
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

PRESIDENT POLING of the International Society of Christian Endeavor TO THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS of The Brethren Christian Endeavor Union

It is a pleasure to greet you through the columns of the "Brethren Evangelist."

Fifty years of Christian Endeavor history are behind us and fifty years and more of Christian Endeavor service lie ahead. We shall not be worthy of our past, of our great inheritance, unless we accept the new opportunities and go forward to win new and greater triumphs for Christ and the Church. From New Zealand comes the challenging slogan "Greater Things Than These." Let us make it our call to a great advance.

I commend to you the program not only of our International and World Societies but of your particular denominations and communions. May God bless you all and give you in all your Christian Endeavor activities "Good Success."

Very sincerely,

Signed: DANIEL A. POLING, President.

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

GOOD Advice

Judging from the published list of speakers at the Ohio Pastors' Association, one might expect to hear almost anything ranging from the type of thinking represented by Dr. John Timothy Stone to that of Dr. Cadman. Perhaps the pastors wanted variety.

At any rate the conservative and spiritual viewpoint was not only sounded, but actually got into the newspapers. Dr. Daniel A. Poling told the pastors to "Go back to your prayer meetings and keep the church out of politics." Newspaper reports cannot always be depended on, but I hope this is what he really said.

MISS Comstock's Opinion

We once heard it said that when woman got the right to vote, the drink problem would be settled; the assumption being that taken as a whole women would vote for prohibition, and also that prohibition would end the matter.

Now as to woman's attitude we find that Miss Ada L. Comstock, the highly intelligent President of a famous College for women, and the sole representative of her sex on the late lamented Wickersham Commission, advocated a revision of the present prohibition laws.

But probably Miss Comstock does not represent the mind and heart of American womanhood. We hope not.

THE Wickersham Report

The long awaited report on the Prohibition problem has been made in a volume which will make a good sized book and President Hoover has sent it to Congress together with a letter of his own. And now, as we sometimes sing, the fight is on.

For, strange as it may seem, there is no general agreement as to what either the Commission or the President has said. Dr. Poling characterizes the Commission's report as "high and low, wet and dry; makes everybody happy, and nobody glad." But he regards the President's message as unqualifiedly in favor of prohibition. On the other hand, a very high and dry Republican Senator declares that the President has not committed himself irrevocably, but will follow the party in the matter.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer thinks the greatest need at Washington is some one who can write plain English.

The way of the expert Hoover Commission is hard. There is one lesson to be learned—If you have any political reputation, and value it, do not ever under any circumstances accept a place on an expert commission to investigate prohibition.

I had intended to devote all my space this week to an analysis of the Wickersham report, but having read the published excerpts, I am somewhat discouraged.

"Should a wise man utter vain knowledge, and fill his belly with the east wind? Should he reason with unprofitable talk? Or with speeches wherewith he can do no good" (Job 15:2-3).

THE Price of Progress

The race makes progress in certain directions only to discover that at times progress is a hard master, requiring us to wear many a hair shirt.

For example, nobody but a few Roman Catholics would want to return to the days of the Imperial Empire, but Winston Churchill points out that, in these days of independent states, the journey from Paris to Stockholm, less than the diameter of many American states, requires the use of six different kinds of coins and stamps, and the passage of seven frontiers and the use of five different languages. Furthermore, in the days of Augustus, the peace of the entire Roman world was maintained by a force of only 800,000 armed men. While today, after fighting the bloodiest war in human history for the purpose of ending war, it takes twenty million soldiers to guard the jigsaw frontiers of twenty-six European states.

THE Modesty of Women

A change of style will often foist upon women fashions which offend their sense of modesty, and it takes time and effort to feel at ease in them. Dr. Melvin Grove Kyle, noted archaeologist, writes in the Bibliotheca Sacra of this phenomenon as he has observed it in Turkey.

"The abolition of the veil for women in Turkey has, at present, perhaps but temporarily, an interesting psychological effect; Turkish women are as yet very shy about being seen by every strange man who comes within their horizon. It is pathetic to see them; one feels like looking the other way."

And he adds, "The fact is that every respectable woman the world over has a line of defense, however arbitrarily drawn, beyond which barrier no man except her husband is ever permitted to pass without instant rebuke. With Turkish woman, formerly the veil was that outer line of defense. Now that it is taken away, the women are in a flutter; they feel that the line between modesty and immodesty is passed by every man who comes in sight of them. Their actions are as pathetic as the efforts of modest women in the days of the short skirt, now passed, we hope, as they frantically tugged at insufficient covering."

"The fact is that modesty is a shy maiden; it is a dangerous thing to shock her too much, lest she become brazen."

A WORD for Church Ushers

Too often the position of usher in our modern churches is regarded as one beneath the dignity of an important man, something like a floor-walker in a department store, requiring only a fine exterior and a suave manner. Doctor Marlin, writing one of his remarkable articles in the Bibliotheca Sacra, takes issue with this viewpoint.

"We suggest that no man ought to be an usher in a church who is not wholly in love with the Lord Jesus. A cold-hearted elder will not do as much harm in a church as a cold-hearted usher. Ushers should not be carelessly chosen as for a minor position of small moment. The position of an usher in a church is a position which ought to be highly magnified. It should be a position reserved for the highest type of character, for men noted for their courtesy, tact, kindness, gentility and a real love for humanity in all its grades and needs. Ushers ought to be men beautiful with the holiness and compassion of God. Ushers ought to be chosen with as great care as that which is exercised in the choice of elders and deacons."

"The usher is in a sense the host of the church; it is with him that the stranger comes in closest contact; he is the representative of the congregation and has much to do with the impressions carried away by the casual worshipper. He should in a sense embody the joy and the love of God shining on all who enter the portals of God's House. If Jesus were an usher in a church and welcomed sinners and all kinds of broken-hearted people at the door, they would come back, if for nothing else than to see the usher again, to hear him speak, to see God's love shining in his face and eyes. Ushers in a church, above all others, perchance should pray that the spirit of Jesus might be given to them as they meet at the door of every grade of life and every kind of human need."

Dr. Marlin is right. Every office of service in the church of God is a spiritual calling. There are no unimportant members of the Body of Christ.

THE Days of our Years

A French statistician calculates that the average man of 70 years has spent 23 years in bed, 19 years at work, 9 years in amusement, 2 years shaving, and one year in church. Evidently man is not over-worked. But the whiskers take a terrific toll comparatively speaking. Most men will find that the 2 years spent shaving should be included under the head of work.

The ancient Hebrew did not have such troubles, being forbidden to "mar the corners" of his beard. But shaving was the custom in Egypt. When an Egyptian court artist, in the days of Abraham, wanted to ridicule a man, he would draw him with a beard! The priests shaved the entire body using a razor of bronze. Joseph, called out of prison by the King, is shaved before coming into the royal presence. And that, the way, is one of the many internal evidences that the book of Genesis was written by some one who knew Egyptian customs first hand, and is not a forgery by some late Jew who never saw early Egypt.

IN THIS NUMBER

Christian Endeavorer's Golden Jubilee

—Editor, .....

Editorial Review, .....

The Golden Anniversary—E. M.

Riddle, .....

Values of Christian Endeavor—M.

L. Gossard, .....

The Pledge and the Christian Endeavor—G. A. Ritchie, .....

The Thing was Done Suddenly—

Great Commission Prayer League,

Studies in the Scriptures—C. F.

Yoder, .....

The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon, ...

For Citizenship or Temperance Superintendents, .....

Editor's Notes on the S. S. Lesson,

Fifty Years of Christian Endeavor,

Suggestions for C. E. in the New Year—Esther Holdeman, .....

A Newsletter from Africa—Florence

Gribble, .....

News from the Field, .....

Announcements, .....

GEORGE S. BAER

Editor

R. R. TEETER

Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE

BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Christian Endeavor's Golden Jubilee

Christian Endeavor is celebrating its Golden Jubilee. On the second of February it will be fifty years since the first Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was organized in the Williston Congregational church in Portland, Maine, by the late Rev. Frank E. Clark, D.D. From that one society it has gone forward to a great and vital movement that it is, multiplying through the years until the societies now number many thousands, the members are counted in millions and are found in every country and race of the world. It is no longer merely a "Young People's" society, it has been graded to meet the needs of children and youth of every age and has made a place among its ranks for adults as well. It is, however, preeminently a youth movement, and the world has never seen its equal as such. After half a century of service, of growth and development, it is still a going concern, vigorous, vital, growing and aggressive. A movement that has lasted so long and yet shows no sign of weakening but is still pulsing with life and is enlarging its service and efficiency, must have something about it that is very fundamental, something that meets some very vital human needs, something indeed that is more human. Such a movement deserves our attention and the church can well afford to take time to evaluate it.

In the first place it stands for personal acceptance of and allegiance to Jesus Christ. It is distinctly religious and aims to make religion first of all a very personal matter. In its slogan, "For Christ and the Church," the Lord Jesus is made the first object of devotion and loyalty. And the pledge begins, "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ,"—a very definite encouragement of the spirit of Christ-dependence. Some have thought Christian Endeavor was definitely religious in its aims, and for the worldly minded and indifferent it may truly be somewhat of a drawback. However, it were any less religious and any less strongly pledged to allegiance to Christ it would lack that element which gives it its greatest strength and its most persistent grip on life.

Christian Endeavor is not primarily a club for sociability, though it gives due attention to the development of the social life. It is pre-eminently a literary society or a dramatics club though it is a great deal in the way of bringing young people in touch with and creating a love for the best of literature, and helps wonderfully in developing their powers of expression and literary interpretation. It can never have as its chief aim the encouragement of wholesome athletics, important as that may be in its proper place. The first concern of Christian Endeavor in the individual's relation to Jesus Christ; its highest aim is open confession of and devotion to him; it is very definitely and strenuously religious in its primary ideals and aspirations. That is at once the source of its strength and guarantee of the continuance of its popularity and power. The church needs just such an organization with just such a primary aim. And it is Christian Endeavor's answering to that need that has given it such a strong place in the affections of the church.

Following immediately upon personal allegiance to Christ is membership in the church which Christian Endeavor seeks to bring about. It reads, "For Christ and the Church." It takes both members of the slogan to give completion to its aim. Christian Endeavor is not indifferent to the importance of church membership, but is definitely committed to it. It does not encourage the lone-lance view of religion, but everywhere seeks to lead the young person into a definite church relationship and responsibility. It is not work separate and apart from the church, when it is allowed to maintain its true character, but works in harmony with the church as a part of the church. It is no competitor of the church but a strong arm of the church. It does not detract from the glory of the church but focuses the light upon it as the very body of Christ. It calls for devotion to and service of the church on the part of every active member and concerning those who are not active Christians and church members, it never rests satisfied until it has brought them into that relationship. An organization with such an attitude toward the church and so thoroughly dependent on the church could not help having the church's confidence and possessing those qualities that make for long life and power in things that are spiritual.

Christian Endeavor challenges young people to make daily use of the recognized means of spiritual growth and development in service. That is what the pledge means. It is a challenge to give the soul daily that spiritual nourishment and disciplining that make for Christian character and service. It is a means of encouraging the young Christian to grow in grace, to increase more and more. Nothing is more important than that he who has become a disciple of Christ should seek to become more and more like Christ, to become the possessor of an ever larger and more abundant life. That was Jesus' own declared purpose in coming—"that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly." But to have that more abundant life, one must fulfil the conditions.

The Christian Endeavor pledge ties one up to a program that embodies some of the important elements that contribute to the enlargement and beauty and worth of the Christian life. It calls for daily prayer and Bible reading and the constant striving to do whatever Christ would have us do. It calls for the support of one's own church, the regular attendance of its services and for the endeavor to lead a Christian life, not for a day or for a week, but throughout the entire life. In relation to the society, the member promises to be true to all his duties, to attend its meetings and to take an active part in its programs. Faithfulness is persistently and repeatedly stressed, and that is essential to growth into the stature of Christ. He who pledges himself with honest purpose and sincere effort to carry out such a program cannot fail to grow into the possession of an ever larger and more exuberant spiritual life and to become such a servant of the church as will delight the heart of the Master.

Such aims and others that might be mentioned make Christian Endeavor a live, highly valuable, and steadily growing institution, one that the leadership of the church can well afford to foster. And it is being fostered and led forward into ever larger work. International Christian Endeavor records show that "today there are more members, in more societies, in more churches, in more denominations, in more nations than ever before in the history of the movement." Contrary to the impression of some, Christian Endeavor is not dying, but is growing. The more than four million members, in more than eighty thousand societies, in more than eighty-seven denominations are going forward in true missionary fashion and the enthusiasm of Christian Endeavor is spreading like a good contagion.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

A post card from Brother R. I. Humberd tells us that he baptized two at Lake Odessa, Michigan, last Sunday.

Brother S. M. Whetstone is helping Brother R. D. Barnard in an evangelistic campaign in Dayton, and the pastor in a personal note to the editor says, "We are having a mighty fine meeting," and "There have been four decisions so far."

Brother E. M. Riddle, our Christian Endeavor President, says he has been gratified to hear of a number of societies planning to observe Christian Endeavor week. Why not all observe it? We learn that the Muncie society is to have a C. E. banquet at which Brother Riddle is to speak.

Sister W. M. Lyon writes her reaction to a suggestion in a recent editorial regarding the merging of news-carrying publications. We are glad to give place to such constructive comments in "Our Readers' Forum." Other readers are welcome to express their opinions on various matters in constructive ways.

Our Elkhart correspondent informs us that the people are going forward with the work there in a fine way and putting across difficult undertakings by united effort, under the leadership of their capable pastor, Brother W. I. Duker. "United effort" is the right way; those two words with the blessing of God will spell success anywhere. Dr. Bame begins a meeting there February 1.

THE LAST SUNDAY IN FEBRUARY IS BENEVOLENCE DAY when every church is requested by General Conference to lift an offering for the two-fold purpose of contributing to the Superannuated Ministers' Fund and aiding in the support of the Brethren Home at Flora, Indiana. Send your offering for the superannuated ministers to Rev. G. L. Maus, Secretary, Roann, Indiana, and your Brethren Home offerings to Cecil Hendrix, Treasurer, Flora, Indiana.

Brother B. F. Owen tells us of his evangelistic campaign just closed at the Gravelton church, near neighbors to Nappanee, Indiana. Nine were added to the church as a result of the meeting. The evangelist was assisted by his wife as leader of music, and the services of both were much appreciated by the Gravelton people. This rural church has made a splendid contribution to the kingdom in the way of supplying leadership and still seems to be determined to continue its valued service to the community. God has a mission for such rural church groups yet to perform.

The editor was privileged to preach for the Cooperative Brethren church at Columbus, Ohio, in the morning and to officiate at communion service in the evening of January 18th, at the invitation of the pastor, Brother D. R. Murray. Dr. Bame also, as well as some elders of the Church of the Brethren, was present and had part in the communion services. It was a blessed fellowship we had of Brethren and Church of the Brethren together, a foreshadowing, we hope, of the day when they all shall be one throughout the land, so far as Dunker groups are concerned.

President E. E. Jacobs, having attended the meeting of the Association of American Colleges recently held at Indianapolis, returns more strongly convinced than ever of the steady march of educational requirements and procedure for the conservation of culture. We gather from this that Brethren people must not imagine that the last word has been said in the matter of making the standing of our college secure for the days to come. We must go forward and answer still further needs, or the present needs more fully, and we must be far-seeing in building our educational program.

In the current issue of The Biblical Review, quarterly publication of the Biblical Seminary in New York, we find an article by Prof. Alva J. McClain, of the Ashland Seminary. Under the subject, "Current Tendencies Which Limit Faith and Life," Brother McClain takes cognizance of the "detrimental impatience of authority and failure to grasp the true meaning of liberty of soul," to use the editor's words, and gives "a thoughtful analysis of trends that are arising from this anarchistic spirit of the times." Prof. McClain is listed in that distinguished theological magazine as one of its contributors. In the fall issue of 1928 he contributed to that magazine a paper on "The Doctrine of the Kenosis in Philippians 2:5-18," that called forth very favorable comment from a distinguished theologian.

From Roann, Indiana, we have a report of progress in the Sunday school and church and an interesting combination program for the raising of money, conducting church business, worship and entertainment, held on New Year's Eve. A two weeks' evangelistic meeting was held during January with the pastor, Brother G. L. Maus, serving as preacher and Mr. Harry Richer as song leader. There were nineteen added to the church by confession and baptism and two by letter. The members and other Christians in the town cooperated in a fine way by prayer during the meetings and preceding the meetings, and in other ways the community gave cooperation. The average Sunday school attendance for the three Sundays of the meetings was 207. Brother and Sister Maus are being highly appreciated in their spiritual leadership in Roann.

This week we are joining with our Christian Endeavor comrades in celebrating the Golden Anniversary of the founding of Christian Endeavor. We appreciate greatly the very cordial greeting from Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the International Society and of the World's Christian Endeavor Union. Also, the president of our own Brethren Christian Endeavor Union, Brother E. M. Riddle contributes toward the celebration, as do other Endeavorers. Brother Whitmer, departmental editor, is doing a service in providing the resume of Christian Endeavor history for his page. We suggest to Endeavorers that they do not fail to observe Christian Endeavor week and particularly to cooperate in tithing their income during their special week and give the proceeds to the support of their Krypton mission work.

Goshen, Indiana, has just enjoyed the return meeting of the exchange plan between Brethren Stuckman and Grisso, and the Goshen pastor and people rejoice in the splendid evangelistic leadership of Brother Grisso. Twenty-four made the good confession and all are by this time baptized into the church, we are assured. Nearby churches gave encouragement by attendance in large delegations. Brother Stuckman also mentions the Homecoming service when Prof. McClain was the special preacher of the day and where the church by sacrificial giving fully met its annual payments of its splendid new building. Brother Grisso, along with his report of the meeting, informs us that his work at Lanark, Illinois, is moving forward with fine harmony and faithful cooperation and increased financial support.

We have a newsy letter this week from Dr. Florence N. Gribble in French Equatorial Africa. Brother Hathaway was taken ill with the fever for the first time in fourteen months, and though recovering at the time of writing yet was not out of bed. Dr. Gribble was working for two weeks with a low fever. In general, however, it may be said that the health of our African missionaries is better than it used to be, thanks to the greatly improved conditions. There is still room for much improvement, however, before health conditions will be reasonably satisfactory. It is stated that medical work during the month, for which report is made, was very heavy, and it will be noticed that it is being carried on under difficult circumstances, particularly in case of operation when native boys must take the place of absent nurses in administering the anesthetic. But God's presence and the skill of the able surgeon has brought blessing even in the midst of handicaps.

Our correspondent from Rittman, Ohio, informs us of the splendid progress that is being realized by the church there under the spiritual leadership of Brother Everett Niswonger. The Sunday school attendance has been recorded in three figures for several weeks. Nine have been added to the church by baptism and three by letter since September 1st of last year, according to the report, but since that was written, we have been informed that four more have been baptized, taking the church membership above the 100 mark. The editor recently had the pleasure of visiting this church on the occasion of their burning the mortgage on their church building. Dr. E. G. Mason, who was a big help to this church during the days of his superintendency of the Rittman public school and was a signer of the note, was present to participate in the ceremonies. The church shows every evidence of growth, not the least important of which is their love for and cooperation with their pastor, Brother Niswonger.

PRAYER REQUESTS FOR THIS WEEK—

Dr. Gribble asks that we pray for the missionaries that God may give them "strength and wisdom and guidance," especially "times of weakness." Also, "Pray for all the evangelists."

From Roann, Indiana, comes the request, "Remember this church in your petitions to the throne of grace."

The church at Telford, Tennessee says: "Please pray for us."

Brother Thomas Presnell, pastor at Aleppo, Pennsylvania, writes: "Pray for us."

Brother Everett Niswonger, pastor at Rittman, Ohio, asks prayer "that God may continue to bless us."

The Golden Anniversary

By E. M. Riddle, President Brethren Christian Endeavor Union

This being the Fiftieth Anniversary of Christian Endeavor, it is fitting that we present herein something of the history, scope and aim of this great world-wide YOUTH MOVEMENT. With this also could come a few suggestions relative to the purpose of Golden Jubilee Week. Perhaps it is needless to say that in writing a subject that covers fifty years, only the high spots can be touched.

The first Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was organized by the Rev. Francis E. Clark in the Williston Congregational Church, Portland, Maine, February 2nd, 1881. It may be interesting to any to know that the first leader of a Christian Endeavor society was Granville Staples. The first signer of the pledge was William H. Pennell. The first Youth Conference was held in the above named church, in June the year following the organization of the Young People. Six societies were represented. The first society organized outside of North America was in Hawaii. The same year was set up in India. The first society in China was organized in 1885 by Rev. George Hubbard, a missionary. The first state Christian Endeavor Union was formed in America by Endeavorers from Connecticut, this also in 1885. In the year 1888 Dr. Clark embarked for his first venture to Europe in the interests of this rapidly spreading work. He went to London at the invitation of the British Sunday School Union to tell the union about Christian Endeavor. Three years later his board of trustees asked that he make a trip around the world, offering the appeal of this organization to the world. The fifth International and the first World's convention was held in Washington, D. C., near the Monument in three large tents, in the year 1896. During 1900 Dr. and Mrs. Clark, accompanied by their youngest son, Sydney, made a second journey around the world, visiting Japan and China, returning across Siberia to the World's convention. During the Boxer outbreak in China twenty-seven members out of a society of forty-seven in a mission were massacred.

May 26th, 1927 the long, useful, humble life of Francis Clark, the apostle to youth, came to an end at his home in Newton, Massachusetts. This great organization, reaching now around the world, known in practically every country, and adapted to nearly all ages, from children to the alumni departments, stands as a monument to the ministry of this man of God.

Dr. D. A. Poling, having served many years in Christian Endeavor activities, accepted the mantle laid down by Dr. Clark. Just last year, doubtless one of the greatest history making events of all the fifty years was the Tenth World's Christian Endeavor Convention held in Berlin, Germany, bringing young people and their leaders together from forty-two nations.

During these fifty years, there have been thousands of young men and young women who have definitely found themselves and dedicated their lives to the gospel ministry, or to the world of missionary service, or to the teaching profession, or many other fields of service, because of the opportunity and urge that accompanied the joy and enthusiasm of Christian Endeavor.

Rev. E. M. Riddle

According to a recent communication from the International Secretary, some of the chief reasons for a Golden Jubilee Week are as follows:

To challenge young people to a personal discipleship with Jesus Christ and larger service in enthroning him as Master in all individual and social relations.

To lay the proper stress on the essential unity of Christians wherever found, by demonstrations of fellowship and co-operation in the accomplishment of Christ's work in the world.

To discover the best ways in which the Young People's Society may be adapted as an agency to meet the needs of youth.

To bring to the attention of the leaders in the local and general church the values pertaining to Christian Endeavor in its several grades of organization.

To stimulate appreciation of the history, romance and essentials of Christian Endeavor.

To emphasize the most important goals and objectives among Christian youth, and for their organizations, making full use of their pronouncements of recent young people's gatherings of national or world-wide scope.

Warsaw, Indiana.

Values of Christian Endeavor

By Myron L. Gossard

Christian Endeavor has values which no other organization possesses. As its motto—"For Christ and the Church"—denotes, it is mainly an organization for the development of the spiritual side of life, although it adds to mental culture and character building.

Spiritually, Christian Endeavor encourages an individual, who is indifferent toward the work of God, to a fuller consecration and a greater sense of responsibility through the study of the Word of God, through prayer, and a more human and closer contact with fellow-workers in the Kingdom.

If a person participates in the work of Christian Endeavor with the right attitude, he will be humble and not self-righteous. Christian Endeavor will put us to thinking in the right spirit, which will develop a willingness to do church work. An outstanding value of Christian Endeavor work is its development of our talents by putting them to use. Many Endeavorers have unusually fine and valuable talents which can be used in accomplishing the work of Christ and the church. These young people can be put into positions of leadership where their endowments can be kept growing and their spirits kept from lagging and caused to reach forward to larger things. Then those who may not be so richly endowed, but have only one talent and who would probably never receive any attention in the church, can be used and helped in Christian Endeavor, and given a chance to develop themselves, also.

Christian Endeavor is undoubtedly as important socially as in any other way. It develops a love for one's fellowman and a desire for the right kind of society. By mingling with others, we exchange ideas, and thus strengthen ourselves and others for the work of Christ.

We also are more liable to put Jesus' way of treating others into practice through Christian Endeavor.

Christian Endeavor tends to remove timidity in confessing and testifying for Christ. Most folks are strong in spirit, but weak in the flesh, and thus are afraid to talk. If we are afraid to talk, we are not so apt to testify for Christ before men. When we mingle with folks more of our own type every so often, as in Christian Endeavor, it renews our courage and we are more likely to express our feeling.

By engaging in the study of Christ and his work, as at Christian Endeavor meetings, we are renewed in mind and spirit, and strengthened to overcome evil. We are also better prepared to help others who need the aid of Christian society. By continual fellowship with Christ and his people, in Christian Endeavor work, we naturally become willing and anxious to follow and serve him.

The way to a solid foundation is by experience. If we start early in life in the service of the Lord, we shall have laid a solid foundation upon which to build our service in later years.

These and many more values there are of Christian Endeavor, some of which are not largely realized nor greatly appreciated, but they exist nevertheless. They are ever at work, helping to make Christian Endeavor a worthy organization, one that has large possibilities as an agency for aiding in the work of the kingdom.

Lanark, Illinois.

The Pledge and the Christian Endeavor

By G. A. Ritchie

"The pledge is our Magna Charta," so declares Amos R. Wells. It is the foundation of our freedom of expression in Christ. It is a dual instrument that acts as the chart and compass for our Christian life.

The pledge is our banner. We carry it aloft as the guiding challenge for the standards that will determine our characters. It calls forth our loyalty, and ever bids us to move forward.

The pledge is our program. It places before us a schedule of living that is highest and noblest. In a day of loose living and utter disregard for law and order, we certainly need plain guideposts that will point the way to the Celestial City.

Some people object to the pledge as creating new ties. Every Christian should do the things which the pledge emphasizes. When we remember what Christ did for us, we should be eager to give allegiance to such a pledge for the sole purpose of pleasing him.

Another protest against the pledge is that it binds or commits the individual. When the President takes the oath of office, he repeats the prescribed pledge in the presence of the multitudes. He kisses the Bible. It is a memorable event in his public life. The governor must swear to do his duty. The mayor also takes the oath peculiar to his office. The magistrate and policeman give their word of honor. What kind of a soldier would he be who refused to swear by his country? The Christian Endeavor pledge is the oath of loyalty that we give to Christ as our Commander.

Some people take the oath of office with mental reservations. They have no intentions of carrying out the promises made. So many people enter into the vows of marital life with no seriousness. If it doesn't take, they get a divorce and try it again. But we do not say that we should not inaugurate our public officials, or that we should abolish marriage laws and vows because some are unfaithful. So we should not destroy the great Christian Endeavor pledge because some do not remain loyal to it. Let us plunge into a closer consideration of the pledge and its vital relation to the Christian Endeavorer. "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength,"

We start in humility. "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 5:3). The Greek word means "begging," mendicant, asking alms." "Blessed are the beggars or mendicants in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

This is our declaration of dependence. We lean on God only begotten Son. It is by trusting. We should never stop trusting. So long as the Lord gives us breath, we must continue to confide in him and hold fast to his hand. It is only by constantly casting ourselves upon his mercy and love that we can expect to have a victorious life.

Do not forget in whom we trust. It is in him who made the heavens and earth and sea, and all that in them is. Our God is "El Shaddai," God Almighty, whose word sent the rolling worlds into space, and populated the earth with man, created in his own image, notwithstanding some modern writers' advocacy of the contrary.

"I promise him."

We are not slaves driven by the lash to irksome task. I ought, I can, therefore I will give my word of honor to my Lord. It is a promise that should be regarded sacred and eternal as the hills.

We make no bargain like Jacob. Our promise is unconditional. It is made to none other than the Lord Jesus Christ. In him we move, and have our being. He is the groom and we the bride. We share all things. We promise together to be faithful unto death. Whoever heard Christ not fulfilling his promises?

"That I will strive."

Striving should have a larger place in our lives. Billy Sunday says, the dead fish floats down the stream but it is the live one that strives against the onrushing currents and swims up.

The church is impotent because large numbers take their service too lightly. Burdens are shirked. Tasks and programs are ignored. The heat of the battle is shunned. If the soldiers insist on quitting the fight whenever they feel so inclined, the army will be defeated.

"To do whatever he would like to have me do."

"Whatever" is a word of eight letters, including everything. There cannot be more than the "whole" or "end" of anything. This word embraces all that follows, and covers all that precedes.

"Whatever" is qualified by two words, which we must not forget. We do not promise to accomplish everything but that we will strive to do whatever. The other qualifying word is "He." It is whatever Christ would have us do. He is the most reasonable Master. If Christ wishes a thing, that settles the matter for us. This is the standard test. "Whatever Christ" would have. It is the acid test. Can we stand it? Do we live it?

"I will make it the rule of my life to pray and to read the Bible every day."

"No rule for me," says one. "I don't want to be tied down by any rules," declares another. Yet, these same persons manage to exist tied down to a habit that demands so much sleep every twenty-four hours. They never miss their daily meals, three big square ones each day. That. Whether we will or not, rules and habits shape our destiny. We cannot escape that fact.

"Prayer is the Christian's native air." We cannot live without prayer any more than we can live without oxygen. What husband or wife exists without talking to each other? What child refuses to listen to the mother's warning words? Bible reading means God talking to us. Just lived upon the Word of God. It was his bread and meat. The child of Christ who tries to live without eating spiritual food will soon become emaciated. If the hunger strike continues long, he will die.

Just so far as I know how, throughout my whole life, I will endeavor to lead a Christian life."

The church member or pseudo-Christian who balks at these words is usually trying to serve two masters. Jesus said that this cannot be done. Christ must be king in our lives or nothing. The command of Jesus is, "Deny yourself, take up your cross, and follow me." The terms of a spiritual and successful life are "unconditional surrender" to the leadership of Jesus.

As an active member, I promise to be true to all my duties, to be present at and take some part, aside from singing, in every Christian Endeavor prayer-meeting, unhindered by some reason which I can conscientiously give to my Lord and Master. If obliged to be absent from the monthly consecration meeting of the society, I will, if possible, send at least a verse of Scripture to be read in response to my name at the roll call."

These words cover our duties to the organization. One who sums up the whole matter, "loyalty." If loyalty is lacking, if the members are moral cowards, deserters, shirkers, or traitors, the ranks of Christian Endeavor are broken to pieces. The morale drops. The battle is lost. There has been provided a rational ground for all cases of emergencies. It is a reason that conscientiously can be given to Christ, our Lord and Master. Not an excuse, but a reason! The conscience is a tender plant. It is easily frost-bitten. If the Endeavorer persists in exposing the conscience to the chilling blasts of fabricated excuses, his spiritual life is soon at ebb, and his power with God and for God sinks to zero.

The monthly consecration meeting is stock-taking time. It is the sailor's dead reckoning of latitude and longitude. The findings reveal where we are. The roll call means we must list the silent absentees among the "wounded and missing," with the fearful certainty that soon they will be among the "dead" or "captured by the enemy." The foe, the devil, is ever alert. He "bumps off" our members one by one. In Christ alone do we have hope of ultimate victory over our vigilant enemy.

Praise the Lord for the Christian Endeavor pledge! We have that it was inspired of God. It is possible that the need of organization may cease, but the pledge will remain. It will go down by the side of Milton's "Paradise Lost." It will stand with Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" as a great mold of character.—The Watchword.

"The Thing Was Done Suddenly"

The Great Commission Prayer League is making a contribution to the Christian conscience of America by urging continual prayer and revival. Their quotations from Finney and Moody are inspiring and suggestive. Every church could do more if it prayed more, and revivalism would be more wholesome and constant.—Editor).

Heaven-sent revivals come quickly, when every hindrance is removed and God's people are expecting. GOD sends a revival between Sundays. One came to Antioch in Pisidia between Sabbath days (Acts 13:44). Days of preparation may be many or few, but of every great revival it can be said, "The thing was done suddenly."

We recite two thrilling accounts of mighty revivals related by two outstanding evangelists, Finney and Moody, for inspiration and encouragement.

Finney, in his Revival lectures, tells the following of a godly man in western Ohio who was suffering with consumption. He was a poor man, and had been ill for years.

An unconverted merchant in that town, who had a kind heart, used to send some things for his comfort, or for his family. He felt grateful for the kindness, but could make no return as he wished. At length he determined that the best he could do would be to pray for the man's salvation. He began to pray, his soul kindled, and he got hold of God.

"No revival was taking place there, but by and by, to the astonishment of everybody, this merchant came right out on the Lord's side. The fire kindled all over the place. A powerful revival followed and multitudes were converted.

"This man lingered in this condition of weakness for years. After his death I visited the place, and his widow put into my hands his diary. Among other entries was this: 'I am acquainted with about thirty ministers and churches.' He then went on to set apart certain hours of the day and week to pray for each of these ministers and churches, and also certain seasons for praying for certain missionary stations. Then followed under different dates, such facts as these:

'Today I have been able to offer what I call the prayer of faith for the outpouring of the Spirit on . . . . church, and I trust in God that there will soon be a revival there.' Thus he had gone over a great number of churches, recording the fact that he had prayed for them in faith, that a revival might soon prevail among them. Not long after, a revival commenced and went over the region of the country, nearly, I believe, if not quite in the order in which the places had been mentioned in his diary.

"This man, too feeble in body to go out of his home, was yet more useful to the world and to the churches of God, than all the cold and formal professors of religion in the country."

Mr. Moody used to tell a similar experience. The story is somewhat as follows:

"The first time I was ever in a real revival, I was invited to a little town in Michigan. A minister who was a perfect stranger to me met me at the depot and took me to his house to dinner. After dinner he took me out to a meeting. There were about twenty-five women on their knees, weeping, and praying to God to bless their unconverted children and husbands. It seemed as if I were at the very gate of heaven.

"Then he took me off to the other end of the town to introduce me to an elder who was dying of consumption. When he knew he was to die, he realized that he had not been a faithful steward. He saw he must soon give account to God for his stewardship. There was not a young person in that congregation that was a member of the church. There was not one of the sons or daughters of the officers and elders, that was a member of the church.

"There had not been a revival there for many years. He was soon to stand before God, and he began to pray. He got himself revived first. 'That is the first thing to do, begin with ourselves. If we want fresh interest in our churches we must begin with ourselves. Let us pray God to revive our own hearts first. Well, he got quickened. Then he sent for his brother elders, and for the male population of the church and talked to them. They had all become so discouraged that they said it was no use. Then he called for the women of the church and pleaded with them to meet and pray God to revive the work, and they had been doing that for two weeks when I got there.

"That night I preached apparently against the air. There were no signs of power or spiritual life. But at midnight, a boy came down stairs to his father, and said, 'Father, I want you to pray for me.' The father said he could not pray. He didn't sleep any that night. The next morning he came to the prayer meeting, and said he wanted us to pray for him. Think of it, a father, who was a professing Christian, but could not pray for his own son who was weeping over his sins! Inside of twenty-four hours there was not a young person over twelve years of age, whose parents were connected with that church, that did not give good evidence of being converted. God came suddenly to his temple, and there was a mighty work, the grandest I have ever seen. The work was revived when the church began to pray to God to revive the church."

"My soul, wait thou only upon God; for my expectation is from him. Trust in him at all times; ye people, pour out your heart before him: God is a refuge for us" (Psalm 62:5, 8).

"For God is my King of old, working salvation in the midst of the earth" (Psalm 74:12).

GREAT COMMISSION PRAYER LEAGUE,
808 N. La Salle Street, Chicago.

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

THE LAW AND THE GOSPEL

Is it true that the ten commandments are the eternal moral law while the rest of the law is ceremonial and dispensational?

No. It is not true because:

1. The Bible nowhere says so.
2. The ten commandments are a summary of the entire law. Therefore if the summary is moral the whole is moral.

3. The greater part of the book of the law consists of purely moral precepts. The two commandments which Jesus calls the greatest of all are not of the ten, but of the book of the law (Matt. 22:38-40 with Deut. 6:5 and Lev. 19:18).

4. On the other hand, two of the ten are ceremonial. The second treats of idolatry, a matter of rites. The fourth treats of the sabbath, which was observed by rites such as sacrifices (Num. 28:10), meetings (Lev. 23:3), offering of unleavened bread (Lev. 24:8) and rest from labor. Therefore the seventh day sabbath was, like the other sabbaths, ceremonial.

The sabbath was a sign of the covenant of the law (Ex. 31:17), as circumcision was of the covenant with Abraham (Gen. 17:12). Both were ritual, but the sabbath was legally broken to observe circumcision (Jn. 7:22, 23). Circumcision was replaced by the circumcision of the heart represented in baptism (Col. 2:11, 12); and the sabbath was replaced by faith in Christ, represented by the keeping of the Lord's day (Heb. 4:3; Rev. 1:10).

The ten commandments are called "the covenant" (Ex. 34:27, 28), and the entire old covenant was replaced by the new covenant (Heb. 8:6-13). Therefore the fourth commandment was abrogated with the rest (2 Cor. 3:6-9). The sign of the covenant would be useless after the covenant itself was abolished.

Is it true that the ten commandments persist because they were written by the finger of God but the rest do not persist because they were written by Moses?

No. It is not true because:

1. If the ten were written on tables of stone the others were also (Josh 8:32).

2. If Moses wrote the rest he also wrote the ten (Ex. 34:27, 28).

3. We shall not see any contradiction in these statements if we allow the Bible to interpret itself. Jesus said that God is a Spirit (Jn. 4:24), and "a spirit hath no flesh and bones" (Lk. 24:39). Why then do we read that he wrote with his finger? For the same reason that Jesus said, "If I BY THE FINGER OF GOD cast out demons" (Lk. 11:20) although he did it by the Spirit (Matt. 12:28). He said also "My flesh is meat indeed but he spoke of his words (John 6:55, 63). In the same way "God spoke" (Ex. 20:1), but it was by the mouth of Moses (Deut. 5:4, 5). He took the Israelites "by the hand" (Heb. 8:9) but it was "by the hand of Moses" (1 Cor. 13:12). He wrote on the tables of stone, but "by the hand of Moses" (Ex. 34:27, 28).

Therefore the "hand of Moses" was equally the hand of God when God by his hand gave the commandments (Judges 3:4), the statutes (Lev. 26:46), the ordinances (1 Kings 2:3), the sabbath (Neh. 9:14) and all the law (2 Chron. 33:8). They are therefore of equal authority.

Is it true that the ten commandments are perpetual because they were kept inside of the ark while the others were not because they were kept in the side of the ark? No. It is not true, because:

1. The Bible nowhere says so. One part of the law was as sacred as another. Uzziah died for touching the cover (2 Sam. 6:6-8).

2. What was written and kept within the ark was not the ten commandments complete, but their condensation in TEN "WORDS" (Ex. 34:27, 28).

3. The ten commandments complete were written in the book with the rest of the law and the whole was called "the book of the covenant" (Ex. 24:4-7).

5. The ark with all it contained was lost, but the entire law continued to exist in the copies, and was equally binding.

Is it true that the ten commandments were observed by Jesus and the apostles and the rest were not?

No. It is not true. On the contrary,

1. Jesus being called to first fulfill the law, fulfilled only the ten commandments, but all the rest. He was circumcised (Lk. 2:21) attended the synagogues, sent his disciples to the priests, attended the passover, kept the Jewish sabbath and all the other requirements, until he had finished his work and established the new dispensation. By his example in these things before the resurrection, binding on us then we also must do, not a part, but all of them.

2. The apostles likewise, preached on the sabbath, not only because they improved the opportunity to preach to the Jews who assembled on that day. The women by the river also were Jewish women and not the church (Acts 16:13-16).

3. When the question of the relation of believers to the law came up the apostles opposed the Judaizers (Gal. 1:5-7-12), and though, for the sake of gaining the Jews who were loth to give up all their customs at once, some concessions were made (1 Cor. 9:19, 20), and only temporary. The new wine of the Gospel was put in the new bottles of the Gospel rites and symbols, and not in those of the law (Mk. 2:22).

Is it true that the ten commandments are cited as abiding while the others are not?

No. It is not true.

1. The commandments are all alike cited as abiding in the letter and preserved in the spirit (2 Cor. 3:6; 1 Tim. 7:6; Matt. 5:21-48).

2. The other commandments as well as the ten are cited as perpetual in the spirit of them. For example commandment, "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn" (Deut. 25:4) is not one of the ten, but applied in spirit to prove that a pastor should be supported for his labor in the Gospel (1 Cor. 9:9, 10). Like all the things written in the Old Testament are written for our admonition (1 Cor. 10:11, 14:34) and can be applied in spirit as Jesus in his teaching interpreted them. In Matt. 5:17 Jesus says that he "came to fulfill" and he does not limit his fulfillment to the ten commandments. He speaks of all the law and all the prophets. He fulfilled all (Lk. 24:26, 27).

THE SIMPLICITY THAT IS IN CHRIST

Somehow the appealing simplicity of the Gospel has been mislaid and with it has gone much of the original simplicity. We have complicated Christ's teaching and muddled it off intellectually, doubtless with a pardonable desire to express it neatly and to commend it to the intellectuals, but I wonder if much has not been lost in the process. After all, the glory of the unedited Gospel was that while all men might understand it, the clever could never exhaust its meaning. In one sense the Gospel is simplicity itself; Jesus Christ thought that no one could understand it half as well as a child.

Organized Christianity has become a terrific affair of warring fortresses, vested interests and intellectual elements: a simple man has to work hard to find the Christ at its heart. Truly, as someone has said, "They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him" is the outstanding cry of many thoughtful people today. Strange as it may sound, I am hopeful of organic Christianity, mainly because I believe there are multitudes today within its borders who desire to leave their churches temporarily that they may find in the open air outside not so much a creed as a Christ. It is these people who can recapture the soul of the Gospel and bring back to the churches the lost radiance of the Christian faith.—From The Impatience of a Person, by H. R. L. Sheppard, M. A., C. H., Lately Vicar of St. Martin-in-the-Fields.

CALLED UNTO HIS GLORY AND EXCELLENCE

There is glory for the time to come. A great many people seem to forget that the best is before us. Horatio Bonar once said that everything before the true believer is "glorious." This thought took hold on my soul, and I began to look the matter up, and see what I could find in Scripture that was glorious hereafter. I found that the kingdom we are going to inherit is glorious; our crown is to be a "crown of glory;" the city we are going to inhabit is the city of the glorified; the songs we are to sing are the songs of the glorified; we are to wear garments of "glory and beauty;" our society will be the society of the glorified; our rest is to be "glorious;" the country to which we are going is to be full of "the glory of God and of the Lamb."

Thank God, we are to gain by death! We are to have something that death cannot touch. When this earthly life is raised, all the present imperfection will be gone. The lame will leave his lameness. Paul will have no thorn in the flesh. We shall enter a life that deserves the name of life, happy, glorious, everlasting—the body once more added to the soul, no longer mortal, subject to pain and disease and death, but glorified, incorruptible, "fashioned unto his glorious body," everything that hinders the eternal life left behind. We are exiles now, but then those who are faithful shall stand before the throne of God, clothed with Christ, kings and priests, citizens of that heavenly country.—D. L. Moody.

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Mark 14:10, 11, 43-45. It has been pointed out many times that the price for which Judas betrayed the Lord did not represent the price of Jesus, but the price of Judas. For what trifles men betray themselves today! The betrayal with a kiss has become symbolic of those who profess to follow him and yet deny him with their lives. Today it is not only those who hail him with words which rob him of all deity and power, who betray him; those who claim to be his staunchest followers, hailing him in the most orthodox words and phrases but quarreling and quibbling with all who differ with them in trifling matters, displaying a spirit that is anything but Christ-like, betray him just as sadly. God keep us from such faults!

TUESDAY

Mark 14:46-52. If we could visualize these scenes more fully it seems we could not help but love him more. When we try to realize that it was Jesus who created all things, that by him and for him all things exist, that he was sinless in every respect, and that all power was his, yet he allowed these vile, impassioned, deliberately unjust men to seize him and "hold" him, how our hearts should burn within us at the thought of what he must have suffered! Dear Lord, may we realize more of what our redemption cost!

WEDNESDAY

Mark 14:53-59. "Neither so did their witness agree together!" There is nothing more ridiculous than an ill-considered attempt to bring false witness against another, yet in this case the very ridiculousness of it all mattered little. The man Jesus was forsaken: Peter followed afar off, and from other accounts we know that John also followed him, but all others forsook him and fled. There were now no hosannas; it was "Crucify him!" Recently we have heard that the present-day Sanhedrin has issued a call for a retrial of the case of Jesus, with the idea of even now accepting him as the Messiah if a mistrial is proved. It would seem that only one thing could result from such a retrial. As we think of all his suffering, let us remember that it was for his chosen people also that he suffered; let us pray for them.

THURSDAY

Mark 14:60-65. There are some who state that Jesus never claimed to be the son of God; that such a claim was made only by his ignorant and superstitious followers. It is hard to see what such teachers would do with verses like these, and the fact remains that the Jews put him to death because he made himself God's son. And it was God's son upon whom they spit, whom they buffeted and ridiculed as a false prophet. No wonder the inspired words speak of our "so great salvation!"

FRIDAY

Mark 14:66-72. Peter, in his efforts to escape persecution, began to curse and swear, and by so doing proved his case. No man who was with Jesus every day would use such language as that! No followers of his will ever curse and swear—nor for that matter speak harshly or unkindly, in criticism or gossip. If we do yield to any of these things, we shall have as much cause to regret it with bitter tears as did Peter. May God keep us ever!

SATURDAY

Mark 15:1-5. The silence of Jesus is a terrible thing. For one thing, it bespeaks a heart too full of sorrow for utterance; it also recognizes the uselessness of further words, and bespeaks the fact that even as they did not wish to accept him, he gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do things which were unthinkable. How blessed our privilege when he speaks to us!

SUNDAY

Mark 15:6-14. The mob spirit and depraved humanity! They desired Barabbas, a known murderer, and rejected the King of Love. May we not be influenced by the "mob" today, but may we ever be true to him who loved us and gave himself for us. In all the churches throughout all the world today may the crucified Christ be offered as the world's Savior!

W. I. DUKER,
President
Goshen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION
M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR.
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

For Citizenship or Temperance Superintendents

Use It in Your Sunday School

(Issued by the State Department of Education for Use in Public Schools.)

1. Song—"America the Beautiful."
2. Invocation.
3. Scripture Reading: (For three pupils.)

Leader: Who hath woe? Whohath sorrow? Who hath contentions? Who hath babbling? Who hath wounds without cause? Who hath redness of eyes?

Two pupils: They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine.

Leader: Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright.

Two pupils: At last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder. Thine eyes shall behold strange women and thine heart shall utter perverse things.

Leader: Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.

Two pupils: Be not among winebibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh.

Leader: Woe unto him that buildeth a town with blood, and establisheth a city by iniquity.

Two pupils: Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth thy bottle to him, and maketh him drunken also, that thou mayest look on their nakedness!

4. This is the Law:

(To be written on the blackboard or thrown upon the screen to be read in concert).

1. After one year from the ratification of this article the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

2. The Congress and the several states shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

And this: Sec. 7688-1, General Code of Ohio: The Friday nearest the sixteenth day of January of each year shall be set apart as a day on which those in charge of the public schools of the state shall spend at least two hours' time to carrying out a temperance day program as prepared by the superintendent of public instruction; information relative to the history of the temperance movement and of the physiological value of temperance shall be given to the pupils. Such a day shall be known as temperance day.

5. Song—Selected by Teacher
6. Recitation—"It's the Brain that Counts"—

The noted surgeon, Dr. Charles Mayo, in addressing a large convention of boys recently, said in part:

"You can get along with a wooden leg, but you can't get along with a wooden head. The physical value of man is not so much. Man as analyzed in our laboratories is worth about ninety-eight cents. Seven bars of soap, lime enough to cover the heads of a thousand matches, is not so much, you see.

"It is the brain that counts, but in order that your brain may be kept clear you must keep your body fit and well. That cannot be done if one drinks liquor.

"Through alcoholic stimulation a man loses his coordination. That is why liquor is no advantage to the brain. You hear people tell how they had their wits quickened for the first half-hour by liquor but they don't tell you how later their body could not act in co-ordination with their brain.

"We in the United States of America have tried to give you a field of action free from the barricades which used to be set up by the legalized liquor traffic. Keep yourselves free from all entangling habits. Remember, it's the brain that counts."

7. To be recited in concert—

"The good citizen is loyal to his country when he obeys its laws; to himself when he develops toward the highest ideals physically, mentally and morally; to society when he cooperates in all good endeavors."

8. Recitation—"The Wisdom of Modern Everyday Life About Drink"

(This material may be presented by pupils in any way preferred. Affords opportunity for tableaux with sentences read by one person.)

1. I am a railroad engineer. In the cab of a locomotive we engineers need all the brains we have. We cannot afford to have them muddled by alcohol.

2. I drive an automobile. The effect of alcohol is to increase recklessness, to dull brain alertness; to reduce keenness of senses, ability to judge distance correctly and to manage the steering gear precisely. The margin between safe driving and unsafe driving is too narrow to permit drinking. With 25,000,000 motor cars on our roads and streets, the use and sale of liquor are unsafe and out of date.

3. I am an aviator. The liquor habit and traffic might have been possible in the day of the stage coach. They are out of date in the day of the flying machine.

4. I am an employer. The liquor habit and traffic might have been possible in the day of the ox-cart and the water mill. They are out of date in the day of the electric dynamo.

5. I work on the docks. We unload ships bringing iron ore for steel mills. With shovels and wheelbarrows we used to unload 300 tons of ore a day. Now, with great electric machines we unload 3,000 tons an hour. A man using shovel and wheelbarrow possibly might have muddled along under the influence of drink. Today, the big electric machines need skillful men with clear brains. In my work, too, the liquor habit and traffic are out of date.

6. I am a miner. The liquor habit and traffic are now out of date when we use electric mining machines.

7. The modern machine has freed men from much heavy, unpleasant toil. But man must master and guide the machine by a clear brain, or it will master him.

Unison: "Human life, costly machines, and efficient production are too valuable to be placed at the mercy of minds befuddled by alcoholic liquors."—Charles Reittel.

9. Recitation—"Lincoln's Appeal for Law."

"Let every American, every lover of liberty, every well-wisher to his posterity swear by the blood of the revolution never to violate in the least particular the law of the country, and never to tolerate the violation by others.

"As the patriots of seventy-six died to support the Declaration of Independence, to the support of the Constitution and law let every American pledge his life, his property, and his sacred honor. Let every man remember that to violate the law is to transgress on the blood of his father, and to tear the charter of his own and his children's liberty.

"Let reverence for the laws be breathed by every American mother to the lisping babe that prattles on her lap; let it be taught in schools, in seminaries, and in colleges; let it be written in primers, spelling books, and almanacs; let it be preached from the pulpit, proclaimed in legislative halls, and enforced in courts of justice. In short, let it become the political religion of the nation."

10. Temperance Roll Call of Famous Persons—

Have a leader call these names in turn and a pupil to recite each as called.

Leader calls: Theodore Roosevelt.

Pupil responds: "There isn't a thought in a hogshead of beer. There isn't an id in a whole brewery. Nothing of merit has ever been written under the inspiration of lager beer."

Leader: Shakespeare.

Pupil: "O that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains!"

Leader: Irving Fisher, leading economist.

Pupil: "Tobacco is injurious to the human body. It stunts the growth of the young."

Leader: Alonzo Stagg, Chicago University Football Coach.

Pupil: "In my judgment there is question about the bad effects of tobacco on boys."

Leader: Frances Willard.

Pupil: "The human body is the chariot of the soul. Let us make the soul a Galahad whose daily life shall say, 'I strength is the strength of ten, because heart is pure.'"

Leader: Lakes Steamship Company letter to employees.

Pupil: "We do not say that you must not drink, but we do say, if you must drink that you be part of some other organization."

Leader: Walter Johnson, baseball star.

Pupil: "Cigarettes are bad, and my vice is to let them alone."

Leader: Ty Cobb.

Pupil: No man who expects to succeed in baseball should ever think of taking strong drink. Drink and baseball do mix."

Leader: Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

Pupil: "I do not drink."

Leader: Connie Mack.

Pupil: "Old Man Booze has put more out of the game than all the umpires together."

Leader: George Young, the 17-year Canadian winner of the Wrigley $25,000 ocean marathon.

Pupil: "I never drink liquor. I do smoke and I do not keep late hours."

leader: Thomas A. Edison.

pupil: "The smoking of cigarettes is one of the worst, most offensive and harmful habits acquired by man. Those two drugs—cigarettes and alcohol—go well together and they accomplish wonders in reducing man to a vicious animal."

leader: Dr. Thos. Guthrie.

pupil: I have four reasons for being an airplane: my head is clearer, my health is better, my heart is lighter, and my purse is heavier."

Recitation—"Where There's Drink, There's Danger"

Write it on the airplane's wing.
Let each "zoom" this warning bring;
Write it on the pilot's brain;
Learn from Lindbergh, ye who train;
Where there's drink, there's danger.

Write it on the ships that fly;
Write it, pilots, sailing high.
Warn your lads, for soon you'll try
Your hands at writing in the sky—
When there's drink, there's danger.

Write it on the motor car
Speeding, racing everywhere.
Meet its needs in morgue and jail—
Many perish if we fail—
Where there's drink, there's danger.

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for February 8)

Jesus the World's Teacher

Scripture Lesson—Luke 6.

Printed Lesson—Luke 6:27-42.

Devotional Lesson—Prov. 3:13-18.

Olden Text—As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise—Luke 6:31.

Introductory Note

The parallel Scripture of our lesson today is Luke 6:27-42. "But," says Van Kirk, in his source book of the Life of Christ, "St. Luke's Sermon is not a parallel, but a doublet of St. Matthew's." "According to tradition the 'Mount of Beatitudes' lies a little west of the coast of Galilee and is a square-topped hill about 60 feet in height, with two peaks called the Horns of Hattin, from the village of Hattin at its base." It is the highest point seen in this direction from the shores of the sea of Galilee. The "plain," Luke 6:17, on which it stands is easily accessible from the lake, and from that plain to the summit is but a few minutes' walk. The platform at the top of one "horn" is evidently suitable for the collection of a multitude, and corresponds, precisely to the "level place" of Luke to which he would lead you down" as from one of its higher peaks to address the people.—Stanley.

The Long View of Life

The beginning of this significant discourse of Jesus is omitted from our printed lesson but must not be omitted from our consideration, for it gives a vital approach to the standard of life which Jesus taught. It is found in verses 20-26 of the lesson chapter. Read the paragraph carefully from the Bible. It sounds like the beatitudes noted by Matthew, doesn't it? Yet there are only four beatitudes here, followed by two woes which correspond to the respective beatitudes. And there is a distinctive basis which does not appear in Matthew.

It is the poor and hungry upon whom Jesus pronounces blessing, and the rich and well fed upon whom he pronounces woe. It is the sorrowful and persecuted who are in line for blessing; the mirthful and popular who are headed for trouble.

Jesus took the long view of life, the view which subordinates present convenience to future ends. The follower of Jesus does not live for present satisfactions. Comfort and pleasure are not controlling purposes in his action. He lives for principle, and goes where principle leads him. It matters not that he is poor and hungry, grief stricken and persecuted now. These are not the vital things in his concern. They are mere incidents in his experience. . . . Of course he is sensitive to pain and ridicule like his fellows. But his attachment to Christ and Christ's principles of living gives him the power to live down these discomforts because his life is anchored to a nobler purpose and he has faith to take the long view and wait until this purpose bears fruit. Can your life stand the test of this principle?—Adapted from Brethren Teacher's Monthly.

A Lesson on True Friendship

Jesus brings us a lesson on friendship that is hard to receive. It is easy to love our friends, but to be friends to our enemies is a rare virtue. It is no ordinary road to friendship, but it is the nobler and better way, one that requires both human effort and divine grace. Jesus taught the lesson of friendship both negatively and positively. Not merely were his followers to do no harm to any one, but they were to "love their enemies." And it was to be genuine, a friendship founded upon virtue in the heart of the one who would be a friend.

E. Leigh Mudge presents this interesting point: "Friendship is not a bargaining spirit, but what splendid returns it brings! Give, and the world gives in return. Smile, and your neighbor smiles. Some one has said that the only way to have friends is to be one. True friendship is loyal and dependable. An interesting example is found in a letter written by Nathaniel Hawthorne to his publishers. In 1863, Hawthorne dedicated his book, "Our Old Home," to Franklin Pierce, then generally discredited in the North. His publishers advised him not to ruin the chances of his book by including this dedication. He replied:

"I find that it would be a piece of politeness for me to withdraw either the dedication or the dedicatory letter. My long and intimate relations with Pierce render the dedication altogether proper, especially as regards this book, which would have had no existence without his kindness; and if he is so exceedingly unpopular that his name is enough to sink the volume, there is so much more the need that an old friend should stand by him."

Resist Not Evil

"Non Resistance" is no new doctrine among Brethren people, but it has ever been a hard principle to put into practice. For be assured that it applies not merely to war, but to quarrels and difficulties between individuals. All too often it has been a theory but not a reality in our church life. It has been an element of the faith to which we give intellectual assent, but not a characterization of the manner of our conduct. But Jesus gave it to be a very practical principle of life. It represents the spirit in which Christians are to meet evil men and the evil deed they do him. He is to

(Continued on page 15)

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Dubail Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
--	--	--

Fifty Years of Christian Endeavor

High Points in the Society's Progress

(Note: During a number of successive issues we will publish a few of the high lights of Christian Endeavor during the fifty years of its history. Many important events, of course, have been omitted in order to give the reader a bird's-eye view, and credit is here given the Christian Endeavor World. We suggest that Endeavorers clip this brief history and paste it in a scrap book for future reference.)

1881

The first Young People's society of Christian Endeavor was organized by Rev. Francis E. Clark, in the Williston Congregational church, Portland, Maine, February 2.

The first signer of the Christian Endeavor pledge and constitution was William H. Pennell.

The first president of a local society (Williston Y. P. S. C. E.) and the leader of the first prayer meeting was Granville Staples.

1882

The first conference of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was held in Williston church, Portland, Maine, June 2, with six societies represented.

1883

The first Junior Christian Endeavor society was organized in the First Congregational church, Berkeley, California, on March 29.

The first Canadian society was organized in the German Street Baptist church, St. John, New Brunswick.

1884

The first society outside North America, in Hawaii, was organized in the Fort Street church, Honolulu, by its pastor, Rev. J. A. Cruzan, with Miss Anna J. Breese as its first president.

The first society in India was organized in Jaffna, Ceylon, by the Misses Leitch.

1885

The call to incorporate the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor under the laws of the State of Maine was signed June 12. At a meeting of the signers held July 8 it was voted to call the organization the United Society of Christian Endeavor. The first officers and trustees, elected July 9, were W. J. VanPatten, president; James W. Stevenson, secretary; George M. Ward, treasurer.

The first society in China was organized in Foochow, March 20, by Rev. George H. Hubbard, a missionary of the American Board. Its name translated into English was "Drum-around-and-Rouse-Them-up Society."

The first State Christian Endeavor union in America was formed by the Endeavorers of Connecticut, November 18.

The first United Society headquarters were established at 8 Beacon Street, Boston; removed in 1886 to 50 Bromfield Street; in 1892 to 646 Washington Street; in 1899 to 600 Tremont Temple; in 1914 to 31 Mt. Vernon Street, corner of Hancock; and in July, 1918, to the World's Christian Endeavor Building, 41 Mt. Vernon Street, corner of Joy.

1886

The first Christian Endeavor city union was organized by the Endeavorers of New Haven, Connecticut, on January 11. On January 13 the constitution and by-laws of the "United Society of Christian Endeavor of Lowell" (Massachusetts) were adopted, and officers were elected.

The first number of The Golden Rule under Christian Endeavor control was issued October 7. The name was changed to "The Christian Endeavor World" November 4, 1897.

1887

The United Society of Christian Endeavor was incorporated under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts May 25.

The Christian Endeavor monogram (suggested and outlined by Rev. Howard B. Grose and perfected by P. H. C. Woolley of Medford, Mass.) was adopted by the trustees of the United Society November 8; patented March 13, 1888; a trade-mark secured on it June 19, 1892.

Suggestions for C. E. in the New Year

By Esther Holdeman

As we are at the beginning of a new year in Christian Endeavor and are not far in the new calendar year, our minds turn to expectations of greater success and to wondering what we can do to make this year better than the previous years.

Christian Endeavor can expect greater gains in this year if we as Endeavorers will all give it our help. Let us think over a few problems and their possible solutions, which will make for a bigger and better year in Christian Endeavor.

As Christian Endeavor means endeavoring for Christ, why not start out as individuals by endeavoring to win others to Christ.

As we travel along life's pathway, we must have some knowledge of the roads we are to take. God gave us the Bible. Let us take it for our guide.

Christian Endeavor is a training school for young people, preparing them to become leaders. To make it more effective along this line, plan to have more young people take charge as leaders of the meetings, and not the same persons too often. Give all a chance at the various kinds of work and at speaking in the meetings.

Do not follow the same routine of holding your meetings. Break the monotony. Varied programs hold the interest of the members. Introduce new topics occasionally and have special numbers on your programs.

Do not become selfish in your society. Ask outsiders to come in and give their opinion on questions brought up by the topic or current news of the day.

We might well compare our society to an industrial concern in many ways to make it a better society. This is an age in which

SUGGESTIONS FOR C. E. WEEK

Sunday, January 25th, Denominational Day.

Monday, January 26th, Society Day.

Tuesday, January 27th, Long-Timer's Day.

Wednesday, January 28th, Devotional Day.

Thursday, January 29th, Devotional Day.

Friday, January 30th, Fellowship Day.

Saturday, January 31st, Junior Day.

Sunday, February 1st, Christian Endeavor Day.

Monday, February 2nd, Golden Jubilee Day.

Note: Every society will do well to carry out at least a part of the activities of this week. E. M. RIDDLE, President.

certain time to start work and a certain time to stop. Why not have a schedule for everything is run on a schedule. Factories run on schedule. Business men run their concerns on time schedules. They have a your society? Have it start at a given time. The only way to get your people there on time is to start on time. They soon adjust themselves to being there before the meeting starts.

This does not mean that you necessarily have to close your meeting in exactly 15 minutes or forty minutes. Different programs require different durations of time. But do not allow your meeting to interfere with the other services of the church.

Every business must have some one in charge to see that everything is run smoothly. Are your officers seeing that your society is operating to the fullest its ability?

Advertising is also a big factor. Do people know there is a Christian Endeavor in your church? Let them know that there is a society and that it is working.

Cooperation is necessary in any undertaking. Are your members cooperating with the officers? Is your society cooperating with the church in its activities?

These are only a few of the many problems and suggestions for their solution. Trust that each society will endeavor to make this year the best year for Christian Endeavor.

Elkhart, Indiana.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
Financial Secretary Foreign Board
P-25 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Dorco, Indiana

MISSIONS

A Newsletter from Africa

Yaloke, November 30, 1930.

Dear Evangelist Readers:

The Lord has been good to us during the month that is past in spite of considerable fever. Dr. Gribble has had two weeks of low fever during the month, during which time, however, her temperature being normal in the forenoons, it was necessary for her to attend to the hospital work. Mr. Hathaway came down with his first fever during this term on November 18th, fourteen months after his arrival at Yaloke Station. At this writing he is still in bed, but better. We anticipate that he will be able to be up in a day or two. We are thankful that Mrs. Hathaway and Miss Patterson have been kept from fever and other serious illness. We are also thankful for the degree of health enjoyed by the native population, although the medical work during the month has been very heavy. The epidemic of rabies is almost overpast, in fact in speaking with the Administrator a few days ago we told him it was altogether past, but today a case presented itself at the hospital. During the last month we have had the heaviest medical work of the season. Two patients in the hospital have caused serious concern, one a patient gored by a buffalo, who did not come into the hospital until two weeks after his accident, and upon whom an operation was required before recovery could be complete. The doctor had to wait two weeks, however, to be strong enough to perform this operation. In spite of this month's delay the patient has been making rapid recovery from the day of the operation, for which we give praise to God. These are still difficult days in the medical work. We speak here of one point only—lack of sufficient nurses, especially as one of the nurses is continually on furlough. In this operation case for instance, Elie had to do pre-and after sterilizing and assist with operation, while Etienne, a still young boy, gave the anesthetic. It is good to have the boys, but the doctor who carries all the responsibility, breathes a sigh of relief when all is successfully over. Another case which causes us serious concern is one of the numerous cases in Africa of epilepsy. We usually discover and epilepsy, not through the original symptoms of the disease, but through secondary symptoms, that of burns produced by falling from the fire. Here the epileptic in Africa remains unconscious while face, hands, (less frequently the legs) are seriously burned. One such case has required amputation. The one now in the hospital recover without operation, but with permanent disfigurement. Many who come to us are saved, and thus their misfortune turned to their eternal blessing. We urge you to pray for the salvation of the people through the hospital; for an increased number of nurses, and for the supply of medicine. In every department of the hospital the missionaries are so busy and so overworked that we need your prayers for their strength and wisdom and guidance, especially in times of weakness.

On Sunday, November 2nd, the love feast was held in the afternoon. The spirit of fellowship prevailed was a most blessed one, and fellowship was found to be very sweet to all who participated. The attendance somewhat less than usual for various reasons, one of which was the absence of a large number of Christian school boys on vacation.

On November 5th Mr. Hathaway took Voloungou to Iremon, to conduct two evangelistic meetings. He will recall Bounelli who was stationed there previously and who won thirty-six converts in two weeks. Voloungou will give daily evangelistic teaching, shepherd the flock in the village, and endeavor to win the heathen to Christ. For all such efforts request prayer of the people here. May I ask you to do the same? When you see this, Voloungou may no longer be Iremon, but someone else will be there, and he will be serving God in another place. For all the evangelists.

Sunday, November 9th, a motorcycle arrived at Yaloke Station (rather an unusual event) carrying a messenger with an important message, an important letter to be sent to the Governor at Bangui. That afternoon Mr. Hathaway conducted the messenger as far as Gazeli, hoping to overtake the automobile which had been delayed at that point. Failing in this, the messenger required to return to Yaloke, where he arrived the next morning on a rather unreliable motorcycle. At the same time Mr. Hathaway started on his trip to Bangui with the letter, reaching that city at about two P. M. The trip being a trip was extremely fatiguing.

On November 11th about 5 P. M. Mr. Sheldon arrived from Bellevue with Dr. Foster's car and Mangou, the chauffeur who had been training for her. We were all nicely seated at the table (Mrs. Foster being a guest also) when who arrived earlier than expected from Bellevue, but Mr. Hathaway himself. He was indeed very weary, but yet the fellowship of the evening was enjoyed together. For three days were spent by Mr. Hathaway and Mr. Sheldon repairing one of the cars. On Saturday morning, November 15th, Mr. Sheldon left with the car which had been repaired, for Bellevue. We have not received news as to his arrival.

On the 14th of November our Administrator, Monsieur Lystrad, arrived at Yaloke. On Sunday he was a guest at the station, attending morning service and taking lunch and dinner at the Hathaway home. Sunday school attendance on this morning (November 16th) was the largest in the history of Yaloke Station, being 698. Service lasted two and one half hours.

On Sunday evening, Mr. Romeuf, an old friend of the Mission, arrived at Yaloke with car trouble. On Monday morning Mr. Hathaway assisted him in the slight repairs necessary and rendered him assistance. Then after seeing to the necessary work on the Station he left at 10 A. M. with the Administrator for Baban, the Administrator's means of conveyance having yet arrived. Mr. Hathaway returned the evening, with the fever from the fever, he is still suffering.

On November 10th, Leopards visited the station and took our sheep on the morning of November 10th, shortly after Mr. Hathaway left for Bangui. During the week however, three calves had been born to our herds, so with the little flock and the herds increased we can say "the Lord gave and the Lord hath added," blessed be the name of the Lord. On November 10th also, as though it had not been a sufficiently full day, a mail arrived. We certainly were not to receive it, but found very little concerning that which we so much desired to know, the August Conference happenings. Another mail is now due at any time, and we hope for fuller news.

On November 18th three of our boys who had been out on a month's preaching trip, returned to Yaloke. They had had serious trials en route, one of them being sick unto death, another having been punished for incorrect demeanor before the Administrator of another Poste. The third suffered only with the others, showing himself strong and true throughout, preaching everywhere they went, as indeed did all three when free to do so. The one who was sick, (though faulty and imperfect as we all are) gives a wonderful testimony concerning God's power to heal. Stricken with a peculiar and serious disease which usually requires surgical interference, he tells the following story: "I lay down upon my mat in the little hut which had been built by an evangelist at Bozoum, and committed myself to God. Jean cared for me in giving me food, but there was no one to give me medicine. Madame Foster visited Bozoum and she told Mademoiselle Myers about my need. Mademoiselle Myers sent me a bottle of medicine, but alas it was spilled on the way, and so you see," he added simply, "God alone healed me, not even using medicine. God is wonderful! I know him better than I did when I left." This boy has been named after our beloved brother, Allen Bennett.

May it be that his life, frail, like the missionary's whose name he has chosen, may yet be spared to carry out the work of evangelization, so much upon both of their hearts. Healed though he was by the hand of God direct, in a marvelous manner, he has not thereby become a "crank" in refusing to take medicine, or to visit the hospital dispensary that his recovery might be complete and his strength fully restored. In their simple faith the natives teach us many lessons. They do not dictate to God whether he shall work with or without means, but accept either method or both, with like simplicity.

On the day following the return of these three boys, three younger boys left Yaloke Station for a month's vacation. It is too soon to write their history. We trust that they too will be used in preaching the Word enroute to and at their destination.

We will now close this epistle of the month's happenings, praising God that he has been close to us all, and desiring to walk even more closely to him in the month that is to come, whether as missionaries or as native Christians. May this be your experience too, dear readers, that you shall turn from this page, humble though it be, to serve your Master with a better, clearer vision and with a simpler, purer walk.

Faithfully yours,
FLORENCE N. GRIBBLE.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

I have just returned from attending the meeting of the Association of American Colleges held at Indianapolis. There are nearly five hundred college members of this association; hence it brought together men from all parts of the country.

It is not a standardizing association, and yet there are some requirements for admission and every year some institutions apply which are not admitted.

It has several projects under way all the time, just now it is the matter of improving college teaching. If I can judge the movement aright, I should say that it, with all other educational associations, has no notion of backtracking, as I noted in these columns before. They are planning for the future, and a very long one at that.

Some of the speakers thought that the Arts colleges of America were the seat and repository of genuine culture and would continue as such. All the papers dealt, of course, with educational and intellectual problems. Nothing was said about the so-called general unrest nor the financial depression but there was a constant drive to better the educational forces in America. It would seem from this and other such gatherings that the goals of education lie ahead and when we reach one we constantly put up another farther ahead.

WHICH MEANS THAT ASHLAND MUST HAVE A PROGRAM FAR INTO THE FUTURE, and that this program must accord with the best in education.

The first semester ends this week. The second begins February 2d.

I am expecting a native Porto Rican here for Spanish this coming semester, Miss Esther Diaz. She sails the 28th according to a recent cable.

The Glee Clubs are well organized and trained and I hope that the churches which are being approached for dates will find it possible to take them.

EDWIN E. JACOBS.

ROANN, INDIANA

The Roann church observed its fall communion on November 10th and the meeting was well attended. The attendance at Sunday school has kept up well and the children's division especially has been growing. The need for more chairs in the basement has been talked about for some time, finally it was decided at a cabinet meeting that this should not be delayed any longer. The different adult classes wanted to help in paying for the chairs, so it was decided that the classes cooperate and serve a chicken supper in one of the empty business rooms down town and the proceeds go towards paying for the chairs.

The time was set for New Year's Eve, between the hours of 5 and 7 and it was planned that the regular quarterly business meeting, followed by a watch meeting, be held at the church after the supper hour. The supper was well patronized. At 8:30 the business meeting was called to order by Rev. G. L. Maus and the reading of the minutes and various reports were given. Following this an entertainment was furnished by the different classes of the Sunday school including readings, playlets, pantomimes, etc. This was followed by a devotional exercise which lasted until the bells tolled the passing out of the old year and the coming in of the New.

It had been previously announced that the revival meeting would be held in January beginning the eleventh, but the date was changed to the fourth.

This was the fourth successive evangelistic campaign Rev. G. L. Maus has held in the Roann church. He and his wife have won the respect and confidence of the people in the town and community as well as in the church and this meeting was looked forward to with great interest. They did not need to feel that they were entering into this campaign alone as there was a loyal band of church workers praying for this meeting weeks before it began and during the two weeks at 12 o'clock noon the church bell sounded its silvery notes through the air reminding all the Christian folk of town and community of the time that had been set for united prayer. Rev. Maus had the cooperation of the other churches and the school as well. The High School students coming in a body twice during the meeting accompanied by the teachers.

The attendance was splendid from the beginning until the close. The average attendance of the Sunday school for the three Sundays was 207. Rev. G. L. Maus is deeply spiritual and delivered his inspiring messages from the word of God, clear and forceful, so they could be understood by both old and young. The people enjoy listening to him because they know he preaches the Gospel, the only thing that can satisfy the heart hunger of the world, and does not try to entertain with the "isms" and false doctrines of Modern Times.

The church was fortunate in securing the services of Rev. Harry Richer and wife of Peru to direct the song service. They are certainly consecrated workers and their influence added much to the success of the meeting. On the second Sunday, January 11, Mr. Nelson House of Royal Center was present and assisted Rev. Richer in the song devotions. They sang three selections, that were greatly appreciated by the audience which packed the house, "The City Unseen," "I am Happy in Him," and "Where We Never Grow Old." Rev. Richer then sang in keeping with the subject of the sermon, "The Holy City," which was very impressive.

The pastor delivered a soul stirring message, which sank deep into the hearts of the people. The Holy Spirit manifested itself in a mighty way during this campaign and we give the Heavenly Father praise and honor for the blessings received. There were 19 that heard and answered the Saviour's call, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matt. 11:28). There were two who came by letter, making 21 accessions in all.

Another Spiritual feast in store for the church is the coming of Dr. Yoder on January 30. It is through the planning of Mrs. G. L. Maus that the W. M. S. will be privileged to hear Dr. Yoder at this time. Remember this church in your petitions to the Throne of God.

MRS. CLYDE KAGER,
Corresponding Secretary.

RITTMAN, OHIO

Sunday morning, January 11, 1931, was a day of rejoicing at the First Brethren church at Rittman, Ohio, when the mortgage on the church building was burned. We had the pleasure of having as a special speaker for this occasion Brother George S. Baer of Ashland, who gave us a splendid address.

This service was one to which we all look forward to. For well we know we can not remain at one point for long; we must either advance or fall back. This is true in regard to our interests as a church body as well as individuals, so this was indeed a time of praise and thanksgiving to our Heavenly Father for he has so abundantly blessed us.

The present business depression has not effected us a great deal, as work at Rittman has been good in comparison to other places. Practically all our members have had steady work, thus enabling us to meet our obligations.

It has been seven years since the church at Rittman was dedicated. The debt at that time was approximately $3,000. The writer cannot make a report as to the membership at that time, but at the present we have 100 names on our record, with three awaiting baptism. These three, two young men, and one young lady having expressed a desire to unite with us the past week. Of this number 39 have been taken into fellowship within the past 3 years. Since September 1, 1930, nine persons have identified themselves with this church by baptism and 3 by letter, besides, of course, the three previously mentioned.

Thus we can see that we have advanced not only materially, but, better still, we have advanced spiritually, which is after all, our chief work—to bring men and women to Jesus Christ.

Another thing for which we are thankful is that the members, for the most part, are active and faithful. We have only a few persons on our record who cannot be found at practically every church service. Our prayer meeting attendance ranges from 25 to 40. Our Sunday school attendance has increased considerably within the past year, and we have started the new year off with a bang, the attendance having climbed well over the 100 mark every Sunday thus far. Much of this success we contribute to our leader, Rev. Everette Niswonger and his wife. We feel that God has blessed us tremendously in sending them into our midst. Rev. Niswonger never fails to preach the Word, and make it clear to his listeners, and we are eager for the knowledge which God continues to give us through the lips of this splendid young man. Words fail to express our regard for him, but it is our sincere desire that he may continue with us.

We are planning to hold our revival services in a few months with Rev. Barnard of Dayton as evangelist. We are looking forward to this with interest, and have resolved within our hearts to work and pray to make this revival the greatest in the history of our church. We have a large field in which to labor, so we ask an interest in your prayers, that we as Christians may live lives above reproach, that we may go forward and bring men and women into the saving grace of Jesus Christ, that our little church may be a beacon to lost sinners in our community, and that there, they may find peace unto their souls, through the great Redeemer of all. We pray God's blessings upon the Brethren throughout our country. May we all unite, to work harder and more faithfully in the year ahead of us than we have in the past.

MRS. LLOYD HOOVER,
Corresponding Secretary.

GRAVELTON, INDIANA

There is a spot in Northern Indiana that maintains a fine Brethren constituency whose loyalty to the Brethren church and the teaching of God's Word is commendable.

For years this faithful group has kept active and active W. M. S. and Sunday school. They seem like one big family, each interested in the other and striving to bind the tie which solidifies in Christian unity.

This group has given to the Church a fine active minister and a lady of distinct worth who is the wife of a Y. M. C. A. officer. Let us name this group of persons: Rev. F. Stuckman, Goshen, Indiana; Rev. C. Stewart, Bryan, Ohio; Rev. Roy Braubach, of Southern Indiana; Rev. Elmer Keck, New Enterprise, Pa. The lady is May Nish of Massillon, Ohio. These people are well known and they all came from this faithful group of loyal, lovable Brethren.

This church which is but four and a half miles from Nappanee, Indiana, has a Sunday school attendance each Sunday from 65 to 80. In fact, for the last several years Sunday school is all they have had the way of service. The hardship of the group is the same as in so many small places, the financing of a preacher. Despite that discouraging feature these people persevere on and because of their loyalty I feel they should receive some recognition through the Evangelist.

This noble group of loyal Brethren called on the writer to hold them a meeting during the first two weeks of January. I, with my wife leading the music and with the support of some of the Brethren of Nappanee, plus the splendid support of the Gravelton church and community, won victory for our Master, and this loyal band had the pleasure of seeing nine individuals added to the church.

This congregation appreciated the presence of Mrs. Owen—and she is a splendid helper—and had charge of the music—because she presented her with a gift of $30.00. The amount they gave the evangelist was surprising and that satisfies me.

Thus we are all happy amid the worst of the depression. There is no slackness with us. He works, we work, and the natural takes place. He says through Christ, "Ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

Once again, he used us and blessed Gravelton, Indiana. We thank him for the opportunity.

BENJ. F. OWEN

Nappanee, Indiana.

THE PASTOR'S REPORT OF RITTMAN

Sunday, January 11, the Rittman church held a special service of thanksgiving due to the paying off of the church mortgage.

Professor Mason of Ashland, who is in Rittman for his splendid work in the schools and church, burned the mortgage after a pointed talk. Professor Mason, along with Christian Hilty, and Dr. Holmes were the signers of the mortgage.

Dr. Baer brought us a message of inspiration and encouragement. His message was just what we needed, and if carried out will mean good success in the future.

In the last several weeks we have received seven accessions to the church. We invite your prayers that God may continue to bless us.

EVERETT NISWONGER, Pastor

GOSHEN, INDIANA

Our work began with the usual thanksgiving service, following our home service. Brother McClain was on that day and rendered valuable service. Our people liked very much his presence. We are looking forward to his future

That day and its sacrifices made it possible for us to meet our annual payments without indebtedness. Our people did a great deal of work in this, and met the issue bravely. It goes without saying that this was a supreme effort for us at this time, and that greatly our giving to other causes. Unfortunately that we must be so self-reliant, but it seems next to impossible to do adequately for such a congregation, without going heavily in debt, and without entering some kind of a financial depression.

Following our meeting with Brother Grist Lanark, we passed through the usual Christmas activities, all a credit to those who took an active part, and a great inspiration to the church in general. Immediately following the beginning of the new year began a two weeks' revival under the leadership of Brother Grisso, carrying out a plan whereby we exchanged such services, without the usual expense of getting in an outside helper. To say that our meeting was a success was putting it mildly. We had the largest crowds we have had since we moved into the new building three years ago. Folks came the first night, and hundreds continued to come, many never missing a service. I do not remember of ever entering into a service, where the revival spirit came so fully. Folks are thinking about the Christmas, great numbers of them are doing it, and personally believe that every church can have a good meeting, who will work to that end. I have never seen people more hungry for the Gospel. To say that Brother Grisso preached with plainness and power is an exaggeration. His part was most wonderfully done. His ministry among us was very satisfying.

A special delegation came from Naperville with their men's chorus, also from Elkhart. Elkhart came with a hundred men on one evening. The Church of the Brethren in Goshen was on hand one night with a very large group to swell the Christmas night audience. We returned the next morning during their meeting. Twenty-five came forward during the two weeks. These folks will add much strength to our church. Twenty have already been baptized and taken into the church, and ere the week ends the rest will have been baptized. We had a revival in the church that speaks for the thoroughness of the work done. Brother Grisso has special talents as an evangelist, and I am sure his church will be glad to spare him often in such work.

H. F. STUCKMAN, Pastor.

REVIVAL AT GOSHEN, INDIANA

Christmas Day, January fourth, found the Brethren at Goshen, Indiana, to begin an evangelistic meeting with Brother H. F. Stuckman and his good church. This was the first opportunity of viewing the new church and conducting an evangelistic meeting in the city of Goshen, although the last part of our ministry has been in Indiana. It was a privilege every one of which I enjoyed, to work with the church, and with a pastor who is so warmly loved and respected by his people.

The meetings advanced without a single setback to mar or detract. No one found fault with the weather, for it was great for the winter season. No one criticized the pastor for what he preached or did not do, nor for the length of his sermons, nor the manner of presenting them. Such a front always means victory. And the absence of it will set any preacher to beating the air over empty pews. In all our preaching we attempted to set forth clearly the doctrines of the church, especially the "first principles" of our faith. The folks were hungry for the Word and great crowds came from night to night and a deep genuine interest was maintained from the first to the last service. There were twenty-four who responded to the invitation to accept Christ or to identify themselves with his church.

The pastor and evangelist were aided by a goodly number of praying men and women and those who know how to win souls for Christ. All such is imperative in successful evangelism. Then again, we were encouraged by the presence of the Brethren from nearby churches. Brother W. I. Duker and one hundred fifty came one evening from Elkhart. The Nappanee Men's chorus added to the service one night. Brother Leatherman and Brother Edgar Duker with a group from South Bend aided us with their presence. The Church of the Brethren pastor at Goshen with a hundred of his people furnished us with as many listeners on a Monday evening. Dr. G. W. Rench was present on several occasions to see if some one of his "spiritual sons" was still "in the faith."

We were asked to give our new chart lecture, "God's Redemption Plan" at the college chapel. This we did, and the message and the messenger were kindly received by both faculty and students.

We shall not soon forget the days of fellowship and labor with the Goshen church and their pastor, with whom to associate is indeed a joy and a pleasure. To say the least, Goshen is a great church. Here is to be found some of the Lord's choicest men and women. May God bless them and keep them true to him and his Word in these days.

Lanark, Illinois

Just a word from home. We are happy to announce that the Lord's work is prospering and moving forward in Lanark. Our reports show a splendid gain over the preceding year. The church is finding its own in the matter of giving. Our finances are in a splendid condition. Peace and harmony prevail, there is "not a ripple upon the water," and we launch into the work of the new year with faith and hope to make it a great year of victory for Christ and his Church.

During my recent absence the pulpit was supplied by Rev. Chas. Delp, a local Church of the Brethren minister and Dr. C. F. Yoder. The church is highly appreciative of the messages brought by these brethren.

C. C. GRISSO.

ELKHART, INDIANA

Just a line. Our people are going forward with the work at Elkhart in the same spirit of loyalty that has ever characterized their work.

They are ever putting the things that may seem difficult, across in a most wonderful way, because of united effort, and blessings follow.

Dr. Bame will be with us again, February 1 in an intensive revival service.

We experienced a great revival a year ago with him. By prayers and united efforts even greater results may be experienced this year.

MRS. EDNA NICHOLAS.

PENNSYLVANIA DISTRICT

By Willis E. Ronk

(Continued from last week)

I have no notion of dictating to the Brethren Church what she shall believe, or to the ministers what they shall preach; but IF WE TAKE OUR PLEA SERIOUSLY, I see no reason why Brethren preachers in the course of a year's sermons, should not preach on such great themes as, "The Being or Personality of God," "The Person of Jesus Christ, his Incarnation or Deity or Virgin Birth," "His Finished Work," "The Atonement," "The Holy Spirit" and the "Second Coming," and others.

I trust that I have been sufficiently clear cut in the foregoing statements, that I will not be misunderstood in the next statement. We have claimed and do claim to be a Whole Gospel people; and frequently we have preached Baptism and Feetwashing as the Whole Gospel. We may not have believed that this was the Whole Gospel, but our preaching has many times left that impression on outsiders. Consequently they have rightly charged us with inconsistency. There is just as much danger that we shall emphasize some other belief or beliefs, as the Incarnation, or the Deity, or the Virgin Birth, or the Second Coming to the neglect of other doctrines, and that again we shall appear inconsistent. I am not pleading for any one of our doctrines today, but that we shall believe and teach them all,—that we shall consistently claim to be a whole Gospel people.

But where shall one leave off with a discussion of Doctrines and begin with the Practice of the Church? Belief and Practice are so closely related that it is difficult to draw accurately a line of demarcation. I realize that under the head of Doctrine, I have been discussing some practices; but under the head of Practices, I have something different in mind.

I have a very good ministerial friend in another denomination, who is a fundamentalist. When it came time for him to appear before the Ministerial Examining Board of his church, he was puzzled. The Board was made up of Modernists. When the day arrived and he was questioned concerning his Theology, he replied, "In Doctrine I am a Fundamentalist and in living I am a Modernist." As I know him, he told the truth; and that truth precisely illustrates what I want to say. There is many a so called Fundamentalist today, in belief, who is a Modernist in practice. I think it is equally true that there are those who claim to be Modernist in belief who are CONSERVATIVE in Practice.

I am always interested in noticing the various shades of religious belief among those I meet; but I have a far greater interest in noticing these shades of belief in connection with every day living. As a matter of fact deep seated belief does affect life; as one can easily see, when he meets those who are liberal in Theology and equally conservative in living. One is much gratified to find a liberal in Theology, who is conservative in every day living; but it is a real disappointment to find a Fundamentalist in Theology and his life making a lie of his profession. That there are many of this type, I presume no one would undertake to dispute. While this is a general condition affecting all denominations, it would hardly be necessary for us to go away from home to find examples. Anyone who is at all familiar with conditions in the Brethren Church knows well, that in many of our congregations there are members, who profess to be whole Bible people, and in spite of this profession are guilty of some of the grosser forms of immorality. And to our shame be it said, that we have had ministers who have been equally guilty. And what shall we say of divorce? We have many churches in which there are many divorced couples, and a preacher hardly dares to speak any word of warning or condemnation. The voice of laity and ministry alike should be heard in opposition to the increase of divorce.

There is another historic tenant of our faith—non-swearing. What is happening to it? There is a tremendous increase of swearing not only in the world but among Brethren people. I know Brethren, both men and women who are guilty of swearing, not once but who habitually do so, and thus bring discredit upon their profession. Closely allied to swearing, and just as serious a matter is the telling of obscene stories. I am sorry that there are even ministers of the church who are guilty, and who ought to be warned. This practice can be condemned on more than one ground, if necessary, but suffice it to say, "whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things."

There is one more thing which I would prefer to pass over, but which ought to be said, and that is in reference to honesty. Honesty of Church and honesty of preacher. In the first place, a Church which pits preacher against preacher in attempting to hire as cheaply as possible, is resorting to a questionable practice which frequently results in much grief, and when a church hires a man for a salary on which she knows he cannot live, is only inviting said pastor to leave without paying his debts. I have known of churches which failed to pay their pastor's salary, and then complained because he did not pay his debts. Some churches have been so dishonest as to permit their pastors to leave without paying his salary, and never paying the salary. I do not believe that any church which resorts to such methods will ever be blessed of the Lord in her work. Do you? It is equally true that no minister has a right to hire to a church for a salary, when he knows he cannot live on it. But if he does, he is not relieved of the obligation to pay all bills. A man who does not pay his bills is dishonest, whether of the ministry or laity. There are Brethren ministers who are guilty in this respect. I hope that there are none in this Conference. I trust that I will be pardoned for mentioning these specific things, which should have no place among us, by way of illustration of the statement that, by our lives we are sometimes making a lie of our profession. We must be whole Gospel in both BELIEF and PRACTICE.

In the mind of the speaker, the greatest need of the Church of today, is the need of Spiritual Culture, or the development of the Spiritual Life. There is always the need of a sound Theology, and we have such a Theology. But to make Theology vital, we must have the dynamic of Spiritual lives. We need consistency of Doctrine and of living; but the vital force making for consistency is Spirituality. But what is Spirituality? It is first of all based upon a true vision of God. We are living in a day, when emphasis is being placed upon "Natural Law," upon a world of "fixed causes moving of necessity." In the process God has been gradually taken from the center of things and from his throne. A vision of God means in seeing him with power "high and lifted up." It means seeing his righteousness and Holiness. The vision likewise implies that man sees himself as most unworthy in God's sight. Spirituality means the implanting of the true life within, through the New Birth. With too many people, the Christian life stops here. But there is the constant need of a new vision, first of God and then of self. This vision comes through the reading of God's Word, and its illumination by the Holy Spirit; through meditation and prayer; and by the giving of the life to be used as God wills. He who follows this rule will grow as the lily of the field, and as unobtrusively spread his fragrance.

Where there is a Spiritual Vision man will bear witness to that vision. I am firmly convinced that if we will make our chief task for the coming year, the deepening of our spiritual life, and that of the whole Church, many of our problems will find their solution. One of our greatest external problems, and of all churches for that matter,—is the great unrest which is eating away the heart of the Church, of both laity and ministry. This state portrays a lack of faith and confidence in God. We need a new vision of God and a new baptism of the Holy Spirit. We can have both if we so desire.

A new vision of God and a new trust in him will remake the life of our Church. It will lead to greater fervor in witnessing. This will result in a new revival in our churches and a new missionary zeal. It will make for clean living and a clear testimony,—a testimony of a WHOLE GOSPEL PEOPLE to the WHOLE GOSPEL,—to its power to save and to keep saved.

In concluding this message, I would desire that any words which might seem harsh, might have their harshness removed, by the assurance that they have been spoken only out of a heart of love, and from a sincere desire to help.

In keeping with this message, I recommend,—

1. That in Doctrine, we remember that we are a WHOLE GOSPEL people, and that we emphasize, without fear or favor, the WHOLE GOSPEL.

2. That we emphasize as never before, the importance of Spiritual Culture,—and hence clean living.

3. That Evangelism and Missionary enterprises be promoted in the churches, not through external methods; but by the out workings of the Holy Spirit in our lives.

4. That as true Gospel people, we emphasize the Stewardship of life and of money.

In the Fear of God, and under the Leadership of the Holy Spirit, may we carry on the work of this Conference, and plan for the future of the churches.

Meyersdale, Pennsylvania.

Sunday School Notes

(Continued from page 11)

maintain a spirit of love and peace and not one of hate and conflict. He is to overcome evil with God, as Paul admonishes the Romans (Rom. 12:21). In your effort to practice this principle, just remember: (1) To fight evil with evil to make two wrongs instead of one, thus increasing evil, both in the other person and in one's own self. meet evil with evil is to inflame the hate and excite the passions of the man doing the first wrong and the spirit of vengeance brings out the evil side of the man who wronged.

(2) Like encourages like; fire kindles fire. The tendency of good is to awaken good and the person who does good to one who has done him evil is likely not merely to put him to shame, but to stir up in his heart a desire to rise to a higher plane of living. Many a time the sincere Christian will find that his suffering evil instead of retaliating will touch the heart of the one.

(3) If the evil one is not overcome by good, yet the good is increased and strengthened by the effort, and therefore the proportion of good to the evil is increased. Love becomes stronger and more abundant every time it exercises itself toward evil. It conquers; it conquers in the soul of one who shows love instead of hate. So a victory is worth all its costs.

Three of the world's famed physicists—Nobel prize winners, are to meet at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena for a scientific interview—Dr. Albert Einstein from Germany, Dr. Albert Michelson on leave of absence from the University of Chicago, and Dr. Robert Millikan, head of the California Institute of Technology. Dr. Michelson will perform experiments with a vacuum tube a mile long to reckon speed at which light travels. Dr. Einstein is interested in exact measurement of light's speed because of its bearing on theories of the curvature and limitation of space.

OUR READERS' FORUM

ON MERGING OUR PUBLICATIONS

Dear Brother Baer:

To be sure I wasn't asked to express opinion, but feel sure you will pardon liberty. Your paragraph about the Christian Messenger interested me greatly, for it contained the very idea that has been in my mind of much wherever I have been and our publications have been discussed. The vision now is, only the ones interested even in the Missionary news—the ones that need it most, and the inspiration it can never get to read any of it. We think it should be one church paper and that it contain all home and foreign missionary news—making the Brethren Evangelist and better and of course charge more for it. That way all would get the Missionary news who are not at all interested in that line. Hope the idea can be carried out. It is fine.

Sincerely,
MRS. W. M. LYNN

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FOR BRETHREN HOME SUPPORT

Send all money for the Brethren Home Support Fund to Cecil Hendrix, Treasurer, Flora, Indiana.

FOR SUPERANNUATED MINISTERS' FUND

All money for the Superannuated Ministers' Fund is to be sent to Rev. G. L. Roann, Secretary, Roann, Indiana.

Vol. LIII
Number 6

February 7
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

DAVIES CORNER DRUG STORE
MAIN AND MAPLE STS
SOUTH FORK, PA.

BENEVOLENCE DAY OFFERING

To be taken on Sunday, February 22

EVERY CHURCH AND EVERY MEMBER

are urged to make a generous offering

The Superannuated Ministers' Fund And The Brethren's Home

THE DIVINE CHALLENGE

But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel.—I Timothy 5:8.

DAVIES CORNER DRUG STORE
MAIN AND MAPLE STS
SOUTH FORK, PA.

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

INTELLECTUALISM is not Enough.

The modern triumphs of the human mind have been so amazing that many are feeling that nothing is impossible, that we need no other God than this. Intellectualism has become the ruling spirit of the times. Man feels that in the released activity of the intellect he has at last become the "Master of his fate and the Captain of his soul."

"I have no desire to depreciate the value of intellectualism, but the verdict of history shows that intellectualism alone is cold and barren, utterly unable to sustain the human spirit. In proof, I submit the following testimonies from famous men who tried it."

KANT'S Testimony

"I would never live my life over again at any price."

VOLTAIRE'S Testimony

"Strike out a few sages, and the crowd of human beings is nothing but a horrible assemblage of unfortunate criminals, and the globe contains nothing but corpses. I tremble to have to complain once more of the Being of beings, in casting an attentive eye over this terrible picture. I wish I had never been born."

GOETHE'S Testimony

"I have ever been esteemed one of fortune's chiefest favorites; nor will I complain or find fault with the course my life has taken. Yet truly there has been nothing but toil and care; and I may say that in all my seventy-five years I have never had a month of genuine comfort. It has been the perpetual rolling of a stone which I have always had to raise anew." ... "Men will become more clever and more acute, but not better, happier, and stronger in action, or at least only at epochs. I foresee the time when God will have no more joy in them, but will break up everything for a renewed creation."

PROFESSOR CLIFFORD'S Testimony

"It cannot be doubted that the theistic belief is a comfort to those who hold it, and that the loss of it is a very painful loss. It cannot be doubted, at least by many of us in this generation, who either profess it now, or have received it in our childhood, and have parted from it since with such searching trouble as only cradle-faiths can cause. We have seen the spring sun shine out of an empty heaven to light up a soulless earth; we have felt with utter loneliness that the Great Companion is dead."

RENAN'S Testimony

"To sum up: if, through the constant labor of the nineteenth century, the knowledge of facts has considerably increased, the destiny of mankind has, on the other hand, become more obscure than ever. The serious thing is that we fail to perceive a means of providing humanity in the future with a catechism that will be acceptable henceforth, except on the condition of returning to a state of credulity. Hence it is possible that the ruin of idealistic beliefs may be fated to follow hard upon the ruin of supernatural beliefs, and that the real abasement of the morality of humanity will date from the day it has seen the reality of things. ... Candidly speaking, I fail to see how, without the ancient dreams, the foundations of a happy and noble life are to be relaid."

ROMANE'S Testimony

"Forasmuch," this writer says, "as I am far from being able to agree with those who affirm that the twilight doctrine of 'the new faith' is a desirable substitute for the waning splendour of 'the old,' I am not ashamed to confess that, with this virtual negation of God, the universe to me has lost its soul of loveliness; and although from henceforth the precept 'to work while it is day' will doubtless but gain an intensified force from the terribly intensified meaning of the words, 'The night cometh when no man can work,' yet, when at times I think, as think at times I must, of the appalling contrast between the hallowed glory of that creed which once was mine, and the lonely mystery of existence as I now find it, as such times I shall ever feel it impossible to avoid the sharpest pang of which my nature is susceptible. For, whether it be due to my intelligence not being sufficiently advanced to meet the requirements of the age, or whether it be due to the memory of those sacred associations which, to me at least, were the sweetest that life has given, I cannot but feel that for me, and for others who think as I do, there is a dreadful truth in those words of Hamilton,—philosophy having become a meditation, not merely of death, but of annihilation, the precept know thyself has become transformed into the terrible oracle to Oedipus, 'Mayest thou never know the truth of what thou art.'"

THEODORE JOUFFROY'S Testimony

"Never shall I forget the December evening when the veil which hid my unbelief from mine own eyes was torn away. ... The hours of the night glided away, and I perceived it not; I anxiously followed my thought, which descended step by step to the bottom of my consciousness, and dissipating, one after another, all the illusions which till then had hid them from my view, rendered its subterfuges more and more visible to me. In vain I clung to my last beliefs, as a shipwrecked sailor to the fragments of his ship; in vain, terrified by the unknown waste in which I was about to float, I threw myself back once more upon my childhood, my family, my country, all that was dear and sacred to me; the inflexible current of my thought was the stronger; parents, family, memories, beliefs—it forced me to leave all. This examination became more obstinate and more severe as it approached the end; nor did it stop till the end was reached. I knew then that at the bottom of myself there was nothing left standing, that all I had believed about myself, about God, and about my destiny in this life and in that to come, I now believed no more. This moment was frightful; and when, towards morning, I threw myself exhausted upon my bed, it seemed to me as if I could feel my former life, so cheerful and complete, die away, and before me there opened up another life, dark and despoiled, where henceforth I was to live alone, alone with my fatal thought which had just exiled me thither, and which I was tempted to curse."

PROFESSOR HUXLEY'S Testimony

"I know," he says, "no study which is unutterable saddening as that of the evolution of humanity, as it is set forth in the annals of history. Out of the darkness prehistoric ages man emerges with the marks of his lowly origin strong upon him. He is a brute, only more intelligent than the other brutes; a blind prey to impulses which as often as not lead him to destruction; a victim to endless illusions, which make his mental existence a terror and burden, and fill his physical life with barren toil and battle. He attains a certain degree of physical comfort, and develops more or less workable theory of life, in such favorable situations as the plains of Mesopotamia or of Egypt, and then, for thousands and thousands of years, struggles with varying fortunes, attended by infinite wickedness, bloodshed, and misery, to maintain himself at this point against the greed and ambition of his fellowmen. He makes a point of killing and otherwise persecuting all those who first try to get him to move on; and when he has moved on a step forward, he confers post-mortem deification on his victims. He exactly repeats the process with all who want to move a step yet further. And the best men of the best epochs are simply those who make the fewest blunders, and commit the fewest sins."

THE Final Word is Christ's

All these great thinkers whose testimonies have been quoted found no permanent resting place in Intellectualism. The end of mere intellectualism is pessimism, cynical world-weariness, and hopeless despair.

The Word of Christ still stands: "Without Me ye can do nothing." "Come unto me, ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

A plant with flowers but no leaves, the lives by tapping the roots of other plants has been rediscovered in the desert near the California-Mexico boundary. The thick fleshy root of this plant is good for human food. The original discoverers, eighty years ago, found the Papago Indians using it for food.

IN THIS NUMBER

Some Emphases of the Ohio Pastor's Convention—Editor, .....
Tell Them what the Saloon Was—Editor, .....
Editorial Review, .....
Devotions in the Home for Children—C. L. Anspach, .....
The Superannuated Need—Frank Roscoe, .....
The Ohio Pastor's Convention—C. A. Bame, .....
1931 Will Determine Victory of 1932—C. R. Jones, .....
Studies in the Scriptures—C. F. Yoder, .....
The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon, .....
"And Still It Grows"—C. G. Twombly, .....
Canton's Society Alive and Active—Thelma Bechtel, .....
Fifty Years of Christian Endeavor, News from the Field, .....	12
Our Little Readers, .....
Announcements, .....

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Some Emphases of the Ohio Pastors' Convention

The Ohio Pastors' Convention has for twelve years held the spot of interest in interdenominational ministerial cooperation for mutual helpfulness. Ministers representing practically all the Protestant churches of Ohio have been meeting for a four-day convention once a year, when the many and varied problems that face themselves to the work of the pastor are discussed in open session and when some of the outstanding religious leaders of the state bring messages of instruction and inspiration. It is no ordinary institution, for the idea has met with such favor that it has spread into other states, where similar conventions have been arranged. But the Ohio Pastors' Convention is still the biggest and most outstanding event of its kind—biggest in attendance and in the number of outstanding speakers it imports, and is studied as a pattern for other such gatherings.

In principle it is nothing more than a local pastors' meeting—as almost every Brethren minister participates in—on a large scale, attendance being wholly an individual affair, each attending minister being charged an enrollment fee of three dollars, with the expense of the convention is defrayed. Among so large a body of ministers there are a number of different interests that are dominant, and so the convention has each year a number of different commissions or committees meeting simultaneously for part of each day, and in which different kinds of church problems are discussed.

This year the convention theme being "The Technique of an Efficient Minister," there were nine different commissions or discussion groups, studying the different phases of the pastor's task. The ones on which the writer was able to gather data were the following:

The Minister as a Preacher. There was general agreement among the ministers in this group that preaching was the primary duty of the preacher, and while different notes as to the message were sounded, the vast majority were agreed that the greatest challenge was still to challenge the world with the simple Gospel of Jesus Christ. Many suggestions were offered for making preaching more effective, but most fundamental of all seemed to be a deeper and ever growing spiritual experience on the part of the minister.

The Minister as a Pastor. Dr. John Timothy Stone insisted that the pastor ought to be continually busy among his people, not resting nor making fashionable calls, but seeking to win men to Christ and to set them to work for Christ. He said every pastor should find the time to meet men where they are to be found if he will do his work and be prompt, brief and in earnest. "The laziest pastor and the laziest minister," he declared, "is he who is so busy that he has no time to do what he ought to do."

The Minister as an Administrator. The pastor was looked upon as the inspiring and guiding factor in determining the local church program, but it must be formed, as it must be carried out, in cooperation with the best lay leadership of his congregation. Dr. Poling stated that the church was the greatest, the biggest institution in all the world and that it was administered more wisely and efficiently than any other, and with less failures than any other business.

The Minister as an Educator. Teaching is part of the minister's task and every minister must not only get himself prepared, but keep himself informed and prepared for the task of a religious educator. The educational program of the church, it was pointed out, must have in mind leading the individual to a decision for the Christian life and contributing to Christian character. The minister should not merely seek to educate the young for church membership but should educate them in church attendance by some means, some form of the Junior church being recommended, also for Choirs, Junior sermons, and other special features.

(5) The Minister as a Student of Present Day Problems. The minister should seek to keep abreast of present day problems, but should not set himself up as an authority on all. However, wherever sin and injustice and socially deteriorating agencies and influences prevail, his voice should not be silent nor his attitude uncertain. He should meet the enemies of Christianity in a Christian way and constructively, but with positive, unquestioned opposition. The problems that rise out of human greed must be met courageously by the gospel message, declared Dr. Ralph Cushman. "Millions in every land are demanding that property and wealth be dedicated to service and humanity." The solution to the problem, he said was to preach stewardship. "If we could only preach stewardship for one generation, the wealth of the next generation would be Christianized." And, that it is important that such a note be sounded by the ministry can be judged from the fact that sixty per cent of the wealth of the world is in the hands of one per cent of the population. Stewardship must be applied to every life he said, but particularly if rulers and capitalists cannot be made to recognize their stewardship and that wealth ought to be dedicated to the good of all, there is no hope for the world. "Either radical socialism or Christian stewardship must prevail."

In many ways there was stressed the importance of taking the Gospel message seriously and endeavoring to bring it into practice both by precept and example. Dr. Cushman quoted the remarkable Butler statement that, "There are plenty of people who would be equally horrified at seeing the Christian religion doubted or at seeing it practiced." We profess to believe it; let us also practice it.

Tell Them What the Saloon Was

The young people under twenty do not know what the old legalized saloon was, and so cannot understand why it is that the church has been so bitterly opposed to it and why the Prohibition forces are appealing so strongly to them to take their stand against it. We must tell them as faithfully as we can what the saloon really was.

We must tell them that the saloon was one of the greatest social evils that ever afflicted mankind. We must tell them that it was the breeder of all sorts of vice, crime and corruption. We must tell them that the saloon produced (and for a price the government gave permission to produce) poverty, profligacy, misery, disease and death. Let us be really frank and tell them that by our public policy we helped to transform men made in the image of God into children of the devil, and young people rich in possibilities and full of hope into felons, harlots, paupers, madmen and murderers.

And tell them that for a hundred years every conceivable effort was made to regulate it, to control it and to eliminate some of its most conspicuous evils, but that this long and varied experience with it had proven to the American people that the saloon was an outlaw by nature, that it would not obey the law and could not be controlled, and that it could not be separated from its evils. Finally after remarkable patience and long suffering the public became convinced that the only way to deal with the saloon was to destroy it. That is why we have Prohibition and why we must keep it.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

A church just wrote asking for an extension of time for gathering in a sheaf of new subscriptions at the $1.35 rate. We promptly granted the request. We will accommodate others yet, if they will write us.

A list of twenty-eight new subscriptions was just received from the Second church of Long Beach, California. Thank you, good Brethren. We now have a very fine roll of papers going to the city of Long Beach, and we appreciate the loyalty of these two churches.

The announcement just reached the Editor's desk of the arrival in the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Gingrich, Johnstown, Pennsylvania, of a baby girl, named Doris Elaine. She put in her appearance on January 30th, 1931. The father and mother, of course, are happy and we congratulate them on this blessing of God bestowed upon their home.

In a letter from Brother W. I. Duker, pastor at Elkhart, Indiana, we learn that the splendid choir of the Elkhart church broadcasted a program on Sunday evening, January 25th, from 6 to 6:30 over W O W O, Fort Wayne. An excellent program was rendered and the choir was invited to broadcast again at a convenient future date, when announcement will be made in advance so that Brethren radio fans can tune in. Dr. Bame is now in a meeting at Elkhart.

Dr. G. C. Carpenter writes some interesting observations from his "cozy cottage, 'The Maryland'" in the neighborhood of Miami, Florida. Instead of traveling westward during December, as planned, he and his good wife yielded to the lure of Florida and they are there yet. But wherever he is, Brother Carpenter has eyes to see more than "things" and we are glad he is sharing with us some of his helpful and timely comments.

We have been in receipt some weeks past of the year books of Waynesboro, and the First church of Long Beach, California. At the latter place Dr. Bauman is the pastor and of the Waynesboro church Brother W. C. Benshoff is the pastor. These publications and others that have come to our desk indicate that our churches are not allowing the depression to hinder appreciably the great work of the kingdom, and in a spiritual way the work is being more intensified, if anything.

The church at Telford, Tennessee, is moving forward with rejoicing under the pastoral care of Brother M. D. Early. Christian Endeavor is prospering and is graded to meet the needs of the different age groups. Four persons have been added to the church during the past year. A parsonage was built with commendable courage, but being caught by the drought and subjected to financial hardships, they felt themselves justified in using their Home Mission offering and their White Gift offering to apply on their local debts.

We are in receipt of a weekly calendar published by the Harrah, Washington, church, of which Brother Fred V. Kinzie is the capable pastor. The church paper was recently put on the budget of this growing mission church, and in the calendar in hand we notice this item: "Remember, if The Brethren Evangelist does not come to your home, something is wrong; please advise the pastor. And again, IF you receive it regularly and seldom or never read it, something more serious is wrong; please consult the Lord."

The Canton Christian Endeavorers are very much alive, and another characteristic is that they are directing their energies toward the accomplishment of certain definite goals. And they are arriving. We are glad to note that one of those goals is reporting at least quarterly to the Evangelist. Let others follow their example, and we are pleased to be able to say that some others are doing that very thing, as you shall see. Every society that's alive ought to make an occasional report. Please don't report the dead ones, until they are resurrected.

The church at Lost Creek, Kentucky, has experienced a remarkable growth in attendance and interest "during the past three months," according to the report of our correspondent. The attendance has jumped from an average of ninety to an average of two hundred each Sunday, and he says the spirit matches the attendance. They are hauling the people to the services in motor vehicles. The Men's and Women's Bible classes are in an interesting attendance contest. We congratulate Brother G. E. Drushal and his splendid helpers on this new manifestation of interest. May it continue, and increase yet more.

In a personal communication from Brother A. D. Cashman, pastor of the Second church of Los Angeles, California, we learn that he and his people are greatly encouraged over the condition of the work there. The attendance, he informs us, is increasing in all the departments of the work. They have set a goal of 200 in attendance at the Sunday evening services. At present it is 186, so they do not have far to go.

Brother Thomas Presnell, pastor at Aleppo, Pennsylvania, favours us with a newsletter. He was recently assisted in a revival by Brother Grant McDonald of Smithville, Ohio. Three were added to the church by baptism as a result, and the church was greatly benefited spiritually by Brother McDonald's consecration of himself and of message. A new church has been organized at Cameron, West Virginia and is being ministered to by Brother Presnell. They are planning to have a beautiful new church building soon, built of blue stone taken from a nearby quarry, secured at an unusually low price. May God prosper them in their effort.

Sometime ago there were requests made through The Evangelist for the names of members of the Brethren church living in Chicago, Illinois. Mrs. R. F. Singer of Oak Hill, West Virginia writes that she knows of a family of Brethren friends of hers, living at 5337 South Union Avenue, Chicago. Those interested might find it worth while to look up this number, the name was not given. It is a splendid thing for isolated Brethren to get together for fellowship and for encouragement in the faith whenever possible. That helps to make up in a small way for the lack of a place of worship with those of like faith.

Brother George E. Cone, pastor at Milledgeville, Illinois writes that all the special days in the Brethren calendar have been observed and offerings lifted. That means a lot, not only to the general interests of the church, but to the members of the congregation. We believe it is building into the various local church groups a vision of the wider needs of the church and a spirit of general concern and loyalty that will have a good influence on the future of the denomination. He solved his summer church attendance problem by holding on while all the other local churches were closed on Sunday evening. He is now experimenting with union Sunday evening services through the winter months, so says.

The Last Sunday in February is Benevolence Day when it is requested that every church lift an offering for the Superannuated Ministers' Fund and another offering for the Brethren Home. Brother Fred C. Vanator, president of the Benevolence Board, informs that the treasurer has not enough money to make the next payments to the aged ministers and their dependents, to whom the denomination has made a pledge for support. The treasurer, Brother Frank Roscoe, makes that point in this paper. These needy servants of God must not be allowed to suffer during these difficult times. Doubtless the Brethren Home at Flora, Indiana, is just as anxious for a generous offering to help in the support of this splendid institution. Turn to the back page for addresses to whom to send these offerings.

Brother R. D. Barnard, pastor of the First Brethren church, Dayton, Ohio, informs us that his work is going forward nicely. He speaks highly of the Miami Valley Bible Institute held in his church last November, at which Dr. C. F. Yoder and Prof. M. Stuckey were the Bible lecturers. The church school during the past year made an average attendance of 525 and their largest attendance was 1078. The banner attendance occurred on Loyal Sunday, when a special program was put on under the leadership of the young people. That is the place to begin to build the spirit of loyalty into your congregation—in the lives of your young people. And loyalty—intelligent church loyalty—is a very much needed quality in our church life today. We shall be glad to receive the promised report of the meeting under the evangelistic leadership of Brother S. M. Whetstone.

From Harrah, Washington, we have a splendid report of progress. Under the energetic leadership of Brother and Sister Fred V. Kinzie, the church has gone forward from a membership of 54 at the beginning of 1930 to 114 at its close. The church was much strengthened in numbers and in spirituality by the successful evangelistic campaign by Brother R. I. Humbert, concerning the results of which we have previously made mention. Brother Kinzie has adopted the splendid policy of instructing his converts in the church fundamentals. Whether it is done before baptism or immediately following, as some prefer, we believe it ought to become the universal practice of our church to instruct new converts in the doctrines and practices of the church. This is one of the first churches where most of the Sunday school children remain in the church. An interesting New Year's eve service is reported, and by regular program prayer is being made an important factor in this church's life.

Devotions in the Home for Children

By Prof. C. L. Anspach, Ph.D.

One Sunday morning a mother was having some difficulty in getting her children ready for Sunday school. The children were rather slow in getting dressed, and, as the distracted mother was concerned, everything seemed to be going wrong. Finally they were all ready to start. The father, who was sitting with his feet up reading the Sunday paper thought he would assist the mother by impressing the children with good advice. Turning to his little son he said, "Bob, when I was your age I was always the first ready for Sunday school. I got up without being told; dressed; helped mother, and I beat all the others in the family to church. Often I was the first one there." Little Bob who had observed his father each Sunday morning remaining at home to read the paper instead of going to Sunday school made no reply to his father, but as he was going out of the door was heard to remark, "I don't suppose it will do me any good either when I get to be a man." In this little story we have a great fundamental truth. "I don't suppose it will do me any good either when I get to be a man." Christianity must be lived; it is more than form and ritual. I am not surprised that many of our children go to Sunday school and church and then later in life leave these institutions. The trouble is not so much with the church and Sunday school as it is with the home. This brings me to my first essential for devotions in the home: DEVOTIONAL ATTITUDE TOWARD THE OTHER MEMBERS OF THE HOME. If the individual has the right attitude toward God he certainly will have the right attitude toward those who surround him. It is necessary, however, to call our attention to the fact that real Christianity will and must show in everyday living. Is it any wonder that children turn from the church when they see their parents go through the form of worship in church and then come home and treat each other in a terrible manner? After such a performance is it any wonder that they say, "I don't suppose it will do us any good when we grow up." IF YOU WOULD HAVE YOUR CHILDREN ACCEPT CHRISTIANITY, LIVE IT IN YOUR HOME AND DAILY LIFE.

We hear a great deal about the Golden Rule and the Second Mile Philosophy of Jesus being impossible of attainment. Why say it is impractical and impossible to attain? The very ones who condemn are the least willing to try. When we live right, then and then only, can we have the right basis for family devotions.

After the family is united on the correct manner of living then we are ready for the second step in our devotional program, WORSHIP OF GOD. All forms of Christian activity should be devotional and should include singing, Bible reading, memorization of Bible verses and so on. Many people think that devotions apply only to the church; this is a false idea, prayer is only a part of the devotional program.

We often in conducting the devotional period think only of the interests of the adult and pay very little attention to the interests of the children. I once heard a man remark that he thought devotions a waste of time. Inquiry revealed the fact that he had received the wrong impressions of the exercise through certain unfortunate childhood experiences. His father gathered the family together each day after the noonday meal. He always read a chapter from the Bible and generally the reading was taken from some section of the Bible far beyond the understanding of the children. He failed to see any practical benefit from such an exercise and naturally dropped the service as soon as he was old enough to escape parental authority. That father was a good father but he overlooked several things in trying to teach his children. First, the home devotions should be for the children. The home is an institution of instruction and the family devotion is for the purpose of teaching children to worship God and to instill in them the necessity for devotions. Second, he thought that all parts of the Bible were of equal value for devotional purposes. He was right as far as the adult is concerned, but all wrong from the standpoint of child life. St. Paul recognized that fact and talks about the giving of milk and then solids according to the spiritual development of the persons.

In the third place, he thought that the Bible had to be read by chapters, one at each sitting. Instead of a chapter, one verse may be better if it is properly explained to the child. If ministers must spend hours on one verse in preparing a sermon we need not feel that we must read a chapter at each devotional period.

Now in considering a complete devotional period we must view the several parts making it up. Music is one of the few activities that will cement the home together. All the members enjoy singing even though they may not be the best of singers. The activity is emotional in nature and an arousal of the emotions tends to increase good feeling, especially if the emotion can be directed into definite directions. We do little singing in the home. The old fashioned song fests were well worth while. I believe we would benefit from several song services a year in church where all the congregation engages in singing the old favorites. In our singing I know of no kind of music better than the hymns of the Church. They are fine because they express the highest ideals of men and women. They are attempts to find God, to worship him and to adore him. They often reveal him in all his majesty.

The sacred hymns also assist in storing the mind of the child with choice bits of poetry and rhythm. Children enjoy poetry and rhythm; if you doubt that fact notice your child's interest in rhythm . . . the swing of child songs . . . and the eagerness with which he learns the Mother Goose Rhymes. If the child has this interest why not take advantage of it and store the mind with good materials through the song? Often children will learn memory verses in this manner when they find it difficult in other ways. Songs like, "I Washed My Hands this Morning;" "Sunbeam;" "God is Love;" "Brighten the Corner;" are good for young children and, "Holy, Holy, Holy;" "Silent Night;" "O Little Town of Bethlehem;" "My Faith Looks Up to Thee" are excellent for the older children.

As previously stated, in selecting the Scripture reading the child should be considered. Bible reading is important for it furnishes a background for the teaching of Christian ideals and morals. It isn't necessary to turn to sources other than the Bible for materials with which we can instruct our children. I am in favor of using all kinds of materials in the Sunday school but I am not in favor of making the Sunday school a duplicate of the day school. Hand work and cut out work are good as methods of instruction in Sunday school but there is no reason for neglecting religious instruction because of them. I am not sure if my point is clear or not: I mean, USE THE METHODS OF THE DAY SCHOOL BUT STICK TO THE BIBLE FOR CONTENT. There is plenty of material in the Bible for teaching love, kindness, honor, honesty, etc. So in the home devotions the child can come to know love, kindness, sympathy, honesty, God, by a study of the characters of the Bible and the placing of the ideals in operation in the home.

In connection with the Bible reading it is well to teach Bible verses. Children can memorize them easily and there are choice parts of the Bible that they could learn. I do not believe in the idea that we should not ask our children to memorize. We can make the meaning of certain verses clear and the child will gladly memorize. Such verses as the Lord's Prayer, The 23rd Psalm; Isaiah 9: 6-7; Matt. 7:7-11; John 3 are not beyond the comprehension of the child. We do not hesitate to ask our children to memorize poetry in day school, why hesitate in Sunday school and the home.

Lastly, we must teach our children to pray. I know that it is difficult and many of us feel like saying, "Lord, teach us to pray." But we can assist our children in a number of ways. Some one has made the point that we ought to make our children feel that they are praying to God and not to us:—the child should say his prayers to God and not to the parent.

Start the child in his prayer life with a simple prayer. This will give the child a pattern and in time he will come to add to it. In my experience I have found that our children started with the little form,

Jesus is kind to us each day
Jesus smiles down on us each night
Now we thank him for our food
And for the stars that shine so bright.

Or

All around the world so fair
Children clasp their hands in prayer,
Thanking God for their daily food
Asking him to make them good.

Or

Now I lay me down to sleep
I pray the Lord my soul to keep
In peace and safety till I wake
And this I ask for Jesus' sake.

and then later they added thoughts of their own. I never will forget the first expression of this kind. While in the University I was faced with language examinations in German and French. Our little girl had heard my discussion of the difficulties of the French examination and it evidently had made an impression. One day after repeating one of the above verses she finished with this sentence, "Dear Jesus, please help Daddy with his French." The meaning of prayer was dawning and her relation to God was established.

Children are never too young to start praying. It can be started with early infancy in the use of a simple sentence. If we remember that devotions in the home are first for the child, we will see singing, Bible reading, and prayer in the right relationship. DO NOT NEGLECT TO INSTRUCT YOUR CHILD.

Ypsilanti, Michigan.

The Superannuated Need

By Frank Roscoe, Treasurer, Superannuated Ministers' Board

Once again we are approaching the time of year when the material needs of those who have been disqualified by age, must be considered.

At the present time we have twelve aged ministers or their dependents on our list and the yearly disbursement amounts to approximately $2,700.00, or $675.00 per quarter. We have on hand exactly $133.74 with which to meet our March 1st obligation to these needy people.

It is very imperative that an early response be made if we are to avoid disappointment and suffering.

True, we have for some time past, experienced what we call depression, and no doubt some of us will feel that we cannot measure up to our desire to give to this work for the cause, but we must not fail those who labored for the church years ago and who are not depending upon us.

Brother J. L. Kimmel served for a period of eight years as treasurer of this board and in a large measure was responsible for its present solid basis. It is now an opportunity as a reorganized board along with you to build a structure upon this foundation.

New Paris, Indiana.

The Ohio Pastors' Convention

By Charles A. Bame, D.D.

Each year for a number of years there has gathered in Columbus, the Capital of our state, what is called the Pastors' Convention. To most of them it has been a privilege to be a delegate. I say "privilege" advisedly for I deem it so.

In the first place, it is a good, mid-winter vacation from the onerous duties. I believe that many a preacher would do much better work if he had the opportunity just to get away from his usual every-day circle of duties and around with most any kind of different company on a course, provided it was not really bad, nor too disagreeable. The faithful pastor has a sort of humdrum, run-around of duties that are a large component of his task. The pastors' fellowship and company and the different programs and different meals and what not, will help him get away from himself and to keep him from distraction. It is fine for a vacation.

The second good that comes from such a convention is that of fellowship with kindred spirits who have had similar problems and duties. However much preachers differ, they all have problems and they are much the same no matter what the creed or lack of creed. It is no easy task to have people to live up to their professional creed, no matter how much or how little there is of it, nor how much or how little their methods agree. In any course, preachers do not all agree in beliefs nor in methods, but almost any preacher can profit from the experience of others, even though they differ.

Anyway, I hope the time may never come when we have such small preachers that they are afraid to hear the opinions of others who even radically disagree. I think the Lord was ever harsh, it was to the bigots of his day that he thought they had a patent-right on religion and that he spoke only to them and through them. He is the same yesterday, today and forever. I do not always eat all that my wife prepares for me at the meal, nor should I consider myself worthy of a minister's ordination if I ate all that is dished up for me in many a sermon, to which I listen when once I have gone to a church service. Wheat and tares are seldom unmixed in any message of any of us. In other words, we seldom hear a sermon in which any one if it has anything of unique thought in it, is every sentence of which we can say, "amen." Christianity is not like that, anyway. It never was; it never will be. Pardon me for this tangent, but I want to say immediately, that this is not meant as an apology for the message I heard. I do not want to say that half of the message of Joseph Fort Newton on the "Sacrament of Preaching" was the finest thing I ever heard on the subject; the last half was more like tares to me. But the subjects and discussions on the whole were very stirring and helpful.

More than that, I enjoyed immensely the new acquaintances I made and the renewal of old ones, among whom was meeting for the first time for nearly thirty years county examiner whose name is on several of my old preacher's certificates of that ancient period, who became preacher in the M. E. church about the time I became Brethren preacher and also, the meeting of some new church of the Brethren preachers for the first time and intimate fellowship and conference with them on mutual problems and perplexities relating to future closer union in the prosecution of the Master's work as intended by both of us.

Third, this convention gives preachers a chance to hear the country's religious leaders. To have the chance we have this year to hear the young man, youngest ever to be elected to the Methodist Bishopric, big enough to remain when he thought there was a larger field for him in which to serve as a pastor, take us around the world; Bishop Blake of Indiana; Dan Poling, and many others is going to be "sneezed at." I do not have too much sympathy for anyone who will sneer or scoff at a program with such world-leaders as these and others whose names I do not recall. Great minds resolving the great problems of the world into their elements from first-hand knowledge; great leaders whose daily contacts amount to more than some of ours in months or years, can enlighten even though our methods of solving them do not agree; first-hand knowledge of their thought and ideas is better than it ever is on paper which sometimes is differently interpreted than the intention of the speaker or author. There are more ways than one in which "type" is not stretch or yield."

Fourth, this convention makes possible the Peace Declaration Contest. It has been my privilege several times to represent Ashland College as a judge in this contest. This year, twelve hundred (1200) young people of high school age learned a choice declamation on the subject of peace. By repeated contests, they are eliminated until only six come to the final meeting at this Convention. Think of the good those 1200 young people have done for their parents, neighbors, friends who listened to them first in their churches, then in their towns, then in their districts, and finally in the Pastor's Convention. I tell you that I think a church that has had a record like ours, should send its pastors to one of these conventions so that they might be "fired" and become the first promoters of this worthy program for the promotion of peace. Rather humiliating that in all the contests I have judged, there has never been one Brethren to win in the state contest. O Brethren, what's the matter with our peace profession? Come on, let's go after that for a Brethren!

The final good thing in this convention has become to us the fraternal fellowship between the pastors of the various denominations and Brethren peoples. Really, who could tell at this convention, "which from the other?" We have meals together twice and discussed our agreements more than our differences—for really, there is no more difference between the pastors of the conferences than there is between the pastors in each one. In other words, we are not more separated by our conferences than we are in them. I hope, by another year, there may be many more of both peoples in our State Pastor's Convention and that we shall be able to secure the values and inspiration needed for our tasks.

ABSENT HERE: AT HOME THERE

Absent from the body, at home with the Lord. Just a change of residence from the tabernacle which suggests pilgrimage, to the house which suggests settlement; from the body, which is after all but the probationary abode of the spirit, to union with the Lord, which is the realization of all that for which we are now in process of training.—G. Campbell Morgan.

1931 Will Determine Victory of 1932

By Charles R. Jones, Chairman American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation

The "wets" can win in 1932, elect a President opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment and a Congress pledged to modification, if not repeal, only if the "dry" voters of the United States stay away from the polls or fail to make their dominant influence felt in favor of the Amendment between now and the next Federal election, declared Charles R. Jones, Chairman of the American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation in an interview, this week, at the Foundation Headquarters.

A "wet" victory in 1932 would be a tragedy of the highest degree for all the elements of law and order, civic progress and moral and industrial advancement through all America, and yet there is sufficient possibility that this might happen, to rouse the sleeping ardor and dynamic thought of every intelligent man and woman who realizes the importance of preserving in our Constitution the great protective Amendment.

The one necessary thing for those who are loyal to the Eighteenth Amendment is to clearly face the danger, which can be no longer hidden from the entire country. Anti-prohibition propaganda, political influence spreading out from our dripping "wet" centers, backed by ample money supplied from the surpluses of millionaires who expect either to make more money through the traffic if legalized or to shift the large part of their tax burdens upon the traffic's victims if Prohibition should be repealed—these are the serious factors in a situation which challenges the whole future of the Great Reform.

Liquor's greatest drive in history began November 5, the day after the 1930 election! What happened on November 4 was a startling spur to the forces of nullification, lawlessness, and Prohibition repeal, to inaugurate their most defiant campaign that began in earnest the next day, with one object—the election of a "wet" President and an anti-Prohibition Congress in 1932!

So far, liquor's advancing "come back" has been more spectacular than real. Under cover of industrial depression and unrest, world-wide in extent, the "wets" put across a vigorous campaign backed by hundreds of thousands of dollars contributed from the millionaire coffers of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. The next two years will be the acid test of destiny for National Prohibition. It will be an everlasting disgrace for the patriots of America who enacted the Eighteenth Amendment to weakly submit to such vicious and desperate onslaught. The Prohibition defeats of November, 1930, have been caused by an unchecked flood of liquor lies and misrepresentation in the daily press, that went largely unchallenged.

Prohibition can be saved. But nothing less than earnest effort, united action and eternal vigilance will do it. We must and can re-educate the millions through this same daily press through which the "wets" have had their way without limit, up to now. Full-page advertisements, telling the truth about Prohibition, quietly, clearly and convincingly, will do it. . . . By means of this plan it is hoped that fifty million daily press readers, most of them now misinformed or lacking the truth, will receive a liberal education in the benefits and vital importance of Prohibition to the whole future of America.

We cannot shilly-shally in an hour like this. A sleeping "dry" is no match for an alert and fighting "wet." The one sure demand of the instant is to go forward with the strongest, most effective educational program that can be carried out among the rank and file of American earnest, well-meaning, good citizens. No one can surely say the saloon will not come back with all its train of vice and terror if we fail to do our part.

We wish we could spread out, on the library table of every Prohibition friend in America, the avalanche of editorials boasting and gleeful over the anti-Prohibition victories, of endless columns of manufactured "special news stories of wet "gains," of cartoons holding up to contempt and ridicule every slant of Prohibition effort or activity which have appeared in almost continuous succession in the radically "wet" daily newspapers of the entire country since the election. Never before has there been such an astonishing outburst of insolent assurance, and of unqualified prediction that "Prohibition Is Now Doomed," "The Eighteenth Amendment Will Surely Be repealed," "The Volstead Act Will Be Wiped Out By 1933," "Beer and Light Wines Now Certain To Come Back!"

For instance, recently, Mr. L. J. Taber, the distinguished Master of the National Grange, in his annual address before the National Convention of that great farm organization, made a stirring plea on behalf of Prohibition, and declared that the million members of his great movement would support it more staunchly than ever, in the face of current attacks. A complete copy of this address is before us, but the leading and most widely circulated "wet" daily newspaper of the West, setting the pace for its lesser colleagues, reports the address but suppresses even the slightest mention of the Master's thorough-going discussion and declaration upon Prohibition. This is a fair sample of the way the "wets" propose to stifle fair discussion.

"Close-up" investigation by the Foundation's Research Department shows that the anti-Prohibition leaders made use of the recent Prohibition referendums of the Literary Digest, the American Bar Association, and the National Economic League, to intensify "wet" sentiment, though the facts contradicted the claims of press reports in important particulars.

The sensationaly heralded decision of District Federal Judge Clark, declaring the Eighteenth Amendment invalid, is now acknowledged to have been, so far as its "publicity" was concerned, a prearranged "wet trick" for within twenty-four hours the most rampant liquor apologists in the daily press agreed that there was not "one chance in a million" of its being accepted or confirmed by the United States Supreme Bench. But it was a vivid illustration of the way in which the liquor forces of the country are, as they have been during the past ten years, dominating the daily press with their point of view.

This situation must be changed immediately and can be by an equally strong and constructive presentation of the truth about Prohibition, its results and potential values, direct to the masses, through the news and advertising columns of the press, which, for the most part, has carried but one side to its readers.

The Editor would add: That is all very fine, nothing would do more to make Prohibition vigorously and actively supported by the masses than the agency of the newspapers, if it can be brought to its support. But it will take an immense amount of money to compete for space with the highly financed liquor interests. Success to the effort. But let church members realize that the religious press, the pulpit and Sunday school teacher, and every other agency possible must be brought into action to bring about the much needed re-education of the people concerning the importance of Prohibition.

The victory of death over Jesus was not to endure; but his enemies did not know it.

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURE

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

Is it true that the ten commandments will be kept in the new ages and the rest will not?

No. It is not true because:

1. The Bible nowhere says so.

2. The coming age is that of the "regeneration" 19:28) of both Jews and Gentiles. (Acts 15:7; 1 12:13). All alike shall have the law written in their hearts (Heb. 8:10; Rom. 7:6).

3. The prophets, speaking of the coming dispensation, mention the temple and priests, sabbaths, new moons, other feasts (Zech. 14:19, 20) Isa. 66:21-23). Are we to have all these? Is the world to go back to the letter of the law? or will the Jews enter the new covenant, and form part of the one people of God? (Romans 11:25-31)

3. The truth is that the prophetic language takes familiar terms of the law to picture the time when it shall be fulfilled in Spirit under the new covenant made in blood of Christ. Let us take an example: Psalm 132:18, "If thy children (of David) keep my covenant, I shall sit on my throne forever, because Jehovah hath chosen Zion. He hath desired it as his habitation. It is my rest forever. Here I will dwell, for I have desired it. I will bless it. I will satisfy its poor with bread. I will also bless its priests with health and the saints shall shout for joy. There I will make the horn of David to be renewed." In Jesus, the only son of David to keep the new covenant, is fulfilled the prophecy (Acts 2:30, 31). Zion is the new Jerusalem (Gal. 4:26). The rest is the rest of the Holy Spirit (Isa. 28:11; Acts 2:1-4). The poor are repentant sinners, satisfied with the bread of Christ (John 6:35-57). The priests are believers (1 Pet. 2:5) and the voices of jubilee are their sacrifices of praise (Heb. 13:13-16). The horn of David is the scepter of Christ (Acts 4:26, 27). It is true that Israel will return to her land in unbelief, but when she looks upon Jesus, whom she has pierced she will repent and believe, as do the Gentiles (Rom. 10:12-13; 11:25-27).

Is it true that Paul establishes the ten commandments in Rom. 3:21 and disestablishes the rest in Eph. 2:15?

No. It is not true.

Paul establishes the law, but all the law, as our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ (Gal. 3:19-25), but when we come to Christ we then have the law of Christ (1 Cor. 9:21; Gal. 6:2), which represents the spirit, (not the letter) of the old covenant (2 Cor. 2:6; Rom. 7:6). The phrase "commandments in ordinances" refers to the letter of the law, and includes the rites of the second and fourth commandments as well as the rest. Paul did not establish the law. That was done before "by the hand of a mediator" and that mediator was not Paul nor Christ, but Moses (John 1:17). Jesus cites the ten commandments as His own word as superior (Matt. 5:21-32). It is His word which shall judge us in the last day (John 12:48). The mediator of the two covenants is not one (Gal. 3:19). The old covenant was a "minister of death" (2 Cor. 3:7) but the new is "the law of the spirit of life" (Rom. 8:2).

Is it true that the spirit does not contradict the letter of the law and therefore we should observe both?

No. It is not true. The study of a few examples will show the relation of the two.

1. Sometimes to guard the spirit it is necessary to violate the letter. For example, the letter says of sabbath, "In it thou shalt not do ANY work" (Ex. 20:10), at Jesus interpreting the spirit says that it is lawful to do works of mercy (Mk. 3:4, 5), of worship (Matt. 12:5) and of necessity (Mk. 2:23-28).

2. Sometimes to keep the letter it would be necessary to violate the spirit. For example, the woman taken in adultery, according to the letter of the law should have been stoned (Deut. 22:22), but Jesus, following the spirit, said, "Neither do I condemn thee. Go and sin no more" (John 8:4, 5).

3. Sometimes the spirit requires more than the letter. For example, the fruit of the Spirit is "love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance" (Gal. 5:22), yet not one of these important Christian virtues are mentioned in the ten commandments.

4. Sometimes the letter requires more than the spirit. For example, the letter required the full tithe and the offerings and all the sacrifices (Mal. 3:8-10), but the spirit says that if there first be a willing mind it is accepted according as a man hath and not according as he hath not (2 Cor. 8:12).

5. In all cases the spirit is superior to the letter and requires not only a spiritual interpretation of the law, but also a new way to fulfill it. Under the old covenant the people said "All that Jehovah hath said WE will do" (Ex. 24:8), but the new says "It is GOD that worketh in you to will and to do his good pleasure" (Phil. 2:13). The seventh day sabbath was the sign of the old covenant under which man failed, but the Lord's day is the sign of the new covenant which gives victory.

In conclusion we may note that the spirit of the seventh day sabbath is fully preserved in the Lord's day. It is so in a real and true sense is a seventh day rest, for it is a day of rest after six days' toil, and not one in ten as adopted by the atheists of the French revolution or one in six as that of the Soviets. It is a day of joyful worship. It recreates body, soul and spirit. It is rest in God who was manifested in Christ Jesus in whose name we honor the day.

Although the name Sunday is no more a sign of sun worship than Saturday is a sign of the worship of Satan, yet it would be better for Christians to use the name LORD'S DAY exclusively. They can bring it into universal use if they will. In these days of apostasy when Romanism is invading all science and philosophy and religion, true Christians should testify to their loyalty to the Lord Jesus Christ in every possible way.

The Lord's day has the support of prophecy, the example of Jesus and the apostles, the testimony of history and the blessing of God upon it. Let it never be destroyed by the substitution of the old covenant sabbath, or the Pope's day of Romanism, or the Godless rest days of Communism, or the worldliness of superficial Christians. Let it be in truth as in name, "the Lord's day" and let it be spent in his service. "This is the day that the Lord hath made," and he made it for man. He made it for our good. Blessed be his day of rest, and blessed be his glorious name forever.

(The End)

Let me but do my work from day to day,
In field or forest, at desk or loom,
In roaring market-place, or tranquil room;
Let me but find it in my heart to say,
When vagrant wishes beckon me astray,
"This is my work, by blessing, not my doom;
Of all who live, I am the one by whom
This work can best be done in the right way."
—Henry Van Dyke.

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Mark 15:15-20. How it should humble us to realize what our redemption cost in suffering and shame to our Savior! But we turn from such meditation to remark that in this passage the difference is very clear between the so-called "gods" of the ancients and the blessed Son of God. Many are the legends of gods who were not at first recognized by men, and were subjected to indignities; in early every case the offenders were punished with some dreadful penalty. But it was not so with our Savior! That he might redeem us all from destruction he bore the cross and endured the shame as a "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world."

TUESDAY

Mark 15:21-25. How the names of those who served our Lord have been preserved for us! And shall we think that they who serve him today will be forgotten by a loving God? The wine and myrrh they offered Jesus was thought by some to be in the nature of an anaesthetic, to soothe the pain of the sufferer. We believe this is unlikely; no one seemed to have a desire to spare him any suffering at this time. But in any event, we know that he was crucified there for us, and that he bore our sins in his own body, on the tree. "How could I help but love him, when he loved me so?"

WEDNESDAY

Mark 15:26-32. The superstitious Pilate was more than half convinced that the man Jesus was supernatural, and refused to yield to the Jews' objection and change his accusation to: "He said I am King of the Jews." The taunting chief priests forgot that Jesus could not be the Christ, the King of Israel, and save himself. The promised Christ was not to save himself, but to save others. As we read of his willingness to suffer in service for others, hear his words: "As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world."

THURSDAY

Mark 15:33-38. This period of three hours' darkness at mid-day has been thought of as symbolizing many things: a manifestation of God's displeasure with men for their awful deed, the unwillingness of God to behold the sufferings of his Son, etc. A point very often missed here is that even as Jesus cried out in his agony, God had for the time forsaken him. We must remember that all the sin of the world centered there in Jesus, and that darkness has no fellowship with light, or God with sin. He was accused for our sakes, and only after the great sin offering had been consummated could that fellowship be resumed which had been unbroken between him and the Father from the foundation of the world.

FRIDAY

Mark 15:39-47. The testimony of the Centurion, an unprejudiced eye-witness, speaks eloquently of the deity of our Lord. Also, the part of women in ministering to the Lord, both then and now, can scarcely be over-estimated. At this time they were still close to Jesus, although the men had all forsaken him and fled. It is inspiring, however, to read of Joseph's boldness and devotion.

SATURDAY

Mark 16:1-8. Coming to minister to the body of him they had loved and followed, how their sorrow was turned to joy by the resurrection of the Lord! It is the resurrection that turns the sorrows of all lives to joy and makes life worth living today, for if our hopes lay in this life alone, we would indeed be of all men most miserable!

SUNDAY

Mark 16:9-11. Our Scripture lesson for today is short; Luke 7:36-50 may also be read. Mary Magdalene had been greatly blessed by her contact with the Savior, and as a result her obedience was instant and complete. May we realize more fully how much we have received from our blessed Savior, that we, too, may render complete and loving obedience to his commands, whether our message is believed or not.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Goshen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSN.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

"And Still It Grows"

By Rev. Clifford G. Twombly, D.D.

(Editor's Note: This is a partial report of the able address delivered at the Annual Banquet of the International Reform Federation on December 12 by Dr. Twombly. It is a graphic description of modern movies as a moral menace with a challenge to Christian ministers and the church to do something about it. Dr. Twombly is rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, Lancaster, Pa.)

Something serious is the matter with the movies. At an Inter-Church Conference of Young People held recently in Pennsylvania, over three-quarters of the delegates present at a moving picture forum expressed their opinion that more than 50 per cent of the pictures today were distinctly harmful in their influence. Nine surveys by various representative groups of people in Lancaster, Pa., during the last thirteen years, have yielded the result that from 30 per cent to 40 per cent (and the last one over 50 per cent) of the pictures are corrupting to morals. But surely most people will agree that if only one in three of the pictures is bad, there is something serious the matter with the films. Some people may lightly think that if there is only one bad picture in every three that are shown, it does not matter so much or do much harm! Yet if any of you had an entertainment in your house for the children and young people of your neighborhood, and two numbers in that entertainment were good, but the third number was salacious and immoral, introducing for example some more than half-naked girl who performed a muscle-dance intended to arouse the passions of those who looked on, or represented the ways of some prostitute mistress as attractive and desirable, would not that number on the programme practically vitiate the whole show, and would not that number be the feature that would be especially impressed upon the minds of those young people and be remembered by them?

That is what is happening everywhere today in the movies! You cannot go to the moving picture theatres today with any assurance that you or your children will not see something suggestive or salacious or obscene before the show is over, either in the feature picture or in the accompanying comedies, or in the "trailers" as they are called (which are parts of films exhibited in advance to advertise what is coming), whose predominating appeal is almost invariably to the sensual. Yet this is the one commercialized amusement to which practically all the children of the country are allowed to go without "let or hindrance" or discrimination. For how many parents take the trouble to see beforehand what their children are going to see? Do not their boys and girls go customarily with their friends to any show that happens to come along in any particular week? Parents of America seem to be strangely oblivious to this danger, or else to be standing helpless before it. It would seem as if Christian parents would welcome and support any reasonable means and effort to remedy such a situation.

The frequent outbursts of coarse, raucous, and sensual laughter which so often occur in the moving picture theatres when the crowd is there at night, and which sometimes affect the whole atmosphere of the place and make it repellent and offensive, ought also to cause parents to realize how serious a thing is the matter with the movies today,—for of course such outbursts would not occur if there were not dirty, off-color, sensual scenes and conversations and situations which cause such ejaculations.

Does the fact that in two months' time within the past year 150 American films which have been shown everywhere in America, have been debarded in toto from Canada and Australia (cp. Baltimore Catholic Review, January 10, 1930) mean that American parents are becoming less sensitive to what is unclean and debasing than their English-speaking relatives, and that they are growing content with lower standards of life for their children? Does it mean that America, instead of becoming the savior of the world, is becoming the debaucher and corrupter of the world? Repeated warnings against American films are being heard today from all quarters of the globe, from China and Japan and India and Italy and Germany and France and South America. Even Turkey is about to forbid, or has already forbidden, children under fifteen years of age to attend the movies, in order "to protect Young Turks from the demoralizing effects of American-made films!" Even Turkey! "The 'infidel' nation is aroused to protect its children against the Christian nation!" And now Sir Hesketh Bell, former Governor of Uganda and northern Nigeria in Africa, warns his British countrymen against "the devastation" being wrought in the Dark Continent by American moving pictures! Mr. Will Hays, in a recent speech in Berlin, Germany, emphasized the interdependence of the nations, and said that "world-wide distribution of films could fill an important role in making the people of the various lands acquainted with one another." Sir Hesketh Bell says that "Nothing has done more to destroy the prestige of the white man among the colored races than these deplorable pictures!"

The pictures which were shown among us from January to June, 1930, bear their telling testimony to fully justify the accusation. I am not talking of the good pictures which we all delight to see, but of those pictures which constitute sometimes 30 per cent and sometimes 40 or at times even 50 per cent of the whole number, which are undermining the basic corner-stone of true American life and strength, and are tending to destroy the sanctity of marriage, and to make light of personal purity, and to lower American ideals and morals,—which are subtly and insidiously and intentionally sensual,—together with their advertisements and billboards.

Here are some out of a list of thirty-five such evil "feature" pictures and their advertisements which have been shown in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and all over the country, during the six months from January to June, 1930, and many of them two or three months after Mr. Hays' third "new code of morals" was put forth.

Some people object to the brief description of such films in print as serving only to advertise them all the more. If such pictures were the exception, and not commonly seen by 50,000,000 to 75,000,000 young people under 24 years of age in every week, there might be some force in such an objection,—but under the circumstances there seems to me to be no force whatever in it because they see them in any event. On the other hand, there is no other way, which I know to bring home to the consciences of Christian people the terrible menace of the movies except by putting some of the bare facts before them. Hence then are some leaves from a parson's notebook on some recent movies. (Note: I do not ask you to agree with my judgment in any of these valuations, but I do not see how you can possibly help agreeing with it on the main.)

"The Lady Lies"

Advertisement: "Get the low-down on Love-Nests in the most daring talkie ever produced. Risque? Yes! Daring? Yes! An ultramodern sex story of a dashing brute who laughs at conventions to live her life as she chooses. Rated as one of the 10 greatest Hits of the year."

Comment: This picture makes the keeping of a beautiful mistress as attractive as possible, and casts all manner of ridicule and scorn on "Puritanism," misrepresented by a narrow and prudish uncle and aunt and makes morality (so misrepresented) as unattractive as possible. ... All the sympathy of the audience from beginning to end is made to be with the men who are leading double lives, so that the audience applauds the wrongdoers continually. It is an open temptation to the young to go and do likewise, as if there were no harm in such relationships.

This picture and its reception made me feel the danger of America's becoming morally decadent—and what can one do to stop it if the church people do not know, or care enough to do anything about it?

"Stolen Kisses"

Advertisement: "French Showgirls for American husbands and American bands out for a grand whoopee time. Fly at The Folies Bergeres!"

Comment: This picture drags the sacred relationships and holiest ideal of life through the sewer. It is a foul performance from beginning to end.

It was all a libidinous exhibition of laced indecency.

The showing of such films is a damned business—as Mr. Harrison says about another recent picture, "Your theatre will be fumigated after showing this film."

"The Love Parade"

The young and beautiful, but low-minded Queen of "Sylvania" likes a hero—because of his many manifestly immoral affairs.

Comment: The atmosphere created by this film, one of pleasure in immorality as deplorable and calculated to do untold harm. It made one feel ashamed of America, and the American Government should allow a film to be shown everywhere and at and so to be regarded as a type of the American mind and womanhood.

"The Bad One"

Advertisement: "Dames were his weakness, and how weak he was! But when this deep sea Romeo loved 'Em they stayed loved! He was true to one girl—in every town! A salty Don Juan who took to the sea, not for money and adventure, but for women! He didn't have a girl in every port—he hadn't been in every port!"

Comment: The very devil is in this picture, and it seems incredible that the Christian Church in America can sit idly by, and allow such sensuality to go on unchallenged and unfought!

And now let us hear Mr. Will Hays again in this connection, as he speaks to the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce:

"I do not have to say that this industry must have toward that sacred thing, the mind of a child,—toward that clean virgin thing, that unmarked slate,—the same responsibility, the same care about the impressions made upon it, that the best clergyman or the most inspired teacher of youth would have!"

Was this sincere when Mr. Hays said it, and if so, would he say the same thing now? From descriptions which I have read of pictures shown during the summer months, it have not myself seen, it is quite evident that there has been no improvement in the films' moral quality! Here, for example, is the brief description of one of more than a dozen others of similar character, "The Party Girl":

(Note: This picture was suppressed by the police in Chicago as immoral and indecent!)

And a sample advertisement of another picture declares openly, "It will make you laugh a little. It is frivolous, frisky, French, and funny." It would seem, as somebody wrote me a few weeks ago, "as if our moral standards must have been lowered, or we could not tolerate such pictures."

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

Jesus the Friend of Sinners

(Lesson for February 15)

Scripture Lesson—Luke 7.
Printed Text—Luke 7:36-50.
Devotional Reading—Rom. 5:1-8.
Golden Text—Faithful is the saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.—1 Tim. 1:15.

Introductory Note

This incident must not be confounded with that recorded in Mt. 26:6-13; Mk. 14:3-9; J. 12:2-9. It is recorded by Luke alone. The Pharisee was willing to show Jesus the outward honor of an invitation for selfish reasons, but had had no love for him, as his treatment showed. Houses in the East were free of access, and on occasions when distinguished rabbis were entertained, outsiders were admitted to listen to the conversation. Reclining at the table with the feet extended outward, made possible the action of this woman. It was grace in her that drew her to Jesus as her Savior, hence she "already been forgiven" ere she washed his feet. In other words, as the latter part of J. 47 shows, she was not forgiven because she loved, but she loved because she was forgiven. It is solemnly suggestive that she was the only one in that company to whom such an announcement of forgiveness was made. They all heard it, including the host, but none seemed to desire it for himself. What desire does salvation awaken in the human heart? 1 Jn. 4:19.—Dr. James M. Gray's Christian Workers' Commentary.

Insincere Hospitality

Strange as it may seem, there is hypocrisy even in so fine a thing as hospitality. Not all hospitality is sincere, as our lesson today reveals. "Some of it is extended through necessity, some for the vainglory the entertainment of renowned or popular persons gives, and others practice it for business and society necessities, and a part of it results from noble friendship and obedience to the Bible injunctions to use and be given to hospitality. How Jesus could bring himself to accept Simon's hospitality, which apparently was extended with such low motives is almost beyond comprehension."—Truly it is hard to comprehend from a human standpoint. It was not the way that human nature would naturally react. But Jesus did not yield to human tendencies—he never did; he invariably brought the human into subjection to the divine, and thus proved himself the ideal man, as well as the Savior of men.

Character Sketch of this Woman

No one doubts that she was openly bad, an outcast, a disreputable sinner, who had been ruining body and soul. Jesus made no denial of her sin. But she had a large and trustful heart, which may have been the occasion of her fall. She was penitent. She was anxious to be better. She was fighting a battle that the Pharisee had not entered, and gaining a victory he never dreamed of. Her heart was open to divine influences. There were in her the possibilities of a life of angel purity and goodness, and she was taking the way to realize them.

She wished to escape from her bad life. Every door of hope was shut against her and barred. She had heard of Jesus' "woes" against sin; she knew she was living in the city of destruction; she had heard also of the invitation to every one that was weary and heavy laden. She knew how he had forgiven the paralytic. These were known everywhere. She saw the gate of heaven open. The angel of hope was beckoning, and she went to Jesus, as the starving hasten to a well-spread table, or the shivering seek the fire.—Illustrated Quarterly.

Sin a Heavy Burden

That which could drag down from his throne in heaven God's only-begotten Son to die on the cross for our sins, is more than the results of ignorance or a mere accident. And that which brings all the weariness, sorrow, and death into the world is more than the mere weakness of humanity. That it causes brave men to cry out in anguish, and drags wise men down from the heights of wisdom, and besmirches the purest that earth knows, and separates all from God, indicates something of its fearfulness.—Otterbein.

God Saves the Worst

One of the glories of Christ's redemptive work and an evidence of its completeness is that it is efficacious for all sin, and that "whosoever will" may be saved both from

(Continued on page 16)

E. M. RIDDLE,
President
Warsaw, Indiana

F. C. VANATOR,
Associate
Peru, Indiana

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK

G. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Dubail Ave., South Bend, Ind.

GLADYS M. SPICK,
General Secretary
and
Treasurer
2301 13th St., N. E.,
Canton, Ohio

Canton's Society Alive and Active

Canton, Ohio, Jan. 10, 1931.
Rev. C. D. Whitmer,
217 E. Bubaill Ave.,
South Bend, Indiana.

Dear Sir: It has not been such a long time since a report has been sent in from the Intermediate Christian Endeavorers of the Canton First Brethren church, but as we made a goal in September to hand in two letters to the Evangelist during the next six months, we take pride in sending you the first report.

Several sessions of the State Conference held at Ellet and attended by fifteen of our Christian Endeavorers proved very beneficial.

Twelve girls of our Christian Endeavor Society and three boys attended the conference at Winona Lake last summer. Almost every one of these wrote a short report for the September issue of the C. E. Lighthouse, our monthly paper, which has met with great enthusiasm.

In September we held a farewell party for Mr. and Mrs. Link, our advisors, who moved to Pennsylvania, and presented them with a picture. They have been faithful workers in Canton for the past five years.

On October 5th, Miss Lucille Guiley returned for the week-end from Moody Institute, where she has been preparing for a life of service. She is our former president and aroused much enthusiasm when she told of her experiences out there.

The Goodwill Union Mission asked our Christian Endeavorers to take charge of one meeting each month. As we chose the last Monday evening of each month, we held our first meeting on October 27th. After each Sunday morning service we gather up all the extra papers and send them to the mission.

The evening of October 8th was spent in rolling approximately one hundred bandages for use in South America. A social hour was enjoyed after this.

We have a social once a month, which always proves more or less successful and we plan to close the year with a social, bandage rolling, and a watch party. We feel that this will be the most beneficial social of 1930.

On November 9th the Christian Endeavorers went in a body to the Christian Endeavor and evening services at Louisville as our pastor was then holding special Bible studies there during the week.

At Thanksgiving and Christmas we sent baskets to the needy families in the community. They were much appreciated during this time of need.

At each of the three weeks of revivals held in November there were at least twelve of our C. E. present.

We have a cabinet meeting once a month. Last September officers were elected for a period of six months to end in March. Some of the goals for the next six months which were planned at this meeting are:

- (1) Send two reports to the Evangelist.
- (2) Make bandages for Africa.
- (3) Have an increase of ten or more new members.
- (4) Send a box to Kentucky.
- (5) Send baskets to needy families at Thanksgiving and Christmas.
- (6) Continue prayer groups every Sunday evening.

(7) Give not less than $3.00 every three months to the building fund.

We are thankful that five of these goals have already been reached, and we are now working hard for the other two.

One Sunday night of each month is spent in mission study using Dr. C. F. Yoder's book, "The Argentine Mission Field." Each one of the missionary committee takes her turn as leader. December 28th, Mrs. Kidder, a well known Bible teacher, explained to us the effects of "Romanism in South America."

We are glad to send this report and ask that you continue with us in prayer that our Christian Endeavor might do great things for Christ during 1931 and that we might send out enthusiastic and earnest Christian workers.

(MISS) THELMA BECHTEL.

Fifty Years of Christian Endeavor

High Points in the Society's Progress

(This is the second of a series setting for the high lights of Christian Endeavor during its fifty years of history, previously published in The Christian Endeavor World. We suggest that Endeavorers clip this brief history and paste it in a scrap book for future reference.)

1888

Christian Endeavor Day was first observed as "United Society Day" on February 22, with an offering for the extension of Christian Endeavor that yielded more than $8,000. The date was changed later to February 2, the actual birthday of the society.

Rev. Francis E. Clark embarked on his first Christian Endeavor journey to Europe April 21. He went to London at the invitation of the British Sunday School Union to tell the Union about Christian Endeavor.

Uniform prayer meeting topics (suggested by Rev. H. W. Pope of Palmer, Massachusetts, in 1887) were adopted by the United Society November 8, the first series being published in 1889.

The first Christian Endeavor society in Burma was organized in the historic church established by the great missionary, Dr. Adoniram Judson, at Maulmain.

1890

John Willis Baer was elected general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor February 24; resigned July, 1902.

1891

On September 16 Dr. Clark was authorized by the board of trustees to make a trip around the world.

The first Intermediate Society of Christian Endeavor was organized in November by Rev. A. Z. Conrad, D.D., in the South Congregational Church, Worcester, Mass.

1892

The eleventh International Convention was held in Madison Square Garden, New York, N. Y., July 7-10.

1893

The twelfth International Convention was held in the Drill-Hall and a tent at Mont-real, P. Q., July 5-9, the first International Convention held outside the United States.

1894

Christian Endeavor was introduced into Germany by Rev. Friedrich Blecher of Berlin.

1895

The fourteenth International Convention was held in Mechanics' Building and two tents erected on Boston Common, Boston, Massachusetts, July 10-15.

The World's Christian Endeavor Union was organized at the convention in July and incorporated under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts January 24, 1902.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

REVIVAL AT ALEPPO, PENNSYLVANIA

For the two weeks just preceding Christmas, Brother Grant McDonald of Smithville, Ohio, labored faithfully with the pastor here in an endeavor to reach some of the unsaved of our community. All conditions were as favorable at that time as could be expected any time during the year and Brother McDonald succeeded very nicely in winning the favor of the people, thus getting the crowd to return night after night. His efforts were greatly appreciated and commended by our people, his being the type of personality especially adapted to our warm hearted, congenial, unconventional folks here.

McDonald yielded himself unreservedly to the Lord and to be sure God wonderfully blessed us in lifting the spiritual tide of the church onward to a higher level. The field here is well gleaned, so scores of confessions cannot be expected. There were three who came and for whom we are especially thankful, as so many were concerned about them and so many are rejoicing over them. Then I must add that the mother of the young lady who came, accompanied her daughter to the communion service on Monday evening, was renewed in faith, engaged in the ordinance of feet washing and partook of the communion for the first time in 21 years. That was a blessed service.

We sincerely thank the Smithville-Sterling folk for leading us their pastor. We feel sure they shall prosper spiritually under his ministry. May God bless him and his wife in the great service for which the whole world is so hungering today.

As I am not a frequent contributor to these columns, I want to take this opportunity to greet many dear friends who perhaps have been uncertain as to my whereabouts. I am remaining here for some time

1896

The fifteenth International and first World's Convention was held in Central Hall, three tents (pitched on the White House park near the Washington Monument), and many churches, Washington, D. C., July 8-13.

On July 14, the day following the close of the Washington Convention, the trustees of the United Society and others went to Mount Vernon for exercises connected with the planting of an oak near Washington old tomb. This oak was from an acorn that grew on the "peace oak" in the Botanic Garden. On April 23, 1921, in connection with an Alumni gathering, Dr. Clark and company of Endeavorers from Washington visited Mount Vernon, and held a service around this Christian Endeavor oak, rechristening it now as one of the Alumni.

1897

The department of the Quiet Hour was established at the convention held in San Francisco. Since that time thousands of Comrades of the Quiet Hour have been enrolled every year.

The name of The Golden Rule was changed to "The Christian Endeavor World" November 4.

if it be the Lord's will. God has richly rewarded all faithful efforts put forth here and we are steadily climbing to more stable and spiritual territory.

As many know a new church was organized over a year ago in Cameron, West Virginia, eight miles from here and we are jubilant over its progress and prospects can't tell you all about it now, but let me say one of our great problems has been to build a home of our own in Cameron. Plans were made but dropped last spring on account of the depression and now God has made it possible for us to get building material at an almost unbelievably low cost. We can get beautiful blue hard stone enough for the entire building from a quarry a short distance away for twenty dollars. This cuts our building cost nearly half so we are planning to start very soon with the erection of one of the finest looking buildings in the brotherhood. If there are friends elsewhere who would like to give us some financial aid, I mean those who have once lived here and love this work, just address same to myself or to Mr. Geo. T. Cameron, West Virginia. We are still a small congregation there and your help would be greatly appreciated.

Pray for us and may God make rich our Christian experiences in his fellowship service.

TOM PRESNEL

LIMESTONE, TENNESSEE

Since we have now entered upon another year in the service of the Master, we feel that we should take inventory of our year so that we may see just how we are progressing in God's business.

We are certainly happy to report that under the efficient leadership of Brother D. Early all the various activities of the church have been steadily on the up-ing the past year. On the first Saturday in January we had our quarterly business meeting. At this time the annual reports of the different Sunday school, prayer meeting, and Bible class reports were especially encouraging since there was a marked increase in attendance over the preceding year at all these services, which indicates that more people are realizing the necessity of assembling themselves together at the house of God for worship. The Sunday school offerings during the past year were quite commendable. We were thankful for the nice balance left in the treasury which the church voted to use toward some specific obligations which the church has to meet.

For about fifteen months our Sunday school has been receiving birthday offerings for Sunday for foreign missions. Everyone is pleased to see the response given to these offerings. Since beginning these offerings $27.60 has been received. Since our last offering was sent in last spring $10 of this amount has been raised. Last month this amount was sent to Brother Bau-so that it might be put to work upon the foreign field. Our church believes strongly in the Second Coming of Christ and in the way that the prophecies are being so fully fulfilled, it looks as if his coming will be very near, therefore we want no money lying around idle. To the churches this birthday offering may seem small, but when you consider that we are a small country church, with the membership somewhat scattered and road and weather conditions to encounter all the time the offering has really been good.

During the past four months we have been having Christian Endeavor each Sunday evening. The society is divided into three departments, one for the young people and one for the intermediates, and one for the beginners and primary pupils. The Christian Endeavor society presents opportunities for development in Christian service, especially in young people, that no other activity of the church affords. It is encouraging to see the development in a number of the young people in the short time that the Christian Endeavor has been organized.

Perhaps the most outstanding achievement of the past year is the erection of a new parsonage. As a church we don't know how to be thankful enough for this one which had been such a pressing need for so long. The parsonage and all necessary buildings were sufficiently furnished by Brother Early and his wife could move into their new home the first of September. Of course we do not claim to have completely paid this during the past year but not some indebtedness. But we do so very glorify God for the money that has been raised. I should just like to state that at our January business meeting, the church voted unanimously that it would be a wise thing, and a step that would glorify God for us to take both our Thanksgiving offering and our White Gift offering, the greater part of the balance in the Sunday school treasury to pay on the indebtedness on the parsonage. Both the giving and the White Gift offerings were taken with a view to sending them to their respective places, but at this meeting subscriptions were being taken to pay the indebtedness, the decision was made by the membership to put these offerings toward our own debt, not that we are disregarding the interests of the brotherhood, but due to the drought and hard times of the past year, we really felt forced to do so. The Bible emphatically says that he who does not look after the interests of his own household has denied the faith and is worse than an infidel. Hence sending money to other home mission points and allow our own home base to suffer?

During the past year four have been added to the church by baptism. In fact our immediate field here is pretty well gleaned with the exception of some, who, it seems, will never be reached unless God sees fit to deal with them in a miraculous way as he did with the Apostle Paul. We did not have an evangelistic meeting last fall as has been our custom for a number of years. Quite a lot of praying was done concerning an evangelistic meeting just as to what God's will was in the matter and since, after considerable correspondence on the part of the pastor, no evangelist was available, we took it for granted that it was not God's plan for last year. If the Lord tarries we are hoping and trusting that we may some time secure the services of Brother Paul Miller who seems to be so wonderfully used of God to the salvation of souls wherever he goes.

For the past two or three months Brother Early has been giving a series of dispensational sermons which have surely been both interesting and instructive. We have without a doubt, been blessed as a church with clear Gospel teaching. In these days of "isms" and all kinds of false teachings, we cannot appreciate highly enough the clear teaching of God's Word. In our Bible class we are now taking up the study of the book of Daniel which promises to be very instructive and helpful.

Please pray for us that we may ever be faithful to him who has purchased our redemption with his own precious blood.

LELIA ARNOLD.

LOST CREEK BRETHREN CHURCH

Lost Creek, Kentucky

Come to the Lost Creek Brethren church some Sunday morning and you will see one of the grandest sights of your life. You will find an audience which is far too large for the seating capacity of the room. A small room adjoining the church is used for those who cannot find a seat in the main auditorium. Every one seems to be happy, even though they are put in a side room.

During the past three months the attendance has grown from an average of ninety each Sunday to two hundred each Sunday. I often wonder where so many people could come from. It seems as though they come up out of the ground and down out of the sky. The spirit is equal to the large attendance. Men and women who have never darkened the door of the church before are now out working for the church. They now speak in terms of "Our church."

A few weeks ago a call was given for some one to furnish cars to haul the people to church. At that time the service of a private car and a taxi were offered. The need grew larger. Now a truck is helping out. Some of these people do not come to church, but still they are interested in the work.

It may be of interest to know that the men and women's Bible Class is having a contest to see which can get the most new members. If the men lose they will have to cook a supper for the women. If the women lose they will have to cook a supper for the men. Things look bad for the men. They are trailing along far behind. Last Sunday there were twenty-three women and seventeen men present.

Riverside has been a blessing in the past, and we are looking forward to a future of good things in the church here.

Yours in the Master's service,
SEWELL LANDRUM,
Superintendent of Sunday School.

DAYTON, OHIO

Probably it is in order that I should give a report as pastor of the church. Miss Gertrude McBride is our corresponding secretary and will report faithfully as she has done before.

Our work goes nicely. In the beginning of the fall program things moved slowly, but certainly. The Homecoming and Rally Day services, although fine, were not all in attendance and interest that they might have been. On the former day Dr. Shively and Dr. Bell were with us and as former pastors were graciously received. We have a well attended Communion service. I view this service as a dependable Spiritual Thermometer for a Brethren church. The service was on the evening of November 2nd.

One of the greatest blessings that has ever come to a church under my leadership was found in the Miami Valley Brethren Bible Institute. This Institute met at the Dayton church November 23-30. The leaders of the Institute were Prof. M. A. Stuckey and Dr. C. F. Yoder. The former taught from Genesis, and of the great Bible Doctrines. The latter concerning Missions and Prophecy. Seldom, if ever, have I heard these themes taught so clearly. Our aggressive program for the fall really dates from the Bible Institute. We thanked the men in the finest words we knew while they were here, we do it again now. A number of the Brethren churches of the Miami Valley cooperated, working through the recently appointed Miami Valley Brethren Committee. We believe every church cooperating will testify to the benefits received.

With January 1st, Brother Byron Murr came into leadership as Superintendent of the church school. With an earnest group of teachers and officers supporting him I anticipate some great gains this year. Brother Roy Kinsey, the retiring superintendent, gave us an excellent year of leadership. Through some mighty trying times, caused mostly by the general depression he led us through a year that registered a gain in average attendance. 1930 averaged 525 in church school attendance. Our highest attendance was 1078. This was reached on Loyalty Sunday, November 30th. Brother Myron Kem was superintendent for the day. It was truly a young people's day. They promoted it. I believe it is an idea of worth to other Brethren church schools. If any should care to write me about it, I will be glad to refer your correspondence to Brother Myron, and he will be glad to offer you any helpful suggestions you may care for.

We are now in the midst of our revival meeting with Brother S. M. Whetstone as our leader. Wonderful leadership he is giving. Messages and attendance are both fine. We shall report this and following events later.

Pray for us. The greater the task, the greater the need for prayer power.

R. D. BARNARD.

HARRAH, WASHINGTON

As the writer contemplates the front page picture on our 1931 church calendar it is with a feeling of justifiable pride. The picture is a very good photo-reproduction of the Harrah church—as it stands today, finished in every detail, both outside and in. This pride is not so much for the appearance of the church alone as for what it represents, founded and built by a faithful few of God's children, who, desiring a place to worship as their hearts prompted them, trusted God to see them through. Below the picture is the inscription—"Lighthouse of the Reservation." This is what it has proven itself to be with our faithful pastor and his wife as the light house keepers who have seen the true light of the Gospel enter so many new homes in the past year. The church membership has increased steadily from 54 at the beginning of 1930 to 114 on January 1, 1931. Of these new converts forty or thereabouts are young people or children, who are the future of the church.

Harrah was spiritually blessed during the twenty wonderful days of Brother R. I. Humbert's Bible chart lectures which closed in December. We all loved him and the example of this noble man, who has given his life entirely into his Master's hands to use as he sees best, even though it takes him from home and family much of the time, certainly should be an inspiration to any Christian to "carry on."

The courage of Brother Humbert, who is constantly distributing tracts, aroused a like enthusiasm and some 25,000 were purchased for personal distribution. Also the mottoes which now adorn the walls of Brethren homes are a mute testimony for Christ and the church. The visible results of his meeting were forty-four confessions and re-consecrations.

On Sunday, December 21, twenty-three were baptized, two of whom were awaiting baptism before the revival. There have been three confessions since and these are now awaiting baptism.

Before baptismal services Brother Kinzie always gives a series of lessons on the church fundamentals and all other phases of the great step to be taken. He is an able pastor, who preaches the Bible, without apology or excuses, and his wife is a talented woman, whose training and experience in Krypton, Kentucky have fitted her to assist her husband in caring for a constantly growing congregation.

Last fall our faithful Sunday school superintendent, Brother Conrad Stover and his fine family moved to Las Vegas, Nevada, but it seems that God takes care of just such calamities, as Brother Ernest Stover has maintained the same high standard of efficiency since he took over the superintendency. Brother Ernest although a young man, is a conscientious Christian, who stresses promptness and order, two essentials of success. The attendance seldom falls below the 100 mark and is sometimes as high as 125.

The Sunday school is in good standing financially, and contributed $100.00 toward the fund used in finishing the exterior of the church, a work which was recently completed. We have an assistant superintendent in the basement, Sister Flora Daniels, with four primary classes which hold their own exercises and do not come upstairs until the church hour.

One of the best things in the Sunday school report is that most of the children remain for church, thus the church attendance increases, as the ones who come for church only, exceed the ones leaving after Sunday school.

One noteworthy news item, which so far has not been reported, was the organization of a District W. M. S. during the Northwest Conference held here in June. The following officers were chosen: President, Mrs. John Weed; Vice President, Mrs. E. S. Flora; Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. F. V. Kinzie.

Our pastor often tells us that the prayer meeting is the barometer of the church. The attendance here includes a large per cent of the members, young people and children being well represented and always willing to take an active part. Part of this mid-week service is devoted to the study of Revelation.

A wonderful service was held in the church New Year's eve. Our pastor, who anticipated a fair attendance only, had arranged four of the church seats in a semi-circular style to enable the congregation to gather more closely. These were quickly filled and many of the other seats as well. The time was spent in prayer and praise interspersed with special music. An interesting feature was the exchange of paper slips, to be read aloud, answering personal questions pertaining to the New Year as well as the old. At the stroke of twelve as the clear tones of the church bell chimed, "ringing out the old, ringing in the new," God's children were upon their knees praying for guidance and strength during the coming year.

Although the time between the closing of revival and Christmas was so short, the Sunday school by the grace of God, rendered an appropriate program, honoring the birthday of the Savior, on Christmas eve.

Sisters Stella Stover and Emma Lichty, who are the leaders of the "Sisterhood Girls" are doing a good work in training our girls to become Christian workers. During the winter months the girls go from school, hold their meeting, prepare their evening meal in the church basement and are ready for the prayer service at 7:30.

The prayer band which met every night in the little prayer room upstairs during the revival has continued faithfully since. The pastor has carefully divided this into groups which will fill out the entire twelve months and give each one an opportunity to take part. During the month of January the young men are meeting with the pastor one half hour before services Sunday morning and Wednesday evening.

Since the organization of the church the first member to leave his earthly home and go to dwell with the Lord has been Brother L. D. Williams, who passed away in Seattle, January 17, 1930.

A lady who recently started coming to our church to worship said there was more harmony in the Harrah Brethren church than in any church she had ever attended. Praise the Lord, for a church whose members are as one large family, where Satan, who is ever lurking, can not get a foothold, but finds himself an unwelcome guest at all times.

Though some of the founders of the church have moved away and others contemplate leaving, the memory of their courage inspires the new members to "put on the breastplate of faith and love and for an helmet the hope of salvation" "that we may be ever looking for "his glorious appearing."

MRS. IDA A. LYON,
Evangelist Correspondent.

Today's disappointment may be a door into purer joys and a deeper understanding tomorrow.

MILLEDGEVILLE, ILLINOIS

Dear Editor:

I was just reading the news columns of the Evangelist which reminded me that the church has not been reported for some time. I will now try to give something of interest.

Among the events of the past year was an evangelistic meeting with Brother C. Grisso as evangelist, held March 3-16. The Brethren were strengthened in the faith these splendid services. Brother Grisso, we all know, is an evangelist of much worth in our brotherhood. I was glad to hear the meeting just closed at Goshen, Indiana where the Lord was pleased to call a good group to the feet of his Son Jesus Christ. We rejoice with the Goshen brethren at Brother Grisso who was the evangelist.

All of the various special days were served with their offerings lifted. We did our bit, if it might not always be said we did our best. Some feel that one BIG OFFERING for all the causes might be a relief from so many calls. We recognize the difficulties involved.

Mother's Day, Father's Day, Children's Day and several other Special days including Christmas were observed with commendable programs furnished largely by the young people and children of the church and Sunday school. Yes, we still have Sunday school and try to make it a real school. We have been having good attendance this year. We are starting out strong in 1931. January, thus far has been above the same month one year ago.

Woman's Missionary Society and Sisterhood have been attempting to accomplish a worthy work, perhaps not reaching the goals set, yet striving for mastery.

The business meeting found all church bills paid with a little money in the treasury and every auxiliary organization with all bills paid and money on hand. We close with a large sum to their credit.

I must not forget the Christian Endeavor. We have one and a big one which is on its toes and going fine. We will let you report through the Endeavor column.

We did not close down for the summer months. There was a time this summer when the Brethren church was the only one in town having services. The pastor felt that there should be one church open during the evening for those who wished to attend church. He never was without an appreciative audience, though at times the audience was small.

This winter there was a determined call for a Community Service on Sunday nights. One church open with all congregations in attendance. We have had that for ten weeks and each Sunday night we have had the church full, sometimes overflowing. The writer has been privileged to preach in each of the churches of the community. Each minister will have had the same privilege within the next three weeks. That has given a fellowship privilege that we have never previously enjoyed here. Such an arrangement has some things in its favor. We would not commend it as a general practice.

We are interested in reports from other fields and hope this will be of interest to you. We are striving to glorify our Lord in all services of the church and in daily life and its contacts.

May the Lord's rich blessing rest upon his work through our churches. We need your prayers. We are praying for an awakening by the Spirit which will reach around the world. Will you join us?

GEO. E. CNE.

WAYSIDE OBSERVATIONS

Gleaned from our Travelogue

By Dr. G. C. Carpenter

In a cozy cottage, "The Maryland," in the heart of Hallandale-by-the-Sea, in sight of the ocean, only a few miles from Miami, enjoying the salt air and many new experiences along the way! We had planned to sail westward in December but the lure of Florida was too great and we are here enjoying friends in the midst of some of the most attractive spots in "Tropical America," and linked by our radio with the rest of the world.

365,000 Things

Speaking of new things, it is stated that a modern buyer is offered 365,000 things. The emphasis today is on things, and we are told that our world is on the verge of bankruptcy. Many are the stories we hear of lives experienced in Florida during the few years. During the unprecedented boom in 1925 multitudes risked their all in the mad desire for more things, and the end was yet. Banks are failing even now because they had too much faith in things as a result they ventured too far. The stock market crash was another bursting in scattering things to the four winds.

"A Man's Life"

Will America learn the lesson? Will we? Is it time for our 123,000,000 people to listen to the message of that Holy One who long ago said: "A man's life consisteth in the things he possesseth." "What will profit a man if he gain the 365,000 things and lose his life?" The radio speaker, right who said recently: "We have regained the world and have about lost it." And herein lies the secret of man's return to normality.

"It's Nothing To Me"

While passing through a small town in Florida we stopped near the very old jail which were confined three murderers. A man had been shot by a mob shortly before our arrival. We asked our informant, apparently the wife of the sheriff: "You have seen such tragic occurrences, do you?" She replied, as she made a careless gesture with her hands, was, "It's nothing to me." How becoming hard-hearted in our mad race for things? Are we sacrificing the values of life in our rush for the things at the end of the rainbow? Has the satisfaction of the selfish desires of carnal passions become the overmastering passion in the hearts of Americans? And are we saying "It's nothing to me?" God forbid!

The Penny Home

On the basis along the way near Jacksonville an investment of $3,000,000 by J. C. Penney to provide a home for ninety ministers and their wives! There are eighteen five apartments in each, well arranged with electric range and all modern conveniences. Each apartment is quite separate from the others, virtually a house unto itself. There is a beautiful chapel, a meeting place for the donor's mother. All is in thirteenth century Norman architecture. Each apartment is for two, only husbands and wives admitted. One condition is that each must have an annual income of $500 as all must provide their own food and clothing. Garden spots are furnished. The Post Office are a part of the home. It is indeed a beautiful place, a home! Denominational. Do you wish to apply for admission? There are only 3,000 now on the waiting list. It does seem that the most needy are barred by the income requirement, yet 180 people are enjoying some of the things that Jesus said would be added to those who "Seek first the Kingdom of God." Some of the things accumulated by J. C. Penney are being used by the Lord in adding "these things" unto some of his faithful shepherds.

"Who Are You?"

A popular writer broadcast these lines: "Marshall Joffre, dead yesterday, is 79 years old today. It must be pleasant to spend your 79th birthday in Heaven knowing that your troubles are ended forever. When they asked Joffre, 'Who are you?' he will answer, 'I won the battle of the Marne.' That battle prevented what might have been a quick defeat for the allies. Joffre will be welcomed among those who have served their country well."

Surely every reader hopes that Marshall Joffre spent his 79th birthday in heaven, but will winning the battle of the Marne entitle him to that glory? Who are you? One who depends on salvation by good works and things, or a sinner saved by grace? One who seeks to earn salvation, or one who looks alone to the saving, cleansing blood of the Crucified One?

Thrills! Thrills! Thrills!

We just attended the Annual Miami All-American Air Meet. About 100 planes, all sizes, and over 200 air pilots. Upside down and down side up, on edge, straight up or straight down! Tail spins were common, parachute jumping every day, several coming down at the same time! The Goodyear Blimp and the "Autogyro"—what a contrast! The Gyro rises and lands almost perpendicularly. Soon every home will have several gyros in the garage for landing fields will no longer be necessary. The bombing planes destroyed a miniature city! May the reality never be experienced. On the second day four men in a visiting plane, two being prominent surgeons of Chicago, met death when their engine stalled, but there were no accidents connected with the Air Meet proper. It was announced that aviation is yet in its infancy! What will the next decade witness in the name of progress? Whither are we bound? Is the world getting better? Are people more religious today than in the past? Is there more genuine piety, more godliness, more faith in God? Are we progressing in the things that shall never pass away? Or are we trying to build a tower that shall reach to heaven and bring glory to man? Let us rejoice in the progress in material things, but let us at the same time be certain of parallel progress in faith, hope, love—in all things spiritual.

Hallandale, Florida.

CIVILIZATION MEANS PROHIBITION

By Ernest H. Cherrington, LL.D., Litt. D., General Secretary, World League
Against Alcoholism

Civilization and prohibition are so closely related that they are almost synonymous. The higher the civilization, the more numerous and the more intimately concerned with personal life are the prohibitions which are vitally necessary. Even in the lowest social orders, the list of Verboten is surprisingly large while as life becomes more complex, the Thou Shalt Nots multiply. The character as well as the number of these are practically an index to the quality and kind of the culture and the intensity of living which may characterize any people or any period.

The Prohibition of intoxicating beverages is merely one of these many "No Thoroughfare" signs which society has found it necessary to erect. That prohibition is really a belated one. It came not too soon but long after it was required by changing standards of living and altered problems of life. It is not unique but is of a piece with the whole tissue of prohibitions out of which the multicolored fabric of modern living is woven. Its basic theory is the same as that which underlies such fundamental prohibitions as the laws against murder, against theft, against arson or any other of those primary statutes which men have enacted, attempted to enforce, found were disobeyed by a minority but which they will never repeal because the stability of the social order depends upon these. A larger liberty and a greater safety for the whole people have compelled all these prohibitions, however rigorous, Draconian or invasive they may appear to those not socially-minded.

From life to death and afterwards, we are hedged about by a mass of prohibitory laws. Our birth must be attended by legally qualified persons authorized by law, it must be registered according to a prescribed form, certain prophylactic medical attention must be given at once. In early childhood, we must be vaccinated, we must attend school. The house in which we live must meet legal standards. It cannot be built, altered, wired for electricity or piped for gas without the intervention of the law. The kind of food we eat and the quality of the water we drink is subject to regulation. Our most intimate relationship, such as marriage, is the theme of many statutes. Our business life is directed by thousands of legal enactments. We must clothe ourselves in such a way as not to offend the law. If we buy an automobile, the law requires its registration, sometimes insists that we pass examinations as to our ability to operate a motor-car and will not allow us the use of the public roads without documentary evidence of such registration as well as of our possession of a license to drive. Even then, the places where we may drive, the direction in which we go, the speed at which we may travel, the locations where we may stop and for how long, the kind of brakes and headlights on our car and their condition, are prescribed in detail by legislation.

If we fall ill of an infectious or contagious disease, we are, by law, forbidden to mingle with others. We may be quarantined even if some of our family are thus ill. If we die, the fact of our death must be recorded in the manner established by law. Our burial must be in the place, by the persons and in the manner the statute books set forth. Such worldly goods as we may leave behind us are disposed of in accordance with the law, our most ardent wishes and our carefully made plans as set forth in our wills being ignored unless the law's requirements are fully met.

Civilized man lives in a realm where prohibitions determine every important action he may take. Everywhere the law either prescribes or forbids.

These laws make life safer, make happiness more accessible, make comfort surer, make security more certain. The prohibition of intoxicating beverages has an even sounder basis than the majority of these other prohibitory laws. It is aimed at a greater foe of the health, wealth, safety and happiness of the people than is the object of attack in much other legislation. It is closely related to many of these other laws. It is elemental in any consideration of traffic or industrial safety. It is a primary consideration in the care of the public health. It is directly involved in both production and distribution, the two factors in our economic life. It is a conservation measure of the first importance, whether one considers the problems of hygiene, manpower, finance or politics. It harms none. Its greatest benefits go to those who fully observe it but even its violators and its opponents, in lesser degree, profit by the improved social and economic conditions it produces.

There is no valid argument that may be brought against the prohibition of intoxicating beverages which cannot be brought, with equal cogency, against any other restrictive legislation. It is as enforceable as any other law. It is as essential as any other statute.

As society advances and as time works its changes, giving to men the needed perspective for a correct estimate, the prohibition of beverage alcohol will be seen as the most significant and the most important of the myriad prohibitory measures by which modern civilization has defined the way to life, to health, to safety and to achievement.

SURRENDER

By Mary L. Cummings

Is it hard for the flower when summer comes
To turn its face to the sun?
Is it hard for the flaming red orb to sink
When its course for the day is run?
Is it hard for the dew to moisten the earth
When night's dark shade doth fall?
Is it hard for the bird to answer again
The note of its mate's sweet call?

Or merely for man is it hard to achieve
The will of the mind above?
For man who doth daily and hourly receive
Fresh proof of the Father's love?
Is the only strong straining against God's will

To be on the part of his child?
While everything, joyous, fulfils his behest
From the mart to the tangled wild?

All life that is fully surrendered to God
Sweeps on with a step serene,
Moved by the bounding, unlimited force
That throbs in the earth's fresh green.
Thus, as tree and flow'ret in forest and glade
Adorn, without effort, the sod,
The fragrance and power may be felt; of a life
Wholly surrendered to God.

OUR LITTLE READERS

THE PILLOW OF DREAMS

By May Justus

One day a good mother went to the Sandman's shop at the end of the lane and said: "Please, Mr. Sandman, I want to buy a pillow of dreams."

"What do you want with a pillow of dreams, good mother?" asked the Sandman.

"I want it to put under my little girl's head when she goes to sleep."

"Come into my shop then," invited the Sandman, "and I will let you see all the pillows I have."

Here he showed the mother many different kinds of dream pillows. There were big ones and middle-sized ones and quite wee ones.

"These pillows are all very nice," she said. "But there isn't any that is just right for my little girl's head."

"Then you must have one made for your little girl," said the Sandman.

"How can I do that?" the mother asked.

"Oh, that is easy, good mother," replied the Sandman. "It all depends on what you want to put into the pillow. Of course the little girl will dream of the things that are inside it. What should you like?"

"I think I should like to put a great many rose petals into it," replied the mother. "Roses are so fragrant."

"Then go to a rose-bush, good mother," said the Sandman, "and ask it for some of its sweet blossoms."

"I will," said the mother and she went out to find a rose-bush. After a long time she came to a beautiful pink one by the side of the lane.

"Good morning, pretty rose-bush," she said. "Will you give me some of your blossoms for a dream pillow?"

"Whose dream pillow?" the rose-bush asked.

"My little girl's," the mother replied in her sweet voice.

"Oh yes, of course," said the rose-bush. "Hold your apron, good mother, and I will shake it full of rose petals."

The mother held her apron and the rose-bush shook itself once, twice, three times, and then the apron was almost full of beautiful pink petals.

The mother hurried back to the Sandman's shop for now it was early afternoon.

"See!" she said. And she showed him her apron full of rose petals.

"How nice!" the Sandman cried. "Come in and let us put them into a pillow."

After hunting around a little while he found a pillow-case which the mother thought was just about the right size and they poured the petals into it. But the pillow-case was not nearly full.

"What shall we do?" the mother asked.

"Put something else into it," suggested the Sandman. "What else should you like?"

"I should like for it to be fluffy and downy like a little white cloud," said the mother.

"If you will climb to the top of the hill," said the Sandman, "you may find a little white cloud."

So the mother went out of the Sandman's shop and climbed the hill behind it. Right on top she found a little white cloud.

"Good morning, little white cloud," said the mother. "Will you give me a handful of yourself to make a dream pillow?"

"Whose dream pillow?" asked the little white cloud.

"My little girl's," the mother answered.

"Oh, yes, certainly," the cloud murmured. "Hold your hands, good mother, and I will let a piece of soft cloud fall down to you."

So the mother held her hands and a piece of cloud, soft and white, fell into them.

"Thank you, dear little white cloud," she said and she ran down the hill to the Sandman's shop.

"Look!" she cried.

"Fine!" said the Sandman. And they put the piece of soft white cloud into the pillow. Now it looked very nice and comfortable, indeed.

"It is a fine pillow," said the Sandman. "A very fine pillow, but it lacks a charm to make the good dreams in it come true."

"Where can I get a charm?" she asked.

"You have it already," the Sandman told her. "It is your heart. It is love. Just before your little girl goes to bed at night, kiss her pillow and say this little wish rhyme:

'Happy dreams, pretty dreams, come out night
Make all the slumber hours lovely bright.'

Then your little girl will have only good dreams, you see."

"Oh, that will be a beautiful charm," said the mother.

Then the good mother took the pillow of dreams and went home.

And that night the little girl dreamed sweet pink roses, white fluffy clouds, warm mother kisses.—The Youth's Companion.

Sunday School Notes

(Continued from page 11)

the power and penalty of sin. Those are despised by men and outcasts of society are both welcomed and saved in Jesus Christ. Even those who have violated every attribute of manhood and have become bestial in their natures, may again be clothed in their right minds, as were the demoniacs at Gadara.—Ibid.

Influence of Jesus as a Friend

There are some men who are friends of sinners not for any good purpose, whose influence is not wholesome, or helpful. But as J. Hugh Heckman says,

"Jesus creates an incentive to want better than we are. There are those whose association makes it indifferent as to what we do. They may even make us add toward acting according to our highest ideal. It is not so with Jesus. He gives a power to our knowledge which will not let us down in non-performance. A brilliant student said, 'I cannot compel myself to be good.' He did not know his Lord well. A Confucian scholar said the great teacher, Confucius, was able to tell people what to do but could not inspire with the desire to do it. Jesus gives a challenge to the enlightened mind which calls all the inner manhood to rise in response."

Also, he properly remarks, "Jesus forces the will to become righteous. In the human world where temptation is so strong this is a need common to us all. Each of us needs a becoming humility which warns us to take heed lest we fall. Jesus has shown us the way to sources of strength. In his life of communion and meditation the fellowship of his intimate companions has shown us how to be faithful in our devotional life and in our strengthening relationships. The Word of Holy Writ, the counsel of God in our hearts, the counsel of wise friends, the inspiration of cooperative work, all these are ways of which our Lord keeps us facing the right."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FOR BRETHREN HOME SUPPORT

Send all money for the Brethren Home Support Fund to Cecil Hendrix, Treasurer, Flora, Indiana.

FOR SUPERANNUATED MINISTERS' FUND

All money for the Superannuated Ministers' Fund is to be sent to Rev. G. I. Secretary, Roann, Indiana.

Vol. LIII
Number 7

February 14
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Christ and the Rich Young Ruler

In the Name of Christ and the Church We Appeal to You Be Generous on Benevolence Day

TO THE SUPERANNUATED MINISTERS

Those who are taught must share all the blessings of life with those who teach them the word (Gal. 6:6.—Moffatt's translation). But the withholding of your offering will deny some of them the bare necessities of life.

AND TO THE BRETHREN HOME

If it is a question of parting with some of your possessions that those in need may be cared for, or of holding on to the last dollar and letting the needy suffer, can you doubt which is your duty? Or what Christ would say?

"ONE THING THOU LACKEST—GO SELL—GIVE TO THE POOR."

Investigations of the Fundamental Problem

While commissions and survey groups endeavor to ascertain the facts and arrive at conclusions with regard to policies and procedure in connection with the enforcement of national prohibition, there seems to be but little inclination even to reinvestigate the question as to the evils which inhere in the commodity itself and the traffic in that commodity, by reason of which prohibition amendments and laws have been made necessary. Undoubtedly this is due to the fact that those who are favorable to prohibition do not feel the need of any new investigation or restatement of facts which have long since come to be recognized as scientific truths, while it is barely possible that those opposed to prohibition prefer that investigations and conclusions be limited to side issues and questions of procedure rather than directed to the heart of the most vital question involved.

Thomas Jefferson, after eight years' experience as President of the United States, gave expression to a conclusion born of a real laboratory test when he said, "Were I to commence my administration again, the first question I would ask respecting a candidate for office would be, 'Does he use ardent spirits?'"

Phillips Brooks, one of the most outstanding moral and religious leaders of his day, in the light of all his wide experience, the investigations of others, and the painstaking effort to get all the truth regarding the social implications of intemperance, came to the very definite conclusion that if intemperance could be swept out of the country "there would hardly be poverty enough left to give healthy exercise to the charitable impulses."

The Supreme Court of the United States, during more than a hundred years of detailed consideration of thousands of cases coming to its attention through appeals from the lower courts, has had peculiar opportunity to study the causes of crime, and the tendencies of anti-social institutions and to have very definite conclusions as to where responsibility rests. That great tribunal for a century has insisted in one way or another, over and over again that intoxicating liquors and the liquor traffic have constituted the greatest source of crime, poverty, vice and degradation, and that that traffic is of such a character that it has never had either inherent or constitutional rights.

As a matter of fact, all the governmental, judicial, social, economic and political investigations touching, either directly or indirectly, the question of intoxicating liquors and the vicious liquor traffic which has been carried on through the centuries, are in agreement with the very definite conclusion that Shakespeare more than two centuries ago put into the mouth of Othello, when he said: "O thou invisible spirit of wine! If thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil!"

ERNEST H. CHERRINGTON.

PRESIDENT HOOVER

The President, in submitting the Commission's report to Congress, concluded his message as follows:

The commission, by a large majority, does not favor the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment as a method of cure for the inherent abuses of the liquor traffic. I am in accord with this view. I am in unity with the spirit of the report in seeking constructive steps to advance the national ideal of eradication of the social and economic and political evils of this traffic to preserve the gains which have been made, and to eliminate the abuses which exist, at the same time facing with an open mind the difficulties which have arisen under this experiment.

I do, however, see serious objections to, and therefore must not be understood as recommending, the commission's proposed revision of the Eighteenth Amendment which is suggested by them for possible consideration at some future time of the continued effort at enforcement should not prove successful. My own duty and that of all executive officers is clear—to enforce the law with all the means at our disposal without equivocation or reservation.

The report is the result of a thorough and comprehensive study of the situation by a representative and authoritative group. It clearly recognizes the gains which have been made and is resolute that those gains shall be preserved. There are necessarily differences in views among its members. It is a temperate and judicial presentation. It should stimulate the clarification of public mind and the advancement of public thought.

HERBERT HOOVER.

The White House, January 20, 1931.

WORTHY GOALS FOR A CONGREGATION

The following outline of congregational aims was published in the weekly bulletin of the Brethren church of Waterloo, Iowa, under date of November 16, 1930. We are reproducing it herewith as a worthy suggestion to any church wishing to program by which to direct its efforts and with which to measure the advancement of its people individually and collectively. Rev. S. M. Whetstone is the pastor of this church.

Some Aims for the Year

INDIVIDUAL AIMS

- Personal devotions.
- Study and Christian growth.
- To be soul-winners.
- The right use of time.
  - This will mean personal effort.
  - This will mean personal sacrifice.
  - This will mean personal blessing.

CONGREGATIONAL AIMS

- Spiritual Aims
  - 75% of Resident Membership regularly at church.
  - 25 New Family Altars.
  - A Revival within the church.
- Educational Aims
  - Acquaint our folks with our HISTORY.
  - Acquaint our folks with our DOCTRINE.
  - Acquaint our folks with our WORK.
- Financial Aims
  - A Stewardship Campaign.
  - Systematic Giving.
  - 100% of Resident Members pledging and giving regularly.
- Property and Equipment
  - Lawn improved and beautified.
  - A Bulletin Board provided.
- Social Aims
  - A Family Night social each Quarter.
  - An evening of music furnished by talent within the church.
  - An evening jointly with the South Waterloo Church of the Brethren.
- Musical Aims
  - Fullest cooperation with our Choir.

- Interest our young folks in Church Music.
  - Instruct and Develop our talent musically.
- Evangelistic Aims
    - An up-to-date list of prospects at all times.
    - A Prayer-Band to win souls.
    - Every Christian a soul-winner.
  - Church School Aims
    - Leadership Training.
    - Making our Church School Christ-centered.
    - Better Teaching.
  - Service Aims
    - The Visitation Campaign.
    - Looking after the sick, the poor and the needy.
    - Every Christian a Worker for Christ.

THE SECOND MILE

"And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain," the Lord Jesus said in the Sermon on the Mount. The command to which our Lord refers seems to have with the rights of kings' officers in olden days to demand the free use of horses of men as they hastened on their way to conquer some royal degree. In our day, men in country the rights to demand such service may have disappeared, but the principle involved from the standpoint of the Christian must remain, because it is an expression of the love and good-will of our Lord Himself.

The first mile belongs to the law, the second to love. The first mile expresses duty and convinces the mind, the second brings the opposition and wins the heart. The first mile brings Sinai into view, the servant, obedient and dutiful, the second shows the princely spirit of one who will sacrifice to seek the lost.

This is what brought our Savior from heaven to earth. He was concerned with the second mile of redemption. True, the Cross was promised from the days of the fall, and even anticipated before, but when the time came for the earthly career of Christ as the Man of Sorrows, he was to travel the second mile, and that is why he is so anxious that his people should follow his example. The Church will not travel very far unless there is to be found among us a fair number of "second mile" folks who are willing "to go with him twain."—Lylean Methodist.

IN THIS NUMBER

An Immediate Need—Editor, .....
 Rocking the Prohibition Boat—Editor,
 Our Obligation to Our Aged Brethren—G. L. Maus, .....
 The Brethren's Home—A. V. Kimmell,
 The Brethren Home—J. Allen Miller,
 The Brethren Home—Ephraim Culp,
 An Appeal to the Heart—F. C. Vancator, .....
 The Legend of the Bells—F. C. Hogarth, .....
 Memories—C. F. Yoder, .....
 Significant News and Views, .....
 Studies in the Scriptures—C. F. Yoder, .....
 The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon, .....
 "And Still it Grows"—C. G. Twombly,
 Our Society Goals for 1931—Mrs. G. H. Bennett, .....
 Fifty Years of C. E., .....
 Lost Creek, Kentucky—G. E. Drushal, Krypton, Kentucky—Lyda Carter, .....
 News from the Field, .....
 The Tie that Binds and In the Shadow,
 Our Little Readers, .....
 Our Reader's Forum, .....
 Announcements, .....

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

and all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

An Immediate Need and an Impending Necessity Or, Our Church's Benevolences of the NOW and the NEAR FUTURE

Time is at hand when we are faced with a sacred obligation, making provision for the care of the aged and incapacitated ministers and for the support of the Brethren Home. Once a year churches are asked to make an offering to this two-fold object and the time is the last Sunday in February. Let us prepare our duty as this day approaches, and at the same time why a little thinking into the future as regards the problem of benevolences? We are living too much from hand to mouth when the hand comes up to the mouth rather empty. When the aged ministers and their dependents must suffer. We do look forward to making more permanent and more steady provision for the needs of these aged veterans of the cross. That "impending necessity." But first, let us consider the "immediate."

The immediate need is for an offering that will help provide the necessities of life for the needy, superannuated ministers and will provide the old folks' home at Flora, Indiana, functioning properly. To provide this offering is a responsibility that we cannot escape; it is a bounden duty as certain as is the fact of our church relationship. Everyone who holds membership in the Brethren church is under that very fact obligated to do what he can to help meet the need of this offering. The representatives of the various congregations have voted repeatedly in General Conference authorizing the Board of Benevolences and the Brethren's Home to collect funds sufficient to do certain definite tasks committed to them. And loyalty demands that every individual member cooperate in providing the necessary funds. The obligation is clear to see. No one needs to be convinced of it. It is only necessary that there shall be sufficient devotion to duty and loyalty to denominational undertakings to bring about the response that is demanded.

This obligation is not merely one that grows out of conference resolutions but is based upon the fact of our being beneficiaries of the spiritual labors of those who are now in need. These aged ministers are our teachers and ministers in spiritual things. They are our spiritual fathers, having led our souls to the acceptance of Christ as our Savior and having built us up in the knowledge of the truth. They established our churches, many of them, and left us the religious heritage we enjoy. Gratitude demands that they who poured out their lives in service for us with no thought of material reward shall now in their days of feebleness receive our loving and tender care.

Moreover, the church is divinely enjoined to provide for the needs of its ministry. Paul, recalling that the manner of support of the priesthood of the law was by the offerings brought by the people to the temple, said, "Even so hath the Lord commanded that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel" (1 Cor. 9:14). The same apostle writes to the Galatians, "Let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things." The force of the obligation is made out still more strongly by Moffatt's translation: "Those who are taught must share all the blessings of life with those who teach them the Word." And that sharing of "the blessings" must not stop when ministers have become incapacitated by age or affliction for further service. Nor should Christian people allow any of their poor and needy to suffer want. Paul puts the obligation very strongly: "But if any provide not for his own, especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel" (1 Tim. 5:8). And who shall say that the obligation does not obtain with regard to making provision for those who are of our own household of faith? What stronger obligation could we have for providing a Brethren's Home? When we are thinking about ministerial relief, let us think a little further than the immediate need. We ought to be making plans for taking care of our aged and superannuated ministers in a more adequate and dependable manner. We ought to be accumulating a pension fund in some way, possibly by taxing both congregations and pastors small annual payments, according to the salary paid and received, and possibly also by the aid of large gifts made by interested individual laymen. Many churches have long since caught the vision and have provided for themselves a fund and a plan whereby aged and retired ministers and their widows or dependents may be pensioned and thus made secure against the fear of want for the necessities of life when their earning days are over. Not only have most of the larger churches completed campaigns for endowment funds for the pensioning of ministers, but nearly all of the smaller Protestant denominations have raised funds for this purpose. And in most cases the response in gifts and offerings has been beyond the most hopeful expectations. The need of pensions is so apparent to those who understand the facts relating to the ministers' financial support, that the launching of a movement to raise a fund and to effect a satisfactory plan to meet such a need would be looked upon as wise and praiseworthy, and would likely receive the hearty support of the entire church.

Rocking the Prohibition Boat

There is altogether too much rocking of the Prohibition boat for the good of the cause. As The Congregationalist recently said, "Just now the cause of Prohibition needs all of its friends." It was never more severely put to the test than now. Its enemies are pouring millions of dollars into the channels of propaganda in an effort to alienate its friends or cause them to lose faith in its justness and effectiveness. They are seeking to take the strength and determination out of Prohibition conviction and to build up a state of mind that will leave the people hopeless and disgusted, and thereby make possible the return of legalized liquor. Dr. F. G. Coffin rightly says: "The most subtle arguments of a kind not used before are being employed by the 'wets.' Their plea is that in the interest of the morals of youth, the honesty of our nation, the elimination of graft and official corruption, the prevention of killings by enforcement officers and poisoned liquor, the rights of individuals and for other benevolent (?) reasons Prohibition should be modified. They plead repeal for the sake of moral welfare."

This skillful propaganda is causing not a little confusion in the public mind, which, added to the vicious opposition of the pro-liquorites, has made the sea rough for the Prohibition boat. This sort of opposition, of course, is to be expected and it has been in the face of just such antagonistic forces that the temperance cause has made its way to the present stage of success. But when opposition arises in the house of one's friends, it is altogether a different matter. Those within the Prohibition cause can do more harm by rocking the boat and can bring the cause into greater danger than can all the storms of opposition beating upon it from without. And that is just what some of our friends are unwittingly doing right now.

One good intentioned brother writes that he is becoming convinced that this effort to make people good by law is all wrong, that we are going at it backwards, we should first get men to be born again and then they will give up drink. This good brother is becoming a hindrance to the Prohibition cause by listening to the deceptive reasoning of skillful wet propagandists. No one questions the importance of getting men converted, but no one who thinks straight will stand by and allow the demonized liquor traffic to have free rein in the destruction of hundreds of men, body and soul, while he is confining his efforts to getting a half dozen men converted. He who stands squarely and positively in opposition to the liquor evil will make a better soul winner by that very effort and one of his greatest hindrances will be gotten rid of when he has driven to cover the temptation to drink. Perhaps "you cannot make men good by law," that is, good at heart, but you can make them behave themselves by law, and that's something. You can protect homes, and boys and girls, and mothers and wives, and you can protect men's wages, their jobs and their lives, and that is just what we have been doing for the last twelve years. We are usually suspicious of the dryness of the man who says, "You cannot make men moral by law," as an excuse for his failure to take an active interest in Prohibition; either that, or else he is blinded by some pet theory or prejudice.

Others of its friends are rocking the Prohibition boat through criticising and holding up to ridicule certain agencies that have been most effective in bringing about Prohibition and are now being used to focus public sentiment on enforcement. Such criticism

(Continued on page 8)

EDITORIAL REVIEW

The first announcement of the Easter Offering is made in this issue, when Dr. L. S. Bauman, treasurer, states that churches finding it to their convenience to do so, may take their Foreign Mission offering any time after the first of March.

Christian Endeavorers will find it much worth their while to read the excellent article in the Christian Endeavor department by one of our Warsaw Endeavorers—Mrs. C. H. Bennett. She sets forth the goals toward which all societies are asked to spend their energies.

A very loyal Brethren and long-time member of the Evangelist family, in sending his renewal subscription to Brother Teeter recently, wrote with appreciation of the Evangelist and told how that it has long been a race to see which member of his family would get to read the paper first. The Business Manager has permitted us to quote from his letter on another page.

Let churches keep in mind that two separate offerings are to be lifted on February 22, or else the offering that is lifted is to be divided into two parts, and one part sent to Rev. G. L. Maus, Secretary of the Benevolence Board, Roann, Indiana, and the other part sent to Mr. Cecil Hendrix, Treasurer of the Brethren Home Board, Flora, Indiana.

Brother C. D. Whitmer writes of his evangelistic experience at the Teegarden church, in Indiana, where he did the preaching and Brother Harley Zumbaugh served as song leader. Twelve were added to the church as a result of the meetings. During the year sixteen have been taken into the membership of the church. Brother Whitmer states that his church is planning to go on the Evangelist Honor Roll. We are glad to learn this, and congratulate them on their loyal purpose and hope they fully succeed in it.

Brother R. Paul Miller has recently closed an evangelistic campaign in the Listie church in Pennsylvania, where Brother H. W. Nowag is the pastor. The interest was keen and the crowds were large. We are told that great blessing came upon the church and that souls were saved, but we are not informed as to the number of converts. Both pastor and evangelist indicate that the campaign was a mutually congenial experience. Brother Miller sees a good future in store for this church if the mining industry continues to revive as it has begun now to do.

Brother G. E. Drushal writes of the wonderful way in which God has answered prayer and made provision for the work at Lost Creek, including both Riverside Institute and the church that functions there. Notwithstanding the bank failure, they have been able to come back strong financially and are making progress in establishing Sunday school missions, ten such schools now being conducted. Fifty confessions of faith have resulted from this work during the year. The growth is especially noted since the opening of the new road. He believes the brightest opportunity lies just ahead for this work.

Our Dayton, Ohio, correspondent tells us briefly of the evangelistic campaign recently conducted under the leadership of Brother S. M. Whetstone, as evangelist and Brother R. D. Barnard as pastor and field director. One of the special features of the meetings was the children's choir, which made a deep impression with their singing. There were twenty-six confessions during the meetings.

The services of Brother and Sister Whetstone were much appreciated, and Brother Barnard is proving a very worthy shepherd of this large fold, feeding and caring for the sheep as become a faithful under-shepherd.

Miss Lyda Carter, who has for several years been holding forth at Krypton, Kentucky, writes of the way God is leading them forward and providing for their needs. The people there rejoice in the coming of Brother Frank Gehman and his wife, as an answer to their prayers, and his ministry is being appreciated. The Ashland College Gospel Teams recently gave a lift to this work made possible the improvement of two of their dormitory rooms. Young people throughout the brotherhood are taking increased interest in this mission as it is the ideal of Christian Endeavor to ultimately become the full supporters of this work.

Our good correspondent from Mexico, Indiana, writes of the progress of the Lord's work in that field, and particularly of an evangelistic campaign, in which the pastor, Brother Mark B. Spach, served as the evangelist and Brother Harley Zumbaugh was the song leader. The attendance and interest was good, and precious the communion which closed the campaign four young people were baptized into the church. We are told also of the larger work of Brother C. A. Stewart, who recently left the field, had in his hearts. Brother Spacht is proving himself a worthy successor. God is blessing his church in their united efforts in his behalf. This is the home of Elder L. W. Ditch, whose life and service is much appreciated by the church.

President E. E. Jacobs, in his College News this week, informs us that the enrollment for Ashland College for the year has reached 312, the highest in the history of the school, and that at a moment when a goodly number of other schools are losing in number. He feels sure the outlook for Ashland is bright and that an enrollment of 400 could soon be reached if facilities for that number were provided. One of the first needs, a need that does not wait for its urgency upon future growth but is important for the accommodation of the present enrollment, is the building of a new chapel. Surely God is leading forward to large things in an educational way as fast as the church is able to follow. The church's great need is larger faith in venture and greater consecration of its life and substance to Christ.

Dr. K. M. Monroe gives us another installment of Seminary Notes, in which we learn of Prof. M. A. Stuckey's having represented the Seminary at a professorial inauguration at Princeton Seminary recently. Also, we are told of the beginning of practical preaching by the Seminary students at the mid-week prayer meeting hour at the Ashland church. To preach in a perfectly natural and earnest manner before those who are gathered to criticize and to point out one's weaknesses is not an easy thing to do and many students have we known who really took delight in the experience, but it is a very valuable experience. Student days are times to discover one's weaknesses, and there is no way in which they are so readily made manifest as in the actual practice of preaching before a group of friendly critics. It should be said, however, that the student preachers are not alone to be benefited from this seminary work; the members of the Ashland church who attend are enjoying some splendid sermonettes.

Prof. M. P. Puterbaugh, treasurer of the National Sunday School Association, gives us his first report of White Gift Offering. In a personal note to the editor, he warns against being too optimistic because of the size of this report. Doubtless not all the reports are in yet, but last year by the first of February the treasurer had received 104 reports, while this year 93 were received by that time. There are still 30 churches that reported last year that haven't reported yet this year. No doubt many of these will send in offerings, and the chances are, we are ready to venture in spite of the treasurer's warning, that the total of this year's offering will go over the total of last year, which was $3,800. This year's total so far is $3,200. The Waterloo, Iowa, church deserves special attention because of the fact that last year, it made the largest contribution, giving $215, and this year that church exceeded its last year's record by $50, again being the largest contributor. It is to be hoped that other churches will yet come in a like splendid manner, and put the offering much nearer the goal set. We are going to believe, until time shall prove otherwise, that a goodly number of the churches that usually contribute to White Gift offerings will yet be enrolled among the list of

Obligation to Our Aged Brethren of the Ministry

By Rev. G. L. Maus, Secretary Benevolence Board

Time is fast approaching, when we as a Brethren will be called upon to make the contribution of our Benevolence Day offering. The responsibility of caring for these aged and retired ministers and their companions should receive the most serious attention of every member of the Brethren church. We feel that this issue has been evaded in the past, except to the extent that we have been enabled to say that we had done a little something. You read the appeals which have been made by the members of the Benevolence Board, we want you to feel that we are your servants. We will be able to help these brethren ONLY as you help us. Unless this offering is generous we as a board will be placed in an embarrassing position within a very short time. Our treasury is almost depleted, not enough in it to make the payment.

As I am writing, I am reminded of the words of the apostle Paul, when he says: "No man provide not for his own, and especially of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel" (1 Timothy 5:8). These words are to pierce like an arrow and should remind us of our obligation to these brethren. As I turn to the Word of God I am reminded of the parable of the Good Samaritan and how that preacher saw that man, bleeding, half-dead, lying by the road side. As soon as he got a sense of his condition, he lifted his head and got on the other side of the road. Then another man, a Levite, who had more religion than the Samaritan; when he saw him, he passed by. Then came a Samaritan who was supposed to have no religion, but no true religion, and he gave to the world a concrete example of what religion really consisted of. Lord, let us not be like that priest or Levite, but to be a Samaritan.

Brethren, do we love our denomination? DO WE? If we love our denomination, then we must love the men and women who gave their lives to make the church possible. Remember that when the offering for Benevolences is made either February 15th or 22nd, the spirit in which we give, will be the real test as to how deep and genuine our love is for our denomination.

You my fellow pastors and laity, the thought that superannuated ministers and their companions living in poverty, ought never to be thought of. Paul says: "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the word and in doctrine." 1 Tim. 5:17. Certainly these brethren have been

(Continued on page 6)

The Brethren's Home

By Rev. A. V. Kimmell, Member the Brethren's Home Board

The Brethren Church as a whole is not taking the Brethren's Home seriously. Three reasons are suggested and then a brief discussion of each follows. Perhaps the Brethren's Home is not being taken seriously by the church at large for the reason that the church as a whole has had little to do with the cost of the present holdings, most of the property and the money coming from individuals. It may be that the members of the church think that they will never need a place like the Home and are not much concerned about providing a place for those who do need it and are entitled to it. Then there may be those who think that the Home is not serving the retired ministers of the church nor their widows.

Now consider these three propositions briefly but frankly. The members of the Brethren Church should be very thankful that certain individuals have been generous enough to give the church a home for the aged; equipped to care for them so comfortably. That these gifts, amounting to thousands of dollars have come without "drives" and heavy "pressure" should all the more be a cause for appreciation and the offering taken for the Home on Benevolence day should be generous enough to show that appreciation. The churches should not evade the responsibility because no heavy drive is being made. That the Home has reached its present state of efficiency without this should make the churches all the more willing to respond now that the need is very real.

In presenting the second proposition we hasten to say that we would be happy if our ministers could save enough to care for themselves when they retire from active service but the situation of the minister is such that this is rarely possible. This is not for the reason that the preacher is a poor manager for he can make a dollar go farther than any other class but his salary is not large to begin with and then the generosity of the preacher and the missionary is mostly such as to make them the most liberal givers, in proportion to income, of any people in the world. Should the preacher have no income for his days of retirement he is entitled to a home and is not considered an object of charity when he lives in a home thus provided. The members of the Brethren Church should take this matter so seriously that they gladly provide this year an offering adequate to meet the needs, though they never see the buildings or the grounds of the Home.

Now with regard to the objection that there are not, at present, any of the retired preachers in the Home let us say frankly that none of them have made application

Consider

YOUR CHRISTIAN OBLIGATION

To the Superannuated Ministers who after many years of sacrificial service are now in need of the necessities of life, and

To the aged and infirm members of our church, in need of the cares and comforts of a Brethren Home

HEAR GOD'S WORD

But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel.—1 Timothy 5:8.

PROVE YOUR LOYALTY

To the action of our National Conference and to the teaching of the Word of God by making a generous offering for the support of both the SUPERANNUATED MINISTERS AND THE BRETHREN HOME

On Benevolence Day, February 22

to be admitted to the Home. No retired preacher has been refused admittance and none can say that they do not like it or that they have been mistreated there for they never have tried it. For some reason our aged men prefer to skimp along on a small pension or depend upon their relatives and friends rather than accept the advantages offered by the Brethren's Home. Why this should be is almost a mystery for the furnishings of the Home are good, though plain; the food is plentiful and well prepared; the rules of the institution are just those absolutely necessary to the proper management of such a place; the community and the church at Flora, Indiana offer the finest kind of fellowship.

We are sure that the church has been just a little slow to appreciate all these advantages and when she does awaken to the situation the facilities of the Home and the income will be taxed far beyond their limit and the day is not far distant when there will be a waiting list. The Board is planning for that day as wisely as it knows how but the need of this offering is for the present operation expenses. The Home is not idle. A number of aged people are living there in comfort. Those not ministers or their widows are admitted at a nominal charge while the room is not needed for the ministers but the charge is not large enough to cover the actual cost, so right now your offering is going to a very worthy cause, therefore it is only right that the entire denomination should become interested in the Brethren's Home.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Our Obligation to Our Aged Brethren of the Ministry

(Continued from page 5)

true to the faith and the principles of the Brethren Church. Let US keep our hands clean. Let us make this the largest offering ever. Will you do it?

Roann, Indiana.

The Brethren Home

A Message from the Board's President

The Brethren Home located at Flora, Indiana comes again to the whole brotherhood with an appeal for support for the coming year. The last Sunday in February is the day designated Benevolence Day. On that day two most worthy and dependent appeals for support are made to the churches. The Brethren Home shares with the Superannuated Ministers' fund the offering made that day.

The quota asked from the churches by The Brethren Home Board is barely sufficient to carry us through a year. The sum has been set at forty cents per member. Permit me here very briefly to enumerate our necessary expenses. They are estimated as follows: For maintenance, salaries, help, etc., about $3,000; for necessary improvements, upkeep of buildings, insurance, etc., about $500; For interest and annuities about $2,500; total $6,000. Over against this we place a property with certain annuity investments totalling about $80,000. At the present we are paying rather heavy annuity charges but these make possible the large assets we have to our credit and gradually these annuity charges will decrease.

So we confidently appeal to all pastors and through them to all our churches for a liberal offering on Sunday, February 22.

Please send all offerings to our treasurer, Cecil Hendrix, Flora, Indiana. He will acknowledge all such gifts and send receipt for same.

I may add here that the HOME at present is just about full to its limit. We have under consideration several applicants for admission who, if admitted, will completely fill every available room. Recently we admitted the elderly widow of one of our most widely known ministers, Peter P. J. Brown of Congress, Ohio.

We come with confidence that the churches will not us even though the "times" may be hard. Now if those in need of food and raiment and a home must be cared for. I am, Faithfully yours,

J. ALLEN MILLER

President Board of Trustees of the Brethren Home

The Brethren Home Your Responsibility

By Ephraim Culp, Member Brethren's Home Board

The Brethren Home at Flora, Indiana is an institution founded and operated for the purpose of making a home for the aged and infirm Brethren who have no home family and unable to care for themselves.

This Home is owned and controlled by the General Conference of Brethren Churches and is incorporated in the State of Ohio. It is directly governed by a board of trustees elected by the General Conference.

It is wholly dependent on the gifts from individuals and churches of our domain and through the generosity of these, the Home has progress and has been maintained in a very wonderful way.

Of course there is much to be done and many things needed to keep up this good work and as the last Sunday in February has been set aside for an offering for benevolent purposes—for the support of The Brethren Home at Flora and the Superannuated Ministers' Fund, every individual and every church group is urged to come forward and do their bit. Some individuals have given more, some different amounts and to those who have given substantial amounts,—such as five hundred dollars, a thousand and some have gone much farther, into several thousands,—the Home pays an annuity when asked for.

The Home and its officials want more than anyone else that the churches and their members shall realize that this is their responsibility. The officers are interested and doing all that they can, but if they are not backed up by the churches and membership, they will fail. All that they ask is for you to become interested and inquiring and prayerful about the matter and then they will be assured that everything that is needed, and especially the proper financial support will be given.

During the past year the board of trustees has taken upon themselves to cause an investigation of the different gifts and holdings of the Home, and in this investigation they have employed capable attorneys who have had experience in investigations of this kind and as a result all of us are assured that everything is legally right and that we need not worry or be concerned about the future of the Home or its title rights or bond holdings.

Now since this investigation has been made and with the continued interest the officers are taking in the Home and the time they are giving to its proper care, there is no reason for any member or church hesitating in doing their part in the support and maintenance of this institution.

And it is all in HIS Name.

Goshen, Indiana.

Prayer: "Holy Spirit of all vitality and of all blessing, enter our lives, we pray thee, and cause our wilderness to be glad and our desert to blossom as the rose. Amen.—Amos R. Wells.

An Appeal to the Heart

Fred C. Vanator, President of the Benevolent Board

One of the things that strikes our notice as we study the life and work of our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ, is the compassion he had upon all with whom he came in contact. Wherever he went he always saw the need of help. Whether the need was temporal or spiritual he was ready to meet that need. We are to use Jesus as our Example in our dealings with men and are to help wherever and whenever opportunity affords. The Benevolent Board is coming to you in this final call for the year 1931, (for this is the last issue which reaches all parts of the brotherhood before the day of giving the Superannuated Ministers' offering,) and we are asking you again to "put yourselves in the places of those who have given of their lives and their talents to preach the Gospel" and diligently inquire whether you are putting the proper emphasis on this phase of the work. Working out your budget for the various offerings of the work of the church. We are here at this time facing a divided offering, for both the Superannuated offering and the offering for the Brethren Home are to be taken on the 22nd of February. Does this mean that you, as interested members of the church, are thinking of these offerings as one? And are you saying to yourselves, "I will just put in a small offering and they can use it as they see fit, for either part of the work that needs assistance." This will not do. These two Boards are two quite distinct and distinct phases of the work. They need two quite distinct and distinct considerations. We are anxious for a large offering for the Brethren Home, BUT WE WISELY ARE ANXIOUS CONCERNING THE MONTHLY ALLOWANCE OF THE BRETHREN WHO ARE RECEIVING THE HELP OF THE BENEVOLENT BOARD!

In order to meet just the mere need of the present number of those receiving their monthly allowance, the Benevolent Board must have an offering of at least $2,500. This only covers present needs. There are others who are asking for assistance before the year closes. Brethren, you can see for yourself where we stand. In this issue reaches you there will have gone out to the entire brotherhood two communications through the mails, reaching every pastor. The latter of these two is a simple post card bearing these words:

RED STANDS FOR DANGER

But there is no Danger that you will forget
THE SUPERANNUATED OFFERING to be taken

FEBRUARY 22, 1931

Ask your pastor whether he got the notice. If he, by chance, did not, then read it to him. We need this notice to make this work go. Our motto this year is: EVERY MEMBER A PARTAKER IN THE JOY OF THE SUPERANNUATED OFFERING." Will you make it true?
Indiana.

The Legend of the Bells

By F. C. Hoggarth

In a peaceful old English village of Downham, at the foot of Pendle Hill, there is a legend concerning the old bells. When the neighboring Abbey of Whalley was dismantled, at the dissolution, monks, stones, estates, were all scattered. Farmers found the stones used in the old do-mitory was long used as a barn.

Some of the stones found their way into the fabric of other churches, and three of the bells of the old Abbey Church were hung at Downham. Belated travelers on Pendle Hills on calm nights, so it is said, sometimes hear the soft low chimes of distant bells, the monks' bells, pealing from the tower, as they used to do in older times, calling the monks to prayer at midnight hours.

When all else is gone, the music is still occasionally heard. The hands of time cannot quite destroy the old melodies. Legends of such phantom music are frequently found.

There is one in Brittany concerning a city of Is, which in some far-off age was submerged by the sea. Sailors along that coast point out its supposed location, and say that in stormy days they see the tops of buried spires in the hollow of the waves and hear rising from the depths of the sea the music of the bells.

With that legend Renan began his "Recollections of Childhood." "It has often seemed to me," he said, "that I have at the bottom of my heart a city of Is whose bells still call to worship. Their trembling notes seem to come from infinite depths, like voices from another world."

Whether literally true or not, the legend is spiritually true. It is not the least of life's mercies, that melodies from far-off days are still heard hauntingly sweet. Not without mystery, they come to us as the legends say, on calm nights or on stormy days. Because of them life is less forlorn. In their music may be found healing and guidance. For all such music should thanks be given.—Christian Advocate.

Memories

By C. F. Yoder

*Sometimes when I am riding lonely on the train,
And do not feel inclined to talk, I think again
Of days gone by, when I was young and vain,
And memories fill my heart with mingled joy and pain.
I love to think of childhood scenes, e'en with regret:
The dear old schoolhouse that is standing yet,
The playground, there, dear spot, where we so often met,
Those childhood scenes, so sweet they were,
I can't forget. I can't forget.*

*Sometimes when I am thinking of those special friends Whom I have loved in former years, my thinking tends
To ask if it be possible, by means and ends
To have a world where love with duty blends.
I do not doubt the Providence that hath beset
Our several ways. 'Tis good. We have no cause to fret.
We love our work, our dear companions, all,—and yet
Those memories of childhood, whether sweet or sad,
We can't forget. We can't forget.*

*Sometimes I think that in that world beyond the tomb,
Where we shall love as children in our Father's home,
We shall so understand in that bright world to come,
That evil thoughts shall in our hearts find neither cause
nor room,
Yes, I believe that there we shall remember yet
Those things that are enduring. Love endures. So let True love be cherished, that when we meet those we have met,
And love renewed meets love renewed, without regret
We'll not forget. We'll not forget.*

*Yea, more than that, I must believe that even he Who loved the world, yet oftentimes went to Bethany,
To those he loved;—who of the twelve chose three
To share his inner circle—calletth you and me.
And in the kingdom of his love, When once we've met
With least and greatest, we too may love best yet
These dear ones who have won our love's enduring debt,
And not forget, and not forget.*

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

HALLOWED BE THY NAME

Meditation on this expression of adoration in the Lord's Prayer brings a shock with the realization that today the name of deity is held so lightly by the multitudes. Many who wear the name Christian are not guiltless of this sin of irreverence. Profanity centers around the name of God; persons are profane when they habitually take this name upon their lips without due respect to its significance. Other generations have not been so irreverent. The ancient Jewish people held one of the names of deity in such awe that they did not pronounce it. Our generation needs a fresh conception of the meaning of this prayer, "hallowed be thy name." A revival of the spirit of reverence for the names which belong to deity would greatly increase the devotional attitude of our people toward things holy. The word hallowed means revered, not taken lightly or thoughtlessly. A man reveres the name of his mother or his wife; these names he does not "swear by" or use thoughtlessly in his daily conversation; surely one should reverence above all other names the name of his heavenly Father. How great is our need to pray daily, "hallowed be thy name."—Nashville Christian Advocate.

ON YOUR KNEES

Many wise observers are strongly of the opinion that prayer, public and private, is the greatest lack in the Christian Church today. We are not the praying people that our ancestors were. Families go for years without prayer in the home circle. Prayer-meetings have ceased to be prayer-meetings. Many ministers prepare wholly out of books and meditation rather than on their knees. Committees have largely supplanted supplications unto the Lord. We receive not, because we do not ask.

This all means great loss. We need not prove to our readers that prayer has been the means by which Christians of all generations have gained their greatest conquests. Would that we could get back to prayer!—The Presbyterian.

"THE WAY OF TRANSGRESSORS"

Some time ago the newspapers of two continents contained stories of an American gangster who crossed the Atlantic to Europe but found that no country wanted him. He was arrested at every port he touched, and though no specific crime was preferred against him he was politely told to find another haven. He returned to America on a freight boat and was not long back when he was shot by other gangsters in New York. At the time of writing he is recovering from his wounds in some unknown home. Even the authorities in the hospital to which he was taken were glad to be rid of him.

The pity of it is that other young men who are tempted to go the way of the gangster do not learn from the fate of this man and be wise. There is little glamour in a sordid life of this kind. Chased from pillar to post, haunted by memories of crimes of all kinds, repudiated by his evil associates, who seek his life, without friends, without hope, without God—what an end to a career! With such an example before their eyes one wonders how any young man could ever dream of following a career of crime.

The way of transgressors is indeed a hard one, but even for such as these there is mercy and pardon with God. Even the worst of gangsters Christ can abundantly save.—The Evangelical Christian.

Rocking the Prohibition Boat

(Continued from page 4)

usually has its rise in one of two different sources—either disagreement with that agency's policy, or the giving heed to and being deceived by wet propaganda. Many a loyal advocate of Prohibition has had cause to disagree with and to disapprove the policy of the Anti-Saloon League in some of the puzzling problems it has had to face. But our differing opinions ought not to lead us to desert the only organization we have that is able to marshal public sentiment and make it effective in influencing for governmental efficiency in Prohibition matters. Our prejudiced and thoughtless criticism may do a lot of harm at a time like this when the enemies of Prohibition are searching for every careless utterance that can be used against it. Some of our prejudices are due to petty politicians casting dust in our eyes in order to keep us from seeing their wobbly, inconsistent and possibly insincere attitude on Prohibition, but the knowledge of which on the part of Anti-Saloon League leaders causes that organization to take a luke-warm, not an opposition attitude toward these political friends of ours.

Furthermore, and here we again quote from the editor of The Congregationalist, "In the midst of this skillful maneuvering of the wets some of our religious contemporaries are raising questions in the mind of church leaders as to the attitude of President Hoover, the possible obsolete function of the Anti-Saloon League, and the appropriateness of the activities of the Board of Temperance of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Our brother editors will not be surprised if they find some of their utterances used as propaganda, for the 'wets' would gain much strength if competition in these three agencies could be weakened. Perhaps no organization can be a perfect fit into every need of the Prohibition cause at all times and no human aggregation can be free from weaknesses, but, until something more perfectly adapted to the task is created, it is not wise to discredit ... what we have. Scarcely can we avoid weakening operative loyalty to the cause if we create suspicion against the agency through which it is most largely promoted." What we need now is more support of those very agencies that the wet interests most sincerely hate and wish to destroy. It is foolish to add fuel to the fire of the wet cause by weakening our own most effective weapon against them. Let us be careful that we be not found rocking the boat.

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

THE FAITH OF THE GOSPEL

(The following pages were prepared for the help of those who feel the need of a brief but reliable guide in the study of the principal Bible doctrines. It is in part a compendium of the author's former work, "God's Means of Grace" but contains many new topics. Published first in Spanish for the benefit of South American readers, it has proven so useful that it is now offered to English readers as a series of articles. If there is sufficient demand, it will then be published in book form.—C. F. Y.)

PREFACE

God is good because he has so ordered the creation that it favors the good and destroys the evil.

The laws of God are good, because obedience to them brings good and not evil.

Nature is good, because she helps all those who are good to be good.

Man also is inherently good, because the good is more permanent than the evil.

Heredity visits the evil of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generations, but in no way carries the good unto thousands of generations—therefore, let us fear God.

This is because man is not left alone. His environment includes his Creator who carries all things forward to their destiny.

Man has help, all the help he needs in order to develop and free and useful, and to go forward in his development toward his final destiny as a child of God.

First, he has the home, a school of virtue, the nucleus of society, the paradise of love and the gateway to Heaven.

Second, he has work, the cradle of industry, the key of progress and the servant of humanity.

Third, he has government to teach the evil and to protect the good, to coordinate effort, organize society and facilitate doing the will of the supreme Governor.

Fourth, he has religion, the expression (to the degree which it is true) of the voice of God to the conscience, the inspiration of virtue, the window of Heaven; and that religion which is true may be known by its fruits.

Fifth, he has the day of rest, the Lord's day, for praise and worship, to do good, to correct excesses, to take the longitude and latitude of life and read the compass. The Sabbath was made for man, not to destroy but to enjoy; not to prostitute it, but to be elevated by it.

Sixth, he has the tithe, the financial sabbath, corrective selfishness, the tonic of industry, fountain of prosperity, a pure stream of blessing and a deserving expression of gratitude to the Creator.

Seventh, he has the Bible, a reflection of God and a mirror for man, a library on the science of eternal life, a guide-book for individuals and for nations, a revealer of God and a witness to Jesus Christ the Savior of the world. With Jesus Christ begins the new creation, the kingdom of God, which "is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit." To those who receive him Christ gives the power to become, by a new creation, the sons of God, transformed into the image of the Creator.

Finally, the church, the true church, is the spiritual body of Christ, an organic body, in the process of formation, the regenerate of all nations and creeds being the parts built up together by the Holy Spirit into a living temple, the temple of God, the instrument of the Spirit for the evangelization of the world, and the bride of Christ in his coming kingdom.

The institutions of the church, its meetings, its rites, its doctrines, its officials and its works,—all are for the benefit of men of good will, who love God and their neighbor. A study of these things should therefore be of interest and blessing. Readers of this book who will take the trouble to read the many Bible references given in the footnotes of the statements made, will find much soul food and a sure anchor for their faith in the midst of the chaos and anarchy of the present moral crisis of the world. "He that willeth to do his will shall know of the teaching." The Bible is the guide to truth.

Many be infected with the idea that it is useless to study the Bible because modern science has proven that it is out of date, let him remember that the Bible was not written to teach science, but to teach morals, and its teachings to be of perpetual value must of necessity be expressed, not in the terms of science which change from age to age, but in the form of illustrations, biographies, parables, poetic language, parables and proverbs that retain their moral content intact for all ages and civilizations. To insist upon a literal interpretation of everything is as absurd as the literal translations of American idioms which appear in the presentation of speaking movies from foreign countries. The message of the sacred Book is clothed with the beauty and eloquence of inspired poetry and we need something of the same inspiration to tune with it. When the heart is filled with the love of God it will also thrill with the Word of God.

Let any who is inclined to think that science has banished God and his message to men remember that all the great scientists have been devout believers in God. The words of Lord Kelvin well represent them all. He said: "It is impossible to conceive either the beginning or the continuation of life without a creating and law-giving power. I am profoundly convinced that modern zoological speculations have not taken sufficiently into account the existence of a preconceived plan. We are surrounded by overwhelming proofs of an intelligent and benevolent plan. They reveal back of Nature the Creator and the giver."

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Mark 16:12, 13; Luke 24:13-27. It seems to us now that the disciples were very slow to believe. Surely, those who brought the glad news to them repeatedly were not such habitual triflers that they could not be believed! It would seem, too, that after the consistent testimony of a number of the disciples some of them should have recalled the many plain statements of Jesus concerning his suffering and resurrection. However, the fact remains that no such thing had ever happened before, and perhaps we should have been just as incredulous and slow to understand. We should all pray often that famous prayer: "Lord, I believe: help thou mine unbelief!"

TUESDAY

Mark 16:14-18. If we feel that the early disciples were slow to believe, it may help to realize that it has taken the Christian church nearly two thousand years to begin to learn that "into all the world" meant all the world. And we have not yet learned to believe him when he said that his servants would not fight, or swear, or do anything else that was not to the glory of God. Lord help our unbelief, and may thy church today awake to her failures and walk worthily with thee, that many may be led to believe and be saved.

WEDNESDAY

Mark 16:19, 20; Romans 8:31-39. We cannot conceive of Jesus, with his work on earth accomplished, sitting idly in the heavens. In fact, verse 20 states that the Lord worked everywhere with the early disciples, and we know from experience today that Jesus still works in the world. Also, we know that at the right hand of God in heaven he ever liveth to make intercession for us. So that, in a double sense, "We serve no God whose work is done." Let us praise him for all his wonderful works unto the children of men!

THURSDAY

Psalms 25:1-7. How well the Psalmist knew himself and God! The best efforts of his own youth had resulted only in sin, and he therefore does not plead his own merits, but only the tender mercies and loving-kindness of the Lord. Even as the young birds in the nest must wait upon the parent birds for that which is their very life, so must we wait upon the Lord—not only for our physical needs, but also for our spiritual needs—all the day. Lead us in thy truth, and teach us, O Lord.

FRIDAY

Psalms 25:8-14. Sometimes it is hard to see that all the paths of the Lord are mercy, but after we have passed along the way, and can look back upon it, we see that truly his path was one of mercy, as well as of truth. Happy are those who can say, in faith believing, as they go along the road: "All the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth unto such as keep his covenant and his testimonies." It is well to remember that though the soul of such a one may dwell at ease, there is no promise that the body shall dwell at ease also.

SATURDAY

Psalms 25:15-22. When we ourselves are in trouble and those who have persecuted us for righteousness' sake, without cause, seem to be prospering in all their ways, it is sometimes something of a trial of our faith. However, aside from praying for them, we should not let them worry us. Only let us pray for integrity and righteousness, that we may not bring reproach upon the Lord we serve and worship.

SUNDAY

Psalms 26. Let no one make the mistake of thinking that the Psalmist here prided himself on his own righteousness, or was pleading his own merits. The secret is in the last half of the first verse: "I have trusted also in the Lord; therefore I shall not slide." Again, in verse 11, after referring to his own integrity he yet pleads that the Lord will redeem him. Truly apart from him we can do nothing.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Goshen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

"And Still It Grows"

By Rev. Clifford G. Twombly, D.D.

(Continued from last week)

And so the menace of the movies still grows, in spite of all the "new" codes of morals and promises of Mr. Hays and the movie men—until now it is an open challenge to the Christian Church and ministry, for the salacious films present an obstacle to the advancement of Christianity and to the setting up of the Kingdom of God on earth which has got to be overcome if the Kingdom of God and its standards are to prevail, and American life and morals are not to be fatally corrupted and lowered.

What We Can Do

What then are we going to do about this question which concerns us all so tremendously? I speak to you as to Christian people who want to know what to do about it. 1. I would say then,—first of all,—begin with the Christian Church, which alone, I believe, has the possible power and influence, if aroused, that are necessary to cope successfully with such an evil.

Stir up your ministers individually and separately, everywhere, to interest themselves in this grave problem which so vitally and universally affects the morals and ideals of their people, and especially the morals and ideals of practically all their children and young people—for ministers as a rule have not realized at first hand how grave this problem is, nor interested themselves, or their churches, actively in its solution. The majority of them do not go to the movies except now and then to see some good picture, and so fail to know what the general run of pictures is. They naturally do not like to be seen at places whose billboards are often so lurid and suggestive and indecent and offensive; but they ought now to be seen there continually, for it may indeed be the truth that "the great storm-centre of the actual fight of Good against Evil in the world now lies just there, and yet not one in fifty of the clergy, who ought to be the moral leaders of the people, realize the danger of the situation enough to be doing anything worth while about it." Ministerial associations seldom seriously discuss it, and most church conventions have so far been strangely silent on the subject, or oblivious to it. Yet we have never faced any such widespread menace in America before, and it challenges the utmost endeavor of the Christian Church and ministry to meet it.

"But," it is objected, "a clergyman's job is to teach spirituality, and not to make investigations, such as that of the movies, for example, or to lead any battle against them. He must not soil his hands in this way! He must inspire his people individually to do these things and to make these investigations!"

But what kind of a spirituality is it that preachers to others but does not lead the way? And what kind of spirituality is it that does not allow a clergyman to soil his own hands, but does allow him to urge other people, his people, to soil their hands? Cannot he engage in such a battle for the right, just as well as they? Is he not presumably as strong to withstand the evil as they? Is he in any greater danger of becoming contaminated than they? If so, is he fit to be their spiritual leader? What would have been thought of a captain in the war who exhorted his soldiers to go over the top against the enemy and then stayed behind in safety himself? As for the danger of a clergyman's setting an example to others by being seen at the movies, those others will soon learn to know why he is there if he is in earnest and not afraid to speak out about what he sees and learns!

If it is objected again that "personal religion is the chief thing for the minister and church to teach," it may be answered again, "It is true that little can be done in such a fight without personal religion, for that alone can give the insight and courage and high determination and perseverance and right spirit that are necessary to make it, but a minister or a church that teaches a personal religion which is content to stop without fighting such a battle of the Lord as this in this critical day and generation is not the kind we need most in America today."

2. Not long ago, I have been told, a large group of people and missionaries in India sent through the American Consul a protest to our American Government against the kind of movies that were being shown in India. The American Government replied that it could do nothing in the matter except to try to persuade the moving picture men to do better, as there was no legislation covering the subject! Then it is the business of the Christian Church, or of the Christian men and women who compose the church, which to me is the same thing, to help make legislation which will enable the American Government to do something to protect the Indians and others, as well as ourselves, from our moving picture immoralities.

Fortunately two good bills have been introduced into Congress which, if enacted, will go far towards this end: The Brookhart Senate Bill, No. 1003, which would put an end to blind and block booking, and make each local exhibitor free (as he is not now free) to choose his films in an open market, and therefore responsible for the kind of pictures he elects to show in the community in which his theatre is situated; and The Hudson H. R. Bill No. 9986, which would regulate the movies at their source of production in accordance with certain moral standards of decency which the movie men themselves have felt obliged to put forth from time to time to allay public indignation, but to which they have never yet adhered!

See to it, then, I would say to you,—in the second place,—that petitions to the Senate, in care of Senator Smith M. Brookhart, and petitions to the House of Representatives in care of Representative Grant Hudson, for the speedy enactment of the bills, flow into Congress by the thousands from Christian people everywhere from time on, until this growing and terrible menace of the salacious movies is overcome.

A Futile Method

We are often told that the way to prove the movies is to "support the good and ignore the bad!" No counsel could be more welcome to the moving picture man for it not only makes larger support more likely for the good pictures, but above every other thing it leaves the moving picture men free to show all the evil pictures they choose to show without further hindrance or objection, or fear of hostile legislation, and they know well that there are always "enough people whose weaknesses can be pandered to, to make the evil pictures pay." Such a plan offers no protection to anybody and no reform. It has been largely ingested and spread as a slogan by the movie men themselves; it is a smoke-screen of the cleverest kind.

"But if the movie men cannot earn the accustomed enormous profits except by showing a certain percentage of corrupting pictures—except by following the principle that the box-office must determine the character of their productions—what can they do? Have they not a right to show such pictures?" I would answer "No!" Most decidedly they have not! No business has any right whatever to exist on earth if it cannot make its profits through the corruption of the public morals."

Will the Christian church and ministry, in vindication of their moral leadership of the nation, rise up and meet that challenge? Or, will they give up that leadership and admit their helplessness in face of such a situation, and become of little or no account as far as moral problems in the community are concerned?—From Twentieth Century Progress.

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for February 22)

Jesus Bearing the Good Tidings

Scripture Lesson—Luke 8.

Printed Text—Luke 8:1-15.

Devotional Reading—Isa. 61:1-3, 10.

Golden Text—He went about their cities and villages, preaching and bringing the good tidings of the kingdom of God—Luke 8:1.

Introductory Note

After the supper in Simon's house, Jesus made a preaching tour through Galilee. He is again by the sea of Galilee. He spent a busy day teaching, healing, dealing with enemies. There seems to have been a separation between him and the Pharisees. Enemies lurked to catch something to use against him whereby to accuse him. So he began a new style of preaching,—by parables. This express design was to give truth to the receptive minds by picture teachings that explained the same, while the real teachings would be enigmas to his enemies. These parables were spoken to "much people," v. 4, but to the captive hearers and they only would benefit, vs. 9, 10. When the disciples asked for a private explanation, he is glad to give it, but critical, dishonest hearers are left unenlightened.—Vella.

The Ministering Women

(1) Their gratitude for what Christ had done for them filled them with the desire to do what they could for one who had done so much for them. (2) The fact that they had been cured gave them power to persuade others to trust in Jesus. (3) Their being healed by faith in Jesus, filled them with love, and the spirit of Jesus, and the spiritual life from which would grow the fruit of the Christian life. (4) Their presence itself, as examples of Jesus' work for men, was a power to help his cause. They ministered unto him of their substance." We may understand from this that they exchanged with their means the food and other necessities, when needful, prepared food, paid the expense of lodgings." It is impossible for Jesus and his disciples to earn their own living while giving themselves up to the work of preaching and evangelizing.—Illustrated Quarterly.

Wayside Hearers

Wayside hearers "are not opposers, they receive seed; but they receive the truth as it is, without the soil of their natures being changed. They do not understand Matt. 13:19) because they are not prepared to understand." "They have exposed their hearts as common roads to every evil influence of the world, till they have become as a pavement. Cares, worries, passions, worldly interests, have composed possession of their minds. Moreover, they come immediately, like the birds in the field, and taketh away the word." "This is the most terrible saying in the Bible," says Luther of verse 12, "and it is a little thought of! For who thinks and believes that the devil too goes to church and sees how men listen so carelessly to the Word of God and do not even pray, and that their hearts are like a hard road, which the Word does not penetrate? Alas! even those who love the Word of God there is still something of the hard road in our hearts."

The road-like hardness of some hearers may have been caused by their arrogant, intellectual self-sufficiency. Arrogance of the mind has increased with the enlarging horizons of knowledge. As men discover the truth, as they win their way by reason into God's methods their power increases and they feel more and more independent. It is quite the fashion, now, to rely on this new-found power and to want to dispense with God. Man thinks he is the lord of his environment and well on his way to the overlordship of the universe. His mind is hard and the good news of God does not sink in.

Men are trampled by long hours of toil, labor that sees no relief ahead except that brought by illness or death. This is the hardness that afflicted the "man with the stone." The unfeeling pressure of our social machine hardens men's souls; first they are too tired to learn, and soon they are different.—Dr. F. D. Slutz.

The Stony Ground

The Stony Ground represents those whose hearts are touched, but the word does not take root in their moral nature; and their will and character are unchanged. They are moved by the winds of popular excitement or enthusiasm, but there is no new life. "Their hearts are not the mere fact of receiving the word with joy. For joy is a characteristic of the deep as well as of shallow natures. Absence of joys in a religious life is a sign, not of depth, but of dulness. Joy without thought is a definition of the stony-ground hearer."

Much of the seed falls on thin soil which receives it at once but which affords no depth for the roots. Persons who have a thousand fleeting wishes but no main desire, who champion every fad, and who nurse every whim for a brief fortnight, make a great demonstration of their interest in the good news of God only to run away after a new will o' the wisp when it floats into their ken. Such people cannot be counted on. They are everything and nothing.—Slutz.

Good Seed Among Thorns

It is not "this world" but the cares of this world; not "riches" but the deceitfulness of riches, that choke the word. It is the undue longing for riches, whether they are obtained or not, that destroys the power of heavenly things. "As the productive parts of a field in Palestine will sooner or later be covered with these thorns, the lesson of the parable is not that Christians will escape thorny days by rich fruit bearing. But what a sower in Palestine knows that he should do is to get his seed in early."—Adams.

The sad state of these is that they are double-minded, as James says, and because of it bring nothing to perfection through their spiritual efforts. They try to serve both God and Mammon.—Otterbein Teacher.

They seem well disposed toward the truth, but just have no time or strength to give it the attention it requires for growth. Their hearts are divided. They desire salvation but cannot or do not pay the price of uprooting from their lives the worldly interests which so take their time and effort that there is nothing left for the truth to thrive on.—Brethren Teacher's Monthly.

The Good Ground

The Good Ground represents such (1) as hear, (2) and receive, (3) in a good and honest heart, (4) hold it fast, (5) and yield fruit, (6) with patience, (7) growing up and increasing.

"Hold it fast," as distinguished from wayside hearers.

"In a good and honest heart"—versus the stony-ground hearers.

"Yielding fruit"—versus the thorny-ground hearers.—Adams.

Consider how the good seed grows. In 1890 a small coffee plant was sent to Blantyre, Africa, and within sixteen years five million coffee trees had been produced by the one parent tree. A good seed planted in favorable soil produces far more than sixty or a hundredfold. "Only a word for Jesus, spoken in fear, with sense of need; yet, with the Master's blessing, thousands that word may feed."

The planting may be in the form of a tract, but if it finds good soil who can tell what the harvest may be? Richard Gibbs wrote a tract entitled, "The Bruised Reed." A tin peddler gave it to a boy named Richard Baxter and it led him to Christ. He wrote, "A Call to the Unconverted." Thousands were saved through it, among them being Philip Doddridge, who wrote, "The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul." It fell into the hands of William Wilberforce, the emancipator of the slaves in the British colonies, and led him to Christ. Wilberforce wrote, "A Practical View of Christianity," which fired the heart of Leigh Richmond, who then wrote, "The Dairyman's Daughter." Soon 4,000,000 copies, in fifty different languages, were circulated. And who knows the whole story? It can never be fully known what influences came from the tract written by Richard Gibbs. Thus the good seed is multiplied.

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK 	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer
F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Dubail Ave., South Bend, Ind.	2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio

Our Society Goals for 1931

Mrs. C. H. Bennett

Much has been said about the value of goals. Every organization finds their members do a better year's work if definite goals are set. Many Christian Endeavor Societies had definite goals for the year of 1930 and it was well when the year had closed to have taken a lesson from the careful motorist, who regularly upon reaching a "Stop" sign—hesitates, looks both ways, and then proceeds. We have looked both ways—backward that we might profit by our mistakes and victories and forward to get a new vision of the needs which will furnish new goals.

Our Brethren leaders have concluded that the goals based upon the objectives proposed at the Eighth World's Christian Endeavor Convention in Berlin should form an opportunity for us to co-operate in a large way with others of like vision, to bring about a Christ-like living among youth.

Evangelism receives the first consideration. Every society and union is urged to make a concerted effort to recruit new members. Societies to meet the needs of all ages should be organized and special effort made to interest the non-Christian youth of the community. Study ways of reaching others and of holding those already touched with the knowledge of Christ.

Citizenship comes next and there are many studies in citizenship, law observance, community needs, which could be taken up by classes or by the entire society. Too much stress cannot be laid on trying to teach youth, that true citizenship lies in giving the very best service to Christ.

World's Peace was given a place on the 1931 programme. Every young person should be interested in international and interracial relationships. Study different races, their problems, their needs and get a knowledge of what can be done to conquer race prejudice, and the selfish commercial greed which exists between nations.

Missions—The understanding of missionary problems and some definite step toward boosting mission work should be one of the most interesting goals. Study mission books, have special services for the promoting of missionary teachings, bring interesting news items from mission fields and of course, best of all, if possible during the year have a returned missionary to speak to the entire society. Brethren societies should be especially interested in the mission objective—The Full Support of Krypton, Kentucky. Remember the plea made by Miss Spice, and as she states, "it is a real privilege and a great joy to be able to be instruments in his hands." Each society should have a part in this—a load divided among many becomes light.

Fifty Years of Christian Endeavor

High Points in the Society's Progress

(Note—Christian Endeavorers are advised to save these papers or clip this brief history of Christian Endeavor and paste it in a scrap book for future reference.)

1911

The twenty-fifth International Convention was held on the Million-Dollar Pier and in many churches, Atlantic City, N. J., July 6-12.

The victorious slogan, "A Saloonless Nation by 1920" had its inception at this convention.

Rev. F. B. Meyer accepted the presidency of the London Christian Endeavor Federation, the largest city union in the world.

1913

The plan of Christian Endeavor Life-Work Recruits was adopted by the United Society at the Los Angeles Convention, the plan having been previously introduced by the Ohio Christian Endeavor Union.

1915

Dr. Daniel A. Poling was elected associate president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor July 7.

1916

The United Society of Christian Endeavor for India, Burma, and Ceylon reported more than 50,000 members.

1918

Christian Endeavor made a splendid record of service in the army camps and cantons in all parts of the country, along both social and religious lines.

July 30-August 1 the World's Christian Endeavor Building, 41 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston, Mass., was dedicated with impressive ceremonies; and a beautiful United States flag, the gift of Colonel Edward H. Haskell, was flung to the breeze.

1919

August 6 Edward P. Gates, field secretary of the Illinois Christian Endeavor Union, was elected field secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, and on October 1, general secretary.

William Shaw resigned as general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor August 8, the resignation becoming effective December 31.

1921

The fortieth anniversary of Christian Endeavor was celebrated by a special meeting in the parsonage of Williston Church, where Christian Endeavor was born. The first president and the leader of the first prayer meeting, Granville Staples, led the meeting.

On Sunday afternoon, April 24, honorary membership in the Christian Endeavor Alumni Association of Washington, D. C., was conferred by Dr. Clark at the White House

Lastly we are asked to give a place to Christian Unity. We should practice fellowship with Christ's people through Christian enterprises, conferences and social and service activities. The county unions furnish a fine opportunity for this fellowship.

Bring these objectives before your societies. Ask for the adoption of the Covenant as prepared by International Christian Endeavor. Then study—work—and pray for their attainment.

Warsaw, Indiana.

upon the President of the United States, Warren G. Harding.

1923

The Endeavorers of Hungary, under the leadership of Dr. Csia and his associates, did magnificent work under most trying conditions. They rented the old Parliament building for evangelistic meetings, and had an attendance of more than 1,800.

The voice-amplifier was used for the first time at a Christian Endeavor convention at the Des Moines Convention. It was a complete success.

250,000 young people completed one or more leadership-training courses. California led, with an enrolment of 12,183.

On December 1 Dr. and Mrs. Francis E. Clark sailed for Italy and southern Europe to spend the winter in resting and writing.

(To be continued)

A READ-YOUR-BIBLE WEEK

For Prayer Meeting Committees

In consultation with the superintendent choose a week to be "Read-Your-Bible Week." Talk of it for several weeks in advance until the Juniors are interested. The plan is to get every active member, and others, too, if they will, to pledge themselves to try to read the Junior daily readings every day for one week. They will begin by reading the Scripture one Sunday at the meeting, and close with the reading the next Sunday's reading the following week. At the meeting on the second day each one will tell of one thing he has learned from his reading during the week, which, of course, will be on the topic. Be sure that each Junior has a copy of the Junior Daily Portion containing the readings, or copy the readings from the Junior Christian Endeavor World.

A HOBO HIKE

For Social Committees

This hobo hike was tried by a Junior society in Illinois. The Juniors all dressed up to look like tramps. The best looking hobo was given a prize, a piece of clothing and the one that looked least like a hobo was given a booby prize, a bar of soap. The Juniors walked a mile and a half to the tourist camp, and there fried bacon, eggs, cooked wieners, and toasted marshmallows. They also had lemonade and played games. This would make an ideal outing, a first class good time for Juniors.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Berne, Indiana

MISSIONS

Lost Creek, Kentucky

During One Year

At the beginning of the school year 1929 to 1930, a new basis was laid down for the work. We then went on just about half the support from the Home Mission Board that it had been receiving. When this basis was first proposed it was thought that it could not go forth on such a basis. But after much prayer, it was accepted, and the work went forth. On that basis up until one year ago the work was moving along on very smooth waters, spiritually and numerically. The school the fullest it had ever been, and the spiritual state high.

Then just about exactly one year ago, the crash came. Like thunder in a clear sky, word was passed that a bank at Jackson had failed, and the Institute had around five hundred dollars there at the time, and it is still there or somewhere else. Up until this bank failure the work had done something that it had never been able to do before, even when receiving double the amount of money from the Board, and that was paying its bills all up as it went along, and paying some on ten days' time for two per cent discount.

Well the prospect did not seem good at the close of last year, and also for the opening of this new year. What would the year bring forth? But every teacher felt that their call to the work was from the Lord, and if he called the needs would be met (Phil. 4:19).

The new year opened, and this is what we are wanting to get before you especially. With the opening of the new year a new MOVE WAS LAUNCHED, THE OPENING OF NEW SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND BIBLE CLASSES WHERE THERE HAD NONE. Ten Sunday schools and Bible classes were soon going, outside of the day school and Bible work here at the institute. The new road especially gave opportunity for this work. To date, counting the services held at the county jail, there have been fifty confessions of faith in this work. This to us is very good work and the thing that we have been anxious to see put on.

We are also glad to report that the day services are now seemingly better than they have ever been before, with the greatest attendance ever known in Breathitt county at regular services. And the good thing about it is that it seems to be stable. The chapel room is overcrowded, and a side room is filled to overflowing. This last Sunday some were complaining about having to stand in this side room because there had all been taken. It was felt that the chapel, the main room was full.

Then also the school is now full and last year saw the largest attendance ever and I believe that this year will equal not go over it, even with the hard on. Then another remarkable thing financially we now seem to be coming stronger than ever since the bank e. We do not understand it, how this come to pass in such a time as we now passing through. Prayers must be, and our God is answering.

Another remarkable thing is now showing some seem to fear that there is danger many high schools in this section, because of some having been built of years that there is no more need of of the kind here. Our contention if this high school is in the Will of rd, it will not matter how many others are built about it, and now we have evidence that this is right. Recently a man from another town where there are no high schools, one a church school, and a state school, came to enroll in the Institute. We wondered why he t. He replied: "I heard you preach sixteen" last summer, and I wanted to go to your school some." Others have likewise. The appeal of the moral standard of Riverside Institute is now, as we are sure of it doing, taking hold of the heart of the Mountain people, and they are bringing their children here in school. How can this large attendance this year be explained? Recently a local man, a keeper, said in the presence of the writer, "Riverside Institute now seems to be among its brightest and best years." And it seems so here, but— Shall we pray for the will of the Lord be done here, and not obstruct his will for this work? We are praying much and earnestly for AND WILL YOU, DEAR READER, JOIN US? G. E. DRUSHAL.

Krypton, Kentucky

The Krypton work has cause for rejoicing. God has so wondrously answered prayer and reopened a work which seemed practically dead. During the period of waiting for a pastor, there were those who continued to pray for and to the work. May God bless those who are faithful forever!

Step God had brought things to the Conference time when we reported that the Mission Board was waiting for a pastor and was planning to support work. How we do praise God for His goodness!

Brother Gehman is full of plans for enlarging the work and making it more self-sustaining if possible. We feel that in due season of our fondest dreams for this work will come true. We somehow always have a certain faith that these dreams will materialize.

With the kindness of the Gospel Team at Ashland College, we have some lovely dormitories which has greatly increased the appearance of two of our dormitories. (We gave them measurements of room, and they were far-reaching generosity and gave almost enough for them.) An unusually large amount of money has been sent in and distributed this winter. A chicken house is under construction. These things are all encouraging and point toward permanency and growth we feel. We have hopes of getting a house soon so that Brother Gehman can move far up the creeks, visiting those who do not, or at least do not, get here for services. We pray that this visitation may prove to be a fruitful means of soul-winning.

Our school at present seems encouraging. We have twenty-nine enrolled. We are trying to hide God's word in the hearts of these jewels. There is considerable interest taken in Mr. Gehman's Bible class for the upper grades. Every day at the Bible period, one of the neighborhood men comes in to study with the young people.

Our prayer meetings on Wednesday evening are a source of inspiration to me. It is so good to have a pastor here who stands strong for prayer meetings. We are making a study of some of the vital Bible doctrines on these evenings in connection with our prayer services.

We long for all our activities to work together to the glory of God in the salvation of precious souls. We do so long to see people saved and are praying for a revival at Krypton. Indeed, may one be sent.

Yours in the Service Triumphant,
LYDA CARTER.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

This present semester has set a record for enrollment, there being 312 students in attendance, not counting the music or some 70 on Saturday. There is not the slightest doubt but that we could have 400 students here if we were to provide room and teachers for them. Many schools report a loss for this present semester, some as many as 400 less, but we have gained. The enrollment for the past semester was an even 300. I am expecting 325 for next fall.

Miss Beulah Woods, M.A (Chicago) has arrived and taken up the work formerly done by Mrs. Leslie.

Also, Miss Esther Diaz from Porto Rico is here. She said that she had never been off of the island before and therefore had never seen trees without leaves.

Ashland has lost some of its basketball games this year, the opposition being out of our class, but this past week we won handsomely from Kenyon, 27 to 40, and from Ohio Northern 20 to 24. I am planning on an addition to our recitation room for next year by using a newly equipped room on the third floor of Founders' Hall for the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A., thus releasing rooms in the new building.

For the first time within the history of the school, we have made Chapel compulsory two days a week for all students. Dean Mason on Monday and Thursday, takes the Freshmen to what was formerly Hesperian Literary hall for chapel. This room holds comfortably about 110. The Freshman number about 125. So we are crowded there. All other students meet in the Chapel which holds 200 and is full. So you may see that we are well crowded here. A new Chapel building is a necessity.

It looks now as if the College Board should meet April 14th.

The State Department of Public Instruction recently inspected us and found the school quite satisfactory, in fact above the required standards.

I recently addressed the Exchange Club at Orrville and also spoke at the Maple Grove church (Church of the Brethren) on Some Triumphs of Modern Biology.

The Tri-county Basketball tournament will be held this year in our Gymnasium.

At the last meeting of the Faculty Club, Professor Lowe, of the department of physics, read a very able paper on the subject of Pluto, the Newly Discovered Planet.

Dr. Muzumdar, (Ph.D. of Wisconsin) who accompanied Gandhi on his trip to the sea, was in Ashland recently and spoke very intelligently upon India.

EDWIN E. JACOBS.

FIRST WHITE GIFT REPORT

Mrs. Etta Studebaker .....	$ 1.00
Mrs. H. C. Fortney .....	2.00
Mary Snyder .....	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Lee F. Myer .....	5.00
Amanda Kilhefner .....	5.00
Elizabeth Rishel .....	10.00
Mrs. Mary Rishel .....	10.00
Mrs. E. G. Goode .....	2.00
Waterloo, Iowa, S. S. ....	215.00
Waterloo, Iowa, W. M. S. ....	50.00
Meyersdale, Pa., S. S. ....	128.30
Goshen, Indiana .....	24.55
New Lebanon, Ohio .....	42.36
Oakville, Indiana, S. S. ....	28.38
Dayton, Ohio, S. S. ....	86.60
Berlin, Pennsylvania, S. S. ....	73.85
Johnstown, Pennsylvania, 1st Ch. .	182.44
New Paris, Indiana, S. S. ....	20.09
Miamisburg, Ohio .....	5.00
Ashland, Ohio, S. S. ....	100.00
Rev. and Mrs. G. C. Carpenter ....	10.00
Fremont, Ohio, S. S. ....	6.11
Smithville, Ohio, S. S. ....	23.36
Burlington, Indiana, S. S. ....	23.86
Scott Richael .....	5.00
Elkhart, Indiana .....	34.15
Milledgeville, Illinois .....	126.78
Portis, Kansas .....	34.42
Falls City, Nebraska .....	85.47
Morrill, Kansas .....	33.44
Mr. & Mrs. Horace H. Merritt ...	5.00
Gratis, Ohio .....	27.82
Flora, Indiana, S. S. ....	41.00
Salem Brethren S. S., (Ohio) ...	27.69
South Bend, Indiana .....	40.74
Mexico, Indiana .....	42.08
La Verne, California .....	117.69
Carleton, Br. Ch., (Iowa) .....	7.79
Bryan, Ohio .....	16.37
Roann, Indiana .....	44.57
Bethel Br. S. S. (Indiana) .....	71.25
Peru, Indiana, S. S. ....	27.45
Beaver City, Nebraska .....	5.00
Mundays' Corner, Pennsylvania ..	10.60
South Gate, California .....	4.25
Dallas Center, Iowa .....	25.50
College Corner, Indiana .....	5.00
Waynesboro, Pennsylvanai, S. S. ..	52.56
Nappanee, Indiana .....	127.58
Mr. & Mrs. Chas. Himiller (Fairview church) .....	3.00
Williamstown, Ohio .....	5.17
Mollie R. Griffin (Uniontown Ch.)	5.00
Winchester, Virginia .....	22.75
West Alexandria, Ohio .....	37.75
Canton, Ohio .....	25.00
St. James S. S. (Maryland) .....	16.10
Gravelton, Br. S. S. (Indiana) ....	17.14
Philadelphia, 3rd Church .....	35.00
Mr. & Mrs. G. B. Seibert and daughter (Beaver City Ch.) ...	15.00

Maurertown Church (Virginia) ...	30.60
Whittier, California .....	20.00
Pleasant Grove, (Iowa) .....	10.00
Leon, Iowa .....	37.82
Fairhaven church (Ohio) .....	24.15
Bethel Church (Kansas) .....	3.93
Martinsburg, Pennsylvania .....	7.00
Middlebranch, Ohio .....	10.10
Hamlin, Kansas .....	43.00
N. Manchester, Indiana .....	106.85
Roanoke, Indiana .....	5.00
Ardmore Brethren Church .....	11.00
Rittman, Ohio .....	17.42
Yellow Creek, Pennsylvania, S. S. ....	4.50
N. Vandergrift, Pennsylvania .....	10.34
Mrs. Verna Ullom .....	1.00
Lanark, Illinois, S. S. ....	100.00
Johnstown, Pennsylvania (2nd Ch.) .....	16.59
Vinco, Pennsylvania, S. S. ....	5.00
Gretna, Ohio, S. S. ....	11.00
Uniontown, Pennsylvania .....	8.70
Carleton, Nebraska, S. S. ....	43.18
Johnstown, Pennsylvania (3rd Ch.) .....	32.15
Conemaugh, Pennsylvania .....	56.50
Denver, Indiana .....	7.05
Warsaw, Indiana .....	35.56
Hagerstown, Maryland .....	182.45
Masontown, Pennsylvania .....	10.00
Allentown, Pennsylvania .....	22.63
N. Liberty, Indiana, S. S. ....	5.86
Summit Mills, Pennsylvania .....	9.18
Bethlehem Church (Virginia) ....	9.36
Loree, Indiana .....	35.44

Total .....$3,194.37
January 31, 1931

M. P. PUTERBAUGH, Treasurer.

SEMINARY NOTES

On February third Professor Stuckey represented our seminary at the inauguration of Dr. Andrew W. Blackwood, as professor of Homiletics, and Dr. John E. Kuizenga, as professor of Apologetics and Christian Ethics, at Princeton Theological Seminary. He was one of forty-five men who represented, for the most part, seminaries located in central and eastern states. Such contacts with other seminaries are very much worth while. Brother Stuckey also spent several hours at the New York Biblical Seminary where he found a large student body, a fine faculty, and a splendid library for technical theological work.

In the training of our high school teachers the State requires that each one, before receiving a degree from Ashland College permitting them to teach, shall observe a regular high school teacher conduct his class from three to five hours a week for one semester and then for five hours a week, under the observation of a critic teacher, conduct a high school class for one semester.

Some of us have long thought that our future ministers should have opportunity for some such training while here in preparation for their life work. Our seminar period seems to fulfill this need. Beginning this semester we have our seminar in our Ashland church after the regular Wednesday evening prayer meeting. Up until last evening several young men have been reading an assigned passage of Scripture in the presence of pre-seminary students, seminary students and faculty as well as numerous visitors. After the readings time is given for discussion and constructive criticism.

Last Wednesday evening was the first presentation of a critical and a sermon this semester. Brother Preston Campbell read as Scripture Lesson, Luke 15:1-31, and led in prayer. Brother Delbert Flora read a Hebrew critical based on Jeremiah 31:31-34 in which he handled in a very acceptable manner the difficult problem of the New Covenant. Brother Donald Carter brought a very practical and appropriate message to us from Acts 16:30-34.

Our young men are manifesting exceptional ability in rightly dividing the Word and presenting the Truth in a pleasing manner.

Miss Helen Garber, a special student in the Seminary, left at the end of the first semester to take up the work of teaching Bible in the public schools of Nappanee, Indiana. K. M. MONROE.

DAYTON, OHIO

The First Brethren church of Dayton held their revival meeting during the month of January and enjoyed wonderful weather during the time set for this service. The attendance was very good and we were made happy by the confessions of twenty-six during this period. May God bless them and keep them ever faithful, is our earnest prayer.

We were also made happy by the cooperation of our sister churches throughout the Miami Valley in this meeting and to those who gave freely of their services for the success of this meeting. One of the most impressive treats we had was that of the fifty or sixty children composing a choir, directed by Miss Peterson, bringing the message in song and which message came to us forcibly reminding us that we must first become as a little child to enter into the Kingdom.

Rev. and Mrs. Whetstone were very much appreciated and we trust it will be their good pleasure to be with us again.

MISS GERTRUDE McBRIDE.

LISTIE, PENNSYLVANIA

Evangelist R. Paul Miller, a man sent from God, came to Listie for a two weeks' meeting.

To recount the blessings which came to us as the result of the meeting would be an endless task. The overflowing audiences; the words of appreciation; the glowing faces; the renewed interest; the awakened prayer life; the converted church members; and the penitent sinners all speak of the forceful presentation of the Truth.

Never in the history of the congregation has our church been so wonderfully blessed. We covet similar experiences for all the churches in Christendom, confident that if such revivals were general "The Witness" would soon be given and our blessed and adorable Lord and Master would return. "Even so, come quickly, Lord Jesus."

May God continue to bless and make Brother Miller a blessing in his ministry among the churches. H. W. NOWAG.

THE REVIVAL AT LISTIE, PENNSYLVANIA

My evangelistic work in California closed in December in time to allow me to get home in time for Christmas. The days at home were busy days catching up after four months away from the office. Listie was the first meeting after Christmas. This church had once been one of our stronger Pennsylvania churches. Of recent years the coal business, upon which that whole community depends, has been very poor, and many of the members have been compelled to move away. However, things are looking better there now. One now mine has opened up with a ten year contract, and other mines are running steadily. With a return to normalcy, this section will make possible splendid return to strength for this church.

The pastor of this church is Brother H. Nowag. This quiet man of God works Johnstown for the steel works and drives thirty miles to this church and keeps its services going regularly. The people of the community love him truly and stand by him to a man. He is loved, respected, trusted by his members and the people of the community. He is a tireless worker, thinking not of himself, but only of the people over whom God has made him shepherd. May God give us many more such men who will serve God because they love him of all.

The meetings were well attended. Some people were driving thirty miles each to the services. Towns all around furnished a good attendance. Some nights the building was truly too small for those that desired to hear. Such attendance showed that the church has a good standing in the community where it is. It was a great pleasure to preach to folks who love the Word of God like these folks do.

I have no doubt in my mind as to the future of this church if there is sufficient advance in employment in the mines to allow of the return of the people who have filled the houses of this little town. In spite of the slack times, however, the faithful workers and pastor have kept the church shining and the work going just the same. It has taken much sacrifice and labor, but they have been faithful to the Lord and bought them. Many a church has been led when it suffered less than this one. I am frequently finding churches that are passing away simply because the people who are left in the church do not love their religion enough to sacrifice to keep the work going. Many would rather see the church die, they found the Lord, die, rather than give freely of their money and labor to keep it going. God pity us.

My home was with Brother and Sister N. E. Mostaller and a real home it was. They are true saints of God and love his work more than their own selves. Godless them. They did much for me.

I will be glad to return to Listie again if God ever opens the way for I greatly treasure the happy days I spent with them in their homes and in working with them in seeking the lost.

R. PAUL MILLER

TEEGARDEN, INDIANA

To my readers of Evangelist: You have not heard from the church at Teegarden for some time. We have been preaching there each month since last February. The people are in earnest and are willing to do their part for their church.

After taking the work one year, the Sunday school began to grow steadily and until last Sunday we had an attendance of 64, the largest for several years.

Last Summer we took in two new members from the LaPaz church, and they immediately got busy with the rest of the people and they are proving themselves well worth for the Master.

Brother Milliard Lemert is our evangelist and he is very interested in the work. He is the brother of Rev. C. B. Lemert whom the brotherhood knows.

Last fall, the church became quite active to have a revival, and plans were made. Some setbacks. We secured the service of Brother Harley Zumbach as Song Leader and the writer as the

We began our revival on the evening of January 3rd and continued for two weeks. God's blessing in many ways. First, blessed us with wonderful weather throughout the two weeks. Second, He then gave us good crowds (a crowded house every night but one). Third, He gave us will-workers. Fourth and best of all, He gave us souls saved. The total number of conversions to the church were twelve—three by baptism and one by re-consecration. We feel that the church has been greatly strengthened this year, as we have a total of sixteen people that time. Brother Zumbaugh did a fine service for us, and I got along just splendidly.

Those people are planning to go on the Roll for Evangelist subscriptions, for the first time.

Pray for the work there as they need your prayers.

C. D. WHITMER, Pastor.

MEXICO, INDIANA

It is very encouraging to read the reports from various Brethren churches and to see the progress being made in the Lord's work everywhere.

Work here at Mexico is not developing leaps and bounds; yet by united effort and a spirit of loyalty, we are pressing on striving to deepen our spiritual lives. We may be true witnesses of the Whole Christ—its power to save and to keep us saved. It is true here as elsewhere, that we are failing to make use of their opportunities and fall by the wayside.

We live with deep regret of church and community, that we were forced to give up services of our former pastor, Brother A. Stewart, and wife last fall. They felt called to a larger field of service for the Lord. So what is our loss, is another's gain. We pray that God will richly bless the efforts of the Bryan, Ohio, church with the Stewart and wife leading them.

The Mexico church called Brother Mark Spacht, with his family, moved into the parsonage on October 1. We have already found him to be a shepherd and he preaches the "Word" with clear and fervor. Our revival services began on November 9, with an all-days' service. Brother Spacht was the evangelist. Brother Harley Zumbaugh, of Tiosa, Indiana, sang the song service in a mighty way. The sermons were convincing and uplifting. The weather was ideal. The churches in town, especially the Brethren, cooperated in a Delegations from surrounding churches helped to stimulate interest. Large crowds were in attendance each evening. The service was preceded by prayer. Altogether, we have been much strengthened and we have been sown for future harvest. Three young girls gave their hearts to Christ during the meeting. We closed the service with communion service. Just before communion, the three girls and a man, were baptized and received into the church.

It is the home of our dear Brother Spacht and a blessed privilege it is in to have him in every service, to sit under his wonderful teaching of God's holy Word, to receive his wise counsel which we keep us on our guard and on the "look" in these days of testing. On New Year's eve, the entire church was at the hospitable home of Brother Josiah Maus for a sociable evening together and to pray the old year out and the new year in.

Our Sunday school is in a healthy, growing condition, with Brother Elmer Neff as superintendent. The Christian Endeavor is reorganized, with Brother James Ault as President. Steps are being taken to more efficiently train our fine group of young people to be the future leaders of our church.

On January 27, 1931 it was a great spiritual feast for the W. M. S. to have, as their honored guest and guide, in their mission study class, the author of the book and a noble soldier of the cross, Dr. C. F. Yoder. It was truly a rare opportunity. At the noon hour a "favorite dish" luncheon was served to the honored guest and 24 members. This meeting without doubt, has awakened within each one present a new spiritual vision of our duty. Brother Yoder gave his lecture in the evening to a large audience.

As we face the new year with its problems, in the fear of God, let us all pull together and as we go forward in his name, may we go under the leadership of the Holy Spirit, is my prayer.

MRS. JAS. L. KRANING,
Corresponding Secretary.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

WIGAL-ERBAUGH—On June 4th at the altar of the church the wedding of John C. Wigal and Miss Mardelle Erbaugh was solemnized. The bride is the daughter of Brother and Sister Abram Erbaugh. The contracting parties are both members of the Dayton Brethren church. The groom is a young man just finishing his course as a physician. We anticipate a great and useful life for our friends. The writer officiated.

R. D. BARNARD.

BERRY-BANZEISEN—Mr. Hammer L. Berry and Miss Elizabeth M. Banzeisen were united in holy wedlock at the church Sunday on June 11, 1930. The bride is a member of the Dayton Brethren church. May God richly bless these young friends with a happy Christian home. Ceremony by the undersigned.

R. D. BARNARD.

HALL-DALEY—At the parsonage on October 25 occurred the wedding of Mr. Wilbur W. Hall and Miss Dorothy I. Daley. The bride is a member of the Dayton Brethren church. Both the contracting parties are very likable and fine young people. The pastor performed the ceremony.

R. D. BARNARD.

MASON-BLISS—This writer apologizes for having failed to report in the columns of The Evangelist the marriage on June 17, 1930 of Miss Dolores Bliss to Mr. Dale Mason. The ceremony was solemnized in the First Brethren church, Fremont, Ohio, in the presence of a host of relatives and friends of the young people. Mr. Mason is a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Mason, and the bride a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bliss. Both young people were valued members of the church, Mrs. Mason having been secretary of the church school and of the Christian Endeavor society for several years. We regret that Mr. Mason's work requires them to live in Sandusky, twenty-three miles from Fremont, and we pray that the influence of the church and the Heavenly Father's richest blessings may ever attend them.

W. S. CRICK.

BONTRAGER-KING—At 12 o'clock noon, Thursday, January 15th, 1931, Mr. Abner A. Bontrager and Mrs. Jessie (May) King, of Waterloo, Iowa, were united in marriage by the Rev. E. F. Byers at his place of residence, at 720 W. Mullan Ave., Waterloo, Iowa. The single ring service was used. Those in attendance were Mr. John May and wife, brother and sister-in-law of the bride.

Mr. Bontrager and his wife are splendid type of Christian people and the best wishes of their many friends accompany them as they enter the "new year" in a new home.

E. F. BYERS.

IN THE SHADOW

GRIFFIS—Mrs. Anna Martha Griffis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Portwood, was born in Bourbon County, Kansas, April 30th, 1872 and departed this life at St. Joseph hospital, Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 19th, 1931, at the age of 58 years, 8 months and 19 days. She was married to Mr. D. L. Cottingham on Oct. 22, 1902.

They resided in Fort Scott, Kansas for a number of years. After Mr. Cottingham's death she was married to Mr. William H. Griffis of Miami, Okla., Jan. 11, 1916. She had been a member of the Brethren Church since 12 years of age.

The deceased is survived by the following: her father, Hugh Portwood of Port Dodge, Kan., three brothers—Alford of Anaconda, Mont.; Woodson, of Mulberry, Kan.; Simpson, of Kansas City, Mo.; two sisters—Mrs. C. C. Ball of Garland, Kan.; Mrs. Arma Rhodes, McKellogg, Idaho. Mrs. Griffis grew to womanhood and was educated in Bourbon Co.,

Kansas. She was kind and considerate of the welfare of all she came in contact with.

Funeral was conducted from the Brethren church of Fort Scott, Kan., Jan. 22nd, by the writer.

Many beautiful floral offerings were made by her many friends. The body was laid to rest in Evergreen cemetery. L. G. WOOD.

WALTER—Albert Nicholas Walter was born February 15th, 1857 and departed this life January 1st, 1931, aged 73 years, 10 months and 16 days. Brother Walter was a member of the New Enterprise Brethren church, and had been their Sunday school Superintendent for a number of years. He was also superintendent years ago of the Sunday school at Martinsburg. He was well known throughout the county and the church at New Enterprise would not accommodate the people who gathered in his respect.

Surviving are his wife, Eva J. Walter, and the following children: Mrs. C. E. Ford, of Hopewell; Miss Jennie Walter at home, and Bert H. Walter of Altoona.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Showalter, minister of the Church of the Brethren. JAS. S. COOK.

RYHNER—Jessie Viola Ryhner was the daughter of Edward and Lida Reynolds of Lathrop, California. She leaves of the immediate family to mourn her departure, her beloved husband, William Ryhner, Eleanor Reynolds, her niece whom she mothered from infancy, and two brothers, Sidney Reynolds of Ripon, California, and Ned Reynolds of Lathrop, California. Her illness was brief and her death was a shock. She slipped away from us during the District Conference held at Turlock last June. The conference adjourned the day of her funeral as a mark of respect. She had been a member of the Lathrop Brethren church since girlhood and was faithful in her membership in all that the word implies. She had reached the prime of life and then God took her home. Earth was enriched by her life and made poorer by her death, and the church sustained a great loss, even the entire district wenders at the dispensation. J. WESLEY PLATT.

BENNETT—Oretta Weaver Bennett, daughter of Samuel and Rebecca Weaver, was born at Rowsburg, Ashland County, Ohio, June 8, 1862. She passed to be with the Master at the family home in Jackson township, Ashland County, Ohio, January 14, 1931, aged 68 years, 7 months and 6 days. Mrs. Bennett was the mother of three children. Ira B., who died at the age of twenty-eight, and Maude M. and Grace B., twin daughters, who survive her. She leaves to mourn her leaving-taking, her husband, two daughters, one sister, one brother, six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, beside a large number of more distant kin.

Sister Bennett was a member of the Ashland, Ohio, congregation, having united with the church in the early years of its founding at Ashland. Illness prevented her attendance at the services of the congregation for a number of years, and spiritual comfort came to her through the ministrations of the pastor as he visited in the home. Funeral services were held from the First Brethren church at Ashland on Friday afternoon, January 16, 1931, conducted by her pastor, assisted by Dr. J. Allen Miller. Comfort was brought from John 14:1. Burial in the Dickey cemetery near Ashland. May God temper the winds of bereavement to the hearts of the bereft.

DYOLL BELOTE.

SHUSS—Adam Shuss, son of Daniel and Elizabeth Shuss, was born Sept. 28, 1851 in Bedford Co., Penna. He was called home August 27, 1930 at the age of 78 years, 10 months, and 29 days. On December 28, 1871 he was united in marriage to Kathryn Reichard. Seven children were born; five children survive him. Over 50 years ago he united with the Church of the Brethren and about 25 years ago he became a member of the First Brethren church, Dayton. Brother Shuss was a man of great faith, and throughout his long illness manifest great Christian patience. Funeral services by the pastor, assisted by Rev. W. H. Boyer of the Brethren in Christ church.

R. D. BARNARD.

FARMER—Ida C. Oliver Farmer, daughter of Alex and Rosa Oliver, was born in Montgomery Co., Ohio, April 21, 1884, and completed the journey of this life October 20, 1930, at the age of 46 years, 5 months, and 29 days. She was married to Harvey Farmer who survives. The father and mother, 3 sisters, a son and a daughter also survive her. For a number of years she was a member of the Dayton Brethren church. She revealed great patience during the 9 months' illness. Funeral services by the pastor.

R. D. BARNARD.

EHRSTINE—The entire membership of the Dayton Brethren church was saddened in the passing of Brother John H. Ehrstine on December 1, 1930. He was almost 63 years old. On November 4, 1892 he was united in marriage at America, Ohio. Five children were born. Three with the widow survive. More than 30 years ago Brother Ehrstine united with the First Brethren church, Dayton. He has seen this church grow from a mission with less than 50 members, and has had a great part in its growth. For many years he served as a deacon, and was exemplary in his service. Our only challenge is that we must "carry on." Funeral services by the pastor, assisted by Rev. W. A. Gearhart.

R. D. BARNARD.

STOWE—Hannah Josephine Ewert Stowe was born in Germany, June 9, 1872. She came to this country with her parents when she was 9 years old. She was united in marriage to Jesse E. Stowe, April 1, 1888. She was united in marriage all are living. The husband died 22 years ago. For many years she was a member of the First Brethren church, Dayton, Ohio. After a long period of suffering she was called to be with her Savior on May 12, 1930, at the age of 57 years, 11 months, and 3 days. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor.

R. D. BARNARD.

BAKER—Jennie Florence Wolfe Baker, eldest daughter of John and Lida Wolfe, was born near West Alexandria, Ohio, August 6, 1865 and after a long period of suffering and waiting was called home December 20, 1930. Her age was 65 years, 5 months, 14 days. On November 4, 1886, she was united in marriage to Frank E. Baker. To this union 8 children were born. The husband, 5 daughters and 2 sons remain. In early life our sister united with the Brethren Church and has ever remained faithful. She lived to see each of her children followers of Jesus Christ. During her long illness it was her pastor's privilege to have beautiful Christian fellowship with her and her family. Services were by Dr. Wm. H. Beachler and her pastor.

R. D. BARNARD.

KLEPINGER Perry M. Klepinger, son of William and Elizabeth Klepinger, was born at Ft. McKinley, Ohio, October 13, 1864. The earthly pilgrimage closed without any immediate warning on December 22, 1930. On April 22, 1899 he was united in marriage to Susie Lentz. The widow, 2 sons, Hershel and Harold, and one daughter, Mrs. Elmer Welns, remain. For many years Brother Klepinger was prominent in business circles in Dayton; he continued his interest even after ill health hindered his activity. For almost 25 years he has been a faithful member of the Brethren church. He was a man of quiet disposition, and a man with many friends. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor.

R. D. BARNARD.

GOST Mrs. Effie Grossnickle Gost, wife of P. A. Gost, passed to be with her Lord on January 22, 1931. Sister Gost had been a faithful member of the church for a great many years, and served faithfully in many departments of the work. Interment was made in the mausoleum at Boonsboro, Maryland. Services from the home in Hagerstown, Maryland by the pastor.

FRANK G. COLEMAN.

THOMPSON—Mrs. Mary Josephine Thompson, daughter of Samuel H. and Elizabeth Ruebush Hartman, was born near Harrisonburg, Virginia, August 6, 1857, and died at her home in the Pleasant Hill community near Dayton, Virginia, on December 29, 1930, aged 73 years, 4 months and 3 days. She spent her entire life in the community in which she was born. She was a loyal, peace-loving servant of Christ and a member of the Brethren church at Dayton for many years, participating actively in church work as long as health permitted. She is survived by one daughter, Tracie M. and six sons—George S., John F., Lewis C., Perry D., Lurty J., and Russell H. Thompson. Funeral services were conducted from the Bethlehem Brethren church by Elder S. I. Bowman.

JOHN W. THOMPSON.

GOSS—By the sudden death of Miss Sadie Elizabeth Goss, the second Brethren church of Los Angeles lost one of the sweetest spirited servants of the Lord that the writer has ever known. Although never very strong in body she was always busy in the things of the Spirit, and thus did she acquire a host of friends both in and out of the church. She was what one would call "a good Samaritan" in the real sense of the word, for she ministered to all who came within her reach. Her zeal for her Master was demonstrated by the branch Sunday school of more than 25 pupils that she conducted in her home. She was born May 4, 1874 and died at the age of 56 years, 6 months and 4 days. Three brothers and two sisters survive to mourn their loss, special mention being made of Mrs. William McNeil, a sister with whom she made her home. The many floral contributions as well as the large attendance at the funeral service, conducted by the writer, spoke of the esteem and respect with which she was held.

A. D. CASHMAN.

OUR LITTLE READERS

THE FISH THAT WORE NIGHT CLOTHES

Jack had been sick for weeks. He was better now, but the days in bed seemed very long. And now the spring vacation had come, and the boys were going fishing almost every day. Fishing along the lazy Florida streams is fun, and Jack must miss that. But the day when his class went for a sailing trip on the gulf was the hardest day of all.

Jack tried hard to be brave, but all day, it seemed, he could think of nothing but spreading sails and dancing blue waves.

"Anyway, the boys will come in and tell me all about it before bedtime," he comforted himself.

Eight o'clock came and went, then nine o'clock and still no boys. Jack's mother settled him for the night.

"The boys have forgotten all about me," he thought, as he lay there alone in the dark. And his only reminder of the sea now was several big salty tears that ran down his cheeks.

Just then a crunching sound on the gravel walk, whispers—

"I'm awake yet," called Jack, "ever so wide-awake."

Then steps along the hall, the snapping of the light button, and the boys were with him. Of course, they hadn't forgotten him. They were late because they'd had to hunt all through Peter Bell's attic for an old aquarium. They'd brought Jack the greatest catch of the day.

"We got him in the net," said Peter, proudly.

"What a beauty!" cried Jack, "but whatever is it?"

Guess," said the boys.

Jack studied the fish with its brilliant green coloring and its queer hooked bill.

"It looks," said Jack, slowly, "it looks—of course you'll laugh—but it looks like a parrot, as much as a fish could."

"That's just what it is!" cried the delighted boys, "a real parrot fish."

"It's a dandy," declared Jack, enthusiastically. "I'm going to call it Poll."

"Poll Parrot," laughed the boys.

"Of course," said Jack. "I'll have just lots of fun watching it; I'm going to keep it always."

After the boys had gone, Jack soon fell asleep. He did not waken until the gray dawn of the early morning and then his first thought was of his parrot fish.

Peeping from under the covers, he looked at the aquarium, looked carefully, and gasping with astonishment, looked again. His lovely green parrot fish was gone—altogether gone!

And, stranger yet, there was another fish in the aquarium, a dull brownish creature mottled with a few dark spots.

"Why, whatever!" cried Jack, as he looked at the stranger fish that rested on the pebbles in the bottom of the globe.

Perhaps there were two fish in the globe after all, he thought, and sitting up, he switched on the light to make sure.

Then when he looked again—it does seem hard to believe it—his bright green parrot-fish was swimming gracefully about the globe, and the homely, dull colored fish was gone. Yes, there was only one fish there surely, and that was pretty Poll Parrot!

When his mother, who had been awakened by the light, came into the room, Jack told his story. Looking at him anxiously, she commenced to shake the fever thermometer.

"No," laughed Jack, "I'm feeling fine—better than I have for days and days. I'm sure I haven't any fever."

And indeed he hadn't.

"A dream, of course," said the boys, when he told them his strange tale in the morning.

"No," protested Jack, "it was too plain for that, and besides I pinched myself hard to make sure I was awake."

"Magic, then," suggested Peter, but he laughed as he said it, and so did the other boys, for they all knew better than that.

"Get the nature book for me," said Jack, "the big one."

The other boys held the heavy book while Jack turned the pages.

"P," read Jack, "P-a, P-a-r,"

"There it is," said Peter, "Parrot fish."

A moment of silence and then a shout.

"It's true," breathed Jack, "I didn't dream it, after all."

"Well, did you ever!" exclaimed Peter, who was reading over Jack's shoulder.

And indeed the book told something that made all the boys gasp.

"The parrot fish isn't the only fish that changes its color when it goes to sleep, either," said Peter, "the book says that lots of common fish do the same thing."

"They must be made that way to protect them from their enemies when they are asleep," the boys decided.

"Well," said Jack, with a happy sigh, "I thought last night when I saw Poll Parrot for the first time—I thought you'd brought me something pretty fine, and I said I'd keep him always, but I didn't even begin to guess what I'd got. A fish that wears a nightgown! I'll keep Poll Parrot always and always."

But after all Jack changed his mind. The very first day that the little boy was to go down to the seashore he took the parrot fish along and turned it loose in the water.

"Of course, I'll miss Poll Parrot," Jack, "but I'm so glad to get out of myself that I can't bear to think of keeping anything shut in. Even a fish ought to be free."

All the boys agreed that Jack was right. And from the way that the handsome green fish flashed its sparkling fins and darted into the deep water, it was very plain Poll Parrot thought so,—Mary Ri Ward, in The Continent.

OUR READERS' FORUM

RACE TO SEE WHO READS THE EVANGELIST FIRST

We are taking the liberty of quoting a letter just received the following comments:

"Enclosed find check for $2.00. After we were married in 1889, we visited my parents at . . . , and there we enlisted in the Evangelist family. It has been a special race since then to see who gets to read the paper first. We are going to try to win the price of the subscription to the Evangelist on our journey. It has been food for thought and I have often thought if our people read it as they do the daily paper, churches would be far more spiritual."

Speaking of some who did not read the paper, but left it at the post office until for, he said: "No converted person would do that, and that is one reason why we have lost our spiritual power as churches. The unconverted join the church then, but no better than they were before, and they do not grow in grace and in the knowledge of truth, they are worse than they were before."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FOR BRETHREN HOME SUPPORT

Send all money for the Brethren Home Cecil Hendrix, Treasurer, Flora, Indiana.

FOR SUPERANNUATED MINISTERS' FUND

All money for the Superannuated Ministers' Fund is to be sent to Rev. G. I. Secretary, Roann, Indiana.

EASTER OFFERING FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS

Easter this year will come on April 1st. All money received for Foreign Missions after March 1st, 1931, will be credited as part of the Easter Offering. Churches therefore may take their Easter offering if they see fit, any time during the month of March. We are giving this notice as much as some churches in the Brethren will not have regular services on Easter Sunday, and may prefer to take their offerings before that time. The Tract Easter Offering Report will be closed April 15th. No money received at this date can be included in the 1931 offering.

LOUIS S. BAUMANN
1925 E. Fifth
Long Beach, C.

Mrs. Herman Varner, Oct.-30-31
Conemaugh, Pa.
RFD 1.

Vol. LIII
Number 8

February 21
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

George Washington Bicentennial Commission

GEORGE WASHINGTON

OUR FEBRUARY PATRIOTIC--MEMORIAL

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

THE Modern Tongues Movement

The manifestations of this phenomenon in various parts of this country, and in other countries, have been very perplexing to many people. On the one hand, it is certain that in the Apostolic Church there was a gift of tongues which was genuinely of the Holy Spirit. Yet certain aspects of the modern manifestations have been so crude and degrading that truly spiritual Christians shrink from admitting the presence of the Holy Spirit in them.

If any of the readers of this department desire something helpful on this difficult subject, I would recommend an address by Dr. Louis S. Bauman which has been published in an attractive booklet of 35 pages, entitled "Is the Modern Tongues Movement Scriptural?" It is the clearest exposure and refutation of the movement that I have read. It has the special merit of being written by a pastor who has had a wide firsthand experience with those caught in the snare of this delusion, and is a splendid contribution to the literature on the subject.

It may be secured from the author at 1925 East Fifth Street, Long Beach, California.

A GOOD Work

Will Rogers, so well known to the news reading public, has been giving his time and talents to the raising of funds for the drought stricken regions. To date he has received and donated from his entertainments about $200,000. At Tulsa, Oklahoma, one theatrical performance netted $30,000. The Arkansas House of Representatives has forwarded a resolution to Washington asking Congress to bestow upon Mr. Rogers the Distinguished Service Medal. And he deserves it.

There is another side to the matter, however. There is something radically wrong with a civilization which demands value in full in the form of amusement as the price of giving help to its starving members.

Many churches run their affairs on the same principle. Their members feel that when they give a dollar to the church, they must get back some pies or doughnuts in return. There is no more efficient method to kill the true spirit of giving. As a matter of fact, such a method is not giving at all, and those who practice it will receive no reward. As our Lord said, "They have their reward" in the form of entertainment and eatables.

Every man to his own taste. Perhaps they prefer it this way.

NO Divorcees Need Apply

According to reports, the Queen of England will not receive in formal audience a woman who has been divorced or who has been involved guiltily in the familiar matrimonial triangle.

(We used to call such affairs "triangles," but considering the number involved oftentimes today perhaps they should be termed "polygons," to continue the geometrical figure.)

If this rule is enforced, not many of the Hollywood stars will get to see the Queen's face.

THE Pope Speaks

In what is claimed to have been the most gigantic radio hook-up ever attempted, the Pope of Rome addressed himself to the world for the first time over the air. The occasion was the dedication of the new Vatican Station, which will be on the air every week regularly from now on. There were several things of interest in the event.

The Pope spoke in Latin and in Italian, and interpreters followed with translations into various tongues. Bible students will recall that Peter, whose successor the Pope claims to be, was able to speak on the day of Pentecost without any interpreter. (Read Acts 2:1-14). It is difficult to walk in the steps of Peter, as the wisest of the popes have discovered. But their shortcomings have not led to any abatement of their claims.

The Pope made it very clear that "the family and fold of the Lord ... is the Catholic Church," and that he is the head of it. Those who are pleading in this country for tolerance toward Roman Catholicism should read the above claim several times. And they should not forget that this is not merely the private opinion of a high church official. It is regarded as the very word of God, and is binding upon every Catholic in the world.

The Pope addressed a word to all "infidels and dissidents," which includes such people as Hindus, Mohammedans and Protestants. We learn that we "are far from the faith," and that the Pope prays for us daily that we may get the light and become united with the "one fold and one shepherd," which has already been defined as the Roman Church with the Pope at its head.

One thing I liked about the Pope's address; it was perfectly clear. After reading his address, you know where he stands and what he claims. I wish as much could be said of all the Protestant preachers who speak over the radio.

The Wonderful Old "Book"

An old song tells us that whenever we receive some benefit we should "pass it on." That's the reason for this bit of editorial testimony and advice.

The editor recently enjoyed an exceptionally helpful experience. For weeks he had been taking "snatches of time" in the effort to do what several subscribers have asked to have done—to select choice passages of Scripture, as expressed in some of the recently published translations, for publication in The Advance. But he made little progress because of the numerous interruptions which come to one who has too many responsibilities.

Finally he became desperate. He determined that everything else must wait, that time might be had for really careful investigation and selection. So, in his study at home, he took a whole day for the task—a "task" which transformed itself into real recreation when it could be undertaken free from pressure and from interruption. As a result this happened—would that it could happen more frequently: He spent about nine successive hours in doing nothing except reading the Bible—sometimes the passage in four or five English versions.

What an experience! It is wonderful to discover the new light that is thrown on well-known portions of Scripture when several versions are read; but there is something even more wonderful about spending a whole day in that manner. There comes with all the freshness of new discovery a consciousness of the many-sided greatness of the Bible as compared with other books. Forced to read—or at least "skim through"—many volumes every month, one is tempted to cry out with "the Preacher," "Futility of 'futilities,' all is futility because of the endlessness of words and the rareness of anything which has much to say on the worth-while things of life. In the course, much that is worth while may be found in the modern books—when one digs through the multiplied words as a prospector digs through sand and gravel to find gold; but, when it is found, there comes the discovery that, like the nugget of gold, it has been washed down through the centuries from some far-off deposit and could have been discovered much more quickly than a little visit to the Book of books.

Wonderful from the literary point of view, wonderful for its revelation of the true values of life, wonderful for its directness and its vividness of presentation, wonderful for its portraits of one's self and its manifestations of God, wonderful to convict and inspire, to comfort and strengthen, wonderful as a "short cut" to the golden rule of eternal truth—the Bible is a wonderful old book. Know it better. Spend no time with it. That is the lesson of my experience.—Editorial in Presbyterian Advance.

Experimenters have proved that the dress and suit materials absorb less heat than others, a fact which is important in building an auditorium of any kind, unless it is rightly designed the clothes the audience will muffle the voices of the speakers. "Wool clothing is an efficient silencer," according to Popular Science Monthly. The writer also says that the dresses absorb only about one-half as much heat as the woolen clothing.

IN THIS NUMBER

The Father and the Savior of Our Country—Editor, .....
Accusations Against Bishop Canner—Editor, .....
Erased—Editor, .....
Editorial Review, .....
George Washington—Hildegard Hawthorne, .....
Religious Creed of Lincoln—W. F. Barton, .....
Studies in the Types—R. I. Humbert, .....
Studies in the Scriptures—C. L. Yoder, .....
Our Worship Program—T. C. Lyon, .....
Seventh Day Adventism—W. E. Bierwolf, .....
Editor's Notes on the S. S. Lesson—Cambria County C. E. Union—Robert Ashman, .....
Fifty Years of Christian Endeavor News from French Equatorial Africa—Florence Gribble, .....
Kittanning to Fort Wayne—S. Adams, .....
News from the Field, .....
Our Little Readers, .....
Our Readers' Forum, .....
Announcements, .....
In the Shadow, .....

GEORGE S. BAER

Editor

R. R. TEETER

Business Manager

and all moneys to the

Business Manager

THE

BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

The Father and the Savior of Our Country

men stand out in the history of our country separate and from all others. Like King Saul of old, they stand head boulders above all their fellows of distinction and leadership nation. We have had many great and worthy men, but gton and Lincoln are the only two in their class; no others npete with them for place and honor in the hearts of the an people. One lived at the beginning of our national his- and the other about midway in its course. One is called the of his Country," and the other the "Savior of the Union," "Great Emancipator." They bring together in their lives f the noblest characteristics of true patriotism and at the me some of the finest qualities of practical Christian faith. stand in sharp contrast each with the other when consid- om the standpoints of family history, social standing, edu- advantages and wealth, but they stand very much together greatness of service rendered, the quality of personal char- and in the affections and gratitude they have inspired in rts of all true Americans. One started at the top of the scale, an aristocrat of the aristocrats, with every cultural cational advantage that his times afforded, and instead of oiled by the richness of his opportunities, he made such use of them that he became the most valuable and most ished man of his generation and the most revered by his ountrymen of succeeding generations. The other started ottom of the social ladder (though of good stock), was born ty, in the midst of people that were poor and unlettered, v shut off from the educational opportunities of the better of the country, but instead of letting untoward circum- keep him down, he overcame them and by the power of v strong, resolute, aspiring soul and the help of Divine nce he accomplished a work of inestimable worth and made if himself a place among the world's greatest men. These two ngton and Lincoln—rise like two mountain peaks out of la of mediocre men, calling forth the reverence and admira- all and challenging in all the expression of the noblest m.

"The Father of his Country"

ngton as the father of his country guided the united col- rough one of the most important and one of the most y hopeless periods of warfare, in history, and through it all, th his exceptional strategy and generalship, he displayed ri of devotion and sacrifice to the cause of freedom that is m quelled and bound his soldiers to himself with a loyalty ith that were indispensable to victory. By his sympathy his Christian gentlemanliness and lack of self-seeking, he to the best in men and the best of men find much in his o inspire and win their approbation.

ol office was to Washington a call to service and not a s personal aggrandizement. A position of great respon- yas to him a charge from the people and an opportunity ng himself their faithful steward, and not a chance to show of authority and to feed his selfish ambition with a ty if pomp and power. Washington was so universally the fie American people that he might have been an emperor kg if he had had the self-seeking characteristics of a r: a Napoleon. But he was a democrat and a patriot and gs and welfare of the people and the success of the new were his chief concern.

ngton believed in obedience to law as a fundamental vir- e part of those who would enjoy the rights and privileges ernment of the people and by the people. Here are his sen from his farewell address: "The very idea of the d the right of the people to establish government, pre- the duty of every individual to obey the established gov-

This is good advice to the lawless element that is today scoffing at the law and doing everything possible to break down respect for and obedience to a statute that happens to con- travene their appetites and greed.

Washington was characterized by a strong belief in and a faithful practice of a high type of morality and religion. They went hand in hand in his life and way of thinking. In that last notable address which was so full of worthy admonitions, he said: "Of all dispositions and habits, which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. . . . And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be main- tained without religion." As he closed that address, he stepped forward to sheath his sword symbolic of his return to private life, and said: "I consider it as an indispensable duty to close this last act of my official life, by commending the interests of our dearest country, to the protection of Almighty God, and those who have superintendence of them to his holy keeping."

The Savior of the Union

Lincoln, the man who, under God, saved the Union and freed the slaves, has many noble characteristics and qualities that are wor- thy of emulation, but we can mention only a few. In the first place he loved his country and was concerned for its largest wel- fare more than anything else. That passion for the welfare and safe keeping of the whole nation was what forced his hand when the South sought to secede. His first thought was to save the Union, that must be done at all hazards. Not even war was too terrible an experience to undergo to accomplish that, so he was determined. And he went into war, though not till the South had made the attack, to do that very thing. He was the savior of the Union first and the emancipator of the slaves second.

Absolute honesty and maintenance of personal integrity were to Lincoln as natural and as necessary as breathing. He would not lie nor would he tolerate it in others. Truthfulness was to him a passion, and frankness followed as a matter of course. There are many illustrations extant of Lincoln's honesty in every phase of life, but it is sufficient to say that everybody who knew Lincoln, believed him to be honest. He had earned such faith on the part of his fellowmen.

Lincoln was kind. That may seem to be no extraordinary vir-

(Continued on page 8)

Accusations Against Bishop Cannon Erased

We are interested in the outcome of the Southern Methodist church's investigation of Bishop Cannon for two reasons. First, he was possibly the one most influential single factor against the Rum-Rome-Raskob-Smith political combination in the Presidential campaign of 1928. Second, he has been marked for destruction by the wet-Catholic-Hearst forces and every possible effort has been put forth to discredit him and to destroy his leadership. Bishop Cannon is a man of very unusual powers of leadership and he used his powers with telling effect in the South to defeat Al Smith. The wet leadership saw the importance of putting him out of business and proceeded to put out spies to discover, if pos- sible, some pretext for public accusation so as to destroy his in- fluence. That was the purpose of his being quizzed by the Lobby Investigating Committee, but from that affair the shrewd bishop came out with his popularity increased. But the charges against Bishop Cannon's personal character that have been floating about, exemplify the more subtle and more effective campaign being waged against him. William Randolph Hearst, owner of a chain of two dozen big city newspapers, was caught red-handed in the most despicable of practices to ruin the bishop. We may grant that this Methodist leader may have been guilty of dabbling in the stock market, which practice we would not approve, but we are not going to be caught working hand and glove with the vicious interests by adding doubtful comments, as some editors have done, to the evil suspicions of those who are seeking to assassinate his character for political reasons. Rather we are inclined to believe that he deserves the confidence of the sincere dry church constituency in his leadership service in behalf of the dry cause. Mr. Hearst, in a letter to one of his underlings in charge of a certain Los Angeles newspaper acknowledged his fear of Bishop Cannon's leadership and his belief that he was the shrewdest and most capable leader of the dry cause in America. And for that reason his influence must be destroyed, he had decided.

It was not difficult to find a member here and there in Mr. Cannon's own church to prefer charges against him, and thus serve as a tool in the hands of the vicious wet interests. The Southern Methodist church met the challenge courageously and in a Christian spirit and manner. It investigated the charges thoroughly and fairly, but did not throw its procedure open to the scandal-mongering press reporters, or the curious public. After weighing the whole matter with great care to see if there was sufficient truth in the charges to warrant a trial, the verdict was given: "No trial necessary." The Christian Advocate (Nashville) declares: "No longer can the church be charged with lack of courage and frankness in its attitude toward one of its high officers. Bishop Cannon has gained by the investigation. His personal character has been under scrutiny by a committee of twelve prominent and highly esteemed ministers, than whom none more trustworthy could have been selected. Not a complaint of sufficient gravity to require a trial now stands against him. His contrition and good promise at the Dallas General Conference resulted in the passing of his character. The decision of the investigating committee leaves his ministerial standing where it was at that time." His church has not condoned his stock market speculations; he himself acknowledged the impropriety of them and was forgiven at the Dallas Conference. But, according to this investigation, all other charges hatched up by those who sought to ruin him were found to be groundless, for the Advocate states that "all official accusations against his Christian character are now erased." Bishop Cannon's health is said to have been "very bad much of the time since he contracted tropical fever following his episcopal visit" to his church's African mission in 1928. It is to be hoped that his physical vigor may improve sufficiently to enable him to get into the thick of the Prohibition fight which will likely be waged again in 1932, when, as things look now, Al Smith and his Rum-Rome-Raskob crowd will again try to make their way to the White House.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Prof. M. A. Stuckey is beginning this week on the Sunday School Association's page the publication of Dr. Biederwolf's pamphlet on "Seventh Day Adventism." We anticipate that many will enjoy it as they did the previous publication on "Spiritism."

The Cambria County Christian Endeavor union, of Pennsylvania, is heard from again over the signature of its president, Brother Robert Ashman. The meeting for this quarter was held in the Third church of Johnstown, with an attendance of one hundred Endeavorers and as many more visitors. The Pike church society was awarded the banner society in attendance, having 92 per cent of its members present. A very interesting program was rendered.

We are pleased to have a newsletter this week from Brother Thoburn C. Lyon, who has been for a number of years supplying us each week with such excellent Family Altar outlines, which we hope a goodly number of our people are making use of. He believes the time is ripe in many places for the whole Gospel as never before. He also makes some thoughtful comment concerning an ideal which we hope to see consummated some time, in God's time, and to the happy satisfaction of all concerned.

Brother Samuel J. Adams writes of his closing of his work at Kittanning, Pennsylvania and his taking up the pastorate at Fort Wayne, Indiana. He found a fruitful field at Kittanning, where he spent nearly three years of faithful effort. The Sunday school is now averaging around two hundred in attendance. Inter and Junior Christian Endeavor societies were organized and Sisterhood. He and his good wife have been well received at Fort Wayne, and they are very hopeful of progress there in the future.

Brother Delbert Flora, pastor of the Ankenytown and Maumee, Ohio, churches, writes of an evangelistic campaign held at former church during the Christmas holidays with Brother Klingensmith, an Ashland College student as the preacher. A real revival and twelve new members were added to the church. The first evidences of a revival appeared about Thanksgiving when attendance at Sunday school and church began to increase. Twenty-seven have been added in two years under Brother Flora's leadership. He also recently baptized two new members at Mansfield church, where attendance and interest are on the increase. The Sunday school average attendance is now about twenty-five, we were privately informed.

Brother N. V. Leatherman, pastor of our church at South Elkhart, Indiana, writes of the evangelistic campaign recently conducted by Dr. W. S. Bell, resulting in fifty-five coming forward expressing intention of joining the church, some by baptism, some by relation. Of this number thirty-six have already been baptized and five added by relation and letter. This means a strengthening of the church, and also a great responsibility placed upon the faithful pastor, who is making special plans for instructing and shepherding the new little ones of the fold. The nature and strength of Brother Bell's sermons were greatly appreciated. The church was also benefitted by a series of four lectures by Dr. Yoder at the Christmas season.

The Sunday school of the First church of Philadelphia writes with our readers a most excellent report of their activities and accomplishments during the year of 1930. One feature of special notice is the Week Day Bible school begun under the leadership of Brother Robert Crees. The Sunday school and the Week Day school have been fruitful means of saving young people for Christ and winning them to church membership. This is the usual story when the spirit of evangelism is kept prominent in the Sunday school. The total receipts of this school for the year were $4,281.11 and the total expenditures were $4,292.28. This is a splendid record and indicates that the people know and give. Rev. A. V. Kimmell is the able pastor of this school. Brother Carl Seitz is the aggressive superintendent.

A great revival has been experienced by the First church at Long Beach, California, under the evangelistic preaching of pastor, Dr. L. S. Bauman, aided by an evangelistic singer and pianist. Walter McDonald, the song leader, proved a great help in the campaign, both as a singer of the gospel songs and as a personal worker. A total of two hundred and twenty-five went forward during the meetings, about three-fourths of whom are said to have been first confessions. Seventy-eight have been baptized and others will be soon. Two came by relation, one by relation. The Sunday school has been maintaining an average of over eight hundred for several Sundays. The church has one thousand, and it looks as though this great church with its great new church plant and its numbers of consecrated members was destined to reach it.

Dr. Florence N. Gribble writes from French Equatorial Africa that Brother Hathaway recovered quite promptly from his illness. The country round about has been twice visited by swarms of locusts in such numbers as to obscure the sun by day and at night to strip the vegetation. We are reminded that a plague visited upon Egypt, one was the plague of locusts. Of course such visitations are not confined to any particular place, but a present day experience, helps to make the divinely directed plague seem more real. A wholesale vaccination for the prevention of smallpox has been administered by government doctors. As a result of such care on the part of the government a case of smallpox is seldom found. Six converts were baptized during the month of December. The medical work is to be heavy, and as Dr. Gribble says, there are no vacancies. A total number of 3,483 patients were cared for during the month.

George Washington

By Hildegarde Hawthorne

might have been George, Emperor of America, had been the type of Napoleon. Had he demanded a price as the price of delivering the colonies from their dependence and establishing them as an independent country, he could have had it. People were used to kings and emperors in those days, it seemed a natural thing to have the head of a country. Had Washington been possessed of a terrific personal ambition, had he longed for power and power, he might have satisfied the one and the others. Possibly he might have founded a dynasty that would have lasted to our day, or that might have been swept away in a few years, like Napoleon's. We can tell now, but it appears certain that had Washington been a self-seeking, grasping, tyrannically minded man, the story of America would have begun differently and have run a very different course.

Washington loved the ideal of freedom, he loved the equality of a new government that strove to put this into action. He did not care for personal glory, he cared for the well-being and the glorious future of the country he had delivered from its bonds. He believed that men should govern themselves, and he asked nothing special for himself from these men. Through the war he had been their leader, as the man most capable of leading. In peace he wanted no leadership, he wanted to be every man in the country, no honor, no titles for himself that any man might give.

For all that, America was to give to him and later to one other, a greater honor than any other country in the world has ever given to her heroes. Alone among all the men in the world Washington and Lincoln are our heroes. They alone give their names to our days, the days on which they were born, by the will of an entire country and of the world. There is Washington Day, there is Lincoln Day. We have plenty of other holidays, Thanksgiving, the Fourth, Memorial Day, Labor Day, Armistice Day. There are holidays, like Lexington Day in Massachusetts, or Columbus Day in New York, or many others. But it is only to two great men, one the creator of our Republic, the other the savior, that the whole country pays homage to individuals. And in so honoring two individuals, America, so far as I know, stands alone among the countries of the world.

Washington, saying good-bye to the cares of state as he said good-bye to the leadership of the army, little man, living his simple, untroubled and contented life in retirement at Mount Vernon. He would be thus chosen, placed above all other men in a grateful country. He was not vilified and calumniated by many of his countrymen during his lifetime, fighting against the enemies in the world as well as those in the country, at the moment of his true greatness was only beginning to be appreciated, had even less conception of such a fate for himself. Yet, there they stand, our two national heroes, expressing for all of us the very spirit and meaning of America. When we honor them, we honor all that America means to us—its best and finest. We feel this way toward them, not only in thankfulness for what they did, but because of what they felt about America, because of their devotion to the spirit of liberty, of equality between man and man, because they worked and lived, not for themselves, but for us, for their country, its future, its fineness, its beauty.

Each of these men had a big job to perform. Each did it in the best way possible, against great difficulty, bitter misunderstanding, hampered by men who should have helped, and without thought of personal gain. Just how they did it doesn't matter so much as the reason for their doing it, and the inspiration that urged them on. Today Washington might, in a world that has completely changed since his time, alter materially many of his ideas and acts as President. But his reasons for doing what he did would be the same: the good of his country. And when you think about him, when you read of him, you want to remember that. It is not the acts, it is the reason for, the inspiration of that act, that matters. What was wise yesterday might be foolish today, fatal tomorrow. A great man accommodates himself to the time in which he lives. It is only the small one who is bound tight by precedents and worn-out ideas.

Washington wanted to keep America free from entanglements with other countries, safe from war. In his day she lay isolated, immensely distant from all other countries and peoples. He wanted her to develop in peace, attending to her own affairs.

But today America is close to the rest of the world. We are tied to other countries by a hundred interests, and we depend on them as they on us for our national prosperity. Today, if we want to carry out Washington's ideals, we must act, at times, in ways entirely opposite from the way he acted, in another time, under other circumstances. He would be the first to do so. Today, our affair is to help avert from all the world plagues and troubles that in the end must involve us, too, if we love our country as Washington loved it. To be patriots, we must try to understand other peoples, and to work with and not against them. The man who awakens hatreds and stirs up trouble between us and other countries is, today, a traitor to America, because that way lies danger. The true lover of America looks into the future, and wants to make that future fine and safe. We are a great country, and in our hands important events are placed. We can no longer think of ourselves as alone in the world, minding our own business, and letting others mind theirs. We

Washington Monument,
Washington, D. C.

Lincoln Memorial, Washington, D. C.

are more like a leading member of a great family, who must help to regulate the affairs of that family. That doesn't mean we ought to mix in the private business of other peoples, but it means that in all the many things that bring us into contact with these peoples we need to see and to sympathize with their point of view, and we need to understand them.

Many young people are growing up in this new world, of which our nation is so large a part, and so close a part. In reverencing the name of Washington as the father and devoted son of America they need to remember the ideal that moved him, which he served so splendidly that he became the first national hero the world had known. This ideal was based on the right of man to liberty, to self-government, and his need to be free from war whether of aggression or defense. To live the life of a free people, at peace with the world—that is an ideal worth as much today as in the day of Washington. Today, it means thinking of other peoples and countries as friends, realizing that simply being different doesn't mean being wrong, and that every bit we do to help on the good understanding of the nations, to remove ugly criticism, faultfinding, irritation, and injustice is to go that much farther along the road with Washington, to help carry on the great work he so magnificently began.—Adapted from the Portal.

Religious Creed of Lincoln

Excerpt from Article by Doctor Wm. E. Barton, in Homiletic Review

Doctor James Smith was the author of a book entitled "The Christian's Defense," a work on the evidences of Christianity, which greatly interested Lincoln—which Doctor Smith claimed, with Lincoln's knowledge and without any dissent on Lincoln's part, made an important change in Lincoln's religious thinking.

Lincoln had an analytical mind, and believed in the sovereignty of God. The stern Calvinism of his boyhood remained with him all his life. He was so thorough a Calvinist that he was almost if not quite a fatalist. He did not speak lightly of things most sacred to him. He did not talk glibly about his religion. I do not credit testimony of verbal conversations alleged to have been held with him about religion. Such recollections are seldom accurate.

But if anything can be proved by human testimony it is that Lincoln solemnly told his Cabinet that he had promised his God to free the slaves. Gideon Welles so wrote in his diary that night, and it was not published for many years. Salmon P. Chase wrote it also, and added that, as the President spoke in a low tone, he asked him to repeat, and Lincoln, slowly and calmly but decisively, said that he was not asking his Cabinet to advise him, for he had promised his Maker that if General Lee was driven back from Maryland he would free the slaves.

And Frank B. Carpenter, who in his six months in the White House heard the story from every member of the Cabinet, wrote it down independently. Lincoln freed the slaves, against the known opinion of a majority of his Cabinet, and he silenced their protest by his calm assertion that he was doing what he promised his God to do.

I once undertook to compile from Lincoln's own undoubted writings a creed, merely prefacing the words "I believe" and some necessary connective words. It is in my book, "The Soul of Abraham Lincoln," with the sources indicated. Whoever wishes to try his hand at compiling Lincoln's creed will find in that book the quotations, accurately made and each one properly attributed to its source, and he may, if he likes, make up a creed of word of which is Lincoln's. I happen to have with few sentences from the creed which I compiled and them I close this article:

"I believe in God, the Almighty Ruler of nations great and good and merciful maker, our Father in heaven who notes the fall of a sparrow, and numbers the hairs of our heads."

"I recognize the sublime truth announced in the Scriptures and proven by all history that those nations only are blest whose God is the Lord."

"I believe the will of God prevails. Without him a man's reliance is vain. Without the assistance of the Holy Spirit I cannot succeed. With that assistance I cannot fail."

"I have a solemn oath registered in heaven to finish the work I am in, in full view of my responsibility to my God with malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right as God gives me to see the right. I am mending those who love me to his care, as I hope in his prayers they will commend me, I look through the eyes of God to a joyous meeting with many loved ones hereafter."

"Who Are You?"

Abraham Lincoln was born on February 12, 1809, in Hodgenville, Larue County, Kentucky. Fifty years after when nominated for the Presidency, he was asked for material for an account of his early life. "Why," he said, "great folly to attempt to make anything out of me in my early life. It can all be condensed into a single sentence and that sentence you will find in Gray's 'Elegy'—'short and simple annals of the poor.' That's my life, that's what you or anyone else can make out of it."

Lord Charnwood, an Englishman, observes in his biography of Lincoln that the great Emancipator lacked the interest in ancestry which is generally marked in his countrymen. On first thought we may be inclined to question whether or not this interest in family trees is so rare in America. But a visit to the Pennsylvania Historical Society, in Philadelphia, will tend to remove any doubt to the existence of a fondness for ancestral records in the United States. For the walls of this fine library and museum are lined with bulky books that trace prominent Pennsylvania families back to their origins in other lands and in other times.

If the history of a family is followed back far enough, lords and ladies will be discovered, and a king or two will come into the ancestral picture. All this is quite interesting—until in the same process of research we come to the criminals and morons who also persist in sticking to the family tree. Shake this tree and fruit both good and bad will fall.

Since a madman is likely to neutralize a monarch in a genealogical search, we may as well treat the subject of ancestry in the Lincolnian manner. The Emancipator was not concerned with the question, "Who was my father?" He was intensely concerned about the question, "Who are you?"

The sublime career of Lincoln stands as an answer to the question. He did not lean upon social prestige. There was no interest with pride in family position. He was born in poverty in an obscure corner of a raw country. He waged his battle for a place in human affairs almost single-handed against poignant loneliness he forged his way upward against heavy odds. He saw a star in the distance and he plotted his course to a post of great power and responsibility. As President of the United States in a crucial hour he poured out his life for his country.

Today men of every class—high and low, rich and poor in all lands pay their respects to Lincoln, not because of his position which had been determined for him beforehand, but because he played his part well in the position allotted.

The life of Lincoln is a prophecy and hope to every man in the land that he loved. When he was a young man a few opportunities for advancement existed for the individual in humble station. But today when equalization of opportunities is becoming more and more a reality, no one need despair of winning success. The youth purified by faith in God will achieve a place of honor.

We are glad to give space to such statements as the one from the "Forward," especially at this time when the muck-raking historians are trying to gain reputation and public attention by attempting to detract from the noble characteristics of our national heroes. Washington and Lincoln were but men, but they were truly heroes, and we need to keep their heroic qualities much in mind.

Studies in the Types

(Study No. 1)

By R. I. Humberd

Part of a series of Twelve Articles which Brother Humberd is writing through the year.)

Moses and the Serpents

Whatever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning" (Rom. 15:4). That is, the incidents recorded in the Old Testament are for illustrations of our salvation.

Although the church age was unknown to the old prophets (Eph. 3:5) it was no surprise to God, for "Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world" (Acts 15:18). Thus, when he was leading the Israelites in the wilderness and had certain incidents recorded, he had us in mind and had those things "written for our admonition" (1 Cor. 10:11).

Since these incidents are written for our learning it is for us to study them and see wherein they illustrate our salvation.

Three men might be sent to look at a certain house and they might bring back what seems to be conflicting reports. One man might report three windows, another two windows and one door, while the third reported but one window. Although these men would be describing the same house, one of them saw only the north side, another the east, while the third takes his view from the south. In our "Studies in the Types" we will endeavor to use the record of each incident as illustrating a certain phase of our salvation, not meaning that the lesson from that particular event is at all exhausted.

Types of the Cross

The place of the cross in our salvation is so great that no language breaks down in an effort to reveal its full meaning to us. Many of these incidents are of the cross of Christ, thus we will find great profit in studying the cross in the light of these records.

Nicodemus was puzzled at the expression, "ye must be born again." What could it mean? Surely a person could enter a second time into his mother's womb and be born, not that, but just as a person can enter this world only through birth, so a new birth is necessary to the next. But there is a difference in these births. The first is of the flesh and is flesh. That is, we were born of fleshly parents and have a fleshly body. In the new birth a person is born of the Spirit. A spirit is invisible, so how can we be born again?

Illustrated by the Wind

We can imagine that as Jesus and Nicodemus were discussing this question, the wind was blowing and whistling about the house. "Now, Nicodemus, the new birth is just like that wind. You hear the sound thereof but cannot tell where it comes from or where it goes, but you can recognize its presence by what it does. 'So is everyone that is born of the Spirit' (John 3:8). It is a matter of faith and not of sight; you can, however, see the evidences of the new birth in a man's life."

Nicodemus was puzzled and said, "How can these things be?" Jesus answered, "Now, Nicodemus, the incidents of the Old Testament were written for your learning and just like 'Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life'" (John 3:14-15).

Let us use our imagination and consider the incident of the serpents.

"Help! Help! I have been bitten by a serpent. Carry me home quick."

Well did this man know the result of his deadly wound, for one bite from the fangs of those serpents mean certain death. The company of Israelites numbered about six hundred thousand men. They had repeatedly tempted God. Now God had sent the serpents among them as a judgment for their sins. The serpents crowded in and out among the people, leaving a path of pain, suffering and death in their wake.

We can imagine this man's situation as he is bitten. Two friends carry him to his tent. His wife applies every known remedy, but to no avail, for there is no earthly cure for this terrible venom. His leg soon begins to swell and the pain shoots up the limb like flashes of lightning. In one hour the suffering is almost unbearable. The leg is twice its normal size, the pain has increased to a dull throbbing torture, fever is burning throughout his entire body. Is there no help?

Yes, God has directed Moses to make a serpent of brass and place it on a pole where everyone can see it. Listen! A messenger is now running through the camp, proclaiming the welcome message:

"Look! Everybody look! Look at the serpent and be healed!"

A gleam of hope shines in the face of the suffering man. He believes the message. They pull back the tent door and with the help of his wife he lifts his head and looks. Far away over the tops of thousands of tents he sees the brazen serpent.

Instantly the pure warm blood surges through his body and with a bound he is out of bed completely healed. Why is he thus healed? Because he believed God's message.

And now, dear reader, God has a message for your sick soul. "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him, should not perish but have everlasting life." The Son has been lifted up and has died on the cross for our sins. Believe it. Come to him now. Put the keeping of your soul in the Lord's hands NOW before you finish reading this page. Then, say with Paul, "I know whom I believed and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day!" (2 Tim. 1:12).

Lake Odessa, Michigan.

Shame rests on those who knew Jesus was innocent and yet allowed the crowd to revile him as guilty.

The Father and the Savior of Our Country

(Continued from page 3)

tue, but in Lincoln kindness was developed to extraordinary proportions. His kind and sympathetic spirit constitute a large part of his real greatness; it was that that made him so greatly loved. No one ever accused Lincoln of being beautiful, but his magnanimous spirit transformed his homely features into "the beauty of a god."

And Lincoln was religious. He has often been misunderstood at this point, because he never belonged to any organized church. He believed in God, the Bible and in prayer, and he spent much time in reading the Bible and in prayer. It is said that one reason why he never identified himself with any church was because he could not accept their lengthy creeds, which he believed they never practiced. He was a constant attendant at church services while in Washington, and was frequently in prayer meeting, says J. Sherman Wallace. This writer goes on to say that "When Bishop Simpson called upon Lincoln, the President asked him to pray with him. Then Lincoln said: 'Bishop Simpson, I want you, in the simplest terms, to explain to me just what you Methodists mean in the experience that you folks call conversion.' This the Bishop did in full detail, as if instructing a serious youth. When he had made an end, the great President slowly and cautiously replied: 'Bishop, during these terribly dark days I have been much engaged in prayer for God's guidance and presence, and I think that I may humbly claim that this experience, which you have so clearly explained, has taken place in my life.'"

Two such great men came not by accident, but by and in the providence of God. As we think on the things that made them great, our hearts are thrown back in gratitude on the goodness of God. And may the qualities that inhered in them, become more and more characteristic of the nation they gave their lives to create and to save, and also of the people who enjoy the priceless heritage of these great souls.

CLIMBING THE HILL DIFFICULTY

I looked then after Christian, to see him go up the hill, where I perceived that he fell from running to going, and from going to clambering up on his hands and knees, because of the steepness of the place. Now about the midway to the top of the hill was a pleasant arbor, made by the Lord of the hill for the refreshment of weary travelers. Thither, therefore, Christian got, where also he sat down to rest him: then he pulled his roll out of his bosom, and read therein to his comfort; he now also began afresh to take a review of the coat or garment that was given to him as he stood by the cross. Thus pleasing himself a while, he at last fell into a slumber, and thence into a fast sleep, which detained him in that place until it was almost night and in his sleep his roll fell out of his hand. Now as he was sleeping, there came one to him, and awakened him, saying, "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise." (Prov. 6:6). And with that, Christian suddenly started up, and sped him on his way, and went apace till he came to the top of the hill.

Now when he was got up to the top of the hill, there came two men running again; the name of one was Timorous and of the other Mistrust: to whom Christian said, "Sirs, what's the matter?"—Bunyan's Pilgrim Progress.

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

THE FAITH OF THE GOSPEL

THE USE OF THIS BOOK

This book is not to be a substitute for a study of the Bible, but rather to stimulate and facilitate such study.—2 Pet. 1:12. It is not to make proselytes of evangelical believers of somewhat different practices, for it recognizes the unity of the Spirit even in diversity of practices, due rather to ignorance of the truth than to disobedience.—Rom. 14:1-23.

It is not to form a creed. We already have too many documents to chain the thought of the present to the past, and hinder the free acceptance of new truth. We have the Holy Scriptures, given "that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly instructed for every work."—2 Tim. 3:15-17.

But it is written to facilitate an orderly study of the faith once for all delivered unto the saints." This is accomplished by means of abundant references, arranged in order and touching all the principal doctrines, ordinances and practices of the Christian life and the church.—Acts 11.

It is to convert the unconverted and to bring back to God those who have gone astray. To those who have been caught in the great apostasy of which Jesus and the apostles warned us (the fallen church, called "Babylon the great") the message is, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her plagues."—Rev. 18:2-4.

It is prepared especially for those who wish to be members of the church and wish first to know its teachings, and for those who wish to be workers in the church. "workers who need not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."—2 Tim. 2:15.

It is hoped that it may promote the spiritual unity of all evangelical believers who read it, by means of a better knowledge of the questions which divide believers into groups, and an increased respect for the reasons and convictions of those who may differ. It is for use by individuals and by classes.—Eph. 4:13-16.

INDEX

PART ONE—GOSPEL DOCTRINES

The Gospel

- Responsibility for knowing the truth.
- Errors of unbelievers.
- Freedom of interpretation.
- Finality and universality of the Gospel.

The Church

- I. Name
- II. Object.
- III. Relations:
  - Between members.
  - Between denominations.
  - With the world.
- IV. Members
  - 1. Qualifications.
  - 2. Duties: personal, domestic, social, industrial, political, to the church, to God.
  - 3. Doctrines: of God, of Christ, of the Holy Spirit, of man, of angels, of the creation, of the future.
  - 4. Discipline.
- V. Organizations and functions:
  - 1. Direction.
  - 2. Nutrition.
  - 3. Work.
  - 4. Extension.
  - 5. Sustain.
  - 6. Defense.
  - 7. Spiritual Growth.
- VI. Meetings.
- VII. Ordinances.

PART TWO—GOSPEL ORDINANCES

I. Baptism.

- 1. Origin and meaning.
- 2. Form.
- 3. Conditions.

4. The laying on of hands.
- II. The Lord's Supper.
  1. Relation to the Passover.
  2. Footwashing.
  3. The Agape.
  4. The eucharist.
  5. The unity of the Lord's supper.

THE FAITH OF THE GOSPEL

Nearly two thousand years ago a prophecy was written which says, "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts will heap themselves teachers having itching ears; and they will turn away their ears from the truth and shall be seduced unto fables" (2 Tim. 4:3, 4).

To such an extent the prophecy has been fulfilled that it sometimes reclaim careful attention to the exhortation which follows: "Preach the word." The word of God is the sword of the Spirit against apostasy, and it is to help us to use this trusty sword that we present this study of the faith of the Gospel.

It is natural to think, if we do not think deeply, that religion plagued with errors cannot be true. Nevertheless Jesus Christ, the peerless teacher, repeatedly announced that the leaven of error would enter the church to such an extent that at the last he would vomit the corrupted portion from his mouth (Matt. 13:33; Rev. 3:14-15).

But the Gospel is not false on that account. Doubtless it might have preserved free from error all translations, and infallible all interpreters, but such care would limit much the free will of man. A forced action is not good, and God wants free moral agents. None other can be his sons and daughters. To produce such is the end of all our endeavors. We read, "The earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God" (Rom. 8:19).

Responsibility of Knowing

To develop free will it is necessary to give man moral responsibility. Instead of giving us doctrines, cut and dried, to be taken as a child takes pills, God says to us, "Love all things; hold fast to that which is good."

As a result of this liberty some people change the blessings of God into curses, and others substitute for the word of God their own ideas, and true believers are therefore exhorted to "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered unto the saints." We are not to add to the decrees of a church, but to contend for the purity of the original word.

As the Scriptures are the fount of truth, it is natural that the great apostasy predicted should take forms that discredit the Bible. The false Roman church, pretending to guard the faithful from corrupted versions, has ever sought to keep the Bible from the people. Where it cannot do this it presents its own version corrupted by notes, and apart from the text, which pervert the original meaning to suit the doctrines of the church.

Another part of the church, abusing the liberties of private interpretation, comes to the Bible with carnal eyes and naturally see only the natural, for "the natural man discerneth not the things of the Spirit for they are spiritually discerned." Therefore these materialistic teachers deny all inspiration, all miracle and all authority aside from reason. But as reasoning can only be based on facts, and they are lacking the facts of personal experience in the regenerated life, their reasoning is false. With these traitors to the word are found pseudo-scientists, near-sighted philosophers and blind atheists who are crying out against the Bible.

(To be continued)

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Psalm 19. "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork." How much more truthfully could such a statement be made in these days of the telescope! With even the most casual contemplation of the heavens we cannot but be impressed with their beauty; they are so beautiful, in fact, that countless numbers throughout the earth have worshipped the stars, the moon, or the sun, rather than him who made them and placed them there. Our meditations this week will center around these glorious symbols of his power and majesty, of his love and care.

TUESDAY

Gen. 15:1-6. God promised Abraham that his seed should be as countless as the stars. Although we know that the stars are numbered by hundreds of millions, there are not more than three thousand stars that are visible to the naked eye at any one time or place, so we know that Abraham saw no more than that, yet he was overwhelmed at the greatness of the promise. In much the same way as Abraham, we may think now that we understand something of God's precious promises, but it will take all the ages to come before we begin to realize the fulness of the riches that are in Christ Jesus.

WEDNESDAY

1. Cor. 2:1-9. Each of the twinkling stars which we see in the heavens is a blazing sun, similar in every way to the sun which gives us our light and life. Some of them are several hundred times as big as our sun, and many times as bright. Probably some of these stars are also circled by planets like our earth. We do not know their purpose in the universe, but perhaps in the day when there shall be a "new heaven and a new earth," and the former things are passed away, we shall inhabit some of these other planets which God is even now preparing. But be that as it may, it is certain that he has prepared for us things as far exceeding our expectations as these blazing stars exceed our puny ideas of them.

THURSDAY

1. Cor. 2:10-16. From the days of Abraham until Galileo first turned his telescope on the heavens, men knew only the few thousand naked eye stars. The telescope may be likened unto the Spirit of God, which opens up to us a world that cannot be seen by the natural eye. We may see things with the naked eye that are like what we see with the telescope, but what we see with modern telescopes far transcends anything we could imagine otherwise. Jesus said, "The kingdom of heaven is like"—but when we actually see it, it will far transcend anything we have ever imagined.

FRIDAY

Psalm 103:1-13. Light travels about seven times around the earth in a single second; light reaches us from the sun in about eight minutes, but traveling, at the same speed, light will not reach us from the nearest star for more than four years. The light which we see from some of them has been hundreds of years in reaching us, so great is their distance from the earth! How much more meaning, then, we see in the words: "As the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him."

SATURDAY

Psalm 103:14-22. If Abraham could see the stars today, they would appear to him just as they always did: They shine on, practically changeless for thousands of years, appearing just the same to all men, everywhere. In a small way, then, they remind us of him who is from everlasting to everlasting, and may be known by the people of every nation.

SUNDAY

Psalm 8. As we realize the comparatively unimportant place of our earth in the vast universe, we cry out with the Psalmist: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him?" Yet we have abundant evidence that he is mindful of us, and has even visited us in the person of his Son. Let us praise him for his great power and glory, but most of all for the great love with which he hath loved his creatures.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Goshen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

Seventh Day Adventism

The Result of a Predicament

By William Edward Biederwolf

If the followers of William Miller had been as honest as this misguided man himself was, the situation which led to Seventh Day Adventism would not have survived that disappointing day in 1844, when for the second time the hopes of this farmer prophet were dissipated by the failure of Christ to put in his appearance according to the laboriously conceived and widely heralded chronological calculation of this deluded but none the less sincere man.

The First Mistake

William Miller made his first big mistake when he threw aside all human scholarship and depended alone upon his own untutored ability to master the mysteries of the Word of God. No man has a right to ignore what others have learned before him. You might as well step out into the starry night and expect to write an accurate treatise on astronomy and ignore all the findings and deductions of Galileo and Kepler and Herschel and scores of others who have given decades of tireless study to God's handiwork in the skies. When Phillip found the Ethiopian sitting in his chariot and pondering over the Scriptures, he said to him, "Understandest thou what thou readest?" But the Ethiopian didn't say, "I thank you, sir, but I have the Word." No, but he said, "How can I understand unless some one should guide me?" And God's chosen messenger climbed into the chariot at the Ethiopian's request and put him wise to the meaning of what was puzzling him.

BUT WHAT DID MILLER DO?

He took his Bible in one hand and a Concordance in the other and said, "I'll figure this thing out for myself," and so foolishly sought to establish in this foolish and inexcusable way, "the times and seasons which the Father hath put in his own power." And so he went to work and he discovered the exact time when the Lord was to come back again to the earth.

AT LEAST HE SAID HE DID.

But William Miller was not the first nor the last man to itch after a knowledge of this kind and to think he had found it. But all alike have seen their hopes vanish into thin air.

Presumptuous Prophecies

As soon as Christ had ascended, some of the wise ones got it fixed up that he would come back BEFORE JOHN DIED.

Christ had not been gone more than twenty years until a certain party claimed that by divine revelation they were made the heralds of the glad tidings that the time of his second coming was JUST AT HAND.

Another hundred years rolled by and some who were wise above what is written got it tipped off to them through ecstatic visions that Christ was JUST ON THE EVE of coming. But it was all in their mind's eye.

In the tenth century they got at it again, but it didn't pan out and the movement was followed with the usual disastrous results.

A little later some others got on the job and they said that the fifth kingdom prophesied by Daniel was JUST ABOUT to be set up and then of course Christ would come. They were known as "The Fifth Monarch Men."

A hundred years later Immanuel Swedenborg came along with his revelations. Then came the Irvingites, the followers of Edward Irving. THEY KNEW WHEN HE WOULD BE HERE. But he didn't come and the old sun rolled through the sky on the appointed day and said with a laugh, "Guess again."

Another hundred years and Joanna Southcott with her "visions" and her "Book of Wonders" was in the limelight. She said that she herself was the actual Bride of the Lamb and that Christ would come through her on October 19, 1814. Then came Anna Lee, the founder of the Shakers, and claimed that Christ had come in her. And now, to say nothing of a number of less conspicuous prognosticators, we have today among others one Edward Taze Russell, who says that Christ has already come; that he came in 1874, and who said that he would establish his Millennial reign in October 1914, but who later changed the date to the same month in 1915.

AS IT HAS BEEN WITH ALL THESE, SO IT WAS WITH MILLER.

THEY THOUGHT THEY KNEW, BUT THEY DIDN'T.

A Predicament and the Way Out

Miller took for the foundation text of his theory the same old verse that so many other self-appointed prophets had bungled over, Daniel 8:14, "UNTO TWO THOUSAND AND THREE HUNDRED DAYS THEN SHALL THE SANCTUARY BE CLEANSED." He was as ignorant of Hebrew as a Hottentot is of the Klondyke and he got "balled up" over the meaning of the word "day."

With the verse just mentioned as the basis of his calculation, Miller fixed the date of Christ's second coming as October 22, 1843. It is said, although stoutly denied, that on this day the Millerites put on their specially prepared white ascension robes and climbed to the house tops and high places and waited for the moment to come when they would be "caught up to meet the Lord in the air."

At any rate the wildest excitement prevailed. Property was given away and crops were left to rot in the field. They knew the end of the world was upon them. Those who did not believe were to be lost. But remorseless old Time kept marching right on and CHRIST DID NOT COME.

This should have been enough, but Miller, like Pastor (?) Russell, discovered that he had miscalculated by a year and once more he fixed the date on the same day of the month, but in the year 1844. It is said the excitement was even more intense than the year before. "THERE IS NO POSSIBILITY OF MISTAKE THIS TIME," the Advent Message, page 569; all who reject the light will be lost." But again day passed without regard to Miller's ures.

The results were pathetic. Many were left destitute, many drifted into the errors of the times and others went away to infidelity altogether. Everybody tried to explain.

Elder White shoved the date up another year.

BUT THEY MISSED IT AGAIN.

But fanaticism dies hard, if at all, those determined to find an explanation relieve them of their ridiculous embarrassment of course found it. They had taught that Christ was coming in 1844, to cleanse the earth, the sanctuary mentioned in Daniel 8:14, but since Christ very plainly did not come to the earth in 1844, if they could only find a sanctuary in heaven, the necessary explanations would be at hand, then they could show that it was the heavenly sanctuary which they, "by a slight mistake," had supposed to be the earth.

Well, in the book of Revelation they found of a "temple of God that was opened in heaven," and in the book of Hebrews a heavenly "sanctuary," a "tabernacle which the Lord pitched," and lo! their explanation was at hand. It was Christ's coming or going into the Holy of holies, the sanctuary of this tabernacle in heaven. Miller ignorantly prophesied, and "G. A. White," said Mrs. White, "was in the proclamation of 1843 and his hand hid a mistake in some of the figures" (Early Writings, page 10). This looks a little like God bungled as did Miller, but anyhow the mistake was satisfactorily explained.

Mrs. White and Her Visions

The Mrs. White just referred to was until her recent death, the leader and prophetess of the Seventh Day Advent movement. She was one of the early disciples of William Miller. Her maiden name was Ellen Harmon. She was a nervous young girl, and at the age of seventeen she had, as she claimed, her first vision. She was afterwards repeatedly caught up into heaven and "saw things." In one of these transcendental excursions she claims to have been shown the sanctuary, the temple into which Jesus went.

The purported visions and revelations of this neurotic, hysterical, cataleptic woman were certainly the limit and the credit that swallowed them was certainly a remarkably easy one. These revelations she called her "Testimonies." She has contributed them to writing, and claims inspiration for them even as the writings of the prophets are inspired. These revelations she says are "what God opened to me in vision." YET SHE HAS ALTERED THEM AGAIN AND AGAIN, A PROCEEDING HARD TO UNDERSTAND IF GOD TOLD HER WHAT TO WRITE IN THE FIRST PLACE.

But if the credulity that "fell" for them in the first place is astonishing, it is a more astonishing that any one of ordinary judgment can put any faith in her inspiration or her divine leadership, not so many, if not every one of her visions and prophecies have proven false.

1. In one of her visions her accompanying angel told her that the time of atonement for all sinners ended in 1844. She claims the door of mercy is still open.

2. In another vision she discovered women should wear short dresses nts and she and her sister followers essed this way for eight years. But the culous custom has now been abandoned.

In another vision she said, "Soon we rd the voice of God like many waters,
ch gave us THE DAY AND THE HOUR JESUS' COMING." This cannot refer the coming in 1844, because it was in 9 that she had this vision. Knowing then exact hour of his coming, what about prophecy of sixty-seven years ago, en she said, "Now time is almost finished what we have been years (six years) ning, they (the new converts) will have earn in A FEW MONTHS?"

In a vision in 1849 she learned that

(Continued on page 15)

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for March 1)

Jesus Sending Forth Missionaries

Scripture Lesson—Luke 9:1 to 10:24.

Printed Text—Luke 10:1-11, 17, 21, 22.

Evolutional Reading—Rom. 10:8b-15.

Golden Text—The harvest indeed is plen-s, but the laborers are few: pray ye efore the Lord of the harvest, that he forth laborers into his harvest.—Luke

Introductory Note

uke sets the mission of the Twelve and a of the Seventy in successive chapters.
four lists of the apostles agree in aring the names in three groups of four;
in giving Peter, Philip, and James fore-positions. Luke agrees with the first pairs of Matthew. In the other six places Matthew before Thomas. Matplaces himself last. The Seventy got e name from the seventy elders of s, or from the traditional seventy na-of the earth. Luke's universal Gospel gives the account of the sending of Seventy to all people without distinc-
e. There is no duplication of the charge e Twelve. The work of the Seventy, h intended as a preparation for Christ's ing, was not permanent like that of ewelve. Luke is not an eyewitness. The ns of some of the Seventy are: Soses, Mattathias, Barnabas, Cephas. Thad-
u. Their successors were the early pres-ts.

Laborers Few—Pray Ye

T harvest is always great; full half the r's population is yet in heathen dark-
s. And the laborers are always few ured with the great need. Even among s who are professing Christians and ers of the church, the laborers are
w. There are not many who are willing forth effort to win souls, and fewer ho are willing to go into all the world the Gospel message. The most impor-tact in the solution of the problem of rs is prayer.

is instructive to note that the laborers elves, and those who ought to be la-ers, were the ones instructed to pray for aborers. (1) They felt the need and therefore, pray with heart and soul.
e prayer was an inspiration to enter heartily into the work themselves. The e pray-er will do all he can to answer n prayer. (3) No one has greater of praying, of constant communion od, than those who would gather in vest."

The Spirit of Christ, a Requisite

There is something more important than just men, and that is the quality of men.
There is need of volunteers, but volunteers must first be wholly yielded to Christ and the Spirit of Christ must dwell in them.

"Give me a hundred men—not men that are glowing while they sing, and heavenly while they pray, though I would have them so; (writes a famous pulpit orator but men that are morning, noon and night born of God and that so carry the Spirit of Christ, that others coming into their presence say:
"There is a Christian here,"—give me a hundred such men and I will make the world believe. I do not ask to see a grape vine before I know it is there. I know there are grapes near when the air is full of their odor; and the question under such circumstances always is: 'Where is the vine?' and not, What is that I smell? You are to be a savour of love and peace and gratitude and thanksgiving, so that wherever you go, the essence of the truth that is in you shall go out to mankind."

Methods of Work

1. They went in their ordinary mode of living.
2. They went forth two by two. This is still one true and effective method of Christian work.
3. They were going among countrymen, and lived according to the usages of Oriental hospitality.

4. This was the best way to reach the people. The religion of Jesus was for daily life. There was no show, no self-seeking, no expense. They met the people on common ground.

5. They themselves were to be free from all worldly anxiety, so that they could give themselves wholly to their mission without fear or favor. They had nothing to lose, and their support was assured.

6. Under other circumstances Jesus gave very different instructions (Luke 22:35, 36). His disciples carried some money with them (John 12:6; 13:29).—Illustrated Quarterly.

Travel Light

The purse was for money, and they would need no money. The wallet "was a small basket carried on the back, or by a strap hanging from one shoulder, containing the food of the traveler."—Endicott. They were to carry no food. They were not to go barefoot, but were not to carry a second pair of sandals. The Christian worker will "travel light," he will not burden himself with many possessions, each of which is a care and a distraction from his great task.—Ibid.

No Time for Salutations

"This expression meant very much to the Oriental, for the salutation of the Eastern people frequently took half an hour, and sometimes an hour would be consumed. They touched their turbans, fell upon their

(Continued on page 15)

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana		GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer
F. G. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	C. O. WHITMER, 217 E. DuBall Ave., South Bend, Ind.	2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio

Cambria County C. E. Union

The Cambria County Brethren Christian Endeavor Union held its first rally of the new year in the Third Brethren church of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, on Tuesday evening, January 27th. This organization is made up of the C. E. Societies of the brotherhood in Cambria County, Pennsylvania, and so far is represented by the following societies: the First church of Johnstown, Third church of Johnstown, Conemaugh, Vinco, and Pike. There were over 100 members from the various societies present and as many friends.

The program of the evening was opened with the hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers," after which Rev. J. L. Gingrich, pastor of the Third church, led in prayer. In looking forward through the theme—"Our C. E. Vision for 1931"—many goals and plans, whereby each individual as well as the society might experience steps forward in C. E. work, were suggested. The three talks of the evening, which were given by members of the Union, brought out the thought of the theme very clearly. The first by Dora McCoy of the Third Brethren Society stressed "Personal Allegiance to Christ." The second, by Kenneth Ashman of the First Brethren Society, was on the subject, "Witnessing for Christ." And the third by Mildred Furry, also of the First Brethren Society, gave a practical application to the separate societies through the subject, "Stronger Stakes and Longer Cords. All were most interesting and instructive.

The music of the evening was in keeping with the theme. The thought of a guiding hand was expressed in a soprano solo entitled "Lead Kindly Light, by Hanna Jones of the Pike society. In the absence of a second special number an impromptu quartet was chosen from the group to sing "I Love to Tell the Story." Those in this quartet were Mrs. Floyd Benshoff, Lois Byers, James Mackall, Paul Rorabaugh.

A playlet entitled, "Who Killed Christian Endeavor?" was given by members of the Third Brethren, or Morrellville Society. It gave the story of many of the bad practices in the Christian Endeavor meetings that tend to kill the meetings, and what to do when such things occur. The playlet was directed by Catherine Benshoff, and those taking part were Betty Swallow, Helen Jones, Ila Wingard, Martha Eppley, Rita Jones, Anna Leftie, Vivian Swallow, Goldie Horner, Dorothy Link, Anna Ford, Luella Jones, Clara Smith and Ruby Horner.

In the business session which followed, plans were formulated for the Bible Conference which the Union will sponsor the week of April 13-19 inclusive. Rev. A. V. Kimmell, of Philadelphia, has accepted the invitation of the Union to be the speaker during this conference, the Lord willing.

The awarding of the "Honor Society Banner" at each rally is based on the average percent of attendance at the weekly meetings and at the rally. The Vinco Society has held this banner for the last three months. The Pike Society received the banner this time with a 92 percent record. Vinco was second with 89 percent and Morrellville third with 84 percent.

The invitation of the Vinco Society to have the next rally, which will be on May 5th, at their church was unanimously accepted.

An evening of games, Christian fellowship, and refreshments, directed by the Social Committee under the supervision of Carl Uphouse, chairman, brought the rally to a close.

Just recently the Union sent six bags containing over 200 pounds of clothing to the Kentucky Mission. This clothing was gathered through the various societies of the county.

In his Name,
ROBERT A. ASHMAN, President,
Cambria County C. E. Union, Penna.

Fifty Years of Christian Endeavor

High Points in the Society's Progress

Editorial Note—We are sorry to note that last week the review of Christian Endeavor for the years of 1898 to 1910 was omitted. We are therefore running it in this week. Those making a scrap book of this brief history, will please take note and paste their clipping in their proper order.)

1898

The first Christian Endeavor society in St. Petersburg, Russia, was organized October 15, with twenty-one members, by John Shirlaw, a young Scotchman.

1899

Army Christian Endeavor societies were doing a splendid work among our soldier boys in the Philippines.

1900

Dr. and Mrs. Clark with their youngest son Sydney made their second journey around the world, visiting Japan and China, and returning across Siberia to the World's Convention at London.

The nineteenth International and second World's Convention was held in Alexandra Park, Alexandra Palace, Royal Albert Hall, and Tent Mizpah, London, England, July 14-18.

Thousands of Christian Endeavorers were massacred in the Boxer outbreak in China. During the outbreak twenty-seven members out of a Christian Endeavor society of forty-seven in Dr. W. S. Ament's mission were massacred.

1901

It was voted to signalize the twentieth birthday of Christian Endeavor by making February 2 a great Decision-Day for Christ, and that the year be made further memorable by an offering from every society to the missionary boards of its own church.

Ohio was one of the first States to appoint a field-secretary—Rev. Charles H. Hubbell.

1902

John Willis Baer resigned as general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor June 25, the resignation becoming effective October 1.

1903

One hundred and seventy-five returned Boer prisoners of war Endeavorers dedicated themselves to missionary work among the natives of South Africa.

1904

The great revival in Wales began in an Endeavor meeting of the New Quay Calvinistic Methodist church in February.

1905

The campaign for a World's Christian Endeavor Building was inaugurated. The corner-stone was laid July 18, 1917; the building was dedicated July 31, 1918.

A letter from New Caledonia, Loyalty Islands, reported that out of a population of 6,092 there were 1,988 Christian Endeavers. They raised $8,000 for missions the year before.

1906

William Shaw was elected general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor December 12; his resignation became effective December 31, 1919.

1907

Dr. Clark and his daughter, Maude V. Histon Clark, crossed South America in interests of Christian Endeavor.

1908

Daniel A. Poling became field-secretary of the Ohio Christian Endeavor Union.

1909

Dr. Clark left on his fourth journey around the world, accompanied by F. Clark, to attend the World's Christian Endeavor Convention at Agra, India.

The fourth World's Christian Endeavor Convention was held in the vice-regal tent at MacDonald Park, Agra, India, November 20-23.

1910

Dr. Clark was accorded the unusual privilege of an audience with His Majesty, Mutsuhito, the emperor of Japan, which was very gratifying to the missionary force there.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

MISSIONS

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Berne, Indiana

News from French Equatorial Africa

December 18, 1930.

Dear Evangelist Readers:

When we last wrote you Mr. Hathaway had been suffering from fever. We are glad to say that he recovered sufficiently to be up by November 21st, and has seemingly been in better health since than before.

On the 23rd of November a strange phenomenon occurred, which was repeated on the 6th of December. Clouds and swarms of locusts hovered over the country, obscuring the sun by day and settling down by night to eating the vegetation and stripping the fields and pastures of the locality. Fortunately they did not settle at Yaloke Station either time, and our gardens were spared any damage. The natives went forth in large numbers to the surrounding villages to gather them for food, for, like John the Baptist, they believe in eating anything which the law has not forbidden, seemingly so at least, for they find locusts a great delicacy.

On the 25th of November, after a long silence, mail was received. It was in time to make us thankful for Thanksgiving Day in more ways than one, not only joy in our hearts, but delicacies for our table were the result of that mail, just in time as I have said, for Thanksgiving. Dr. Gribble had a birthday on the third of December and was hospitably entertained at Mrs. Hathaway's. A delicious meal was followed by a time of fellowship and rejoicing. The missionaries returned to their work refreshed by this little experience and encouraged to go forth to their ordinary service.

On December 7th wholesale vaccination was performed in this region by one of the government doctors. Our own native mission force was included, for we do not voluntarily seek medical work which the government will handle for us. So efficiently do they vaccinate in the region about Yaloke, that we have never seen a case of smallpox in this vicinity. Many of our people, however, had not been vaccinated before and some of them have been very, very ill from the effects of the inoculation, leaving us short-handed in many lines of our work.

Meetings have continued daily in our church. There have been inquirers daily, six of whom have been baptized during the month. Building has gone forward rather slowly, having been closed on the 15th of December, not to be resumed again until after our Conference at Bellevue, which will hold its sessions from Christmas until sometime early in January. The school children at Yaloke are still enjoying a vacation. School will not be re-opened here until the arrival of Miss Emmert. A telegram daily expected giving news of her prospective arrival as well as that of Miss Ty.

But although brief vacations take place from time to time in the work; although school children are at times free from their duties; there is one branch of our work which never takes a vacation. The medical work at Yaloke continues 365 days in the year, although only emergency cases are cared for on Sunday aside from the regular routine of in-patients' work. Some of the new patients which we are caring for in hospital during the last two weeks are: a case of arthritis of the knee, requiring amputation; a case of amputation of the toe; patients seriously mauled by leopard; a case of very severe burns and a fractured leg. The total number of patients cared for during the quarter was 3,483.

Just as we were writing this, the boys whom we mentioned last month as having departed for their vacation, returned in health and strength, reporting a prosperous time, having preached daily in the villages where they were being entertained.

A very important event which has occurred during the month is the completion of Mrs. Hathaway's translation of the Gospel of Mark, which will be submitted to the Conference meeting for final approval, typed and sent to the publishers as soon as possible.

On December 13th mail was again received after eighteen days of silence. Before scarcely had time to read this mail we were received from Bassai and Bellevue.

ant letters had to be written and sent in directions at once, so that we hardly v where to find a moment for rest, even ng the usual hours of repose.

ese are very busy days for the one who riting, as the hospital work is going full e, the village work is continuing, prepa- on is being made to leave for the Con- nce at Bellevue in the early morning of 24th, and all sorts of reports and cor- ondence must be gotten off beforehand.

Therefore we are compelled to send you a short letter this time.

We trust that you will remember us the more in prayer the busier we are, and that you will pray in a very special way for every department of our work, for every Station thereof, and for new stations which we hope may soon be opened.

Praying God's blessing upon you, I am,

Faithfully yours,
FLORENCE N. GRIBBLE.

Kittanning to Fort Wayne, Indiana

e are better able to understand God's to Abraham, asking that he leave coun- and kindred, since we now in obeying all have left our native state to become osier.

ter almost three years of work in the sylvania hills one cannot help but re- the "glory of God," is not to be seen "in the heavens," but also in the hills. llowing Brother Witter in the work at nning and Brush Valley, we found a ripe for development, and watered by and of God, it truly produced abundant- Suited for the sowing of Brethrenism on witnessed the growth in our Sun- school and the attendance was shown in gures set from Sunday to Sunday. At resent without a pastor the Sunday l is in the neighborhood of two hun-

With such a Sunday school we found s no task to start laying the founda- tor Christian Endeavor work. Two lid societies were organized by Mrs. s, one Intermediate and the other Jun-older girls not being content with the Christian Endeavor, opened the way e organizing of a Sisterhood. Today splendid organization. With so many people the future of the church at nning will be well cared for.

as with regrets that Mrs. Adams and f this work on the 18th day of October. decided to first take a little rest, which ver, nearly turned out to be our eter- st, due to an automobile accident. We l never forget the many happy days of fellowship, the kindness, and real love of these people, which continue to follow us even though we are miles away. May God richly bless them and in these days, and may they patiently wait and watch and pray for him who has promised to return.

After a visit in the east, during which time we had the opportunity of speaking in our churches at Allentown and Philadelphia, and also seeing our loved ones, we started for our new home in Fort Wayne, Indiana.

We are more than satisfied in our new field to say the least. The women of the church very kindly, at our request, secured for us a house, and with the aid of the men had everything in order for us upon our arrival. Our only task was to enter and make ourselves at home.

Following our first Sunday together there was a reception held for us in the church, at which everyone had a most pleasant time, and also the opportunity of getting better acquainted.

Our work has chiefly been one of visita- tion, yet ye have endeavored to keep our eyes open for those we could interest in the church as well as those we could win for the Lord. Fort Wayne is young as a church and small as to membership, but we feel God has a great future for her. We ask an inter- est in the prayers of God's people every- where, that we may build and work with a mind to work. Only thus, will we glorify and honor him who "LOVED THE CHURCH AND GAVE HIMSELF FOR IT."

SAMUEL J. ADAMS.

ful. If in your judgment the school has been successful they deserve the credit.

The Word of God has been faithfully preached from our pulpit and this has had its effect upon our officers and teachers and in turn has reflected itself upon the schol- ars. The Word of God does not return void but accomplishes his purpose.

I would like to mention a few items of interest which have occurred during the year.

1. The coming of our pastor, Brother A. V. Kimmell, has given confidence and im- petus to our work. He has cooperated with us in every way. He has been a booster of our school.

2. In order to give us a little more time and to insure our closing on time, we changed the opening of our school to 9:40 A. M. This has worked out all right.

3. Through the energetic efforts of our Brother Robert Crees, we were able to start a new work, that is, a week day Bible school. The attendance and interest have been satisfactory. We are expecting great things from this school.

4. Our sixth Summer Bible school was highly successful. A reorganization of the course of study was effected. We can now promote from year to year and finally gradu- ate a student after having finished the course. The main object of this school as well as the week day school is, of course, to get the boys and girls acquainted with the Bible. Ten children confessed Christ as their Savior, four of whom were baptized and received into the church.

5. Thirteen boys and girls confessed Christ as their Savior during Brother C. H. Ashman's meetings, two of whom were bap- tized and received into the church.

6. Out of twenty-six who joined the church during the year sixteen came through the Sunday school and three through the Week Day Bible school.

7. We are gratified with the good re- ports received from our new missionary, Miss Edna Patterson. Miss Elizabeth Ty- son, our other missionary, is probably just reaching Africa after spending a year in the Homeland.

8. There have been a number of Red Let- ter Days which for attendance and fine pro- grams have perhaps never been excelled. Junior Day, 367; Easter, 400 (Greatest Mis- sionary Offering in the history of the school); Children's Day, 420; Rally Day, 518 (record attendance for all time); Home- coming Day, 337; Special Thanksgiving Day, 357.

9. During the year 28 scholars had per- fect attendance, 19 missed only one Sunday, 2 two Sundays, 9 three Sundays: total 58. Our Secretary reports total attendance for year 14,394 average 277 per Sunday as against 13,633 total and 262 average in 1929 (Seven year average 244). There were 84 new scholars.

10. During the year we changed our Sunday School Visitor, having been fortune- ate in obtaining the services of Miss Clara J. Hendley, who has done fine work.

11. Our Treasurer's report shows un- usually large offerings. Total receipts amounted to $4,281.11 to which we add $496.43 Missionary balance from last year making a total of $4,777.54. Total expendi- tures $4,292.28, leaving a balance of $485.26. Of this amount $2,512.47 went for Foreign Missions and $1,779.81 for Home Missions.

In closing this all too lengthy report I wish also to thank our Honorary Superin- tendent, Brother Horace Kolb, for his coun-

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

BRETHREN CHURCH, PHILA- DELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA

February 9, 1931.

George S. Baer,

Del., Ohio.

Brother Baer:

Our annual church business meeting it decided to send our Sunday school re- port for the year to the BRETHREN EVANGELIST for publication.

I thought that it might be of interest to some other schools what the Lord has done for our school. Following is the report:

Sincerely yours in his service,
LARA J. HENDLEY, Secretary.
The Superintendent's Report

January 31, 1931.

Moderator and Brethren: Presenting the annual report of the school for the year of 1930, I do so with thanksgiving and praise to our Heavenly Father through his Son, our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. "Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our Salvation. Selah" (Psalm 68:19). "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praises unto Thy Name, O Most High; to show forth Thy loving kindness in the morning and Thy faithfulness every night" (Psalm 92:1, 2).

In summarizing the work of the year, I feel that we, as a school have made progress under the direction of the Holy Spirit. The Lord has blessed us with a fine organization of loyal and faithful workers. I do not know of a more consecrated band of officers, teachers and committeemen than we have at 10th and Dauphin Streets. All of them have separated themselves from the world and are living for his glory and the salvation of lost souls. I thank God for every one of them. They have given me whole-hearted support for which I am gratesel, suggestions and encouragement given during the year.

The work of the Sunday school is a great work. We have much before us, and with the Lord's help we hope to be used in the coming year in a larger measure in the salvation of precious souls, thereby hastening the coming of our blessed Lord.

Respectfully submitted,
CARL H. SEITZ, Superintendent.

Extract from Treasurer's Report Sunday School

Receipts:

Cash Balance on hand Jan. 1, 1930 $ 112.23
Offerings received during year ... 1,717.27

$1,829.50

Expenditures:

Total for year ..... $1,749.81
Balance on hand Jan. 1, 1931 .... 79.69
Missions

Receipts:

Balance on hand Jan. 1, 1930 .... $ 496.43
Monthly Offerings ..... 489.14
Easter Offering ..... 1,962.47

$2,948.04

Expenditures:

Missions ..... $2,512.47
Miscellaneous ..... 30.00

$2,542.47

Balance on hand Jan. 1, 1931 ..... $ 405.57
THE TREASURER.

SOUTH BEND REVIVAL

It is our good fortune to be able to report another very successful evangelistic campaign here in South Bend, Indiana. The meetings began on Sunday, January 18, with Dr. W. S. Bell preaching. The attendance was good right from the start. The working members of the church were interested and enthusiastic in doing what they could in prayer, visitation and invitation. Dr. Bell preached with his usual fervor and vigor with the Spirit of the Lord leading him. One business man (not a member of the Brethren church) remarked to another concerning Dr. Bell, saying, "He was the best fundamentalist preacher that has been in South Bend for a number of years." Our people here appreciated the good he has done for us.

The song service was directed by our regular choir director, Lewis Long. Brother Long, in an unassuming manner, pleasingly and positively leads the people in the song service which best prepares them for the message of the evangelist. He also had the regular backing of the choir that was faithful every night.

As to the results of the meeting there were fifty-five who made the confession or presented themselves for membership into the church here either by letter or by relation. Of this number thirty-six have been baptized and five others added by letter and relation. Others are to be baptized soon. This is the largest ingathering in the pastor's five years' experience in South Bend. Plans are being made to care for the little ones who have blessed our church with their new membership and by this means made us responsible for shepherding them. Of the number coming, seventeen were young people and adults, the rest were juniors and intermediates.

We appreciate the men's chorus from our Nappanee church which Brother Owen brought with him on one of the evenings as well as further visits from these good brethren. Brethren from Ardmore and Goshen also demonstrated the good spirit with their presence and interest.

Our people were prepared in no little way by the generosity of Brother C. F. Yoder who gave us a series of four sermons at the Christmas season. The church has been greatly benefitted by the coming of both Dr. Bell and Dr. Yoder.

N. V. LEATHERMAN.

REVIVAL AT LONG BEACH CHURCH

December the 28th the First Brethren church began a revival which continued for four weeks. Rev. Russell I. Humbert of Lake Odessa, Michigan, preached both morning and evening, which pleased us so well we wanted him to give us a few more sermons. This he did using his Bible chart making his subject very plain and comprehensive.

Tuesday, December 30th, Walter McDonald, the converted comedian-evangelist, Harry Vom Bruch's singer, arrived to lead the singing, also Vom Bruch's pianist, James Davis, he is a fine player and singer too. This is what our pastor says of Mac. "During thirty-seven years in Christian work as pastor and evangelist, having spent twenty-six of those years in Philadelphia and Long Beach, into which America's best talent always comes, without hesitation, we say that the three greatest leaders of evangelistic singing we have ever heard, are, Charles Alexander, (deceased), Homer Rodeheaver, and Walter MacDonald. And in our humble judgment, while each had (or has) his own strong points, Walter MacDonald, our own 'Mac', is the most winning, therefore the most popular personally, of the three. And 'Mac' gives the Lord all the credit! May God bless his ministry now in our church."

He not only gave us lots of good singing himself but used some of the fine talent we have in our church in singing and instrumental music. Also having talent from the outside, including one man who played on ten instruments at the same time, these musical entertainments brought the people out, even the unsaved. Then on Saturday evening "Mac" had converted dozens and outs from the Pacific Garden Mission, Chicago (where "Mac" was converted) and others to come and testify of their miraculous conversions.

Brother Bauman did the preaching; preaching the old time gospel sermons "GOOD MEASURE, RUNNING OVER." One night he preached on Baptism and another on Footwashing.

"Mac" is a wonderful personal worker. When the invitation was extended he went among the people and most always brought some forward. Then when the congregation was dismissed, he took them to a room and gave all who had come forward instruction concerning the plan of salvation, and had them confess the Christ as their personal Savior.

A square box was brought in with these words on, "HELP KEEP THE CHRISTIAN CLEAN." It contained smoking pipes, cigarette packages; two women sent their cigarettes up for the box. There were also show and dance tickets, gambling tickets and other devices to entertain the "OLD MAN," in the box.

The Lord heard and answered the many prayers that were offered up before the revival and during the meetings in the church and at the cottage prayer meetings.

The Holy Spirit was in these meetings with old time power, convicting and converting sinners, for which we thank praise the Lord and rejoice.

The final results of the campaign, so as mere numbers are concerned, is as follows:—Two hundred and twenty-one stepped forward to the altar. Probably three-fourths were first confessions. Two were members of the church, who came confess to the sin of backsliding or indifference, and who wished to make a confession and rededication of life. Seventy-eight the number have already been baptized more will be very soon. Three baptized unite with some other church. Two by letter from another Brethren church. One came by relation. Quite a number the children are members of the school, and would unite with the church find their parents objecting. Some will ever unite with other churches.

We held our quarterly communion vice January 28th, with many new taking part for their first time.

Our Bible school the last few Sundays had an average attendance of over hundred, our goal is one thousand.

On February 1st to the 6th the Hebrew Christian Alliance of America held a Conference at the First Brethren church Long Beach, California. There were meetings both afternoon and evenings. The meetings were conducted by Dr. M. Reich, author, poet and lecturer and a member of the Jewish Synagogue at the time of his remarkable conversion, and one of the most eminent Christian scholars in the world; and Rev. Jacob Peltz, General Secretary of the Hebrew Alliance. Their lectures were very interesting. Rev. Peltz gave a "Panorama of Jewry in Relation to Christianity." He told how the Jews have suffered during the centuries, and the difficulties of the Jew to become a Christian, in the family and among the people. Dr. Reich lectured on the History of man from the Creation to the Fall and the different dispensations in the history of Israel. He also discussed the trouble between the Jews and Arabs today.

We received much light on God's wonderful plan and leading of his people and the final restoration, etc. It would be an inspiration to any church to hear an evangelist like Dr. Reich.

N. C. NIELSEN.

FROM AN ISOLATED MEMBER

I believe I have written before about "time of waiting" out here, and how hungry we get for Brethren doctrine and brethren fellowship. The church where we worship regularly is one that talks much of "whole gospel" and their loyalty to the fundamentals, yet many of the doctrines and ordinances so precious to us and so taught in the Scriptures, are either lightly dismissed.

Among the people I meet daily there are many who have spoken of such inconsistencies of doctrine in the churches of various communities. Just recently referring to such matters, one remarked "Is it a farce!"

At no time in recent years have there been so many who were ready and willing for a whole gospel in fact as we are now. Equally true is it that there has been wearied of churches which exclude all manner of social activities to the practical exclusion of the spiritual. There has been a time, then, when the whole gospel preached by the Brethren, the sturdy, sincere, practical Christian has been their historic heritage, have so strong an appeal to such numbers of people.

The Brethren people, I believe, give more zealously for missions than do the people of most other denominations, but if they are unwilling to give scripturally, as God prospered them, how much might now be accomplished! If the Mission Board were able to place competent men in these fields which are "white unto harvest," it is a relief that the church might experience that ingathering.

In this connection, let me say that I believe it is a grave mistake to separate the work of our missions, both home and foreign, from the "Evangelist," and to maintain separate publications for these interests. To maintain these separate publications only result in limiting the inspiration that comes from reading of the trials and victories of our missions to the comparatively few who are already vitally interested. Moreover, this undesirable result can be achieved only by considerable added expense and duplication of effort.

In one of his splendid editorials, Brother E. recently directed our attention to the work of the Church of the Brethren in maintaining their various publications, and that it might well profit from their experience. The news of our various mission projects at home and abroad were presented each week (not monthly), to the wider circle of the Brethren readers, the natural result would be a quickening of interest on the part of those whose interest is now but slight, and a more sustained, better informed interest on the part of all. It is true that this might call for an enlarged "Evangelist," one that would be more efficient than any entirely separate publications.

It could be well to maintain separate departments in the "Evangelist," each edited for various special interests, but certainly a stronger, more effective, and more attractive church paper would be the inevitable result. Our present policy will make the "Evangelist" little more than an exchange for sporadic news letters and the adulations of pastors and evangelists. The principal mission news would continue largely of the propaganda in connection with the special offerings, at which the mission interests would still be dependent, at present, to avail themselves of a larger circulation and wider appeal of the "Evangelist."

The things have always been very dear to us, and are more so since we have been, at this time, at least, isolated from our own land and compelled to feed in strange lands. Our nearest Brethren center is the Church of the Brethren, at Elgin, and it is when the weather permits to drive the thirty miles to worship them! They have been very congenial in inviting us to place our membership with them while here.

In conclusion, may we repeat that in the trials of the day there is an almost undisturbed opportunity for the genuine Gospel and sturdy Christian life that has been our historic heritage as Brethren. We never depart from our whole gospel mission or from consistent Christian living. May we awake more fully to our responsibilities at home and abroad; may we recognize that would in any way weaken our effectiveness in the Lord's work, but let every plan and effort be to glorify God and build up the church for which our Lord gave himself, and so hasten the day of his coming.

THOBURN C. LYON,
Elmhurst, Illinois.

ANKNEYTOWN, OHIO

You have not heard from the Ankneytown church for a long time, but it has not yet disbanded, far from it. Instead it is growing. It stands as a challenge to the idea held by some, that the small country churches may be allowed to die since, in this day of automobiles and paved roads, the people can drive in to the city churches, thus effecting economical advantages in fewer church properties. This congregation, like some others, surely has greater enduring qualities than many of our larger city churches, because she has withstood the batterings and vicissitudes of untrained student pastors for years.

Last September Ankneytown called Brother Ray J. Klingensmith to conduct an evangelistic campaign of two weeks' duration during the Christmas period. The members began praying and planning and before Brother Klingensmith came upon the field the revival had started. Sunday school and church attendance began to grow about Thanksgiving time. The services were well advertised and started off splendidly in spite of Christmas programs all over the community. The interest and attendance grew until, on the last Sunday evening of the services, the house was packed full and people were turned away from the door. Brother Klingensmith, though he is only a college boy at Ashland, preached like a veteran, and the people there are still talking about his sermons. He, so I am told, preached some of the greatest sermons that have ever been delivered in that church in the memory of the oldest residents. Neighboring churches came in delegations. Twelve were added to the membership, which makes a total of twenty-seven new members in two years. But the best part is that the revival has not yet ceased. The Sunday school attendance exceeds the enrollment of that prior to Christmas, and usually more come in afterward for church service. This is phenomenal for the winter months and bids fair to continue.

Some of the spirit prevalent at Ankneytown seems to have spread to Mansfield, also. The interest in things spiritual has been growing there this winter resulting in increased attendance, and baptism and reception of two new members three weeks ago.

May the Lord continue his work at both places.

DELBERT B. FLORA, Pastor.

TELL JESUS

The recent death of Dr. Elisha A. Hoffman, writer of well-known hymns, calls attention to one hymn in particular, "I Must Tell Jesus." This gospel song emphasizes the personal note in religion which is so essential to a living faith and genuine joy.

In this hymn we sing of Jesus as a Friend who has such an interest in us that he is willing and eager to listen to all that we have to say to him. He is even interested in our trials. He listens when we tell him of our doubts and our unhappiness.

We may tell Jesus everything, and have the assurance that he is able to help us out of our difficulties.—Selected.

Sunday School Notes

(Continued from page 11)

knees, saluted one another with a holy kiss, talked together concerning their own interests. The seventy were not bidden to be impolite—this is farthest from the spirit of the Christian—yet they were commissioned to be about the King's business, and the King's business required haste."—J. Wilbur Chapman.

Every Christian a Missionary

"The Father projected his life and love into one country of the world by sending his Son. The Son projects his life and love into all countries by sending forth disciples, men who have caught his mood and spirit. Many words are made print, but 'The Word' which saves the world is made flesh and dwells among us, full of grace and truth."

"Amid our most trivial duties, on days which are passing in the usual round of uneventful routine. He may speak to us as never before. . . . To listen for the footsteps of the divine Redeemer passing by in the ordinary providences of life is a most important part of the probation of every man. How much may depend upon following when he beckons us to some higher duty, to some more perfect service, we shall only know when we see all things as they really are in the light of his eternity."—Henry P. Liddon.

"There should be no aimless souls in the living church of the everloving Christ. Our endeavor counts upon his interest and his companionship, and it excludes all listlessness from the days we spent with him."

Sophie Brugman, a German girl living in New York, wanted to be a foreign missionary and prayed for the way to open. One day a voice seemed to ask her, "Who lives on the floor above?" She answered, "A family of Swedes." "And who lives in the rear?" "Some Italians." "And who lives a block away?" "Chinese." Then she said to herself, "And I have never said a word to these people about the blessed Jesus. No wonder I am not sent to the heathen, thousands of miles away, when I do not care enough for those at home to even speak to them of Jesus." Some want to go around the world to China for Christ who won't go around the corner to the Chinese laundryman for Christ.

SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISM

(Continued from page 11)

"the time for Jesus to be in the most Holy Place is nearly finished." He had then been there according to this theory only SIX YEARS, and this she said "nearly finished" the time, but he has been there now SIXTY-ONE YEARS MORE.

5. In a vision in 1847, she saw that Christ would come before slavery was abolished and that it would be abolished when he came. But slavery has been abolished and Christ has not yet come.

6. In a vision of January 4, 1862, she had it revealed to her that slavery "is left to live and stir up another rebellion." But it did not live and it did not stir up another rebellion.

7. Again it was revealed to her that "When England does declare war, there will be general war." There were others who thought in those days that England was about to declare war, but England did not declare war.

IF THIS IS "READING THE FUTURE WITH MORE THAN HUMAN FORESIGHT," WE FAIL TO SEE IT.

But what saith the Scriptures? "And if thou say in thine heart, How shall we know the word which the LORD HATH NOT SPOKEN; when a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, IF THE THING FOLLOW NOT, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously; thou shalt be afraid of him." Deut. 18: 21, 22.

BUT WILLIAM MILLER SEEMS TO HAVE BEEN HONEST. He said, "We expected the second coming of Christ at that time and now to contend that we were not mistaken is dishonest. I have no confidence in any of the new theories that grew out of the movement" (Advent Message, pages 410-412).

Now, so far as believing in a definite time for the second coming of Christ is concerned, by whatever process of chronological speculation it may have been reached, we may gracefully allow each man his own sweet way about this and pity the victim of his delusion when he is embarrassed by it; but the great objection to Seventh Day Adventism, as to all other fanatical departures from the time honored and generally accepted interpretation of Scripture, is that they do not content themselves with their single, harmless, though unwarranted deduction but proceed forthwith to gather about it or to deduce from it, as they believe, all sorts of doctrinal vagaries and perversions which make the thing in its ultimate form an undistinguished contradiction of all or nearly all the fundamental tenets of the Christian faith.

(To be continued)

OUR LITTLE READERS

"STICK TO THE TRUTH"

Story of Abraham Lincoln

It was a bright autumn evening, nearly one hundred years ago. Abraham Lincoln, then a great, awkward boy of sixteen or seventeen, looked in at the door of a little log cabin, on the edge of one of the Western prairies, and said pleasantly: "I'm going off into the woods to chop tomorrow, mother; I've got a job over at Laird's, and, as I have to start by daybreak, I quit work early this evening, so I could attend to any chores you might like to have done."

"You are a good boy, Abraham, to be always thinking of helping me. If I was your own mother, you could not be better to me, and you will be rewarded for all your kindness in the end, I am sure."

"I have a right to be good to you, mother, for have you not tried most faithfully to take my own dear mother's place? No one who has been blessed with two such mothers as I have had could ever be anything but good to women folks. But you have not told me how I can help you yet, and it is almost dark," he insisted, rubbing the moisture from his eyes with his coarse sleeve.

"Well, as I am going to wash tomorrow, I would be ever so thankful if you would bring me a few buckets of water from the spring, and call the cow up for me to milk. It is hard telling how far out over the prairie she may have strayed. I have not set eyes on her since morning."

"Trust me for finding her! What's the use of my long legs if they can't out-travel a cow? But I reckon I'd best bring the water first. And here is Sally waiting for a ride," he added, placing upon his shoulder his little step-sister, who had come running out the moment she heard the water-buckets begin to jingle.

Back and forth the tall, gaunt, prairie boy hurried until all the tubs and kettles about the cabin were full to the brim.

"You see, sis, I am going to chop myself out a suit of clothes," he said, in answer to a question from the girl perched upon his shoulder.

"Chop yourself a suit?" laughed the child. "Who ever heard of wooden clothes?"

"We shall see," replied Abraham, as he set down his bucket of water and deposited Sally on the steps, and then started off in search of the missing cow.

"Bless the boy! I could not get along without him," said his mother, stopping her work for a minute to gaze fondly after him.

"There is no call for you getting along without him, at least for many a year to come," remarked her husband, who had entered the back door in time to catch her words.

"He'll not stay here always, you may set that down. Abraham Lincoln was born for something better than he'll ever find in the life we are living. You may live to see the day that you'll be proud to call him son."

"Abraham is a good boy, wife, but your ideas about him are somewhat visionary," returned his father, with a smile. "It is not good for boys to get high notions about themselves into their heads, and I hope Abraham will always be content to make an honest living as his father has done."

Early in the morning, before it was clearly light, Abraham was ready to set off for the place where the rails were to be split, but, early as it was, Sally was up, too, determined to keep her big brother company during his long walk across the country.

"Can't I go, Abraham?" she begged, after her mother had refused the desired permission. "Can't I go? Say yes, quick," demanded the impulsive child.

"Just as mother says," replied the big brother, pausing to give the little girl an opportunity to consult her mother. But Sally had no intention of saying anything more to her mother on the subject, and tried to hurry him off down the path before her absence would be noticed.

Abraham would not move a foot, however, until he knew his mother's wishes, which soon came in a positive command for Sally to come back into the house.

It was a very reluctant obedience that Sally accorded, and as soon as her brother was out of sight she determined to follow him, and at once cut across the field, intending to reach the ravine before him, and give him a genuine surprise by jumping out unannounced in the path as he came up.

She carried out her plan successfully, and when she heard his merry whistle in the distance, she climbed up on the bank to be ready to make the spring for his shoulders when the proper moment should arrive.

But the poor child had forgotten all about the sharp ax which he carried, and, although she gained her coveted seat on his shoulders, her little bare foot received a gash from the cruel ax, which changed her merry laugh to a bitter cry without a moment's warning.

"Why, Sally! How did you get here?" was all the boy could say as he placed her tenderly on the bank, and began an examination of the wounded foot.

Finding it to be a deep cut, he gathered some broad plaintain leaves which grew near, and by their aid soon succeeded in staunching the flow of blood, which had first frightened both himself and Sally.

This accomplished, he tore the shirt from his shirt, and in his clumsy way daged the injured foot as well as he could. Then, as he carried the little home he drew from her the story of disobedience. She would have been willing to evade the truth in order to screen herself from her mother's displeasure, but the truthful Abraham would not permit this.

"Tell the truth, Sally, no matter what consequences may be. Better suffer punishment than lie about it. I do not think I ever will be hard on you when she sees you are sorely punished you are already, but tell a lie to shield yourself—never."

Sally took his advice, and her mother was very willing to forgive her when she saw how really sorry she was, and from that day forth Sally never forgot how sacred thing perfect honesty is.—Selected.

OUR READERS' FORUM

AN ENDORSEMENT

The Brethren Evangelist, Ashland, Ohio.

Dear Sirs:

I endorse Mrs. Lyon's piece regarding combining of the Missionary with the paper.

In worshipping the past year with Church of the Brethren here in Des Moines I cannot see why the two churches could not unite. I know there are people who would be saved to the Brethren faith here, and that is perhaps true of many other places.

Yours truly,

MRS. RAY A. EMMERSON
2907 Carpenter Avenue,
Des Moines, Iowa.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

As we are closing our work at Oahe, West Virginia the first of March and up the pastorate of the First Brethren church of Flora, Indiana the first of March, address all mail for me to Flora, Indiana, after March first.

FREEMAN ANKRU
Secretary National Conference Executive Committee.

IN THE SHADOW

FORSYTHE—Lillian Mae Glick Forsythe was born at Eaton, Ohio, March 23, 1881. She departed this life August 18, 1930, at the age of 49 years, 4 months and 10 days. In 1906 she was married to John Calvin Forsythe. She was blessed with one daughter, Mildred. The daughter remains. Sister Forsythe had been ill for some time, and it was my privilege to call many times during her illness, and also my privilege to receive her confession of her sins. Funeral services were conducted by the undersigned.
R. D. BAILEY

FORSES—Garland Forbes was called to be with his father, August 18, 1930, at the age of 64 years. He was born in Virginia but had made his residence in Dayton, Ohio, for many years. He was a most faithful member of the Brethren church. He had been engaged in the coal business for many years, and was known for his kindness to his community. He leaves the widow, a son, and a daughter, besides many friends. May God bless all the friends. Funeral services by the pastor.
R. D. BAILEY

Vol. LIII
Number 9

February 28
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

And the Lord said unto him

I have heard thy prayer and thy supplication that thou hast made before me: I have hallowed this house, which thou hast built to put my name there forever; and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.

--I Kings 9:3.

*The Attractive New First Brethren Church of Roanoke, Virginia
Rev. H. E. Eppley, Pastor*

(See description in News Department)

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

ARE Hard Times a Good Thing?

This country is passing through one of the major financial catastrophes of its entire history. The crash came when the bottom dropped out of the stock market something over a year ago, and we cannot tell whether the worst is over or not. We hope it is.

From one standpoint the outlook is rather gloomy. But on the other hand there are indications that the "hard times" may be making men do a little more thinking about eternal values. From the Long Beach First church comes the news of a most remarkable campaign of soul-winning. News from the church at Johnstown tells the same story. From other places also we hear of great revivals; all the more startling because we had been told by the modern religious experts that the day of evangelism was over.

Perhaps this country needed some shock to remind us that "the things which are seen are temporal"—stocks, banks, real estate, etc.

Now is the time to hold revivals and go after the souls of men. They have been shaken by the events of the past few months, they are looking for something solid to anchor to, their minds are open to the message much more than during the years of prosperity.

DOES he Know What Jesus did?

Dr. Louis C. Wright, pastor of a great Methodist church in Cleveland, said recently in a Lenten address, "Jesus did not pause to defend his life, his mission, or his deeds. We need to live Christianity and forget about debating religious topics if Christianity is to win against the encroachments of paganism."

One wonders whether Dr. Wright has ever really studied the New Testament records. If he will take time from his busy life to read the eighth chapter of the Gospel of John, he will find a veritable battleground of religious debate. Our Lord was almost constantly involved in conflict with the Jewish religious leaders. But perhaps Dr. Wright does not attach much value to the Scriptures.

The amusing side of the matter is that Dr. Wright, in his condemnation of religious debate, is himself doing the very thing he condemns. "Wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things"—this is what the Apostle Paul would tell him.

Religious debate is a good thing; it helps to reveal error and bring it to the judgment of truth. That may be why some men do not like it. What they really would like is to do all the talking themselves and have the rest of us keep silent.

Of course, we should live Christianity. No one disputes that. But we ought to do more talking about it, not less.

GENERAL BUTLER'S Suggestion

The great increase in criminal activities in this country has provoked numberless suggestions as to its remedy. General Butler, hard-boiled marine who was reprimanded lately for saying harsh things about Mussolini, would like to see the present police system abolished, together with its local political control. In its place he would organize a state police force along military lines, a sort of "American Scotland Yard."

It is an interesting suggestion, and ought to appeal especially to Chicago citizens, but probably nothing will be done to adopt the scheme. The local politicians need their police henchmen too badly.

Some day the world will be placed under a police organization even more efficient than Butler suggests. It will be composed of angels. Read Matthew 13:41-42. That will be the end of all the Capones with their gunmen and bootleggers.

SMOTHERED with Things

Raymond B. Fosdick, writing in the Wellesley Alumnae magazine, levels a severe indictment at some of the trappings of modern civilization.

"We are smothered with things," he says. "The desirability of their possession is screamed at us over the radio and from every billboard, from every newspaper, from every magazine. The ingenuity of modern business is devoted to the task of creating new things, of making people want what they have never wanted before. . . . We live in a kind of mental five-and-ten-cent-store, our minds cluttered with gear. . . . The whole structure of modern industry rests upon its success in stimulating an appetite for more things."

He concludes with this word, "I cannot believe that the present bacchanalian orgy of consumption represents a permanent phase of human development. I cannot help thinking that some day man will grow tired of his things. Some day, if not our day, they will begin to pall on him, the glamour of possession will wear off, he will grow weary of their domination, and like a child satiated with toys he will look around for other interests. . . . A thing-ridden mind cannot live the life of the spirit."

All this reminds us of the Word of our Lord, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth. . . . Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall these things be?"

But only God can open the eyes of men to this truth.

The 1931 Winona Lake Bible Conference. Winona Lake, Indiana

The dates for the 1931 Bible Conference, which is the Thirty-seventh Annual, are August 14 through Sunday, August 23, beginning as usual on Friday and closing the second Sunday thereafter.

These ten days furnish a happy, helpful retreat to the hard-worked minister, the Christian layman and to all lovers of Bible truth.

There are bathing and fishing in the beautiful lake; cool and shady walks among the gardens and the great oaks of Winona's justly noted Park, and innocent games of every sort. Here you study the Word of God as you sit at the feet of the master preachers and Bible teachers of the world. Few Bible conference programs are comparable with the one offered at Winona Lake, Indiana. Entertainment rates range from the lowest to the moderately high, according to your desire.

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, associated Winona's activities for 36 years, Assistant Director of the Bible Conference for years, and director now for ten years with his Bible Conference Committee prepared the program with the needs of the minister especially in view, but it makes a rare feast for all.

Definite arrangements have been made with the following speakers, and favorable response is expected daily from some or four other equally noted leaders of the Christian world.

- 7:00 A. M. The Morning Inspirational Hour. Dr. J. C. Massie
- 8:30 A. M. The Morning Bible Interpretation Hour. Dr. W. I. Carroll for the first five days, and Dr. Charles R. Man for the second five days.
- 9:30 A. M. The Ministers' Hour. Campbell Morgan, Dr. Max Reichert, James M. Gray, Dr. J. C. Massie and others.
- 9:30 A. M. The Women's Hour. Speaker to be announced.
- 10:30 A. M. The Morning Sermon. Campbell Morgan, Dr. John T. Stone, and others.
- 2:00 P. M. The Song Director's Conference. Prof. Homer Rodeheaver.
- 3:00 P. M. The Missionary Hour. Speakers to be announced.
- 4:00 P. M. The Afternoon Bible Interpretation Hour. Dr. Herbert W. Biederwolf.
- 5:00 P. M. Denominational Rallies.
- 6:30 P. M. The Hillside Inspirational Hour. Dr. David Bayless, Dr. W. E. Biederwolf and others.
- 7:30 P. M. The Evening Lecture, Sermon. The Preachers of the Month.
- 9:15 P. M. The Missionary Stereoscopic Lectures.
- 2:00 P. M. Thursday, August 20, COMING DAY. Speaker to be announced.
- 2:30 P. M. Sundays. Paul Rader for the last Sunday. Speaker for the first Sunday to be announced.

IN THIS NUMBER

- What Will Lent Mean to Me?—Editor.
- As a Layman Sees Him—Editor.
- Editorial Review.
- The Brethren Church and the Message and Program of Christianity—Freeman Ankrum.
- Six Things that God Hates—J. I. Gingrich.
- The Surrender of the Ideal—H. B. Smith.
- Studies in the Scriptures—C. I. Yoder.
- Significant News and Views.
- The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon.
- Seventh Day Adventism—W. E. Biederwolf.
- Editor's Notes on the S. S. Lesson.
- Christian Endeavor at Fort Wayne, Ind.—Mrs. S. Adams.
- Fifty Years of Christian Endeavor.
- News from the Field.
- Announcements.
- Business Manager's Corner.

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

and all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

What Will Lent Mean to Me?

forty days beginning with Ash-Wednesday and closing with Sunday have not been very widely significant among Evangelists, but they have been recently growing in significance. Perhaps we have not been as widely acquainted with the and purpose of the Lenten season as was necessary to have general desire to participate in the occasion and to partake possible blessings from the observance. Also the mechanism that has often attended its observance by our Catholics has given us a decided prejudice against it.

Lenten season is primarily a time of fasting in preparation for the festival of Easter. Seasons of fasting are not unknown in church history. In fact, the Apostolic church itself occasionally engaged in fasting, and Paul recounts the experience as one of the outstanding items of his remarkable missionary career. He did not command fasting, neither did he oppose the practice, but he found prevalent, but he condemned the ostentatious fastings of the Pharisees (Matt. 6:16-18). He seems rather to have urged sincere and earnest fasting, for, according to the King James version, Jesus placed fasting right along side of prayer as a measure of that dead earnestness and implicit faith necessary to quiet the deaf and dumb spirit. Though we cannot say that the custom of fasting, carried over from Judaism by the primitive church, was directly required by God either under the Old or the New Covenant, yet it was an exercise of piety frequently used to secure God's favor, usually at the time of some great need or extraordinary experience, and it became a rule early in the history of the church so strictly adhered to, according to Tertullian, that it was thought necessary to abstain from the Lord's Supper on fast days.

The number of days over which the Lenten fast continued varied at different times. But at the beginning of the fourth century, during the terrible persecution, the forty days period was adopted, the time being deduced by analogy from the forty days of Jesus (Matt. 4:2) and of Moses (Exod. 34:28) and of Elijah (1 Kings 19:8). Those analogies as well as the original intent of the observance made it a most serious and sacred occasion. Those days were to be times of heart-searching, separation from the world and sacrifice. They were freighted with possibilities of spiritual blessing. They were a challenge to enter into a more and more vital religious experience. And why should not the Lenten season be the same to us today? It is true that Lent has been abused, but that fact makes it all the more certain that it is a great spiritual opportunity. We may not care to join in the procession of those who will resolve to "give up something" only to break over the prohibition as soon as Easter is past. We must not too much of the conventional pretense that has brought the observance the ridicule that it has suffered. But might we not decide, as Dr. Chalmers suggests, to "take on something" during Lent—"something so big that unimportant things would get out of our lives"?

Let us resolve within our hearts—and pray that it may pass—to take on a larger appreciation of and more interest for God. There is a wonderful opportunity. How poor we think of God! And with what little real affection! He is so vague and indefinite, so unreal and far-away, notwithstanding all our professions concerning him. It is not enough to think of him as the mighty Power that created all things and holds the universe in its course; we cannot love a Power. Let us think of him as a personal, loving Spirit with whom we may and do converse. It is not enough to be overawed by the greatness and majesty; let us seek to be overwhelmed by the tenderness and reach of his compassion and the wisdom and dependability of his Fatherly care. And out of appreciation for such a beneficent person, we shall be driven forth in gratitude and to do his will.

Suppose we seek to take on a truer fellowship of the sufferings and yearnings of the heart of the Master and Savior of men. Nothing will be harder to do, but at the same time nothing will count so much for efficiency and power in the members of the body of Christ. If we could but tread with more courage the moral and spiritual frontiers with the Great Shepherd of all souls, how much greater things we might do! And how much it might mean to our Lord! The Christian Advocate (Nashville) says: "Communion with Christ and participating with the sorrows of the last days of his ministry will work to the filling up of his sufferings and to the efficiency of his redeeming death. Only a church that has a bleeding heart can help a perplexed and straying world. Only a riven side draws forth and heals the hand of doubt. The church or the soul that is not broken as Christ was broken will fail to save a perishing humanity." Do not stumble over that statement. Christ's death was unique and all-sufficient for a sinful world, but the messenger of the Cross must dip down deep into the fellowship of Christ's sufferings, if he is to make an impression on the world.

And might we not take on a stronger loyalty to the church, which is the body and the bride of Christ? Our service is so fitful and superficial! We do so want our own way! We like to place our own judgment, our own wisdom, our own standards over all. We revolt when the church asks too much of our time; we refuse when it calls for sacrifice; we complain when its offerings seem too frequent. We have been doing a good deal of that in recent years. Just recall that there were collection boxes in the temple when Jesus went there to teach. He did not throw them out, but sat over by them and watched the people casting in their money. And no time nor effort which his service required did he allow his disciples to account as too great. Not even home nor loved ones might be allowed to stand between a person and his Lord. He demanded first place. And nothing but first place will satisfy him today in our relationship to his church. The same high standards must characterize our attitude toward his "body" and "bride" as he requires toward his own blessed person. Such loyalty to his church this Lenten season challenges us to take on, and not for the few weeks only that close with Easter, but for the entire year and through the years.

As a Layman Sees Him

If the average layman could make his minister to suit his own likes and dislikes, he would no doubt have a minister that was fearfully and wonderfully made. However, the layman has a right to have his voice heard on the matter now and then and it is often profitable as well as interesting to the minister to let the layman speak his mind. A layman had such an opportunity recently in the columns of The Watchman-Examiner, and we quote him as follows:

"I like my minister very well indeed, but he leaves some things to be desired. I wish he would wear appropriate clothes. I do not mean clerical clothes, but well pressed suits. Since ministers have begun to dress like other people, they really seem to have overdone it. It would be better if his neckties were a little less conspicuous. In his preaching I could stand more of John, Peter and Paul, and could get along without so much from the scientists and philosophers. Then I grow a little tired of poetry, and I simply cannot stand sermons on modern novels. Who are these novelists anyhow, and by what authority do they speak the last word on social conditions in their application to Christ's religion? Then I wish my pastor would control his voice and not shout simplicities to me as though I were deaf. Then I wish my pastor would warm up to me, and let me be his personal friend. I am a professional man, a college man, and am counted an educated man. I have a fine library in which my pastor and I could have many pleasant hours together. I just wish he were more human."

Of course there are two sides to every problem, but the minister can afford to listen to the layman's side presented without yielding too quickly to the impulse to retort. Let us rather meditate a little on what he says, for surely, as The Presbyterian remarks: "It behooves the man of God to 'watch his step.'"

EDITORIAL REVIEW

The example set by the older people will have a great deal to do with determining the attitude of the young people toward the liquor question.

Don't get behind in the taking of the special offerings, if you can possibly avoid it. It is a lot harder to catch up than it is to keep up.

Ideals are the restricted possession of human beings; animals do not and cannot have them. How large a per cent of mankind is relinquishing its human birthright for a mess of animal pottage!

We may lose all desire for the ignoble things to which we have been accustomed if we will sit often and regularly at the feet of the Master while he fills our minds with thoughts of truth, goodness and purity.

DON'T FORGET—Send your offering for the Superannuated Ministers' Fund to Rev. G. L. Maus, Secretary, Roann, Indiana, and your offering for the Brethren Home to Mr. Cecil Hendrix, Treasurer, Flora, Indiana.

Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Schaffer of Conemaugh, Pennsylvania, are happy over the arrival of little Alyce Ann on February 11, 1931, into their home. We congratulate them and pray God's blessing upon them in the care of this little gift of God.

Brother W. A. Steffler writes in a personal note to the editor: "The work is going along here nicely at the Third church. Last night another one came forward and I baptized six at the close of the service." May God continue to bless Brother Steffler in the great work that he and his people are doing in the Third church of Philadelphia.

From Warsaw, Indiana, we have a report of a revival meeting conducted entirely by local talent, the pastor serving as evangelist and the regular choir director acting as song leader. The attendance and interest were good and the church was strengthened by the addition of five new members. Brother E. M. Riddle is the faithful pastor of this church and is doing a splendid work there. The meeting opened with a home-coming service in honor of Dr. C. F. Yoder, a former pastor.

Dr. C. F. Yoder writes of his visit among the churches in Indiana, Illinois and Iowa. In Indiana he came across a number of former parishes, which meant, of course, hosts of special friends, among laity and the ministry alike. He has completed the visit of the churches of the brotherhood and has found the vast majority of them prospering spiritually. He is to preach for a week in Southern Texas and then conduct a revival meeting at Manteca, California, March 8 to 30, the 1st to the 8th of March being spent in Bible Conference work in Long Beach, so we are informed.

The previously announced intention of the Home Mission Board to launch the publication of a distinctly Home Mission journal has materialized and the first number appeared under date of March, 1931, entitled "The Brethren Witness." It has an elaborately illustrated title page and is well supplied with cuts within the magazine. Brother R. Paul Miller, Secretary-Treasurer of the Home Board is the editor and Brethren H. F. Stuckman, President, and Freeman Ankrum, Vice President, are associate editors. The brethren are to be congratulated on the appearance of their new magazine, which entered upon its career at Berne, Indiana, where it is being printed.

The Elkhart, Indiana, church has recently enjoyed a very successful evangelistic campaign under the leadership of Dr. Charles A. Bame and Rev. W. I. Duker. It is scarcely a year since Brother Bame and this aggressive pastor and his people were joined together in a soul-winning campaign which was unusually successful and now God has rewarded their efforts again with a great pouring of his Spirit that resulted in sixty confessions and 100 consecrations. Besides the numerical strength added to the church, the influence of the church in the community was greatly enhanced. Step by step this splendid people under the leadership of its capable pastor is going forward to the accomplishment of greater things in the name and for the cause of Christ.

The Business Manager has a good deal to say in his "Close-up" this week. He has a good many things of interest to bring to your attention, and you should inform yourself by reading what he has to say. He has been pleasantly surprised at the results of the campaign for new Evangelist subscriptions, and though the numbers were not large, as he suggested, yet the effort has been well worth while. We have been gratified at the kind words and the energetic effort on the part of a goodly number. Many have been hindered from doing what they would liked to have done, but we are grateful for the goodwill even where little or no material aid could be given. We have a new church on the Evangelist Honor Roll of the Second church of Long Beach. We congratulate Brother Lienhard and his loyal people on their achievement and hope they will find the fellowship so pleasant and helpful that they will remain in the Evangelist family indefinitely. We also wish to express our gratitude to the goodly number who have remained on the Honor Roll through the years since it began. Such continued faithfulness means more than we can say to the Publishing House, and we dare say it has meant much to the churches also.

We are pleased to give our readers a view of the attractive new church dedicated November 30th, 1930, at Roanoke, Virginia. Brother H. E. Eppley is the aggressive pastor. Brother Eppley's comprehensive report is strongly supplemented by a report from Brother A. V. Kimmell, who officiated at the dedication and conducted the evangelistic campaign following. The new building in a new section of the city and is said to be well located. The change in location being made advisable by the change in the personnel of the community in which the old church was located. The new building is adequately and substantially built, and its attractiveness and accommodations will likely add much to the prestige of the Brethren church and to the people of that city. It represents much real sacrifice on the part of pastor and people and is a tribute to the wisdom and devotion of both. Possibly they have let their achievement solved the difficulty in the way of a strong Brethren work in Roanoke. Brother Kimmell's efficient service was greatly appreciated and the church was strengthened by the addition of nine new members and one reconsecrated to the cause. These were yet to be baptized at the time of the pastor's report. In addition to this new strength, the church was widely and favorably introduced into its new community by this campaign. It is to us that it is a very important victory that the Lord has won for the Roanoke Brethren, and merits widespread thanksgiving as a part of the brotherhood.

Dr. Edwin E. Jacobs, president of Ashland College, gives a stallment of College News this week and announces the next meeting of the College Board of Trustees for April 14, upon the call of the Board's president, Rev. G. T. Ronk, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. One of the most unique visitors the college has had some time was Dr. Haridas T. Muzumdar, who spent two days at Ashland under the auspices of the Sociological department. He spoke at the chapel hour, during class sessions, at literary club meetings and to the public in a downtown church. The main object of his effort was to interpret Gandhi, India's great leader, whom he had been associated. He pointed out that Gandhi was accomplishing more by his non-violent campaign against what he termed English injustice than could ever have been accomplished by means of war, and insisted that the world is destined to be freed from Gandhi the power of a great ideal. Two of the most significant things we heard him say about the great Indian religious and political leader were the following: "He (Gandhi) is the best example of one who lives in his own life what he believes to be true." "To Gandhi himself there is no enemy." If any man wants to consider himself my enemy, I cannot help that, but I regard no man as my enemy." It is surprising how much of the fortitude and Christian philosophy Gandhi has absorbed and knowing it.

The Brethren Church and the Message and Program of Christianity

By Freeman Ankrum

Synopsis of an address delivered at Mt. Olive, Virginia, June 1930, at the Conference of the South Eastern District).

The subject assigned me for discussion this afternoon has made me well aware of its immensity. The topic is one which may be approached from a number of angles. It is worthy of a better speaker, and also of more time than it is possible to give it at this period.

Much of last winter was spent in research among the records of Pennsylvania for Mack History. This history is closely connected with the history of our beloved fraternity. In this search I found that a message is not always accepted because it is needed. There can be no question of its need in the time of Alexander Mack, but instead of acceptance, oppression and loss of property was the result. He with his family and followers were forced to flee to America. His rich vineyards pleasantly located in the fertile valley and his mill became the unlawful property of those in power—confiscated without recourse. His message was accepted only in part and a very small part at that.

The world moves in cycles. Life is a cycle—birth—marriage—death. Over and over the same cycle repeats. It has been the same from the time that life was first given expression in the hearts of the world's people. We find that the world also moves in cycles, socially and religiously.

Our history has not been favorable to Tunkerism, or Separatism. Because the world could not put its own stamp upon them, they were called a peculiar people. The world also labels today as it pleases those who do not conform themselves with its desires and whims. The world of the past, and not so far back but that some living members, said of us, "They are well-intentioned but ignorant." The world also said that we were "rurally located and rurally minded." Nevertheless the Dunkards have been and are held up today as the highest type of citizenship to be found in any community where they are located in reasonable numbers.

Yet the fact remains that our message has not always been accepted. There may be reasons but time will not permit the discussing of them now.

As we proceed it might be well to insure keeping within the confines of our subject to ask the question, "What is the program of Modern Christianity?" One of the first things noted today, and that which seems to stand out most prominently, is organization. This is one of the major causes that led to the breaking down of the Independent Church World Movement. Organization in itself is not right, but it is not basic and to use it for a sub-structure is only inviting failure. Another thing which also stands out today as a very prominent part of the program of Modern Christianity is that of propaganda and publicity. Texts are twisted into freak subjects and all manner of things pertaining to the methods of the world are used in attempting to lure the people who may have a curiosity to darken the doors of the churches. One church, shocked at the lack of interest and at the falling pews, and with the falling off of the financial endowment, put on a publicity stunt or having girls jump out of airplanes. All this to invite attention to the church and to secure notoriety. So the press came forth with the lines declaring that in order to accomplish that which the church desired, the "Sky would rain girls." It may be well for this church to try the Gospel when other things have failed. One of the greatest Protestant churches according to its own figures lost last year 56,000 members and the church which resorted to "Planes" and "Girls" was a member of this denomination. They now plan to raise ten millions of dollars for mission work at home and abroad, hoping to make their losses good, but still depending upon man made plans. It is plain to be seen that the program of modern Christianity is one that compromises with worldly institutions. In order to do this the Word of God is emasculated to meet the whims of a fickle race. The aim is numbers and not conversions. "Unite with us and then work out your salvation later," is told the ones in attendance at so-called revival meetings.

If this be religion at all it is a religion that touches the surface, and not the heart working outward changing the whole man.

THE BRETHREN MESSAGE IS NOT THE MESSAGE OF MODERN CHRISTIANITY. It is not a message that changes and mutilates the Twenty Third Psalm, making out of this Psalm of beauty a mere mechanical collection of empty phrases. Our message is not the message that lines up with such movements as the modernistic church organizations, represented in part by the Fostick-Cadman crowd. The Brethren message is not the message that endorses the work of man but of God. Unfortunately there have been times in the past when its ring has not been true, but may that time be forever past. This message was stamped as peculiar when Alexander Mack first gave it to the world, peculiar in that it accepted the Bible for what it said. It must be peculiar in that respect today. Modern seminaries and churches of the same class are busy telling people that it reads one way and means something else, until we have the ceaseless tragedy of young people losing their religion in college and seminary. Few if any State controlled institutions of so-called higher learning are safe today for the young person who has not been grounded in the essentials of the Faith. How passing strange that in the realm of science the text means what it says; in literature; in language, but the Bible means something else. Personally I am through with them. I wasted eight years listening to and accepting their damnable mouthings, and from now on God's word is the first and final authority.

The Brethren message is the message for this age. It has always been fitting, though at times results did not seem to indicate it. Every suggestion the World has had to offer has been tried today. Each and every one has failed, and the World has through them reached the Ladocean stage. The end is near, the lengthening shadow of the anti-christ is looming up.

Read Brother J. H. Moore's article in the May 31 number of the "Gospel Messenger," on church statistics and doctrinal teaching. The Progressives are listed in Dr. Carroll's report of Statistics and churches as having 170 churches, 295 preachers and 27,847 members. The Church of the Brethren, or Conservatives, are listed as having 1,026 churches, 2,725 preachers and 134,620 members. The gains of the Progressives are given as 847 and the Conservatives as 869, the difference being 22 in favor of the Conservatives. Brother Moore asks "why the Progressives with a little less than 300 preachers should almost gain as many as the Conservatives with 2,700 preachers?" Perhaps part of the answer may be found in the distinctive plea. Preach the Whole Gospel, it is new to most people. I might also add that it is new to some preachers. A friend from another church in Oak Hill came to me complaining that his church did not teach the Bible, but taught discipline instead. Why not teach the Bible,—there will be nothing of more lasting interest. If we preach Christian ethics, others do the same, even some Catholics. We are then no different. If we preach Stewardship others can, and do do the same thing, and perhaps better than we. Should we accent Missions others do likewise. Therefore there is nothing outstanding and different to appeal to the laity or the one outside of the church. America's churches are empty and decadent because everything but the Word is preached. I recently attended a conference of a neighboring church in Oak Hill as a guest of the pastor. Between sessions there was such a flashing of Masonic emblems and talk of Blue Lodge that I thought I had got into the wrong crowd. In fact I had. My experience has been that nothing draws like the Word. Nothing satisfies like the Word and nothing fills like the Word. Who wants to know what man says today when man will change his word tomorrow? Those two aged messengers of the Cross, Brethren Moore and Sharp say that the reason for the Progressive gain is in the message.

I believe that the Brethren Church has been preserved for this very day. I am also convinced that it will stand higher in the next fifty years than it has ever stood before if the Lord tarries. Many churches have less, none have more to offer. A Brethren Church that is decadent is very likely so because of a decadent leader. In other words, one who is not true to the Word. Perhaps a weak-kneed, vacillating, pussy-footer, who fears to preach the Word, one who stands in the pulpit from Sunday to Sunday uttering childish and meaningless platitudes, fearing to come out upon the side of Christ in no unmistakable manner. There is no place in a Brethren pulpit for him. His room is better than his presence. We are often accused of driving able men out of the pulpit. Let me ask the question, "Able in what?" Oh! Able in Oratory, able in organization! Many have been and are my friends; I weep over the departure of none of them. They were with us but not one of us. Better ten whole Gospel, sincere, re-born preachers than a hundred such as the world asks for today. Compromising, ear-ticklers, salary-drawers! The Gideon elimination has meant much for the advancing of the Church.

"Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." That is the message of the Brethren Church and the program for Christianity.

Oak Hill, West Virginia.

Six Things that God Hates. Proverbs 6:16-19

By J. L. Gingrich

God loves mercy but hates iniquity, Mic. 6:8 and Jer. 44:4. God as our Father certainly must want his children to do well and walk circumspectly before men. How many of us must disappoint God.

I. The Proud Look. There is far too much pride in our churches. One thing sadly lacking is the deep sincere spirit of humility. It is a rather singular coincidence that the word Humanity and the word Mumus—dust—come from the same root term. Why some should feel so far removed from others is a question hard to answer. Many persons are too far removed from their God and one might add, from the God of nature. By nature we are selfish. Through God and the grace of Jesus Christ we become unselfish. We speak with our eyes more than, perhaps, we are ready to admit. We attract or deter win or lose. The eye denotes attention.

II. The Lying Tongue. A servant of God will not. The devil and his children always do. When one lies must always lie to get out of a lie which is impossible. A man has no legs, you must manufacture legs. The tongue, an unruly member, poisonous, and set on fire of hell is the smallest member but causeth the greatest amount of mischief. No man can tame this tongue of mischief. I thank God through Christ I can.

III. Hands that Shed Innocent Blood. The race has never escaped the curse of Cain. Our hands may be cleaner than we realize. Influence is far-reaching. Causes of the greatest killings or the most notable stories are often unknown to the world.

IV. Hearts Devising Wicked Imaginations. A man means to scheme by a combination of ideas. The heart is the most vital organ. It receives and pumps blood carries life. A Christian should be life producing. Imagination is a huge monster enthroned in every man. Frankness is the world's greatest blessing.

V. Feet Swift to Run into Mischief. Feet are designed to serve the body in locomotion. Tattle-tales are despised whether in school, church or anywhere. An important question for us to decide before telling about someone, is whether, even if true but bad, telling of it will benefit anyone. We are to "walk, stand, sit" not in the way of mischief to receive the blessing but must remember that his blessing is upon the whole whose "delight is in the law of the Lord."

VI. A False Witness. One who stretches and distorts the truth. One who refrains from telling all the truth handles the truth carelessly. To make a false statement about someone when that person is unable to defend himself is most cowardly. Discord when sown germs sprouts, grows and bears fruit.

"I said, I will take heed to my ways that I offend not with my tongue." It took nine years for one man to learn that one verse. Have you learned it yet?

Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

The Surrender of the Ideal

By H. H. Smith

If any one thinks a preacher has no temptations, let him read Dr. John A. Kern's book, "The Way of the Preacher." This preacher and teachers of preaching names five temptations that every preacher should guard against: vanity, indolence, formalism, untruthfulness (especially exaggeration and cant), and the surrender of the ideal. Of all the temptations named in this book, the surrender of the ideal is the most fatal to the success of the minister of the Gospel. When one loses his ideal, he has no rallying ground upon which to stand.

Here is the picture he draws of a preacher who surrenders his ideal: "Let me trace the outline of a typical common career. A young preacher enters upon his life with grand conceptions of its requirements and possibilities. He seeks not his own, but the things that Jesus Christ's." He is filled with enthusiasm for his work. To call men to repentance, to be intrusted with the Gospel of the Son of God, to be numbered with the noble company that in all ages have wrought in word and deed for the extension of the kingdom of heaven—his soul exults at the thought! He would not exchange his position with a prince. If he may but become fruitful in good work as a minister of the new covenant, his life's aspiration will be fulfilled; yet to be satisfied with anything less would be impossible.

By and by perhaps his work begins to appear more common-place than he once supposed that it ever could. Now that the novelty has worn off, the round of ministerial duties is rather monotonous. A glory has departed from his life. Men do not respond to his appeals as he expected. He cannot see much good resulting from his labors. Moreover, he begins to lose confidence in the ability of certain leading church members. Those who received him so kindly when he came to the charge, and whom he took to be pleasant examples of Christian character—this one will not pay his debts, that one is a chronic grumbler, another is a slave of ill temper. Some of the recently converted are beginning to show signs of indifference, and he cannot arouse them. He is even tempted to say in his haste that men are not worth the trouble he is taking for them.

Then earthly thoughts and affections begin to reassert their power. The preacher is concerned about personal comforts. He becomes mildly indignant that his life is so irregular and inadequate. He concludes that his people are not appreciative. Once his word was, 'I am for my congregation;' now he is inclined to add, not without emphasis, 'And my congregation for me.' Once it was, 'The kingdom of God,' 'the joy of doing good,' 'the worth of the soul;' now other voices may be heard mingling with these and threatening to put them to silence—'Parsonage,' 'Salary,' 'City church,' 'Good society,' 'Principles.' Alas! he is gravitating earthward—down from the apostolic plane, from Christian love and endeavor, from his grand and true ideal, down to the poor earth-level of mere respectability and official routine. He is beginning to satisfy himself with what is hardly good, instead of forever and untiringly seeking the perfect.

Better to die in the joy of our first love and labor for Christ than live to fall victim to such a temptation. But shall we abandon our ideal? Many have done so, but many others have walked in the guiding light of it even unto the end. It was so with Whitefield. Only a short time before his death, he wrote: 'Fain would I end my life by dying after those that have rambled away from Jesus Christ. . . . I do not regret being a poor, despised castaway, and now almost worn-out itinerant. I would do it again, if I had my choice.' "

What is more depressing than to see a preacher who has surrendered his ideal! What is more inspiring than to see a preacher who has been faithful to his ideal during the many passing years!
 Ashland, Virginia.

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

THE FAITH OF THE GOSPEL

Errors of Unbelievers

Unbelievers generally excuse their lack of study of the Bible by saying that if the devoted students of the book are not able to agree as to its teachings it is useless for them to try. This is a grievous error which leaves multitudes in spiritual death.

In the first place, it does not take into account the magnitude of the responsibility that such a situation places upon each one. Jesus said, "It is necessary that occasions of sense should come." Why? To prove and confirm the faithful. Self-exertion is the price of progress in the natural as well as in the natural world.

In the second place, to reject the Bible on account of contrary interpretations is to close the door to progress. The wheat goes on growing in spite of the tares. Science advances steadily in the bark of perseverance, rowing slowly over a sea of errors. Every conquest of truth must be made in spite of advocates of error. He who ceases to study on account of false teachers must remain in ignorance.

The Bible is like nature, which has bread for the hungry, mysteries for the children, glories for the artist and problems for the philosopher. Who quits eating because doctors differ as to the vitamins in the food? Who closes the window because he does not understand the mysteries of the sun? And why should we throw away the Bible because there are some things in it that we do not yet understand? Digging in its diamond fields will uncover more jewels than in any part of the world. Listening to its voice will reveal more truth than any classroom.

Let each one eat what for him is meat and leave the bones for mills to treat. In the Bible there is nothing without a purpose, but not all is for one person, and much less for beginners. When we go to a grocery we do not begin to chew on the first thing we see, but select the things that we need. Why should we not do the same with the Bible?

It is also an error to think that the Bible is so full of contradictions, or so changed by translations and interpolations that it is impossible to know what the original authors said. The variations in the different versions are almost all of slight importance. They do not prevent our knowing the great doctrines of salvation. Even the Catholic versions, though they differ among themselves, and from the Protestant versions, contain the fundamental doctrines. Taking the text alone one can read any version with confidence. The Bible of today is the Word of God as much as in times past. And for those who believe, it is ever "the power of God unto salvation" (1 Thess. 2:13; Rom. 1:16).

The limits of this book do not permit an extensive review of the proofs of the truth of the Bible, its object being rather to gather together its teachings and let them speak for themselves to those who are willing to hear. To such it brings its own credentials of authority.

First, the converted have the testimony of their own experience. They have proved the promises and found them true. They have followed the scientific method of experimentation and it has worked out. They have found him of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write, and he has given a new life. "Prove me" says the Lord in the Old Testament (Mal. 3:10). "Come and see" says Jesus in the New (Jn. 1:39). If any man will actually live as if the Bible were true he will soon have abundant proof that it is true.

Converts also have the testimony of their own awakened consciences. A healed person can appreciate the remedy that brought health. And a saved person can testify of the Savior, as no one not saved, however learned, can do. If for others the Bible is a book of fables, for the saved at least it is the word of God. It has led them into a life incomparably better than the life of sin.

The saved also have the testimony of the Holy Spirit, whose voice the unsaved do not know. When believers read the word of God the Spirit of God enables them to feel that what they read is true. They may not be able to explain all they read, but they find inspiration for holy living. "The Spirit himself bears witness that we are the children of God" (Rom. 8:16).

These living experiences give to the Bible an authority of its own, an intrinsic value that does not depend upon external proofs, such as the findings of archeology, the discoveries of science or a critical study of the text, although such proofs are abundant. Much of the unbelief of today comes, not from complete ignorance of the Bible, but from a critical rather than a devotional study. If the higher critics and modernists were more concerned about obeying God they would have less difficulty in believing his word.

Freedom of Interpretation

But there is a great church which admits the inspiration of the Scriptures while denying the right of private interpretation. The result is that interpretation is limited to a few and becomes only a substitution of church doctrine. The church takes the liberty to suppress, add to, and change doctrines, and substitutes the voice of fallible men for the voice of the Holy Spirit.

Peter says that "Holy men spake as they were inspired by the Holy Spirit." (2 Pet. 1:21). Is the Holy Spirit inferior to men that these must undertake to improve his work? Can he not express himself intelligently, that conceited men must put aside his words and give their own instead? Paul says of his doctrine, "I did not receive it or learn it of men but by revelation of Jesus Christ" (Gal. 1:12). This being true, it is for us to receive it as it was delivered and let the same Spirit who gave it help us to understand it. He will not fail to make us understand enough to love and obey the Lord and be saved.

Finality and Universality

The word of God has finality. It is not something which is incomplete without creeds and catechisms, visions and revelations of ecstatic persons, bulls of popes or decrees of councils. Paul says that he was called to fulfill, that is, complete the word of God (Col. 1:25), and again "Whoever preaches another Gospel than that ye have received, let him be anathema" (Gal. 1:9). Jesus condemns the substitution of traditions, saying, "Well do ye annul the word of God by your tradition" (Mark 7:9).

"All scripture is inspired of God and profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. 3:16). This being true there is no need of additions. The Gospel is the law of the church, not its plaything.

But if the word of God is final it is also universal. It is not for the church only. Its standard of conduct is universal. The spectroscope has revealed the fact that the remotest stars are composed of the same chemical elements as the sun and the earth and are therefore ruled by the same laws. But the Bible has long ago revealed that Jesus Christ is the example for life, not only in this world, but in all worlds (Eph. 1:20-23; Col. 1:16-20).

His law is universal law the same as gravitation. To deny his authority is not to escape it.

But since the Bible is the word of God, how great is the sin of despising it or impeding others from studying it! The Scriptures are, as Chrysostom said, "rich mines, unfailing fountains of the Spirit; mines which afford riches more precious than gold; fountains which yield more abundantly the more we drink from them."

It is a fountain of life, not of mere dogmas which cannot of themselves give life. The bottles to be sure, are important, but never so important as their contents. Creeds must never usurp the place of conscience nor must dogma take the place of life.

(To be continued)

A man can never know all of God until he knows all of his works and his ways. But a man is blind who cannot see God in the imperfect vision we have of him in the world about us.

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

WHY SEND MISSIONARIES TO INDIA OR ELSEWHERE

We still hear voices against sending missionaries to countries which have no gods but idols and no guiding principles but their own philosophies and superstitions. Such voices still need reminding. An incident recited by Mr. Brisbane is one argument.

"Strange news tells of a 7-year-old boy slaughtered in India as part of a practice by devotees of Black Magic.

"The child's body, having served its purpose, was thrown away as well.

"Such a gruesome incident is important, since a chain of such incidents is stronger than its weakest link.

"If that applies to our civilization, there are frightful links to be considered.

"At least one thousand million of human beings on earth are nothing and are cursed with frightful superstition."

Wherever the gospel goes it cleanses the land from superstition by genuine faith and delivers the people from fear and exalts the worth of human life. We must remember, and not be said too often, that ignorance cannot continue where the gospel is preached. Carry the gospel to any land and you bring light and healing. The Sun of Righteousness arises with healing in his wings. The heathen nations need the gospel for light and healing.—The Christian Evangelist.

DISTANCE FROM NEW YORK TO LOS ANGELES

There used to be a picturesque anecdote that a negro when asked by a stranger the distance between two towns replied: "Well, if you walk it is twenty miles; if you ride in your buggy it is ten; if you go by an express train you are there already."

As picturesque may be the answer to the question, how far is it from New York to Los Angeles? We cannot tell you in words but a newspaper correspondent tells it in a word picture. "One day Captain Frank M. Hawks arose in the morning, breakfasted, climbed into his airplane in New York City, and was in Los Angeles in time to see the sun set on the Pacific. It was a day's journey as the crow—or rather, the modern bird—flies."

Once it took months and months to make this trip. By stagecoach, cart, horse, pony express, overland railway train, a year, weeks, days—now it is fifteen hours. Life has been speeded up inconceivably. Man has created conditions so brilliant that he scarcely looks at them, and made life go so fast he wears himself out trying to keep up with it. His day is short. He lives it out in a flash. He goes hence. What will it all come to, O God? Nothing, or worse. We must strive as hard to know God and to go deeper into his life as we do to know his world. Then, indeed, we shall make discoveries and life will be worth living.—The Christian Evangelist.

A PASTOR'S CHOICE

It is not every week that we agree with The Christian Evangelist but this once at least we have a fellow-feeling. We quote:

"As minister of a great church, Dr. W. S. Abernethy (Episcopal) of Washington, D. C., said something to the editors of the Christian press in their annual meeting which rings right. Dr. Abernethy said if he had to choose between having an assistant pastor or a hundred more subscribers to one of the good church papers, he would choose the latter. He felt, to quote the report, that a hundred such readers (as distinguished from members) would mean five hundred more genuine understandings of the Church to the world, and women of genuine understanding of the Church to the world, of mankind, of enriched spiritual insight, of world vision and deep commitment to the purposes of God."—The Presbyterian.

HOW THE CHURCHES GIVE

The following figures are deduced from the report of the Stewardship Council for the year 1930:

"We discover that the contributions for denominational benevolence have fallen about $4,386,074. The total amount contributed to denominational benevolences outside of the budget of the churches has increased $585,803. A part of the falling off budget benevolences is probably apparent rather than real being counted for by the variation in the methods of reporting.

"The amount for local congregational expenses has decreased $586,895. The total contributions have therefore decreased $7,819.3. Certain contributions are included in the totals that do not appear in the items. Had there been a miscellaneous column, it would be obviated.

"The Lutheran contributions show the greatest variations. This because of a realignment of Lutheran synods in the reports. The total from the Lutherans thus reported is larger than the amount reported last year.

"The highest per capita gift for budget benevolence is made by the United Presbyterian, $10.03 and the second place is held by the Presbyterian Church in the United States, $8.61. The highest per capita for local church expenses is held by the Protestant Episcopal, $37.25. Twenty-five different church groups are represented in the report:

"Dr. Myers, the Secretary of the United Stewardship Council, says that there is no change from the preceding year sufficient to indicate any marked trend up or down. Eleven denominations show a gain and fourteen show a loss and these are about evenly divided between large and small denominations. A net gain of half a million dollars in gifts from living donors for denomination-missionary giving is good news."

DISCOVERIES IN UR VERIFY THE BOOK OF DANIEL

Startling discoveries by C. Leonard Wooley, director of a joint expedition of the University of Pennsylvania and the British Museum, which is excavating the ancient glories of Ur of the Chaldees, give definite confirmation to the Book of Daniel, according to Sir Charles Marston, archaeologist, who has financed many expeditions to old Biblical sites. He said that Mr. Wooley's discoveries showed the probability of the Book of Daniel having been written at the same time with the events recorded.

Mr. Wooley has discovered the palace of Princess Bel Shaltianna, and it is possible that this will lead to some interesting developments in our knowledge of Bible history," Sir Charles said. "His princess is believed to have been the sister of King Belshazzar of Babylon, whose great feast was interrupted by the writing on the wall. Their grandfather, Nebuchadnezzar, the conqueror of Jerusalem took the Jews captive back to Babylon. Archaeology has proved that this sack of the Holy City did take place and it is quite feasible that the captive Daniel may have seen Belshazzar's palace.

Many Biblical archaeologists have doubted the authenticity of the Book of Daniel but this discovery does much to confirm the historical accuracy of the story of King Belshazzar. Cuneiform writings of the sixth century B. C., inscribed on clay tablets nearly 200 years ago, have already been deciphered, giving clear-cut evidence of the reality of Belshazzar and remarkable confirmation of the subject matter of the fifth chapter of the Book of Daniel. I believe the fifth chapter of the Book of Daniel ranks next to cuneiform literature in accuracy, so far as outstanding events are concerned.

Those who have studied the Bible know that the Book of Daniel does not end with King Belshazzar's dramatic death, but records Daniel's subsequent life in the Medo-Persian period. There seems to be a good deal about when the Persian religious leader, Zoroaster, actually lived."—The Presbyterian.

AND SO COMES PROHIBITION

For, as someone pointed out the other day, in 1936 approximately sixty percent of American voters will have come of age since 1920. Memories being what they are, most of that sixty percent will recall little of saloon days. Prohibition education being what it is, a dangerous proportion of that sixty percent is likely to be against or dubious about the 18th Amendment. It's this that the wets are counting on. Keystone in the anti-prohibition arch is the Crusaders—militant organization of young wets. "We aren't concerned about the elders," say the wet propagandists. "The elders remember too well. But they won't last. Youth will. And every new crop of young voters will be a little easier, because a little farther removed from saloon days, to convert to our anti-prohibition cause." Far-seeing drys recognize the importance of this strategy. But not as yet have far-seeing drys launched any nationwide counter youth movement of like significance.—Christian Herald.

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Hebrews 13:7-9. The sun seems to vary widely in its light and heat from summer to winter, but the change is in the earth, not in the sun. The earth is nearer the sun in winter than in summer, and is then in a position to receive more of its light and heat, but it turns away at such an angle that it actually receives less, and the earth is cold. Much the same is it in our spiritual life. God does not change, but we turn away from him at times, and his power in our lives seems less, even when it should be greatest. May we not turn away from him, and deprive our own lives of the fullness of his power!

TUESDAY

Eph. 3:14-21. The stars are not tiny points of light, as they seem, but great blazing suns, most of them much larger than our own sun; the size of some of them is utterly beyond human comprehension. How like the love of God, who is able to do exceeding abundantly more than we ever be pure in heart and life!

WEDNESDAY

2. Thess. 1:1-12; 1 John 3:3. The stars are blazing with fire, which has ever been regarded as a symbol of purity and purification. As such, the ancients even worshipped fire as a symbol of God, himself. The different prophets and apostles have likened our God to a flame of fire. It is declared that he shall come again as a flaming fire, purging the earth from its present filthiness. It is also declared that he that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure. May we ever be pure in heart and life—

THURSDAY

Luke 12:13-21. Some of the stars that are barely visible to our eyes, even when aided by a fairly good telescope, are known to be far brighter than some of the "brightest" stars we see. The explanation is that those that seem so faint are very far away; those that seem so "bright" are comparatively close. So it is with spiritual things: the thing that is near, close at hand—our barns, our crops, our daily interests and pleasures—seem much "brighter" than the treasures in heaven, the things of God. Let us pray that we may realize the true values of life before it is too late!

FRIDAY

1 Pet. 1:3-9. As we think of the great suns his hand unfurled, all driving forward in their paths through the ages, we marvel at the power of him who made them and placed them there. But how much more marvelous to realize that the same power that formed these mighty stars and guides them from age to age is mine for the asking, is exercised daily in my behalf, and day by day keeps me safe from the power of sin and death. If God be for us, who can be against us?

SATURDAY

1 Cor. 6:15-20; 2 Cor. 13:5. A scientist recently remarked, cynically, that man was "nothing but a little star dust." In Genesis he might have read that God made man of the dust of the earth; the earth itself is nothing but a little left-over star material which God fashioned into an abode for man. Of star dust, then, he fashioned man, breathed into him his own breath, and man became a living soul. The dust of a star, which is the symbol of the living God, and the very Spirit of God within us—how noble is man's origin! How nobly we should live, and think, and work! How God-like should be our lives! If we would but let his Spirit have his way within, these things would be true in every life, the common property of all mankind. God hasten the day when it shall be so!

SUNDAY

Jer. 31:35-37. How dark and cheerless would our world seem if there were no stars! But even as we can scarcely conceive of the heavens without stars, so we can scarcely conceive of a universe without God. How explain the universe about us? Or worse yet, how could we live from day to day without the consciousness of his presence and of his power within us? Let us praise him for all that he has done for us, and for his eternally blessed promises for the future!

W. I. DUKER,
President
Goshen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

Seventh Day Adventism

The Result of a Predicament

By William Edward Biederwolf

(Continued from last week)

What Seventh Day Adventism Teaches

Let us now begin by inquiring what Christ is supposed to have done when he entered the Holy of holies in the heavenly sanctuary in 1844. He is supposed to have cleansed it, or rather to be cleansing it, and when he has finished, his second coming to earth will take place.

BUT HOW IS HE CLEANSING THE SANCTUARY?

He is investigating, they say, the sins of his people with a view to securing for them the pardon of God. When he has finished his investigation, he binds all the sins of his people on the Devil because he discovers the Devil to be the author of them, and these sins the Devil as a scapegoat bears away into oblivion where he will be annihilated, all of which is to take place at the second coming of Christ in the very near future.

The atonement therefore will only be finished when the Devil thus bears away the sins of God's people. Then occurs the resurrection of the righteous dead and the change "in the twinkling of an eye" of the righteous living, and those thus redeemed enter with Christ into the joys of heaven, while the wicked dead, on the other hand, are left sleeping in the grave and the wicked living are left with Satan on earth, then in a chaotic, desolate condition for one thousand years, at the end of which time the wicked dead are resurrected and with the wicked living are swept away with Satan into the oblivion of utter annihilation. Now until this culmination of God's plan of redemption, the souls of those who die, both of the good and the bad, are asleep in the grave.

The Seventh Day Adventists find most of this as well as other things, they say, in the proceedings of the day of atonement of the Old Testament, on which day, you will recall the high priest went into the Holy of holies, in which, of course and rightly, they will find the great type of Christ's entrance into the Holy of holies in the sanctuary of heaven.

But now inasmuch as we read in the Scriptures of the high priest that, "on the day of atonement he is the high priest only for those whose names are inscribed on the breast-plate of judgment," therefore, argue the Seventh Day Adventists, when Christ entered the heavenly sanctuary in 1844, the day of pardon was over and no more sinners could be saved. Says Mrs. White: "My accompanying angel bid me look for the travail of soul for sinners as used to be. I looked but could not see it FOR THE TIME OF THEIR SALVATION IS PASSED" (Present Truth, page 22, August, 1849).

Again, inasmuch as no work was to be done on the day of atonement (Leviticus 16), so many of the Seventh Day Adventists held that from the day of Christ's entrance into the Holy of holies in heaven, no more work was to be done and that to do any further work was to be guilty of sin. They expected, of course, the "cleansing of the sanctuary" to occupy only a brief time.

Once more, inasmuch as Christ has entered the inner heavenly sanctuary, we are now living in the last days, and finding by a certain species of interpretation that in the last days the Sabbath is to be resumed by Israel, they concluded that the law given on Sinai was never abrogated and that therefore we of today are as much obligated to keep the seventh or Sabbath day as were the Jews in the times of the Old Testament dispensation.

Mrs. White claims to have seen this heavenly sanctuary and its contents, and she says, "Two angels stood one at either end of the ark, with their wings spread over the mercy seat and their faces turned toward it." Jesus raised the cover of the ark and she beheld the tables of stone on which the Ten Commandments were written. She was amazed as she saw "the Fourth Commandment in the very center of the ten precepts with a soft halo of light encircling it."

Now you have the central teaching of Seventh Day Adventism and the strange doctrines gathered about it.

The Teaching Summarized

1. It teaches that Christ entered into the Holy of holies in the heavenly sanctuary in 1844, to make an investigation of the sins of his people, with the purpose of completing his atonement for them and so securing for them the pardon of God.

2. It taught that the door of mercy was then closed to all who at that time were unsaved.

3. It taught that it was a sin to do any work after that time.

4. It teaches that Satan is to be made the scapegoat to bear away the sins of God's people.

5. It teaches that the souls of the dead sleep in the grave until the day of the resurrection and the judgment.

6. It teaches that the wicked are to be finally annihilated.

7. It teaches that the seventh day of the week is to be observed as the Sabbath and not the first day.

Let us now examine these statements one by one.

The Heavenly Sanctuary

1. CHRIST ENTERED THE HOLY OF HOLIES IN THE HEAVENLY SANCTUARY in 1844. Let us see if he did.

They are wrong, both as to TIME and PLACE, as well as PROGRAM.

1. In the first place, Miller was all wrong in his chronological calculation.

(a) The date from which the time is to be reckoned until the sanctuary is to be cleansed clearly begins with the desecration of the sanctuary and the cessation of the daily sacrifice (Daniel 8:13), WHICH IS STILL IN THE FUTURE. But Miller reckoned the starting point to be the "seventy weeks of years," mentioned in the next chapter (Daniel 9) as beginning "from the going forth of the command to restore and rebuild Jerusalem." even this starting point he fails to provide. That "command" is without doubt whatever the decree of Artaxerxes given in the twentieth year of his reign (Nehemiah 2), that is 445 B. C., by the unanimous testimony of all ancient historians. But Miller took as the starting point the letter of Artaxerxes, mentioned in Daniel 7:11, which was given in the seventh year of his reign, namely, 457 B. C. to Ezra, which was no decree at all, but which course subtracted from 2300 leaves 1843. But having taken the wrong starting point in either case, his concluding date of 1844 would of course have been an altogether wrong one, even if he had been on the right track.

(b) Miller thought the "2300 days" of Daniel 8:14 meant 2300 years. Sometimes the word "day" does mean "year," but it is one of the places where, if he had known Hebrew, he would have known that it does not mean "year," but an "evening-morning" day as the Hebrew puts it, or a regular day of twenty-four hours, and the 2300 years consequently mean a period of about 2300 years; and once more, therefore, even if the starting point were right, his date of 1844 would be all wrong.

2. In the second place, shifting the starting point to heaven is entirely without warrant. They quote Hebrews 8:1, in support of their theory. "We have such an High Priest who is set down on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heaven, minister of the Sanctuary and of the tabernacle which the Lord pitched and set up; man." But this very passage, as we have seen, utterly contradicts their theory.

(a) Leviticus 16:2, Numbers 7:89, 1 Kings 4:4, and 2 Kings 19:5 show that "the throne of the Majesty," the dwelling place of God, is upon "the mercy seat" of the ark between the cherubim, which is "within the veil" of the Holy of holies. And Hebrews 8:1 says distinctly that Christ "is set down" ("sat down") on "the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens." Now this verse was written A. D. 64, and Christ had not, therefore, according to this verse, entered into the Holy of holies in the heavenly sanctuary in 1844. It makes it plain that the Lord Jesus entered into the heavenly sanctuary, into the Holy of holies, at the "right hand of the throne of the Majesty," when he ascended into glory 2000 years ago.

(b) Again, Exodus 26:33 tells us plainly that the Holy of holies was "within the veil," and Hebrews 6:19, 20, says "Within the veil the forerunner is ever before us entered, even Jesus made an High Priest forever." Christ, therefore, entered the sanctuary "within the veil" at the time of his ascension and not in 1844. There is absolutely not one grain of evidence that the veil separated the Holy Place from the Holy of holies, as Mrs. White contends. It separated the Holy Place from the Holy of holies.

(c). Again, Hebrews 9:24 shows that Christ at his ascension went into the Holy of holies; and Hebrews 10:19-22 shows that the Holy of holies has been and is being opened for us, "By a new and living which he hath consecrated for us THROUGH THE VEIL, that is to say, his flesh."

a. In the third place it is fundamentally wrong to connect the "cleansing of the sanctuary," spoken of in Daniel 8:14, with the work of the high priest either in the earthly sanctuary or in its antitype, the heavenly sanctuary.

b) First, because while the word "sanctuary," in Daniel 8:14, may be used of the entire tabernacle, the entire sanctuary or the Holy place alone, it cannot be used never is used of the Holy of holies alone.

b) Second, because the word translated "cleansed," in Daniel 8:14, strictly speaking means "put right," "set in order," and does not refer to a sanctifying and cleansing effected on sacrifice at all, but it refers to the act of taking possession of that which has already been purchased by sacrifice.

(To be continued)

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for March 8)

The Good Samaritan

Scripture Lesson—Luke 10:25-37.

Devotional Reading—Matt. 5:38-48.

Golden Text—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Lev. 19:18.

Introductory Note

This parable, preserved only by Luke, is an answer to the lawyer's second question, vs. 25, 29. It was probably delivered on the road from Jerusalem to Jericho, the scene described. Acts of violence common on this highway, known in Jerome's time as the "red or bloody way". Though the scribe put almost the same question as the young ruler, Mt. 19:16, he asked it in a very different spirit: ruler anxious, scribe satisfied and simply curious. The Jew used strictly the term "neighbor"; applied it only to one of his own nation. On the parable Christ struck out all limits. He, like the sun, shines wherever it can; there is nothing hid from the heat thereof. Ps. 19:6. An answer startlingly new to the scribe; but thank God, happily familiar to us!—Palmer.

A Three-fold Philosophy

Editor Charles R. Brown sees in the parable of the Good Samaritan a three-fold philosophy of life. The philosophy of the lawyer was, "What's yours is mine; I'll take it." The philosophy of the priest and Levite was, "What's mine is my own; I'll keep it." The philosophy of the Good Samaritan was, "What's mine is ours; we'll share it." Someone has remarked that while the Samaritan flew to the relief of a man in distress, the priest and Levite made a survey."

The Lesson Illustrated

The Rev. Frank E. Higgins, doing missionary work in logging camps in Canada, related among other things, to the Record Christian Work in 1910, the following: "I began this pioneering work, I was told that a certain depraved Frenchman had said that he would 'thrash that Pilot' the time he put in an appearance where he was. Some months later I came to the place where this man was. The proprietor always encouraged my work, but on account of this man who seemed bound to trouble, he told me I had better not try to hold meetings in his camp. At first I thought of moving on to avoid trouble, but on second thought I said: "This is the first camp on this line and word has gone all along what is going to happen. If I pass by, the men will say I am a coward, and if there is one thing more than another that a lumberjack despises, it is a coward." So explaining this to the proprietor, I said I would go and hold a meeting, it would be better to take a thrashing than to be called a coward. I went to the bunk house to announce my presence and ask the men what time we would commence our meeting. Some one called out at 8 o'clock. At that hour I took my hymn books and Bible and started for the camp. I had never seen my man, but I knew him as I was giving out the hymn books. No sooner had I given out the first hymn, than he came up to the old board table and flung the book down before me. I paid no attention to this. Then he picked it up and threw it down again. He stood on the opposite side of the table. We stared at each other. You could have heard a pin drop, as all the men felt sure a row would start. I called out, "Men, let us sing, 'At the Cross,' and let us sing it as we have never done before." He turned and kicked over a bench; then went to the water barrel, took a cup of water, drank part of it and flung the rest of the water across the camp. Then he climbed up into his top-bunk and tried to talk to his bunk partner, the partner doing his best to keep him quiet. After we got through singing, I offered prayer, read the Scripture and gave a short gospel talk. Then I said: "I am feeling tired tonight, men. I have had a long tramp through the forest today. Some of you please gather up the books and bring them to the office." I knew better than to hang around after the meeting was over. The next day I was on the works. The Frenchman's language was something terrible.

Some of the men hung their heads for shame. Others said: "Don't pay any attention to that man, Pilot, he is just crazy." I replied, "Never mind, boys, he is simply giving the preacher a benefit." (Compare Jesus' words in Lu. 6:22, 23, 26.) But when I left that camp, many of the men said, "That preacher is no coward." And whenever I heard that wicked man spoken of I said kind words about him, for I knew everything would be carried back to him. It is wonderful how God leads us! I dreaded going back to that camp on my next round. On Sunday evening, after holding three meetings during the day, I drove into Teasdale, a small town, and put my dog team in the barn.

Everything was wide open and many men from the surrounding camps had been drinking and gambling all day. I went to look at my dogs before lying down for the night. On going to the barn I passed an ice house. Several cakes of ice were out in front of it. It was between 10 and 11 o'clock, and about 20 degrees below zero. Lying among the cakes of ice was the form of a man. Of course I thought he was frozen to death. I rushed back to the saloon for help. The first man I met was the one I least expected,—that old Joe the Frenchman. He had his lantern over his arm starting for camp, after a day of debauchery. I asked him to come with me, which he did; we pulled our man out of the ice-pile and took him into the saloon. I laid him on my fur coat on the sawdust floor. He was still alive, and after some rubbing came to his senses. I told the saloon keeper to take care of him, and not to hurry him out to the woods, he had had a close call and that I would stand all expenses. The saloon was filled with men; many of them were already laid out, some on the floor, others in the snake room (delirium tremens!) In one corner of the room the roulette wheel was being played, over further the poker table, and near by the faro table. The counter was lined with men; in fact, the place was a living hell. Old Joe had seated himself on a corner of the bar. There he sat, looking at the old man while I was working over him, but not saying a word.

A few days later I was again in the camp where I dreaded to go. You can imagine my surprise to find old Joe one of my best

(Continued on page 15)

E. M. RIDGLE, President Warsaw, Indiana	 CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK	GLADYS M. SPICK, General Secretary and Treasurer
F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	C. O. WHITMER, 217 E. DuBall Ave., South Bend, Ind.	2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio

Christian Endeavor at Fort Wayne, Indiana

Dear Crusaders With Christ:

No doubt you will be interested to hear of and to know a little about our new Christian Endeavor Society that has recently been organized. It was organized on December 12, 1930, with a membership of 17. We are happy to tell you that our society has grown a little and that we now have a membership of twenty-two active members and six honorary members. To Christ be the glory.

We have a very wide-awake crowd of young people here, and they hope to cooperate with our own Brethren organization as well as with the International work.

On the first Thursday night of each month we are planning to go to the Rescue Mission in a group and render our service there. Rev. Adams will preach for them, and the Christian Endeavorers will take care of the rest of the program, including the supplying of special musical numbers.

We also hope to help the work at Krypton, Kentucky, with our prayers and pledge.

Will you, Endeavorers, pray that we may be faithful in all things, and that our society may grow spiritually? Surely with Christ we can not fail, for with him all things are possible. If opportunities do not present themselves, may we seek them out and be ready to do all that we find to do. For "love never asks how much must I do, but how much can I do?"

May each Endeavorer do all and give all that others may come to know Christ is our prayer.

Yours in "His" service,
MRS. S. ADAMS,
Corresponding Secretary,
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Fifty Years of Christian Endeavor

High Points in the Society's Progress

(Editorial Note—Please note that our series of historical sketches this week continues from the installment published two weeks ago, which installment was published out of its order. We are sorry for this error, and hope you have gotten the years in their proper order in your scrap book.)

1924

In the death of Colonel Edward H. Haskell, of Boston, Christian Endeavor lost a valuable friend. A bequest of $5,000 for the work of the World's Union perpetuates his memory.

The field-secretaries of Christian Endeavor justified the use of the term "international" by holding their annual meeting in Toronto, Canada, with great success.

Christian Endeavor Week was featured by a widespread use of broadcasting the anniversary message over many radio stations.

The Pennsylvania Christian Endeavor convention in Pittsburgh, provided the largest registration ever attained in a State meeting, 12,254 (Junior, 1,086; Intermediate, 1,076; Senior, 10,092).

Clarence C. Hamilton succeeded Alvin J. Shartle as publication manager of the United Society of Christian Endeavor. Mr. Shartle, in addition to his duties as treasurer, assumed the title and work of field secretary.

1925

The China Christian Endeavor Union celebrated the fortieth anniversary of the introduction of Christian Endeavor into China by many meetings and great activities.

As a forward step the Baltic States Christian Endeavor Union was formed, composed of Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Finland, and Poland.

The thirtieth International Convention at Portland, Oregon, in July marked the retirement from active service of Dr. Francis E. Clark as president of the United Society, and the accession of Dr. Daniel A. Poling as the new president. The unique scene at the convention when the older man laid his mantle on the younger, with the most happy expressions of approval on the part of each and from all the witnesses, was an event never to be forgotten. Dr. Clark retained his duties as president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, and became president emeritus of the United Society of Christian Endeavor.

One practical outgrowth of the Portland Convention was the Francis E. Clark Recognition Fund, establishing a principal sum of $100,000 to provide an income for Dr. and Mrs. Clark while they live, and later to remain as an endowment for Christian Endeavor.

The beginning of one of Christian Endeavor's greatest ministries was noted in the establishment of the Young People's Radio Conference in the Marble Collegiate church, New York, N. Y., Dr. Daniel A. Poling being the broadcaster. One of its features was a question period for helping to solve youth's problems. The opening session was on December 6.

Twenty-nine field secretaries, young people's denominational leaders, and officers of the United Society of Christian Endeavor mingled for five days in conference and fellowship in the Boston headquarters early in December. A feature was a trip to Portland, Maine, and Williston church, the birthplace of Christian Endeavor.

(To be continued)

tism now. We are now busy getting everything in readiness for our evangelistic ratings which we expect to hold March 2 to April 5. The church has called Mr. Mrs. H. E. Richer to have charge of the music again this year, with the pastor doing the preaching. We are planning, and praying, and expecting a good meeting because we are simply depending upon the Lord for results. We are asking the entire brotherhood to remember us at the Throne of Grace.

This church had the privilege of having one of their much beloved former pastors preach for them on January 11th. I went to Dr. Beachler. A full house greeted him both morning and evening. Rev. E. F. Byers filled the pulpit the other two days the pastor was away.

S. M. WHETSTONE

FORT SCOTT, KANSAS

The work here is making some advancement and it seems time to report to the brotherhood through our excellent clasp paper. Our work is growing despite the hard times, which the old-timers say are the hardest they ever witnessed in this community.

Unemployment is greater than I ever knew here and money is scarce and hard to get, by honest means, and that is the only way our people want it.

Since my last report I have received eight into the church by baptism and we have three awaiting baptism and several others much interested. Attendance has increased at all services and especially at the Sunday evening service. We have organized a Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor and it is going forward very nicely.

One of our new members, Miss Nina Bremer, is president and there are about fifteen members and they are taking hold of the work very earnestly. The church school, under the leadership of Thurman Orr, is also increasing and new classes have been started. The W. M. S. is holding its regular meetings and taking the Missionary course also. We are looking forward to the coming of Brother R. Paul Miller, field secretary of the Missionary Board of the Brethren church, for a campaign beginning March 18th and to extend to Easter. We are having cottage prayer meetings, making special announcements and preaching special sermons, looking to our campaign.

We earnestly ask the prayers of the brotherhood in behalf of our special evangelists.

L. G. WOOD

WARSAW, INDIANA

The revival meeting of the Warsaw Brethren church held in January began with a homecoming or reception day in honor of Dr. Yoder. This was one of the most inspiring days that the Warsaw church has experienced in recent years. Dr. Yoder, former pastor, drew large crowds for the three services of the day and, at noon, a dinner was served at the church the old friends might have a chance to spend a social hour with him.

The wonderful spirit of this day, rather than diminishing grew in strength during the two weeks of evangelistic service led by the pastor, Rev. E. M. Riddle, with the choir director, Mr. Albert Hartman in charge of the music. This was the time during the four years with the Warsaw church that the pastor had served as evangelist at the request of his church the audiences were larger than the church

THE DAYTON MEETING

One of the real joys of my ministry was the privilege of helping Brother R. D. Barnard and his splendid lot of Brethren in a two weeks' meeting at Dayton. Brother Barnard hails from my home church at Flora, and of course we were right together from the very first service. Some years ago, while the writer was the superintendent of the Flora Sunday school, Russell, as we all called him, was secretary. We worked together in the finest spirit then, and were happy to discover that the years has not made much change on either of us. Our aims, ideals and methods, are just about identical yet. In fact we were often asked what relation we were, and some went so far as to say we looked like brothers. (We have both agreed to accept the compliment). Well, to say the least, we had a very fine time together in our Lord's service.

The Dayton church is a wonderful group of Brethren, and they supported the meeting in a very fine way. During the entire two weeks there was not a single 'off' night. The attendance and interest grew from the very first service; as we had the largest crowd on the closing night and had seven confessions on the closing day. Delegations from New Lebanon, West Alexandria, Clayton and Pleasant Hill came a number of times. There is a mighty fine spirit of co-operation among the churches in the Miami Valley, and there will likely be some new churches spring from it. The church is certainly backing their pastor to the limit. Everybody speaks of him in the very highest terms. Both Brother and Sister Barnard are untiring workers in that large field, and the results are beginning to tell. It could not be otherwise, for with a hard working pastor and a congregation backing him as Dayton is doing, something is sure to happen.

Mrs. Whetstone and the writer enjoyed the hospitality and fellowship of the Barnards, as we had our home with them during the two weeks. May the good Lord of us all abundantly bless both people and pastor.

Waterloo, Iowa

Everything continues to move forward in the Waterloo church, and we find every department of the work steadily growing. Since our last report we have received five into the church and three are awaiting bapknown for years. One cannot measure the great blessing that came to the church from the surrounding community and five members were added to the church.

In addition to the evening services several afternoon services were held in the church of shut-ins and this splendid work is continued.

A special feature of the meeting which was greatly enjoyed by all was a song service given by the men's chorus of the Naperville Brethren church under the direction of Mr. B. F. Owen. Brother Owen is to be commended upon having such a fine organization within his church and we would be glad to have them come again. Mr. J. W. Don Cochran of Winona also contributed much to one evening's service with their inspiring, spiritual singing.

The church deeply appreciated the service rendered and prays that God will continue to bless him in his ministry.

JOYCE KANAUR-SAYLOR.

ROANOKE, VIRGINIA

There are those who are wondering why there has been no news from Roanoke or why it is delayed. No excuses will be offered. Several reasons could be given, but our hope is that the following may be of some help and to the glory of the Lord.

History

The first Brethren church of Roanoke was organized a good many years ago. Then it has had a rather checkered history.

The road has not always been smooth. There have been "ups-and-downs." They have owned several houses of which they have never owned one built especially for their own use. They have buildings left by others who moved to larger and better quarters.

Why Move?

The move was from the northwest to the west section of the city. Just why? Several reasons may be cited. One being the fact the old building has seen its day and is out of date and in such condition as to be almost unsafe and certainly uncomfortable. During the winter months it could not be made comfortable for the services. Another reason which can only be fully appreciated by those who are familiar with the city here is the fact that the colored people of the city was moving toward the city in two directions—from the north and from the east. This meant move or violence or strangulation, according to the situation.

New Location

Much can be added to what Brother Kimmell has written on this item. It might be said that a section was sought where a church was needed and one with a promise of future. The closest church to the chosen location is nearly a mile away. Real estate is free to say it is the most ideal location in the city for a church.

Church Building

The new building faces the east, standing in the northwest corner of two streets. The exterior is dark red brick with light mortar. The windows are art glass of modest design. The interior wood finish is red gum in natural color. The main entrance is in the southeast corner and the organ room are back of the pulpit, the steeple being just high enough to be seen from all parts of the auditorium and with plate glass front to allow a view of the service. Just off the pulpit is a general purpose room and the pastor's study. A system of folding doors makes this room available for dressing rooms, class rooms, committee room, prayer meeting room, choir room, etc. It is equipped with a separate heating plant. In the basement is a large assembly room, five class rooms, kitchen, and rest room. There is a balcony on the east side of the auditorium. Off one end of the balcony is a rest room and off the other three class rooms and access to the organ room. The building is heated with steam and furnished with plain but beautiful light fixtures and an electric clock donated by the company furnishing the light fixtures. It is a tremendous improvement over the old place of worship.

Parsonage

The parsonage stands just west of the church on the same lot with space between

REV. H. E. EPPLEY,

Pastor First Brethren Church
Roanoke, Virginia

the two buildings sufficient for enlarging the church in the future and with a drive on the west side of the house. It is English type, seven rooms with wash room on first floor and complete bath on the second and made comfortable by a hot water heating system. It is very attractive, convenient and comfortable.

Dedication

The church was dedicated November 30, 1930. Brother A. V. Kimmell of Philadelphia was in charge. The morning service was of devotional character with an appeal for funds. No high pressure methods were used and the results were gratifying indeed. In the afternoon the house was set apart for worship in a beautiful dedicatory service. Mrs. Ruth Rhodeheaver Thomas was present and sang. Between the morning and afternoon services free dinner was served to all who remained.

Revival

The service in the evening marked the beginning of a three-weeks' campaign. The attendance throughout was good. The messages of Brother Kimmell were powerful in their appeal and were delivered in a masterful manner. His Bible studies were very instructive and his stay among us will not soon be forgotten while the good accomplished can only be fully known by the Lord above. The results as we are able to count are six baptized and received into the church, 1 awaiting baptism, 2 by relation,

1 re-consecration, and 1 uniting with another church. This does not count the great number of reconsecrations at the morning service of the second Sunday. Since the meeting closed one has made confession and a husband and wife have come to us by relation. No one can say how much the meeting did to establish the church in the new community but we feel much was accomplished. In every way the meeting was a success.

Kimmell

A personal word about the evangelist. It was our first time to work together in a meeting. Brother Kimmell knows how to make himself at home where he is being entertained. He does not shun to do his whole duty as he knows it, he is a thorough Bible student, a powerful preacher of the word, and a man who believes in living what he preaches. Come again, Brother Kimmell.

Appreciation

The First church of Philadelphia should not be forgotten and deserves mention. It meant much for them to sacrifice their new pastor for this dedication and meeting. In this feeble manner we desire to express our appreciation of their goodness and generosity. Only the record books of heaven will reveal the eternal glory which they have gained by helping Roanoke in an hour of need. Thank you, Philadelphia.

Request

Will those who are interested in seeing a strong Brethren church in the city of Roanoke pray that it members may keep humble, expect large things of the Lord, work with all their strength, and stand firm for the whole gospel truth.

H. E. EPPLEY, Pastor,
105 Otterview Ave., S. W.

REVIVAL AT ROANOKE, VIRGINIA

For the first time it was the privilege of the writer to hold a meeting in Virginia. Former invitations could not be accepted but the invitation of Brother Eppley to help in the dedication of the new church at Roanoke and to hold a meeting following gave the church at Philadelphia an opportunity to help one of the smaller churches, so they readily gave their consent for the pastor to be absent the four Sundays. Brother Eppley met us at the station on Saturday and took us right into his home, the new parsonage, and with the help of Mrs. Eppley by Sunday morning we were so much at home that we could forget that we were among strangers and were able to take up the first service with the thought of presenting Jesus Christ as Lord and showing men the need of salvation. This is one church that was dedicated on the day announced several months before, but there were several last minute things that had to be done so every one was busy until the hour of Sunday school Sunday morning.

The First Brethren church of Roanoke is in a very fine section of a beautiful city. For beauty of location and visibility from all directions a better place would be hard to find. It is a church located on a hill and it cannot be hid. The building overlooks the streets which it faces and a small city park which drops abruptly to the river below and it can be seen for many squares from the opposite bank of the river which is the older part of the city. Back of the church and on two sides there are splendid houses occupied by a good class of people and there are still many vacant lots which will soon be used, for this is a new and growing part of the city. In brief, we will say that the church made no mistake in changing its location. In fact it appears to have been the salvation of the congregation itself

The members who were faithful to the old church quickly tell you that this new church is all in answer to prayer and they have not fully realized how it is possible for a small congregation with limited means, during times that in that section are more than hard, to put up a building like the Lord has given them. Real sacrifice had been made and is still being made by many of the members. Several Brethren who saw no future for the church in the old location are now attending services and have identified themselves with the work while others are expecting to do so later. The people of the community received the new church gladly. They came out to the meetings. They are sending their children to the Sunday school. They gave in the offerings. They have promised to bring others to the services. With the exception of two or three stormy nights the attendance was good all through the revival and the interest seemed to grow deeper at every service.

We will leave the description of the buildings to the pastor. He deserves the honor of telling about them. For few pastors and their wives would make the sacrifice which is being made by Brother and Sister Eppley in making it possible to put this church where it is having a real chance for once in its existence. The church and the personage make a splendid appearance, are well built and adequate for the needs both present and future.

The people gave us a royal welcome and the fellowship grew every day we were there. They are a fine group to show appreciation and in one way and another let you know how much good the meetings were doing them individually and every confession was made in such an open straightforward manner that one could tell it was the work of the Spirit and not the efforts of men. We also had a wonderful time of fellowship with Brother Eppley. He is a good fellow to work with. Having had a wide experience with evangelists and as an evangelistic song leader he knows how things ought to be done. He led the singing for the meeting and arranged for a number of very fine special numbers every week. It was a real joy to be in their home for Brother and Sister Eppley certainly know how to take care of a visiting preacher. Mrs. Brumbaugh, a faithful member of the church, also had a part in keeping the evangelist well fed and some think, judging by size of course, that is quite a task.

The Brethren of Roanoke and their friends love the Word. We just gave them all we could crowd in, two services a day and often three meetings a day counting shop meetings and the Sunday afternoon meetings. One of the most encouraging signs was to see the Men's Bible class taught by the pastor more than double its numbers in three weeks. With a group of men like that no telling how far the church can go. In fact, many times there were as many or more men in the audience than women and when the pastor gets those men to working you will hear good reports from that church. There are other things we would like to say but this letter is getting too long. May the blessing from above rest abundantly upon this church and her pastor, is my desire.

A. V. KIMMELL,

2259 N. 10th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

Dr. Bell and the writer were in Dayton over Sunday in the interests of the College. The work there under the able leadership of Brother Barnard is making good progress.

Dr. Muzumdar, (Ph.D., University of Wisconsin) a native of India, was here recently and spoke very ably upon the conditions in that far off land. He accompanied Gandhi on his trip to the sea and was, therefore, in position to give first hand information upon what is generally called the non-violent rebellion.

I want to recognize in this remote way the appreciation we feel here at the College for the information-giving letters from Mr. and Mrs. Tabor in France.

Mr. George Ronk, president of the Board of Trustees, has definitely authorized a call for the Board meeting, Tuesday, April 14th.

Recently Mt. Union College defeated Ashland by a small score. Last week Ashland defeated Marietta College 32 to 36. It may be of interest to know that according to the Cleveland Plain Dealer, we have the high scorer in Ohio college basketball, Mr. Reuben Wike, from Pennsylvania.

With the very generous gift of the national organization of the Sisterhood of Martha and Mary, we were enabled to lay hard wood floor in the reception room and part of the front hall in the Girls' Dormitory.

Many improvements and changes are being made here that, while important, would be of small interest to the readers of this paper. An enrollment of 312 for the College work and more than 60 on Saturday and preparations for more than 300 this coming summer, make big demands upon our equipment and resources. Only careful administration and efficient organization make possible the high grade of work which we do. A school like this has many, many interests other than those of the class room.

In closing, I hope that those churches which have been asked to take our glee clubs may find it possible to respond as generously this year as they have in the past. Next year we may have different plans for this part of our work. It is getting rather burdensome to keep two clubs going.

EDWIN E. JACOBS.

TRAVEL FLASHES

I have just returned from one of the most interesting and helpful journeys of a great number. It was so full of the unexpected and the amazing that one can not refrain from giving it to as many as will read. It was the regular time for a vacation from my editorial duties—well, as much as one can get a vacation from such duties. I presume an exacting and responsible task is never entirely "vacated" from an editor's mind. Now I am back at the desk and trying to tell about it.

Elkhart, Indiana

February one year ago, I returned for the second offensive against the devil and his hosts in this city. Just ten years before, I had been with these good Christian workers and the amazing that one can not refrain from Bryan Stoffer. The Lord helped us mightily each time. Last year, which was still fresh in memory, in two short weeks more than 65 made the good confession and that victory was characterized by the many married couples that came together. It was hardly to be expected according to the customary ways of thinking, that such a meeting could happen the year following. Indeed, I found no one who expected it. The pastor, Brother W. I. Duk said last Sunday morning, that their prayer list numbered just fourteen when the meeting began. With this feeling in mind went with a few sermons, in the line of fundamentals, discussing for the first time the topics, "Knowing God"; "Immortality"; "Inspiration of the Bible"; "Deity Christ"; "The Devil," with the idea "confirming the saints" who had come from many different social and religious backgrounds, one year ago. But the Lord seemed to have a lesson for us and to the last, vice, he was doing more than we could "or think," eighteen confessions being received the last day among whom were several married couples. I felt all the time that the Lord was working as has been written, "and none can hinder," and still believe. The crowds were larger, interest better, the task easier than a year before. This and other things lead to a conviction which I wish to voice.

"Now is the Time"

I believe that every Brethren and church ought to take advantage of the sobering influences of the times through which we are passing and put on a revival of the largest possible proportions just now! I believe that preachers and especially evangelists, ought to do what I did in this meeting, take a loss financially, compared with years, for the sake of the responsive believing that seems in the hearts of men, if not staggered, then at least sobered by the strangeness of the events that make the best thinkers and prophets.

Get Going

For once, I wish I were a bishop or other high authority with the power to speak loud about the present concerning the opportunity for Brethren peoples to take an advance in evangelism the remainder of this year.

Watch Indiana"

One of the prominent pastors of Indiana told me that Indiana would show us decided advance in the membership in 1931 this year because harvests were being reaped which were unusually large, and Indiana is rated in its population as the most thickly settled state of the union. This ought to argue the same encouragement from all the states. I trust it will be so.

We Did

A feature of this meeting was the work done by the converts of a year ago. I pointed out to them in the first meeting that this was their opportunity, since the older members had been bringing their friends for many meetings and this seemed to be the keynote of our success. It was an almost heavenly sight on the last day of this meeting, to see people who had come out of the Roman Catholic and other churches just one year ago, lead their friends to the altar this year. The choir numbering from thirty to forty, failed us and the group singing led by the pastor was an inspiration.

Watch Elkhart

Here the brotherhood may see arising the future strongest churches. Pastors Miller, Garber, Wolford, Stoffer, Kimmel and others whom I do not know, may share the joy of the harvests of the ripening years. Duker is the "Duker" now. From behind the scenes, he is one of the busiest working forces to liquidate their debt and at the same time to ward in great conquests for the

ard. This is his first year of full-time and that may be one of the reasons for the success of this work. The sacrifice and the devotion to their cause by him and his faithful wife whose labors beyond the average in many ways, are "openly rewarded."

home was with them and we had a time together, though it kept a sobered preacher busy guessing the meaning of his jokes, puns and stories. With me "praise the name of Jehovah your God, that hath dealt wondrously with me and my people shall never be put to shame." Joel 2:26.

Chicago

of these days, I spent in Chicago the Editor's Section of the I. R. E. A., working with them the problems of the editor of Sunday school literature. Moun- tain experiences were the addresses on Peace by Sherwood Eddy and Sidney B. These were valuable and precious to me. CHARLES A. BAME.

ELKHART, INDIANA

have just closed our two weeks' re- and the Spirit has been stirring the of men and women through the mes- of Brother Bame. Scarcely one year served since he led us in an intensi- vity which not only awakened our people but the people of the city. Fol- that campaign with another one, this equal, if not greater strength is a occurrence.

does give a harvest of souls when d women work as well as pray. Six- e led to the altar in confession and eration. On Decision Day twenty re- to the call. The intensive drive strengthening of God's work here, with the preaching of the Truth ver which is characteristic of Broth- ae did much toward the strengthen- our forces.

service was largely attended by our ple and those of other churches of er. The surrounding churches aided ir presence. They added to the d spirit which at all times prevails the Brethren churches of Northern general work of the church is moving a in a most splendid way.

i true our people are being tested, h are not faltering in their work but mting every emergency in the best way.

Christian people are being tested in rilous times, everywhere—we are ighed in the balances. Will we be anting, or will God be able to ac- his work through his people?

MRS. EDNA NICHOLAS.

OTHERS THINK, SAY AND DO

ord for 1931. Too many of our eople's groups are satisfied if they long—if they are busy—if they are good time. They call this prog- may be no more progress than the movement of a merry-go-round. ne has said, in order that there progress it is necessary to ch a glimpse of the far-distant ve some clear idea of how to get ow exactly where you are going to feet for the next ten steps.

The officers of young people's groups should map out the chief goals to be sought for 1931. (Membership—attendance—kinds of discussion—types of worship programs—financial objectives—participation in the whole program of the church.) The membership should then be organized, by committees and groups, so that each of these goals will be achieved. And "the next ten steps"—the work of the next three months—ould be clearly outlined and put under .y.—Young People's Bulletin, Congrega- tional and Christian Churches.

"If your tongue is Christ-controlled, it will never rattle about the weaknesses of your brother or sister, no matter how weak or seemingly inconsistent they may be. All it will do is to quietly pray for them."

Sunday School Notes

(Continued from page 11)

listeners. What could it mean? As soon as the service was over he said: "Pilot, I want to see you. How is our man we pulled out of the ice pile?" "Oh," I said, "he has gone back to work." "Well, Pilot, you settled me that night." In my astonishment, I said, "Why, Joe, what do you mean?" He said, "I mean this: Last night coming home through the forest, I said to myself, 'If that is what missionaries are doing, pulling old drunken lumberjacks out of ice piles, paying their bills and saving their lives, it is time that the lumberjacks were helping the mis- sionary, and I am going to help.'"

And while they took each other by the hand over a hundred men clapped their hands, for they knew we were friends. That night as I walked up to the office, I looked up into the starry heavens and thanked God that he had shown me a new way of conquer- ing men.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

MY NEXT MEETING

My next meeting (a Bible Conference) is scheduled for the Central Presbyterian church of Columbus, Ohio, beginning Sunday evening, March 1 and ending Sunday evening, March 8. I would be glad to meet any of our Brethren in Columbus.

R. I. HUMBERD,
Lake Odessa, Michigan.

TITHING IN HARD TIMES

The Layman Company has twelve new Bulletins on its list, including one written especially for the present day, "Tithing in Hard Times." This is the best of all times to spread the truth about tithing. Minds and hearts are open.

Send post card for pamphlet, "Teaching the Church to Tithe," containing full direc- tions for a ten-weeks program of silent, church-wide education at trifling expense. Non-profit, non-sectarian, non-legalistic, but simple, clear and workable. Address The Layman Company, 730 Rush St., Chicago.

Please mention the Brethren Evangelist, also give your denomination.

Business Manager's Corner

The Evangelist Subscription Campaign
Early in the winter the Publishing House

Staff together with a few of the pastors launched a drive for new subscribers for The Brethren Evangelist. This campaign was brought to a close February first.

Appeals were sent to all the pastors in the church as well as to each individual sub- scriber, asking for their cooperation in this drive for new subscriptions. Some of these cooperated quite nobly, while a few seemed to have more important (?) matters to at- tend to and no recognizable aid was re- ceived.

We knew the financial condition of the country would be used by many for an ex- cuse to hold back on the movement, but we felt there would be a few who would have a forward look and who would be able to see beyond the present distress, and from them we hoped to receive some encourage- ment. And we were not entirely disap- pointed. While the results of the campaign were not startling in any way, yet it did add approximately eight per cent to our mailing list with the new subscriptions re- ceived.

The Honor Roll

Since its inception thirteen years ago the Honor Roll of churches has usually been printed only on the occasion of new churches being added to it. Sometimes this has caused it to be many months apart when no new church was added to it. Such has been the case since the report was last published, but we are glad to have occasion to publish it once more this week.

The church that makes this possible and that is to be specially honored this week is the Second Brethren church of Long Beach, California, with Brother Lienhard honored as their pastor. Other churches renewing their Honor Roll list of subscriptions since our last report are—Ashland, Ohio, 13th year; Allentown, Pa., 12th year; Berne, In- diana, 12th year; Corinth, Indiana, 5th year; Dallas Center, Iowa, fourth year; Fremont, Ohio, second year; Gretna, Ohio, thirteenth year; Lanark, Illinois, second year; Long Beach, California, thirteenth year; Los An- geles, California, (2nd church) third year; Louisville, Ohio, third year; Mexico, Indiana, twelfth year; Oakville, Indiana, twelfth year; Philadelphia, (1st church), Pennsylv- ania, eleventh year; Pleasant Grove, Iowa, seventh year; Raystown, Pennsylvania, sixth year; Sunnyside, Washington, fifth year; Harrah, Washington, fourth year; Tiosa, Indiana, eleventh year; Waterloo, Iowa, thirteenth year, and Washington, D. C., sixth year.

There is a formidable array of twelve and thirteen year churches in this group which might furnish wholesome food for thought for a goodly number of other churches and pastors, for it means something to these outstanding churches or they would not have this enviable record.

One church that is deserving of special mention is the church in Washington, D. C. We wish some one in this congregation would write for the Evangelist and explain just how they handle their finances. In their dealings with the Publishing House this congregation, including both church and Sunday school has the best financial record of any congregation in the entire brother- hood. Their check accompanies their re- newal for their very large Honor Roll list of Evangelist subscriptions to The Evange- list, and they also pay in advance for a large Sunday school order for an entire year. How do you do it brethren? Please pass the system along.

The Evangelist Honor Roll

Allentown, Pa. (12th yr.) S. E. Christiansen
 Ashland, Ohio (13th yr.) ... Dyoll Belote
 Beaver City, Neb. (11th yr.) Raymond Blood
 Berne, Ind. (12th yr.) ..... John Parr
 Buckeye City, O. (10th yr.) ... Floyd Shirey
 Cedar Rapids, Ia. (2nd yr.) .... (Vacant)
 Corinth, Ind. (5th yr.) ..... M. B. Spacht
 Dallas Center, Ia. (4th yr.) ... A. R. Staley
 Dayton, O. (1st yr.) ..... R. D. Barnard
 Ellet, O. (3rd yr.) ..... Floyd Sibert
 Elkhart, Ind. (10th yr.) ..... I. A. Duker
 Fairhaven, O. (12th yr.) ... Floyd Shirey
 Fremont, O. (2nd yr.) ..... W. S. Crick
 Gratis, O. (6th yr.) ..... W. H. Beachler
 Gratis, O. (6th yr.) ..... W. H. Beachler
 Hagerstown, Md. (10th yr.) F. G. Coleman
 Howe, Ind. (8th yr.) ..... C. D. Whitmer
 Johnstown, Pa., 3rd Ch. (7th yr.) Gingrich
 Lanark, Ill. (2nd yr.) ..... C. C. Grisso
 Lathrop, Cal. (7th yr.) ..... (Vacant)
 Long Beach, (2nd Ch.) (1st yr.) J. Leinhard
 La Verne, Cal. (1st yr.) ..... A. L. Lynn Linwood, Md. (1st yr.) .... J. L. Bowman
 Long Beach, Cal. (13th yr.) L. S. Bauman
 Los Angeles, Cal. (3rd yr.) A. D. Cashman
 Louisville, O. (3rd yr.) ..... A. E. Whitted
 Mexico, Ind. (12th yr.) .... M. B. Spacht
 Morrill, Kans., (11th yr.) ... L. A. Myers
 Mt. Pleasant, Pa. (4th yr.) W. A. Crofford
 Nappanee, Ind. (12th yr.) ... B. F. Owen
 New Enterprise, Pa. (2nd yr.)... (Vacant)
 N. Liberty, Ind. (10th yr.) ... A. T. Wirick
 Oakville, Ind. (12th yr.) S. C. Henderson
 Peru, Ind. (9th yr.) ..... F. C. Vanator
 Phila., Pa., 1st ch. (11th yr) A. V. Kimmell
 Pleasant Grove, Ia. (7th yr.) .. (Vacant)
 Raystown, Pa. (6th yr.) ..... (Vacant)
 Rittman, O. (3rd yr.) Everett Neiswonger
 Roann, Ind. (10th yr.) ..... G. L. Maus
 Smithville, O. (10th yr.) .. G. E. McDonald
 Spokane, Wash. (1st yr.) ..... E. S. Flora
 Sterling, O. (10th yr.) ... G. E. McDonald
 Summit Mills, Pa. (4th yr.) ... W. E. Ronk
 Sunnyside, Wash. (5th yr.) ... Harold Fry
 Harrah, Wash. (4th yr.) .... F. V. Kinzie
 Tiosa, Ind. (11th yr.) ..... J. W. Clark
 Waterloo, Ia., (13th yr.) S. M. Whetstone
 Waynesboro, Pa. (7th yr.) W. C. Benshoff
 Washington, D. C. (6th yr.)... Homer Kent
 Yellow Creek, Pa. (5th yr.) ..... (Vacant)

Conference Minutes

The pastors have done very well this year in making remittance for the copies of Conference Minutes mailed out to them, but there are still some who have not done so. We would appreciate it very much, if they would all attend to this promptly. It is an obligation to the General Conference and not to us as we are acting as agents only for the Conference.

Other Accounts

Last week we mailed statements to our churches and Sunday schools that have accounts with us, and we trust they will respond to these statements as promptly as possible. In checking over our business for the past six months we find that in spite of the general slowness of business we have done more commercial and job printing during this period than we did in the corresponding period of last year, BUT we find it a great deal harder to meet our bills than it was last year. There must be a reason, and some of our Sunday schools and churches might be able to remedy that a little by meeting their bills promptly.

We also mailed out Sunday school order blanks last week, and a prompt filling out of these blanks and their return with checks accompanying would be of great help to us. We must pay for a car load of paper very shortly now and every little helps.

Publication Day Offering

We almost forgot to say anything about the Publication Day Offering, but these offerings are still coming in slowly and we will report later.

We are afraid the report will not be so very flattering, but some churches have done well, and others that have not yet been heard from may do equally well or better so we will just wait a few weeks more to give every one an opportunity to send their offering in.

R. R. TEETER, Business Manager
 P. S. Don't fail to read the advertisement of Bible Pictures and their Stories in another column. This little book appeals to us as being one of the finest books of its kind we have seen, either to read to children or for younger children to read themselves. Be sure to order one.

TWO BOOKS ON IMPORTANT SUBJECTS

by

Rev. R. I. Humbert

The Virgin Birth

This is a subject of tremendous importance and this booklet should be read by thousands. Many people in the United States, Canada and England are purchasing large numbers for distribution and resale.

Verbal Inspiration

Is the Bible the Word of God, or is it the product of the human mind? This is a vital question and every Christian should know its answer.

Both, Price Ten Cents Each Postpaid

$1.00 per dozen

$7.00 per hundred.

$25.00 per five hundred.

Order from Rev. R. I. Humbert, Lake Odessa, Michigan

For Boys and Girls

BIBLE PICTURES

and

THEIR STORIES

By Susanna G. Fisher

Editor of Youth's World

The thirty-one beautiful pictures in this book are reproductions in full colors of paintings by the English artist, E. S. Hardy. They illustrate many Bible incidents that are of particular interest to children.

Facing each picture is the story written mostly in words of one syllable for children 8 to 15 years of age.

The stories are by an author having wide and successful experience in writing for young folks. The Lord's Prayer, the Golden Rule, and the Ten Commandments are also included.

The book will make a very acceptable reward or gift for boys or girls. It is beautifully printed on heavy white enamel paper; 72 pages, 4 1/4 x 6 1/4; and is attractively bound in red cloth with a picture of "Christ Blessing the Children" inlaid on the front cover.

Price, 60 cents postpaid

Order from

THE BRETHREN PUBLISHING CO.

Ashland, Ohio

Vol. LIII
Number 10

March 7
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Heart Throbs of Our Church Leaders

L—A CALL TO FERVOR

By Dr. C. F. Yoder

In the growing gloom of apostasy, when the love of many is growing cold and evil men and seducers are waxing worse and worse, it is no time to be asleep.

With the prophecies of the Bible indicating the social, political and religious conditions at the end of the age, and the papers confirming daily the existence of precisely these conditions, it is no time to be indifferent.

With Satan diverting the attention of the people to the minor issues of vice and crime and away from his major work of polluting the fountains of faith, it is no time to ignore either his being or his devices.

Let us be not deceived. The antichrist will be a gentleman and a scholar, an angel of light and a wonderful ruler, but he will usurp the place of Jesus Christ. Allegiance to him may come through following with respected but unconverted friends. It is no time to be unequally yoked together with unbelievers. It is time to evangelize them.

If we are not witnesses we are nothing. If Christ means anything he means everything. If we can trust him at all we can trust him for all. And we can trust him. Individually he is our Savior and keeper. Socially he is perfecting his church. Politically he is preparing his people Israel for their restoration, and the nations of the world for his righteous rule.

The progress of science and education, of commerce and industry, is making of the world one neighborhood. It remains for Christ to make it one brotherhood. Only he can do it. Nothing in science or philosophy, nothing in education or government can regenerate the human heart, but Christ can and does do it. He is the hope, and the only hope, of the world.

Therefore, brethren, with such a Christ and such a Gospel, let us go forward with enthusiasm. Let the Brethren Church be made known as a church in which believers may obey all the commandments and enjoy all the promises of the Gospel. With fervor and devotion born of faith and love without limit let us do our part to give the whole Gospel to the whole world.

"Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto me, in Jerusalem and all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth."

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

IS Bodily Healing in the Atonement?

This question is constantly coming up in churches throughout the country, and in response to several correspondents I shall deal with it briefly.

The particular theory which has provoked these inquiries is held by various individuals and certain religious bodies of which Mrs. Macpherson and her "Four Square Gospel" may be taken as examples. The healing theory is as follows: When Christ died on the Cross he made atonement for our diseases as well as our sins. Therefore, they argue, no true Christian need be sick or diseased. If a Christian suffers from physical disease, he either has not "appropriated" fully the work of the Cross, or else he is guilty of personal sin for which the sickness is a divine punishment. In either case the responsibility always rests upon the person. It is always the will of God that we should be healed if we meet his conditions of repentance from the sin and appropriation of Christ's work on the Cross.

The Biblical passages upon which this theory of healing is erected are in Isaiah and Matthew. "Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows" (Isa. 53:4). The second passage is simply a quotation of the first. "When even was come they brought unto him many that were possessed of devils, and he cast out the spirits with his Word, and healed all that were sick: that it might be fulfilled which spoken by Esaiiah the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses" (Matt. 8:16-17).

WHAT do the Passages Mean?

Two questions must be answered. First, do these "griefs," "sorrows," "infirmities" and "sicknesses" refer to ailments of the body or of the soul? While the Isaiah passages might be interpreted either way, its quotation by Matthew leaves no doubt that he applies it to physical disease. It is impossible to deny this on any impartial exegesis. The parallel passage in Mark 1:34 settles the matter, "And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases."

The second question is this: When and how did our Lord take our infirmities and bear our sicknesses? To what act of his does the prophet refer? The constant assumption of those who hold the theory described above is that Christ bore our sicknesses on the Cross. Now the curious fact is that the Death of Christ is not mentioned in either of the passages upon which the theory has been built. The fact that the Isaiah passage occurs in the great fifty-third chapter has doubtless led the superficial to assume that it refers to the Death on the Cross, but the safest guide to its interpretation is Matthew's use of it in his Gospel. Jesus healed the sick, and Matthew declares that in so doing he "fulfilled" this particular prophecy spoken by Isaiah. He "took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses," by his ministry of healing, not by his Death on the Cross. There is no mention of Atonement or Death, but only of the work of healing.

There is no mystery about all this. The passage does not say that Christ died for men's infirmities. He took them. The same verb is used in Matthew 5:40, "If any man ... take away thy coat." Christ took away the palsied man's infirmity by healing him. Furthermore, in the expression "bare our sicknesses" the verb is never used in the New Testament with reference to Christ's atoning Death. It is used in Galatians 6:2, "Bear ye one another's burdens," where it obviously means sympathetic helpfulness and describes exactly what our Lord did when he was on earth healing the sicknesses of men.

AN Absurd Doctrine

The verbs "took" and "bare" in the passage under discussion do not refer to an act of substitutionary suffering and death such as we have in the Atonement. Those who teach that they do have such a reference probably do not clearly see where this doctrine leads. It would involve the absurd and monstrous notion that Christ suffered disease in our stead, a notion that every spiritual believer must shrink from with abhorrence.

The entire error arises out of a confusion of two things, namely, sin and disease. Sickness is not sin; it is the result of sin. We punish men for sinning, but not for getting sick. A man may become diseased by breaking the law; he is punished for breaking the law but sent to the hospital for his disease.

Christ died for our sins, not for our diseases. He was made sin for us; he was not made disease for us. Christ did not forgive disease. He forgave sin and healed disease. Death is the divine penalty for sin, not for disease. Therefore, the Death of Christ as our Substitute was penal, not pathological. Christ died in our stead; he did not (I say it reverently) have smallpox in our stead. To look clearly and steadily at the matter is sufficient to put it forever outside the realm of both Scripture and reason.

THE Grain of Truth

In most theological errors one can find a grain of truth, and the thing under discussion is no exception. The Death of Christ on the Cross did have something to do with sickness and disease, for these are the results of sin. The entrance of sin into the human race brought a whole train of results, a veritable Pandora's box of evils; disease, poverty, insanity, weakness and inefficiency. Now at the Cross God dealt with sin, and thereby laid a sure foundation for the eventual banishment from the universe of every evil caused by sin. In this sense disease was included in the Atonement just the same as poverty was included. But the actual banishment of these things will come according to the plan of God, not of man.

Everything in its own order. At the coming of the Lord his saints will be delivered from sickness and physical death. During the Millennial Kingdom all poverty will be abolished. And at last death itself, the final enemy, shall be destroyed. The Death of Christ provided for the destruction of all that is evil. In this sense nothing lies outside the scope of the Atonement. The very heavens above were purified, and the Prince of this world was cast out. But he still dwells in heavenly places. The Cross made his doom certain, but its actual visitation is still future.

Let us not forget it. The Cross dealt with sin, and therefore indirectly with every result of sin. But this is altogether different from the assertion that Christ died for our diseases.

DOES God heal Today?

The answer is Yes, he heals where his will to heal. The power of God is limited to either time or place, and has been. But it is not always God to heal. Read about the Apostle's in the flesh" as recorded in the 12th of Second Corinthians. There is a man in suffering. God uses sickness and affliction for our good and his glory. It is a biblical doctrine to teach believers that they are not in God's favor if they are sick, sometimes takes more faith to suffer to be healed.

God does heal today. But let us not get that the "body" of the believer is yet redeemed. Its redemption was paid for at the Cross, but at present "we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body" (Romans 8:23). What a day that will be when at his Coming will change these bodies of ours into the likeness of his own glorious Body; no more weakness, no more sickness, no more pain. "Come, Lord Jesus."

HEART-KEEPING

Heart-keeping is very much like house-keeping. There must be a continual sweeping out of dirt and clearing out of bottles—a daily washing of dishes, and a perpetual battle with all sorts of vermin. Heart-cleaning could be done up once or twice a year, but the Christian might discharge his graces, and have an easy time of it.

And just because the assaults of temptations are so constant and the throbings of sinful passions are so frequent, the task of keeping the inward man clean ought to be so difficult, many a religious life gets discouraged and makes a wretched failure.

The question with every Christian is, Shall these accursed Amalekites of temptation burn up all my spiritual possessions and overrun my soul? Shall outward sin and inward weakness drive me to utter disgrace and before the world? Or shall I drive me to Jesus Christ, who will give me the victory?—Dr. Cuyler.

IN THIS NUMBER

Steps in the Way of Life and Fellowship—Editor, .....
Narcotic Drugs Education Needed—Editor, .....
Spade Discovers Marks of Bible Flood—Editor, .....
Editorial Review, .....
Buried Years—Florence Gribble, .....
Some Brethren Leaders—Martin Shively, .....
Traveling to a City—Thomas Gibbons, .....
Studies in the Scriptures—C. F. ...
der, .....
Significant News and Views, ...
The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon, ...
Seventh Day Adventism—W. E. B. ... erwolf, .....
Editor's Notes on the S. S. Lesson, ...
My View of an Ideal C. E. Meeting, ...
—Ruth Hendricks, .....
Fifty Years of Christian Endeavor, ...
News from the Field, .....

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Short Talks by the Editor on Steps in the Way to Life and Fellowship

Introductory Note

The purpose of this series of short discussions is to present from the biblical standpoint the way divinely ordained by which men may gain eternal life and fellowship in his church. The aim is not to present anything like exhaustive treatments but to be brief; it is, however, that nothing will be omitted that is necessary to the guidance of any person who might desire to know and faithfully follow God's plan of salvation and Christian fellowship. If any personal worker, Sunday school teacher or other person is interested in pointing the way of life to others shall find these talks helpful in suggestion, we ask only that he shall thank God for his truth.

Salvation is Free

Salvation is free; there is nothing any man can do to earn it. Every one understand that. We earn what we get in sin, but cannot merit eternal life. Paul says, "For the wages of sin is death (it is what the sinner deserves); but the gift of God (not wages, but a bountiful gift) is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:23). Again in his letter to the Romans (3:24) he gives this phrase: "Being justified freely by his grace through redemption that is in Christ Jesus." And to the church at Ephesus he writes: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and not of yourselves; it is the gift of God" (Eph. 2:8). Though salvation is free, yet the Lord Jesus lays down certain conditions for receiving it. A man cannot remain indifferent, self-centered and engrossed in sin and receive the saving grace of God. There are some things that he must do, not to earn salvation but to fulfil the conditions. The things he requires are set very plainly, and they are as essential as they are plain.

I. REPENTANCE

The first necessary step is to repent, that is, to change one's way of thinking, for the better, out of sincere sorrow for sins of the past. Repentance is not passive sorrow, but sorrow moves one to do something, that causes a change of one's life, or course of action. The change of mind that repentance involves is more than a mere mental process, more than a mere change of one's views; it means a withdrawal or a turning of one's heart with abhorrence from sin and evil ways unto God, whose pardon is sought. That is what John the Baptist meant when he came into the wilderness preaching, "Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Matt. 3:2). That is what the Lord Jesus meant when he began his ministry, using the same words as his forerunner: "Repent" (Matt. 4:17). And the self-same word was used by Peter in his Pentecostal sermon and by Paul as he preached in Corinth. Repent, repent,—change your thinking about sin, and be free of sin, unto God—that is the first step.

Repentance does not stop with sorrow or conviction. A man may be broken-hearted because of sin, but if he does not repent he will remain in his misery and sin. The people were brought under conviction by the powerful preaching of Peter on the day of Pentecost, but their condition was not improved thereby until they had changed their attitude toward the sin that so troubled them. Hear the record: "Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent" (Acts 2:38). He gave some other instructions, but "Repent" was the first thing necessary. They were not saved by merely being sorry; they must repent. Paul makes this plain when he writes to the Corinthians thus: "Now I rejoice that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry after a godly manner. . . . For sorrow worketh repentance to salvation, not to be repented of: the sorrow of the world worketh death" (2 Cor. 7:9, 10).

Worldly sorrow causes men to despair, but godly sorrow gives hope because it turns them away from sin. Repentance is not genuine that does not do that. As another has said, "True repentance consists in the heart being broken for sin and from sin" (Thornton.)

The necessity of such a change on the part of men in sin is set forth in the Word of God both by direct command and by tender exhortation. First and most important of all is the word of our Lord. Hear it: "From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent for the kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Matt. 4:17; Mark 1:5). That was the message of the twelve when Jesus sent them forth: "And they went out and preached that men should repent" (Mark 6:12). The Lord made "Repentance" a part of the church's message to all men everywhere: "And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem" (Luke 24:47). And the young church began faithfully to do that very thing: "Then said Peter unto them, Repent" (Acts 2:38). "Repent ye therefore, and be converted," etc. (Acts 3:19, 8:22; 14:15). Peter tells us that the Lord is "not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (2 Peter 3:9). And Paul says the very "goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance" Rom. 2:4. Finally, hear that tender entreaty that comes to us across the centuries from the mouth of that great prophet of God, as recorded in the Old Testament,—an entreaty that is as truly expressive of the loving solicitude of the heart of God as any that might have been spoken by New Testament preacher: "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon" (Isa. 55:7). Therefore, whoever is found in sin, let him "repent and turn to God and do works meet for repentance" (Acts 26:20; 2 Cor. 7:9-11).

Narcotic Drugs Education Needed

The fifth annual Narcotic Education Week was observed February 21 to 28. Effort was made to extend the observance into every community through the nation, for it is realized that somehow the menace of unlimited drug manufacture and the need of uniform state laws regulating the traffic must be brought to the attention of the people, if conditions are to be improved. Preceding this week, there was held in New York a two-day conference of committees of the World Conference on Narcotic Education, presided over by Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson. The findings and recommendations of this conference will be presented to the Second Quinquennial World Conference on Narcotic Education to be held in Geneva, May 11 to 15 of this year. The experts have estimated the medical and scientific needs of the world to be about 350 tons in terms of crude opium, while they report the production of over 8,000 tons. The producers of this opium are determined to find a market for their product, and to accomplish that agencies are everywhere at work to encourage the formation of the drug habit.

The building up of a strong, active, sustained, universal public sentiment is the only thing that will be effective in coping with this evil. The fight against it has been too sporadic and indifferently conducted to be effective. The result of a survey of state narcotic laws shows that more than half the states have made no provision for the enforcement of their narcotic laws. Drug addicts at large, particularly those of the criminal type, are shown to be a menace to the public safety, and yet nearly half the states are without any provision for the commitment, treatment and rehabilitation of drug addicts. All the states but one requires narcotic education in the public schools. The survey also shows that in more than half the states the narcotic laws do not provide for the revocation of licenses where the licensee is convicted of a violation of the narcotic laws. All of which shows a deplorable lameness of conviction on the part of the public regarding the ravages caused by the terrible drug habit, and lack of understanding of the prevalence of the vice and of the extensive and subtle efforts of drug dealers to create new users, especially among high school students. There is need of widespread, more intensive narcotic drug education, particularly on behalf of the young people, who are most susceptible to influence and among whom the most persistent efforts are being put forth to encourage the forming of the drug habit. In addition to the public school education, which is often neglected or carelessly done, the temperance committees of our churches and its auxiliaries, as well as social welfare agencies, ought to give attention to this evil as well as to the liquor traffic.

Spade Discovers Marks of Bible Flood

The spade of the archaeologist continues to dig deeper and deeper, and ever and anon its discoveries bear convincing witness to the truthfulness of Biblical records. A recent news item from London, the Evangelical-Messenger informs us, has the following to say regarding the latest significant discoveries of the spade:

A city so ancient that its ruins show watermarks left by the Biblical flood has been discovered a few miles east of Babylon by the Oxford University Field museum expedition in Mesopotamia.

On top of it is the first well preserved palace of the Sassanian dynasty of Persian kings ever found. And the discovery of the palace was largely accidental.

Prof. Stephen Langdon, the American-born director of the expedition, explained that the field director waiting to begin excavations on the main hill over the site of the ancient city, set his Arab workmen to leveling the mounds of earth nearby. They had not been at work for a week before one wall and two gateways of the royal Persian palace had been laid bare. Prof. Langdon estimates its date at about 350 A. D.

Below it, in layers representing the various stages of civilization, are the ruins of buildings which preceded the palace. Vertical shafts in the great hill where ancient rulers built temples to the mother goddess show buildings dating back to the Sumerians.

The ruins are in many layers, representing the stages of civilization at each age, and the palace is on top. Vertical shafts in the grey hill show buildings dating back to the ancient Sumerians, the first known civilized race and the water marks on the ruins show when the city was inundated by the Biblical flood.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

We scarcely need to call your attention to it, for you may already have read it by the time you start in on this page. Still we want to urge a careful reading of Prof. McClain's department this week. He deals effectively with the fallacy of atonement for physical afflictions, which has troubled some of our people.

Brother N. V. Leatherman writes that plans are being laid for the summer activities at Shipshewana Lake. The first event likely to be scheduled is the annual meeting of the Indiana ministers. Later on the summer Bible conference and the young people's training camp program will be held there simultaneously as on last summer.

We are facing the time for the lifting of the annual Foreign Mission offering. Easter Sunday, April 5th, is the date. The first message regarding this important interest is brought this week by the president of the Foreign Board, Dean J. Allen Miller. Let us pray and plan that God may accomplish his will in us regarding it.

Elder J. F. Garber of Leon, Iowa, is well known by his writings in the Evangelist and by his widely used tract on "Baptism." He and his good wife celebrated on February 20th their Golden Wedding, at the home, the "Ladies' Aid" of Fairview having charge of the celebration. We congratulate Brother and Sister Garber on having been so blessed of God with congenial companionship and successful home life for half a century.

Christian Endeavorers will find in their department some suggestions for making a Christian Endeavor meeting ideal, the suggestions being offered by one of our aggressive young people of the Brighton, Indiana, society. Make your society meetings interesting and you have the problem of attendance largely solved. And when you have had some interesting and successful meetings and tell other societies about them.

Brother B. F. Owen, pastor of the church at Nappanee, Ind., tells us that the work there is advancing steadily. Every department is active, but particularly in the Sunday school is the progress noticeable. During January of this year the average attendance was 369 and during February it was 412, and they are high for still larger figures. The people are loyally supporting the pastor and the Sunday school superintendent in their leadership that will make any work go.

Brother Albert Lantz, pastor of our church at Berlin, Pennsylvania, recently held an evangelistic campaign in the City Mission at Fort Wayne, Indiana, assisted by his wife and daughter and other workers, among which were Brother and Sister S. Adams, who have charge of the Brethren mission church in that city. Brother Lantz says our new pastor in that city is making splendid progress and is well chosen for the field. The campaign in the City Mission resulted in fifty-three conversions. Our people in that city are taking part in the conduct of meetings at that down-town mission, and are thereby gaining numerical strength and cultivating the evangelistic fervor.

Dr. W. S. Bell writes of his evangelistic campaigns at Lorain, South Bend, Indiana, both of which were very successful. The former church Brother D. A. C. Teeter is the pastor and the latter weeks' meeting, begun December 25th, resulted in twenty conversions. Two have been received since the meeting closed. His faithful companion is helping him accomplish, in spite of the handicap of eye trouble, a splendid piece of work at Loree. Brother Bell's meeting at South Bend, as was reported by the pastor last week, resulted in fifty-five confessions, and he had the active cooperation of the splendid working group of this church. Brother N. V. Leatherman, the pastor, has gathered about him a very loyal group of young people and that gives bright hope for the future of the church.

From South Gate, California, comes a report of progress on all lines. The Sunday school attendance increased thirteen and one-half per cent during 1930 over the preceding year and forty were added to the church roll during the calendar year. Besides, several have been added during the two months of this year. The first communion service for this new church was observed with an attendance of sixty-six. Plans are under way to improve the teaching service of the Sunday school by the conduct of a Teachers' Training class with the pastor, Brother Leo Polman, as instructor. The Southern California Conference was being maintained by this growing mission church at the time of the publication of the newsletter.

WHY NOT SAY SO? If you appreciate some article that appears in The Brethren Evangelist, why not tell some one about it? If you think enough of some paragraph in some article printed in these pages to quote it, or if you are impressed enough by the treatment to reproduce its thought in your own words, why not just say that you read it in your church paper? If you get information from the Evangelist that you think someone else might need, why not tell them where they can get it? In other words, why not get in the habit of quoting your church paper? You quote almost automatically from the latest book you read and find helpful. You even quote from your newspaper. If you find something worth while in The Brethren Evangelist, why not say so?

Dr. Charles A. Bame, editor of the Sunday School Lesson publications, says he is encouraged over the response given to his efforts to prepare acceptable Brethren lesson helps. Many contributions and helpful suggestions have come into his hands and he shares a few of them with the Evangelist readers with a view to inducing still others to give their support to Brethren publications. The Brethren Teacher is gaining nicely in circulation and the prospects are for a still larger increase. There ought to be and there ought also to be larger use made of the Evangelist. We are strongly of the conviction that Brethren people should use Brethren literature, and that a Brethren leader is not doing quite fair either with his church publishing house or with his people when he fails to direct them into the use of Brethren publications, and more especially when he encourages the use of material from these non-denominational publishing houses when we ourselves are making the same type of material.

Buried Years

By Florence N. Gribble, M. D.

are about to comment on the buried years of human whether those years be years of an individual, of a community, or of an organization, for in practically every there are buried years. We will not speak of the buried years of rebellion, the years before one has come to serve the Lord Jesus, for in our subject we are turning simply to the buried years in the Christian life. Buried years in the Christian life are simply years of resting upon God. Some such years Scripture supposes to be in every life. In Psalm 37:4-5, we read, "Commit thy way unto Jehovah, trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass." In the seventh verse we find, "Rest in Jehovah and wait patiently for him." And yet, although we are commended to wait upon him, although we are supplied to wait, we pity those who are actually waiting, whether the waiting ones be ourselves or others. In order to overcome this tendency it might be well for us to consider by whom our years are buried. Is it by his own or ours? There are those who bury their own years. Of them we do not speak. They are either unsaved or sliders. But there are buried years in every Christian life, and it may help us to remember whose hand has buried them. Whose indeed, if not the loving hand of Heavenly Father?

Where does he bury the years of his children? Ofttimes years of illness. How many a child of God thus learns the ministry of suffering through years of agony, years of being set aside, years of inaction and seeming unfruitfulness. The suffering of those who are ill is greatly intensified if one has an exalted idea of human works. There is no condition for fruitfulness. Let every suffering one remember that condition is not a certain number of hours of work thoroughly done every day, that condition is to be in him. There is the condition of the prevailing spirit. Here let the suffering ones remember too in their buried years the words of the Lord Jesus as he said—"If abide in me, and my words in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you."

It is not only do God's children spend many buried years on beds of illness, but at other times upon the field of service, and this is especially true of the mission field. We have only to think of Paton's buried years in Tanna; of Laws' buried years at Cape Maclear before he was permitted to open Livingstonia; of Hudson Taylor's buried years in the Chinese Evangelization Society; of Adirondack's buried years in prison; of Carey's seemingly long time as he waited seven years for his first con-

And if this has been true of modern missions, it has been true in scriptural history. Shall we cite the case of Moses as he passes forty years in Midian? Shall we cite Paul in these three years in Arabia? They were buried years but they were fruitful years. Let us not discount buried years in our own lives. If we have not had them they are sure to come. Let us not discount the years in the lives of others; by so doing we can unjustly upon them a sense of reproach and defeat and it will be difficult for them to sustain.

When are my buried years to come to me? When are my buried years to come to you? In some of our lives they have already come, in others they are yet to come. Do not ask when, but let us remember simply that they are in his hands.

When again whose years are these that are buried? Are they are our years. How do we come into possession of them? Who gave them to us? Who bestowed upon us the gift of time, if not he who has bestowed upon us also the gift of eternity? Whose years are they then? His, not ours. Yes there are and shall be buried years in every Christian life. We have seen how they are buried by waiting upon him. We have seen by whom they are buried,—by the loving hand of our Heavenly Father. We have seen where they are buried—on beds of illness or on the field of service. We have seen when they are buried—not ours, but his.

But now we come to a brighter outlook, the restoration of these buried years! The Word is full of promises concerning the restoration of the buried years. In Joel 1:4 we read, "That which the palmerworm hath left hath the locust eaten," but in Joel 2:25 we read, "I will restore unto you the years that the locust hath eaten," and in the 26th verse we find "And ye shall eat in plenty and be satisfied, and praise the name of the Lord your God, that hath dealt wondrously with you; and my people shall never be ashamed."

The word of God is full of promises for restoration from captivity. In Jeremiah 32:23 we hear the Lord saying, "when I shall bring again their captivity." In chapter 48, verse 47 God promises to "bring again the captivity of Moab." In the 49th chapter and 6th verse "I will bring the captivity of the children of Ammon"; in the 39th verse "the captivity of Edom." In Ezekiel 29:14 he promises to bring again the captivity of Egypt and in chapter 38, verse 25, the captivity of Jacob. In Joel 3:1 he says "For behold in those days, and in that time, when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem," and in the verse following he speaks of the destruction of the hindering nations. In Amos 9:14 the Lord promises to bring back the captivity of his people, and the 126th Psalm says "When Jehovah brought back those that returned to Zion, they were like unto them that dream. Then was our mouth filled with laughter and our tongue with singing. Then said they among the nations 'The Lord hath done great things for them.' The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad. Turn again our captivity, O Jehovah, as the streams in the south. They that sow in tears shall reap in joy. He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing seed for sowing, shall doubtless come again with joy, bringing his sheaves with him." In all these we have seen not only the restoration of the buried years, but we have seen by whose hand these buried years are restored—by the hand of none other than God himself. Fitting it was indeed, that he who buried the years should himself restore them. Fitting it is that he should do as he wills with his own. Let us not fret or chafe because of the buried years but let us indeed long to wait patiently upon him during them all, knowing that as Moses was permitted to so gloriously serve God; as Paul was permitted to be the Apostle to the Gentiles; as Paton was permitted to be the Apostle to the New Hebrides; as Laws was permitted to see Livingstonia become all that he had hoped Cape Maclear would be; as Taylor was permitted to realize the fruition of his hopes for the Chinese Evangelization Society in the fruit of the China Inland Mission; as Judson was permitted to translate the whole Bible into Burmese; as Carey was permitted to see the Church established in India—so shall we who also have our buried years, be permitted to witness God's mighty restoration thereof in the salvation of those to whom our lives have been appointed in this service. We walk by faith and not by sight. Let us trust him through and beyond the "buried years."

Some Brethren Church Leaders of Yesterday, as I Knew Them

XXVI.—Elder E. B. Shaver

By Martin Shively, D.D.

This man about whom I now write, was in many respects a most unusual one. The reader will readily agree when I say that about 25 years ago, when I prepared a stereopticon lecture to be delivered at the general conference, upon the subject of men and churches of the brotherhood, and sought some information as to the work of Brother Shaver, I was amazed to find that even then he had organized 21 congregations, and was serving as the elder in charge of 20 of them. He had led more than 1500 persons into baptismal waters, and was serving 6 congregations as pastor, and even then was not a young man by any means. How much work he did since then, I do not know, but of one thing I am very sure,—he did not rust out, for the energy which found so great an expression in him, kept him going until the weight of his 84 years compelled a halt on his physical activities, but his soul went marching on. How great the influence of such a life on a community in which it is wholly spent, really is only eternity will reveal. He was born in Maurertown, Virginia, in the year 1843, and lived there as business man, neighbor, Christian and minister, all his long life, never sparing himself in the face of human need, winning and holding a place in the affections of all who knew him, until the Lord said, "It is enough; come up higher." Well did he earn the title, Bishop of the Shenandoah Valley, though it was not in his nature to exploit it in any way, for he lived only to serve his people, all people, and his God. Little wonder that a great section of the country in which he lived, should have been plunged into sorrow as he was called hence, though they who sorrowed did not do so for his sake, but for theirs, for while every life is a bit richer for having lived with and under the influence of such as he, all must feel poorer when the tie which has held them together is broken. When I tell you of the large number of people whom he baptized, you will know without any further mention that two things must follow. — He must have done a great deal of preaching, and of the evangelistic type, and he himself must have been a fine exponent of the things which he preached. These qualities must, of course, find large expression in every life which would accomplish much for the Master, but, alas, the combination is not always sufficiently conspicuous to make it outstanding. Such energy as found expression in him, and such devotion, were the secrets of the unusually successful life he lived. He was not a big man in either height nor weight, but what he lacked in size, was more than compensated for by his zeal for God, and all that is implied in that, and his love for men in all walks of life.

Brother Shaver was a charter member of the Brethren church, and while his home and his business interests and his chief field of labor was in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, he gave of his time in evangelistic work in other parts of the brotherhood, and it was in such work that I first intimately met him. I had known him since my early years in the ministry, of course, but during a revival he held in the Bear Creek church, near Dayton, more than 35 years ago, I learned to know him better, and until the day of his death, we were not only brethren but very good friends. In his death in 1927, the church lost one of its really great men, one who loved the church and who thoroughly believed in its message and its mission. And in his death, many of us lost a friend, for knowing of whom we are better men. Though being dead through those he led to think of higher things, he lives on.

The Blessing in the Shadows

Abideth faith, hope, love, these three.—1 Cor. 13:13

And so there are three things which are never to be lost which I am to carry with me beyond the grave. These pearls are to be saved from the wreck of time and laid up on the short. Two of the preservations surprise me. I could never wonder at the immortality of love, for heaven without love would be a barren world without the sun. But faith and hope—where is the place for these in heaven? I thought faith would drop her wings when she lighted on the soil of home; I thought hope would draw down her sails when she touched fruition's shore. Then men of old time told me that all mystery would vanish when the curtain of death infolded me. They told me that faith would be lost in satisfaction, that hope would fade in fulfillment. But the Bible says they shall abide. How shall they abide with perfect revelation? How shall they breathe in the cloudless sky? How shall hope flutter in the windless air? If these abide, shadow must abide, and why is shadow there? Why prolong the winter of unbelief, faith and the springtime of my hope when the summer of my love has come?

In the interest of that love, O my soul, hast thou considered the place of the shadows? Are they not the very pinions of love? Is not thy pity ever born of darkness? It would die if it saw clearly. Perfect truth would scatter the fairest of thy guesses. It would destroy the creed of thy chattering lips. It would lame the feet of thy compassion. It would close the gates of thy solicitude for others. It would end the days of thine unselfish prayers. Keep thy shadows, my soul. Keep a little rim of darkness round thy sun. Keep a spot unrevealed in the dealings of thy God. Keep in the new world a place for the cross of Jesus—a place where love may see the cloud and feel a brother's sin. Thy perfect sight would be dearly purchased by the loss of thy Lord's passion. The cloud that covers the transfigured glory is itself a glory. If thou wouldst give in to thy love, leave in the Paradise of God a margin for faith and hope.—Dr. George Matheson, the blind preacher of Scotland.

FAITHFUL

Little faithfulnesses are not the only preparation for great ones, but little faithfulnesses are in themselves the great ones. The essential fidelity of the heart is the measure, whether it be exercised in the mites or in royal treasures. The genuine faithfulness of the life is equally beautiful whether it be displayed in governing an empire or in writing an exercise.—Dean Farrar.

The late Elder E. B. Shaver

Traveling to a City

By Thomas Gibson

few years ago, a minister of the Gospel was visiting prisoners in Indiana.

When he was entering a home there was a little boy on a rocking horse on the portico. The minister said to the boy, "Where are you going, my little man?" The boy quickly answered, "To New York. The minister made a visit, and went on his way rejoicing. A few hours later he had occasion to pass by the same house, the little boy was still riding the rocking horse, but had made no progress towards New York.

What is the lesson to be learned from this incident? As the Spirit reveals it to me, it is this:

We are the children of God, we are traveling to "a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." "The celestial City," "the Holy City," the "New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of Heaven from God." Are we making progress towards the celestial city? Are we overcoming the obstacles, the hindrances, the pitfalls, snares, and traps, that the enemy of our souls is setting in our path, to impede our progress towards the celestial city?

Are we like Christian, in Pilgrim's Progress? Have we entered into the "slough of despond"? Are we like the boy, more than likely had been riding the rocking horse months, but had made no progress towards New York? Or are we like the great Apostle, who forgot the things that were behind," the things which he had already acquired and reached out after, and the things which he had not yet acquired, the higher, nobler, and greater achievements? "The breadth, and length, and height; and to know the love of Christ which surpasseth knowledge"? And "seeking to apprehend that for which he was apprehended by Christ"?

When we go abroad it is necessary to secure a passport. But a passport you will be refused admittance into the country which you seek to enter. Have we secured our passports to enter the heavenly country? And how should they read? They should read as follows: "By the grace of God, through the merits of the supreme atoning, redeeming sacrifice of the Son of God, I come seeking admittance into the celestial city." We must be able to say, "By the blood of the Lamb, and the word of my testimony, I have overcome 'the world, the flesh and the devil.' And, 'By the Grace of God,' I come with a fully developed out, and a completely developed Christian character. Can we say, 'I come possessing, through the merits of Christ, a measure of the ideals, and characteristic of Christ, and 'the fruit of the spirit?' (Gal. 15:22; Eph. 5:22-23). What progress are we making toward the celestial city? The holy city? New Jerusalem, which cometh down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband"? (Rev. 21-2). Are we encountering any difficulties in the way, any perils (2 Cor. 11-26), any hindrances in the way?

Are we like the early Christians, of whom it is written, "The ruling passion of their hearts was an intense desire for Christian perfection"? They put forth a strenuous effort to reach their objective, and so must we, if we come unto the "perfect man, unto the measure of the fulness of Christ" (Eph. 4-13).

Are our souls thirsting for the living God? Are we standing at the fountain, like the woman at the well, whose thirsty soul was quenched by drinking from the living water? Draw freely from the "Wells of Life."

Woolsey St., Berkeley, California.

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

THE FAITH OF THE GOSPEL

THE CHURCH

We read that Jesus began his ministry "preaching the Gospel of the kingdom of God" (Mk. 1:14). Having been rejected by his people Israel, he announced that the kingdom would be taken away from them (Matt. 21:43). Speaking to his disciples he said, "I appoint unto you a kingdom as my Father hath appointed me" (Lk. 22:29). Speaking to the church Paul says, "Giving thanks unto the Father . . . who hath delivered us from the power of darkness and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son" (Col. 1:13). When Jesus returns again Israel will be converted and restored (Acts 15:14-18). In this dispensation the church represents the kingdom in mystery, as it exists in the hearts of believers (Rom. 14:17).

Therefore the church is not a militant kingdom. It is likened rather to a pilgrim virgin, being prepared through suffering for the coming of her Lord (Eph. 5:25-27; 1 Pet. 2:9-11). Her program is to witness for Jesus in all the world and call out a people for his name (Acts 1:8; 15:14-18). She does not deceive herself, as does the apostate church, trying to reign as a queen before the coming of the king (Rev. 17:4; 18:7).

The true church is known by its brotherly love (John 13:35), which is the fruit of the Spirit (Rom. 5:5) with which she is sealed (Eph. 1:13). It is APOSTOLIC, because it continues "in the doctrine of the apostles, and in communion, and the breaking of bread and in prayers" (Acts 2:42). It is called HOLY (Rom. 1:7), not because it is absolutely perfect, but because it is cleansed and sanctified by the blood of Christ (Eph. 5:25-28). The church is ONE, because it is united by one Spirit, and not because it is obliged to profess one creed or obedience to one man (1 Cor. 6:17; 12-13). And, finally, it is MISSIONARY because its orders are to evangelize the world (Matt. 28:19).

I. NAME AND NATURE

In the Gospel the disciples of Christ are called "Christians" (Acts 11:26), "brethren" (Matt. 23:8), "saints" (Rom. 1:7), "the church of God" (1 Cor. 1:2). One group was called "those of the circumcision" (Col. 4:11), and another "the brethren of the Gentiles" (Acts 15:23). Differences in things external may give rise to sectarian names without causing the spiritual body of Christ to be divided. Its unity is the "unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" (Eph. 4:3). Inasmuch as the church is a spiritual body it is subject to spiritual laws (Eph. 4:13-16).

II. OBJECT AND OBJECTIVE

The object of the church is to witness for Christ to all the world and call out a people for his name (Acts 1:8; 15:14-18). The objective is to reach all nations that the "fulness of the Gentiles" may come in (Matt. 24:14; Rom. 11:25). It works through individuals to the society and the kingdom.

1. Individuals.—Jesus is the life, and those who receive him receive in the act, life eternal (1 John 5:11, 12). From thenceforth, although they are in the world, they are not of the world (John 17:16). They have a new "head," which is Christ, and henceforth they must obey him (1 Cor. 11:3).

2. Social work.—Those who receive the word of God into their hearts bring forth fruit in the conversion of others (Mt. 13:8, 9). They in turn are the good seed, the children of God, sown throughout the world (vs. 38), and they bear fruit in the conversion of others and in their influence on the society in which they move (1 Pet. 2:11-17).

3. Spiritual work.—These children of God, sown through the world, are members of one family, the family of God. They form one people, the people of God. They become organized into one social body, the body of Christ. The agent of this work is the Holy Spirit. He is taking the called out people of all nations and forming them into one harmonious social unit, the church, which is to be his spiritual body.

The members of the true church therefore cooperate as members of one body (Rom. 12:4-8), in which they have spiritual food (Eph. 4:12, 13). Each one has work according to his gifts (1 Cor. 12).

The church is in the process of being formed and perfected. Therefore, although in standing it is considered perfect, being sanctified by the blood of Christ (Heb. 10:10-14); in its actual state it is rather like a hospital (1 Cor. 11:30), a school (Gal. 3:24, 25), a family (Heb. 3:6), or an army (2 Tim. 2:3). Its members should therefore be patient with one another (Eph. 4:31, 32).

III. RELATIONS AND METHODS

1. Relations between believers.—Inasmuch as believers are members of one family they are brethren and as such have special relations with each other. They seek to restore the fallen (Gal. 6:1), encourage the weak (1 Thess. 5:14), exhort the wayward (Heb. 10:25), and edify one another in Christ (Col. 3:12-17). They should be living examples of the love described in 1 Cor. 13.

2. Relations between congregations.—The congregations are local units gathered together for convenience in cooperation. They should maintain the apostolic doctrine and customs (Acts 2:42), engage in all good works (Acts 6:1-4; 11:29; 1 Cor. 16:1, 2). They should seek to extend their work by forming new or branch congregations (Acts 8:14, 15). The means for doing this are: example (2 Cor. 9:1, 2), testimony (Acts 8:4), supervision by evangelists (Tit. 1:5), conferences (Acts 15:2), literature (Col. 4:16) and prayer (Col. 4:3, 4).

3. Relations between denominations.—The apostolic church, guided by the Spirit, granted liberty of conscience in minor matters (Rom. 14:1-23), but had to guard against false teachers (Acts 15:24), prove those who were unknown (1 John 4:1), contend against error (Acts 15:1, 2), and separate themselves from those who were disloyal in fundamental things (2 Jn. 10).

4. Relations with the world.—The members of Christ consider themselves as crucified to the world (Gal. 2:20), dead to sin (Rom. 6:11) and separated from evildoers (1 Pet. 4:1-4). They do not join themselves in union with unbelievers in ways that hinder their lives or testimony for Christ (2 Cor. 6:14-18). This, of course, includes matrimony (1 Cor. 7:39). They do not defend themselves with carnal weapons (2 Cor. 10:4). They testify against evils (Eph. 5:11). They do their duties as good citizens (Rom. 13:1-7), but they do not seek to impose the rule of Christ or the church by force (Eph. 6:13-20).

(To be continued)

GOD SPEAKING

The thrilling exhortation comes to us, "Stand on your feet and I will speak to you," says the Lord God Almighty. We listen, and this is what we hear: . . . "Do not trouble yourself about times and seasons, but never forget that the spirit of the Almighty has been promised you, and that he will be with you till you have carried your triumphs unto the uttermost parts!"—Charles E. Jefferson.

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

ESCAPED

More than four years ago when Bishop Cannon became prominent in his opposition to the liquor interests of America, some of his brethren who knew him said he is the equal mentally to any man in the country. Events that have since transpired most fully justify this high esteem in which he is held by a great many. The patience of the public is strained and it will be the result of good generalship for a large section of the secular press and interested in embarrassing, if not in ruining a most useful man, to beat a hasty retreat. The Bishop has held their feet to the fire and many a good battle seems left in him; for he is escaping his enemies as a bird from the hunter. The future will find him on the firing line and he will continue to be a target for those who wish to destroy the Prohibition Amendment.—The Christian (Georgia Baptist Paper).

THE NEW ZEALAND TRAGEDY

The sympathies of the civilized world go out to Napier, New Zealand, in the earthquake which overwhelmed the city and killed 1,000 lives out of a population of ten or twelve thousand and resulted in a property loss of $10,000,000 or more. In the San Francisco disaster of 1906 only 500 lives were lost, but the property loss was estimated at about $500,000,000. The Napier disaster must be counted among the most terrible in recent history.—Presbyterian Advance.

JOHN WILLIS BAER, EMINENT LAY LEADER

One more of the outstanding Presbyterian leaders of our time has been called to join that innumerable company who rest from their labors while their works do follow them. John Willis Baer passed away suddenly at his Pasadena home on February 8. So many of us could never think of him without visualizing the inspiring leader of our youth when he, too, was young and secretary of the world's Christian Endeavor organization. Then for six years he was a home missions secretary, followed by ten years of valuable service as president of Occidental College, from which he turned to the quieter life of a banker. In 1919 he was elected moderator of our General Assembly, to which he had frequently given the benefit of his statesmanlike and persuasive leadership. At the time he passed on the torch, after having shown what is possible to an American boy of few early opportunities, for he was then a Hungarian immigrant. Thousands of younger men—and women, too—are today holding aloft their own torches, lighted from the flame of the fervor, devotion and exalted Christian idealism which they discovered in John Willis Baer. Being dead he yet speaks.—The Presbyterian Advance.

SHERWOOD EDDY JOINS SOCIALISTS

Holds Socialized Christianity Only Alternative to Communism. Sherwood Eddy has retired from the Y. M. C. A. and will give his remaining years to the advancement of socialism. Such was the gist of the statement made by this well-known Christian leader at a dinner tendered him by the national council of the Y. M. C. A. at the Hotel Commodore a few days ago. Dr. Eddy is one of the most fascinating Christian leaders in the world today. He has a positive genius for new enthusiasms, for he has been eloquently during his forty years of Y leadership for personal evangelism, pacifism, more adequate sex instruction, social justice and a number of other causes. His life is a splendid example of the fact that advancing years need not necessarily mean hardening of the mental arteries. Although over 60, Dr. Eddy has the vigor of youth and in personal appearance he does not seem more than 40. In making this announcement of his future plans, he said: "I have joined the socialist party and I intend to work for the party for economic justice. If we do not Christianize the world, order, there are those who will communize it." His new outlook on Russia is receiving many favorable comments.—Christian Endeavor.

THE THREE-FOLD CORD

We have a Savior, a Bible, a religion, all of which are ours. Christ cannot be identified with any particular race or nation. Though sometimes he is referred to as a Jew, yet the mission is finds itself in revolt against the idea. He was, the perfect one, the ideal for all races and for all nationalities. The Bible is a timeless book, and therefore cannot go out of date. It embraces centuries in its message and fits every type of people under the sun. And our religion cannot be confined to any class or to any age. It fits all people of all ages. Here then is the three-fold message by which the world is united—a universal Savior, a universal religion, a universal religion.—Religious Telescope.

NEGRO CHURCH STATISTICS

From The World Almanac, we quote church statistics for Negroes that were gathered by the United States Government's Census Bureau in 1926. The total membership enrollment was 5,203,000, distributed among 42,585 congregations, an average of about 123 members per church. In the decade from 1916 to 1926, there was an increase of 3,000 churches and of 700,000 members. Church property valued at $205,000,000 is in possession of the congregations and the cost of administration was $43,000,000.

The State of Georgia has the largest number of negro churches with the largest membership; 5,021 congregations with 538,000 communicants. Alabama, Mississippi, Texas, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia rank next in the order named. Missouri among northern states has 645 congregations and Ohio rates second with 622. Among denominations, the Methodist and Baptist groups have the largest colored constituency. Colored Baptists exceed 3,500,000 in number. Negro Methodists total 1,331,000 according to figures given by Phelan.

Among Lutherans, the Missouri Synod has the most advanced development of negro missions. The United Lutheran Church has a congregation in New York City, which is very flourishing. It is the distinction of containing a large number of migrants from the West Indies, from the Virgin Islands in particular.—The Lutheran.

"PHYSICIANS RAPIDLY DISCARDING ALCOHOL AS MEDICINE"

The above caption is taken from a recent statement by Dr. W. B. Evans, noted physician and former Commissioner of Health in the city of Chicago.

In his address Dr. Evans said: "I don't know, at the present time, of a single indication for the use of alcohol in medicine. I know of no disease that can be treated as successfully with alcohol as without. Every doctor knows that alcohol is not a stimulant, in reality, is a depressant. The price one pays for its use is the danger that it may harm the human apparatus more than it may help by temporary alleviation. Year by year, the use of alcohol in any form, in the cure of tuberculosis, pneumonia, malaria, blood poisoning and other maladies, has been discarded as ineffectual and dangerous. Even the once universal notion that alcohol is a sovereign remedy for 'snake bite' has proven false. The heat supplying calories in alcohol are rendered valueless by the factors which more than offset its utility as a food. As a drug it is in a similar class to that of atropine, aconite and the like, which are extraordinarily powerful, but for that very reason scarcely used."—The Evangelical-Messenger.

LIVING EPISTLES IN RUSSIA

Evangelical Christians in the town of Chomsk, Russia, arranged to have a baptism on a certain day and the Greek priest, to keep his own flock from attending, announced a specially solemn mass on the same date. When the procession of the Evangelicals, singing gospel hymns, passed the church, all the people within went out leaving the priest alone. Some two thousand people walked in the procession. The priest was greatly chagrined and later criticized the evangelical people, but his parishioners said that it would help to make such assertions. All knew that evangelical Christians lived pure lives, neither cursed, drank nor smoked, nor indulged in other questionable things. So the priest, not to be behind the times, abandoned drinking and smoking. Then he heard his parishioners say that while the evangelical Christians had sermons in their churches, they themselves had none. The priest began to learn. Learning that the Evangelicals had singing of spiritual songs which everybody understood, he started congregational singing with the song book Gusly.—S. S. Times.

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Heb. 4:11-16. The more we study the stars the more we find that they differ greatly among themselves; no two are alike. In this respect they may be likened unto people, for there are no two people who are exactly alike. But no matter how much we may differ from one another, no matter how peculiar are our own temptations, we have a High Priest who was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin. And, praise his name, he can show us the way to pass through our temptations also without sin!

TUESDAY

John 1:35-42. With even a low-powered glass it is very interesting to observe the beautiful double stars—that is, stars that appear to the naked eye as a single star, but which are seen through the telescope to be in reality two stars very close together. They are usually of beautifully contrasting colors. Each exerts an influence on the other, and they revolve about each other for ever. This is an illustration of the influence individuals have over others. It was such an influence that attracted men to Jesus, that Andrew exerted over his brother Peter, that was seen in the friendship of David and Jonathan, etc. It is a law of the universe that every particle of matter exerts an attraction on every other particle, regardless of size or position. It is a thought that gives courage, even while it sobers us: let no one think that his life is not influencing other lives!

WEDNESDAY

Luke 22:54-62; Acts 2:14, 38-40. There are many variable stars—that is, stars that change from very bright to very faint, and back again. Some have a regular period for this change; others are quite irregular. Spiritually, Peter was a type of "variable." How brightly he shone just before the trial of Jesus, yet how faint was his light about cock-crow that morning in the palace! But God took him out of the variable class and made him a true, unchanging star: Peter, the Rock! May we let God's Spirit have his way in our lives also.

THURSDAY

Matt. 11:7-15. There are many other strange and beautiful objects that appear in splendid beauty for a short time and then disappear for long intervals, if not altogether, such as comets, meteors, and novae (or new stars). Even these have their value, and have often resulted in a more intense study of the stars, and the finding of new truths. Such might be said to have been the office of John the Baptist; he was a bright and shining light that attracted the attention of others to the great central Sun of the Universe.

FRIDAY

Matt. 23:1-12. There are "stars" which are not stars at all. The planets have no brightness of their own, but shine only by light reflected from the sun. So it was with the Pharisees: there was no real light or warmth within; they shone only by light reflected from their exalted position. Against all such Jesus pronounced the woes of this passage. Let us not be followers of Christ in name only, but in deed and in truth, that we may give warmth and light to others.

SATURDAY

Matt. 5:14-16. In another sense, the planets are typical of the true Christian. To paraphrase from Paul: "In me dwelleth no real light, but in Christ alone." Let us see to it that we may always hold ourselves in such position that men may see the light and glory of Jesus Christ reflected in us and may worship him.

SUNDAY

Psalms 111:1-10. In this series of devotional studies of the glory of God as revealed in his handiwork in the heavens, we have revealed something of power and love, the majesty and glory of our God. His works are past understanding, almost past believing, as we behold them in the heavens and as we behold them in the lives of men. But let us quote again from the Psalmist: "His tender mercies are over all his works." Amen.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Goshen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

Seventh Day Adventism

The Result of a Predicament

By William Edward Biederwolf

(Continued from last week)

The Shut Door Opened

II. THE DOOR OF MERCY WAS CLOSED IN 1844, TO ALL WHO WERE AT THAT TIME UNSAVED.

Was it?

Well then the further spread of their belief was impossible. It then became apparent that if any sort of propaganda was to be carried on with a view to securing converts for Seventh Day Adventism, the door of mercy must be thrown open to all, and was accordingly done, and any one looking for light regarding the sanctuary might yet enter in.

A Forced Change of Mind

III. IT WAS A SIN TO DO ANY WORK AFTER 1844. They expected the cleansing of the sanctuary to last but a very short time. But time starved them out at this point and they found it convenient to change their mind. It is only fair to say that only a branch of the Seventh Day Adventists had taken this position.

Satan as Savior

IV. SATAN IS MADE THE SCAPEGOAT TO BEAR AWAY THE SINS OF GOD'S PEOPLE. This is of course a flat denial of the fundamental doctrine of the atonement. It makes the Devil your Savior instead of Christ, or at least it shares the honor with him.

They get this curious piece of information from the marginal reading in Leviticus 16:8 (placed in the text in the Revised Version), "ONE LOT FOR JEHOVAH AND THE OTHER LOT FOR AZAZEL." Azazel, they say, means the Devil.

Many of the leading modern scholars agree with them in this interpretation of the word.

But if you will read the Seventh Day Adventist theory of the atonement a few pages farther on you will see that they very plainly make the second goat himself to be the Devil, or rather a type of the Devil.

But with this the many modern scholars do not agree.

Now let us examine this matter for a moment before we set forth their theory of the atonement in detail.

1. In the first place it is hardly probable that two animals of the same kind and of the same qualifications would have been selected to represent two persons of such widely different character as Christ and the Devil. The use of an unclean animal in either case was strictly forbidden. Some one has asked, "Is Satan so virtuous that he must be represented by an animal without blemish?"

2. In the second place the entire teaching of the word of God is against such a theory. Hebrews 9:29 says, "Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many." This and other verses (Isaiah 53:6, 11, 12; 1 Peter 3:18; 1 Peter 2:24) show very distinctly that it is Christ and not the Devil who is our "sin offering," and that, as John says, it is "the Lamb of God that beareth away the sin of the world" (John 1:29).

3. In the third place, the similar ritual in Leviticus 14:1-7 is against any such view of the proceedings. Here the living bird which corresponds to the living goat is allowed to go forth into a life of freedom. The proper explanation is of course that the slain goat and the live goat as well as the slain bird and the live bird both refer to Christ who, "was delivered for our offences and raised again for our justification" (Romans 4:25).

5. In the fourth place it is distinctly stated that both goats were taken for a sin offering (verse 5) and it is just as distinctly stated that the goat to be sent away alive as well as the one to be slain was presented before the Lord (verse 10.) Most assuredly therefore neither goat could have represented the Devil.

5. But finally, if we consent that "azazel" is a proper name and that it means the Devil, to identify this individual with the goat is an inexcusable exegetical blunder that completely ignores the grammatical construction in the use of the preposition "for." If "azazel" means the "Devil" then according to the construction one goat was for Jehovah and the other goat was for Azazel, that is, for the Devil.

This is enough to show how absurd and how impossible it is to make the live goat to be Azazel, the Devil, or to make him a type of the Devil as the Seventh Day Adventist people do. Their interpretation is altogether fanciful and wholly without Scriptural warrant.

This settles the thing in question, but it will be of interest to investigate somewhat the real meaning of the word "azazel."

There are four interpretations each one of which has had the support of many leading scholars.

1. It has been taken as the name of the place to which the goat escaped, that is, "a far off place" "a place utterly removed."

2. It has been taken as a designation for the goat itself that is, "the goat sent away." "the goat allowed to escape," "The escape goat." So the A. V. and many old authorities.

3. It has been taken as a personal being, an evil spirit (some say Satan) to whom the goat was sent. So the R. V. and a number of later scholars.

4. It has been taken as an impersonal word designating "a complete sending away," "an entire removal."

The correct interpretation is a matter of exegesis about which no impartial scholar will dogmatically declare himself, simply because he cannot be absolutely sure about the derivation of the word and its meaning. Least of all will he inject his interpretation into a system of theology.

1. The first interpretation has little anything in its favor and has now been practically abandoned by all authorities.

2. The second interpretation is not impossible one. It at least conveys a sense of the passage. In this way the word is derived from "Az" meaning "going away." Against this Oehler urges that "az" means "she goat." But this is not necessarily so. Some nouns have but one form and indicate animals of both sexes, like "ovis" in Latin meaning a sheep. (See Genesis 27:9; Deuteronomy 14:4; Exodus 26:7.) The most serious objection to this rendering is that it makes it somewhat difficult to get a smooth reading at the end of verse 10 and 26.

3. The third interpretation has met with much favor. But against it the following objections are urged.

(a) Satan is nowhere else mentioned in the entire Pentateuch and he would hardly be mentioned here by a name which he nowhere else has in the whole Bible.

(b) The parallelism formed by the double use of the preposition "for" would force the meaning that just as the first goat was sent away as an offering to appease the Devil, so some evil spirit who dwelt in the wilderness, an idea which is revolting and entirely at variance with the whole tenor of the word of God. The principal reason for pressing a personal meaning upon the word "azazel" is the double use of the preposition "for," but this must not be carried too far.

Some say the goat with the forgiveness was sent out to mock the Devil and not to appease him to gambol in exulting triumph before the Devil. Some say the goat was delivered up to the Devil. But why all this exegetical contortion to explain an impossible meaning.

4. The fourth interpretation is perhaps most in keeping with the nature of the service, most harmonious with the scope of the Scriptures and most in line with the true meaning of the word.

Dr. Eidersheim says, "The word 'azazel' is by universal consent, derived from a root which means, 'wholly to put aside' or 'wholly to go away.'" This root, "azal," probably comes from the Arabic. Whether it be true or whether the word is derived as mentioned above, under the second interpretation, the idea of "complete dismissal" and "removing far away" evidently inheres in the meaning of it. Even Oehler, who interprets the word as "the name of an evil spirit," says it may be taken impersonally and interpreted in the sense of "dismissal." Well, if even he admits such a rendering why not so take it and all difficulty relieved and the evident sense of the passage retained.

Thus under no circumstances can the goat which is sent away be identified with the Devil or be made a type of the Devil.

THE SECOND GOAT IS THE TYPE OF CHRIST EVEN AS THE FIRST ONE IS.

How Atonement is Made

Let us now see how the Seventh Day Adventists work out their theory of the atonement.

You know, the high priest made atonement for the sanctuary itself because of its defilement through the uncleanness of the people. Just so, they say, the sins of believers are laid upon the heavenly sanctuary and atonement must be made for it and Christ, the Great High Priest, entering the Holy of holies in the heavenly sanctuary made atonement for this sanctuary just as the high priest did for the earthly sanctuary.

how did the high priest make this ment for the earthly sanctuary? By its sins upon himself. In the same Christ makes atonement for the sancin heaven. The sins of the Israelites therefore first laid upon the sanctuary men upon the high priest and then the priest came out of the Holiest of Holies these sins and laid them on the scape-who bore them away to the wilderness.
Christ, the Great High Priest, will one come forth from the Holiest of Holies heavenly sanctuary with the sins of people which he took from off this sancwhere they had been laid and he will these sins on the Devil, who will in turn them away into the wilderness of annion.

THIS IS THE SEVENTH DAY
PLAN OF SALVATION.

TEACHES THAT OUR SINS ARE AS YET PARDONED OR BLOTTED

TEACHES THAT OUR SINS WILL BLOTTED OUT ONLY WHEN CHRIST
READY TO COME AGAIN TO THE H.

TEACHES THAT CHRIST DID NOT ATONEMENT FOR OUR SINS
THE CROSS.

TEACHES THAT SATAN AS A
ED VICTIM IS TO BEAR AWAY SINS.

s is the atonement denied and the doctrine of justification by faith side by this pernicious doctrine that to substitute for Christ's finished in the cross the vicarious sufferings of evil who is made to be a sin bearer behalf. The whole thing is a miser-avesty on the gospel of the grace of ed they say, "We dissent from the that the atonement was made upon ss as is generally held" (Fundamennciples, page 2), and they say the ent will be complete only when Christ out of the heavenly sanctuary and r sins on the Devil and he bears them ny Bible says, "Christ was ONCE of-BEAR the sins of many" (He-

9:28) and "When he had by HIM-PURGED OUR SINS, sat down on t hand of the Majesty on high" (He-3).

(To be continued)

or's Select Notes on the unday School Lesson

(Lesson for March 15)

is Among Friends and Foes

ture Lesson—Luke 10:28 to 11:54.

nd Text—Luke 10:38-42, 52-53.

ional Reading—Psalm 86:1-7.

Text—Ye are my friends if ye do gs which I command you.—John

Introductory Note

he two preceding lessons occurred east of the Jordan, can hardly be
From John's Gospel it is evident
Jesus was present at the Feast of Ded-Jerusalem which occurred during part of what is our month of De-
A. D. 29. This seems to fix the Jesus' visit at the home of Lazarus sisters in Bethany. He did not remain long however, for the Jews attempted to kill him because he said, "I and my Father are one," but seemed to depart for Perea to escape the fury of the Jews. He returned to Bethany once more before his Passion when sent for by the sisters because of the illness and death of Lazarus. After raising Lazarus from the dead Jesus returned to Perea again by way of northern Judea and Samaria, where he remained until the Feast of the Passover the following April when he was crucified. Authorities are not agreed as to the time and place where the woes against the Pharisees were pronounced. Some think they were pronounced while Jesus was being entertained in the home of the Pharisee; others think it occurred in Perea after Jesus' return from the Feast of Dedication.

The Wrong Emphasis of Friends

Martha is typical of those who put the wrong emphasis on things that pertain to friendship. Her motives may have been as good as her sister's, but she did not understand the Master's mind as well. She took the wrong course to do him honor and her view of what was of first importance did not accord with his, and for the following reasons, which we quote:

"Martha's motive was as good as her sister's, but she misread the Master's mind.
Why is it that her way is not the best way?
In the first place, such a view of life puts too high an estimate on purely temporal things. Bear in mind that it was not a question of dinner or no dinner in that house that day, but a question of how much dinner. You are not to suppose that Mary did nothing. If you will study the narrative carefully, I think you will agree that she did do something. Another reason why such a view of life is mistaken is that it falls into peevish discontent. Martha was distracted about many things. Then again, such a life forgets that the only really effective service grows out of communion with the Master. And, finally, Martha's view of life is choosing the thing that cannot last.
Jesus' words of commendation were these,
'Mary hath chosen the good part which shall not be taken away from her.' Here was a sad part of Martha's service—it could be so quickly taken away."

Mary's Better Choice

It was not uncommon to find among the friends of Jesus those who understood him very imperfectly and proceeded to place stress upon the things that were superficial and of secondary importance, but they are rare who showed an understanding heart and chose directly the things of vital worth.
Mary was of that rare kind. The "good part" she chose was intimate fellowship with Jesus and a heart of surrender to him.
"Love seeks comradeship; and comradeship is both the fruit and the root of love. It is beautiful to think that our Lord, in his complete humanity, longed for that, and responded to that, which we find sweetest and best in our life."

Mary's choice of the "good part" does not mean that she did not regularly take her share of the household duties; it simply means that for her there were times when these things took second place.

When a beloved child is lying dangerously ill, who cares whether the meals are exactly on time or not? When a dear friend suddenly appears after a long absence, who does not find that he can drop everything and indulge in a heart-to-heart talk? Yet love decide our behavior, and that behavior will be seldom wrong. It was because Mary loved Jesus that she temporarily neglected the kitchen; but it is safe to say that after Jesus left, she went back to the kitchen with a lighter heart because she had sat at his feet.

In all the years to come, Mary was to carry as a treasure in her soul, the memory of that hour. But also Mary's act bore testimony that she recognized what Jesus is in himself, and what he demands of every soul that will come to him finding life. Jesus emphasizes the one thing needful, which is the opening of the heart and the surrendering of the life with satisfying delight in its obedience to him.

Jesus Among His Foes

Jesus had his foes, as must every man who is true to the higher conceptions of life. They who bury still deeper the prophets their fathers have killed are never friends of the men in whom Jesus is incar-

(Continued on page 15)

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK 	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
F. G. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. DuBall Ave., South Bend, Ind.

My View of an Ideal C. E. Meeting

By Ruth Hendricks

As individuals our ways of thinking are somewhat different, hence this may not be called an ideal meeting.

A meeting is really in the hands of the leader to make an interesting or uninteresting study of the lesson. Get together with God, and ask his guidance in preparation for the meeting. I believe that a well-directed, prayerfully led meeting, with full participation on a subject will rejoice the heart of God and bring blessing to those who attend. Let us presume that this leader has his work at heart and will prepare his lesson, and will be on time so as to start promptly. He may announce the topic of the lesson by making a poster. It is helpful.

First let us outline a program.

- a. Song service.
- b. Devotions.
- c. Lesson Study.
- d. Specials.
- e. Closing.

1. A song service can do much to pep up the meeting. Select a good chorister to lead the music. Hymns chosen should be appropriate to the subject.

2. Devotionals may be carried out by the leader or by several other individuals.

3. The lesson study, I think, each one should have a part in. Here is where we get the help that trains us for leadership. The method may be that of reading a clipping and commenting on it; or of answering questions; or of giving a few two or three minute talks on the lesson subject. I find a blackboard talk very interesting and helpful. Sometimes the lesson can be arranged in the form of a contest. There are various ways to make the lesson helpful and interesting.

Fifty Years of Christian Endeavor

High Points in the Society's Progress

High Points in the Society's Progress

(Note—This concludes the brief history of Christian Endeavor as published in the Christian Endeavor World. We hope our young people have appreciated it and have been interested enough to preserve it for permanent reference. We suggest that you put a copy of this sketch arranged in permanent form in your Christian Endeavor library.)

1926

February 2, Christian Endeavor Day, was featured by many union banquets where money was raised for the Clark Recognition Fund, a permanent endowment for Christian Endeavor, with its income to be used for Dr. and Mrs. Francis E. Clark while they live.

February-June, Dr. and Mrs. Francis E. Clark, on a tour of Mediterranean countries, were detained in Nice, France, because of a serious illness contracted by Dr. Clark. Upon his recovery many European countries were visited, and Christian Endeavor was greatly helped.

April 23-25, Christian Endeavor forty years old in China, had its first convention for American children, and 137 delegates were registered.

The second Border States convention in Tallinn, Estonia, brought delegations from Poland, Finland, Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia, and was marked by the presence of Dr. and Mrs. Francis E. Clark.

July 16-21, the seventh World's Convention of Christian Endeavor, held in the Crystal Palace, London, was one of the movement's greatest. Its program attractions included, in addition to Dr. and Mrs. Clark, Dr. Daniel A. Poling, Mr. David Lloyd George, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Mr. Granville Staples (president of the first Christian Endeavor society), and many others. Thirty nations responded to the roll-call.

October 3 Dr. and Mrs. Francis E. Clark celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary by a public reception in the headquarters building in Boston and by a private family gathering, attended by their three sons and one daughter with their families. Hundreds of greetings were received from all parts of the world. A few weeks earlier, on September 12, Dr. Clark celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday.

1927

January 1, as an advance step in organization the United Society of Christian Endeavor established new departments of work, as follows: Carroll M. Wright was called to establish the department of travel and recreation; Stanley B. Vandersall assumed responsibility for Christian vacations; Carlton M. Sherwood became extension secretary, with especial care of incoming fi-

4. I like to look forward to some special numbers. It may be music; a reading; a debate. On consecration Sunday the roll call may be answered by giving a Scripture verse; or the characteristics of some favorite Bible character; or a Bible story, etc.

5. Announcements, closing song and benediction. Let each one do their part to make a successful meeting and each one will find it an hour well spent.

Brighton, Indiana.

nances; and Harold Singer was chosen to supervise the work in seventeen States as mid-West secretary.

May 26, the long and useful life of Dr. Francis E. Clark, apostle to the young people, came to an end at his home in Newton, Massachusetts. The funeral services on May 28 were attended by hundreds, and messages of condolence were received from all over the world. "Christian Endeavor is his monument."

July 1-5, thirty-first International Convention at Cleveland, one of the best. Introduced the "Crusade with Christ" for Evangelism, Citizenship, and Peace.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling succeeded the late

Dr. Francis E. Clark as president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union.

Carrying out action taken at the Cleveland Convention, the United Society of Christian Endeavor became the International Society of Christian Endeavor, and continued its great work on the North American continent.

1928

The "Crusade with Christ" became a world-wide movement among scores of young people's organizations in North America. Easter morning, April 8, more than a thousand union sunrise prayer meetings were held, emphasizing the points of the Crusade, evangelism, citizenship, and peace.

1929

In July the thirty-second International Convention at Kansas City, Missouri, carried out the best traditions of Christian Endeavor.

1930

The eighth World's Convention in Leipzig, Germany, brought together representatives of forty-two nations. The international communion service in the Dom reached a high point in fellowship and love.

1931

February 2, the Golden Jubilee Anniversary of Christian Endeavor observed in all lands, especially in Great Britain and the United States.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

SOUTH GATE, CALIFORNIA

On January 6, we held our annual business meeting in which we received a detailed report from each department of the Sunday school and church, as to the work accomplished during the past year. We were much pleased that each department was able to report an increase in numbers and enthusiastic endeavor.

The Sunday school reports a gain of 13½% and the church membership shows a gain of 40 members since January, 1930. There have also been several additions to our number since these reports were made.

On January 18, Brother K. G. Stolsen of Norway was with us, and brought a very inspiring message.

At our love-feast, held on January 22, we had with us Brother N. W. Jennings and wife of Turlock, California, who brought much inspiration to this sacred service. This was the fourth love-feast held here and our hearts were drawn closer to the Master and made to rejoice because there were many who were participating in this service for the first time. There were more on this occasion than at any previous time, there being 66 communicants at the tables.

A need was felt here for a teacher-training class, to better prepare our Sunday school teachers for the teaching work of the Sunday school and to train recruits for future needs; so with the beginning of the new year we organized our teacher-training class with our pastor, Brother Leo Polman in charge of the instruction to teachers. We have a corps of faithful consecrated teachers, who are earnestly trying to better prepare themselves to bring God's message of salvation to the young people in our Sunday school.

We rejoice in the privilege of having the Southern California Bible Conference in our church. The conference is being held this week and we are having some wonderful messages from the Word brought to us by Brethren ministers from all over Southern California.

SISTER MAY BOWMAN
South Gate, California

AMONG THE CHURCHES

All the month of January and the first of February I have spent visiting the churches of Indiana, Illinois and Iowa. This journey took me to my former pastorates and churches of a quarter of a century ago, and it was a great pleasure to meet some of the older brethren like L. W. Ditch, J. K. Mel, G. W. Rench, David Augustine, J. Wirick, B. H. Flora, Thomas Plevin, J. Parr and others. I should mention J. H. English of New Troy, Michigan, who has been pastor at that place continuously for forty-five years.

Indiana has the advantage of having churches closer together than some other states and they can therefore help one another. Nevertheless there are a few that need help, or at least supervision, may be an end.

It was a pleasure, however to find that the majority of the churches prospered materially. The interest in missions was high and the offerings totalled more than in any other single month. I would like to mention of forty churches would make a lengthy report, and inasmuch as I am now plate writing a series of observations will include the entire brotherhood.

of in this report. I have now visited churches in the brotherhood but five congregations which for various reasons I could not visit.

After preaching in my old home congregations in Morrill, Kansas, and Falls, Nebraska, I will preach for a number of groups in southern Texas and hold meetings during the month of January in central California. After the meeting of the Foreign Board April 15th, I hope to be at once for Argentina where the work is so great and the laborers are so few. Reports from there have cheered me very much because the work has gone forward but there are many thousands who are in ignorance of the Gospel unless the number of laborers be largely increased. I go as well as pray.

C. F. YODER.

BELL JINGLES

Loree, Indiana, Meeting

I had the pleasure of conducting a revival meeting with Brother D. A. C. Teeter at Loree, Indiana. This was the second time Brother Teeter and I worked together. We have always enjoyed being yoked up with Brother Teeter in church work and we had a fine time. Loree is a rural church, located seven miles from Peru and is made up of a fine class of people. The Bible school has excellent leadership. The young people are one of the most active groups I have ever seen in any church.

The meeting began on Christmas night and continued over two weeks. The weather was fine. The crowds were large. The hospitality and fellowship was excellent. Brother Teeter led the singing, assisted by the wonderful talent in music, which is found among the young people of Loree.

My judgment the meeting was too short to accomplish all that might have been accomplished. The last Sunday fourteen came forward to give their lives to Christ and there was a total of twenty conversions in acclaiming Christ Lord and Redeemer.

We enjoyed having with us at different times Brethren Vanator of Peru, Mark of Mexico, folks from College Corners, Burlington and other points. The church has a very promising future and would have more room to accommodate more Bible school and church members.

Brother Teeter has had some handicap in his work on account of trouble with his eyes which are improving and which we hope may be fully restored. His is an able helper and together they have done a mighty fine piece of work in Loree. We have pleasant memories of the meeting with new friends and the victory won.

South Bend, Indiana, Revival

I had a meeting in this city fourteen days ago, when a group of our people were gathered to establish and build a work in South Bend. At that time we had a small brick building on part of the present site our church now occupies. The magnificent new building that has been erected since, the best parsonage in the brotherhood, is due to the sacrifice and faithfulness of the membership. There are no rich people in this congregation, so that the financial support has come from the pockets of the laborers, who have gone without for many months. They might have enjoyed, in order to do the work here. A fire several years ago destroyed their building and under the able leadership of Brother Rench the present buildings were erected.

It was my first campaign with Brother Leatherman whom I have known for many years. I was glad for the opportunity of getting better acquainted with him and his family. Careful preparation was made for the meeting, with good advertising, which is always a big factor in any revival. The membership was very responsive and gave the best of support. The splendid orchestra and choir, with the singing in charge of one of the finest song leaders I ever worked with, Brother Long, gave the encouragement and aid that makes one do his best. The weather was fine, the outside interest good and our audiences were large and continuous.

Brother Leatherman is a young people's pastor, which was evidenced by the large number of young people in the audience, who were always ready to do personal work. The meeting is one of the best I have held this winter. Beginning the first week, there were confessions in nearly every service. A total of fifty-five came forward and there will only be a few of these that will not unite with the church.

South Bend offers a good field for our work and bigger things are before us there. Brother Leatherman was on the job all the while, and gave every encouragement and aid I could wish. My stay and work was very enjoyable and we thank our Lord for the victory given.

W. S. BELL.

THE LOREE REVIVAL

We have been quite busy, so I have neglected to report our "season of refreshing" at Loree.

In the early part of January we held a two weeks' meeting with Dr. W. S. Bell of Ashland as evangelist.

The music for the service each evening was in charge of the pastor.

Dr. Bell preached wonderful gospel sermons, the talent of the church furnished special musical numbers, and we had a happy and profitable time together. The weather was ideal and the attendance was excellent; a well filled house at each service.

Twenty confessions were made, with two coming the following Sunday. 19 have been baptized, one united with the Baptist church at Bunker Hill and 2 are waiting baptism.

We enjoyed having Dr. Bell in our church and in our homes and hope he will come again.

MRS. D. A. C. TEETER,

Bunker Hill, Indiana.

CITY MISSION REVIVAL AT FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

About ten years ago on a Sunday night, Mrs. Lantz and myself attended the service in the City Mission at Fort Wayne. Being favorably impressed we returned. A friendship culminated which has not ceased, and we hope never will. The outgrowth of our visit to the City Mission resulted in my appointment as Superintendent of their Sunday school, director of music, and I preached for them each Thursday night for a number of years. All of this was for a better prepared ministry. It is practical knowledge which cannot be obtained elsewhere.

While returning from attending the Church of Christ Conference at Washington, D. C., the Superintendent, Rev. K. A. Hawkins and wife, and party, tarried for a night's rest in the parsonage at Berlin, Pennsylvania. It was then the plans were laid for the revival about which I am writing.

Upon our arrival in the City Mission we were greeted by friends, and found everything in readiness. Prayer meetings, choir, special music, in fact everything was arranged for, so the evangelist in charge could give his full time to the presentation of the gospel, calling sinners to repentance, and for a full surrender to God on the part of Christians, to which a number responded. Among them were six splendid young people who came to the altar and in tears gave their lives wholly to Christ for service.

Mr. Crecraft, a traveling salesman, a volunteer worker in the City Mission, a soloist of merit, will in his article give the results of this revival.

The Fort Wayne City Rescue Mission is doing a splendid service in aiding the needy in all walks of life. This service often leads to the conversion of souls. Eternity alone will tell the amount of good accomplished by the work of this Mission in the City of Fort Wayne.

I would not dare to close this article without saying a word to the Evangelist family about the invaluable service which Brother and Sister Adams rendered during the mission revival. Their messages in song, in prayer, witnessing for Christ, their prayer-band joining our pre-prayer service were greatly appreciated. I think the Missionary Board is to be congratulated in securing Rev. Adams and wife to take over the pastorate of the Fort Wayne Brethren church. Already they have adjusted themselves to the situation. They are loved by their people. Under their leadership the church is growing. The first Thursday of each month Brother and Sister Adams, with their Christian Endeavorers, take full charge of the service at the City Mission. May God bless them in all their efforts. They need our prayers, "LET US NOT FORGET THEM."

Our home was with Rev. K. A. Hawkins and family, and a real home it was. They are true servants of God. They love his work more than their own selves. They did so much for us. May God bless them.

ALBERT LANTZ,
Berlin, Pennsylvania.

MY IMPRESSIONS OF THE REVIVAL IN THE FORT WAYNE CITY MISSION

It was a providential stop-over meeting at Berlin, Pennsylvania, when Rev. Kenneth A. Hawkins, wife and party, while enroute from Washington, D. C. to Fort Wayne, Indiana, returning from the Church of Christ Conference visited Pastor-Evangelist A. L. Lantz and arranged for a revival to be held in the Fort Wayne Rescue Home and Mission auditorium.

Evangelist Lantz was accompanied by Mrs. Lantz and daughter Mary Josephine, who in turn furnished splendid service in gospel and song, and work with the young people. Too much cannot be said for the splendid message Mrs. Lantz presented to the young people on Sunday evening of January 25th.

Mr. B. L. Linville, as leader augmented with singers from different churches of the city, led an inspiring song service each evening, also quartette, duet, and solo numbers were given adding to the interest of the meetings. The meeting was dated for January 19th, to close February 1st, but its power will remain in the lives of those that felt the uplift of this old time revival.

The crowds were large and the kind that lingered after the closing prayer for personal work and fellowship. The evangelist preached the word without apology, or compromise, and adjusted his message to the need each night, changing his text frequently, that he might meet the need of the waiting congregation, made up from people from all ranks of life and from different denominations.

The Rev. Lantz is a whole gospel preacher, he had no hobbies, and gave out the word in a humble, straightforward way that gripped the hearts of the hearers, and resulted in many souls accepting Christ and Christians surrendering to God for unlimited service.

The Sunday afternoon meeting on the last day meant a great day for the youth of the Sunday school. There was no "CUT and DRIED" pre-arranged understanding. Mrs. Lantz prefaced Rev. Lantz in a very effective "Plain Talk" to the school, which will long be remembered in the lives of everyone present. Evangelist Lantz gave a heart-searching message on the "NEARNESS of GOD'S PRESENCE, after which the evangelist and Superintendent Hawkins "drew the net," there was a quiet response to the call from the young people and tender hearts surrendered for the first time to the Lord Jesus as their Savior.

On the last night of the series many had gathered long before time of opening. The song service and special numbers meant much at this time, and the evangelist was soon into his message. He used as his subject, "TRAVELERS and EMIGRANTS," taking the audience on a trip, so to speak, on the Gospel Ship. It was a glorious climax to the series and souls wept their way to calvary praying through to God.

Fifty-three souls came out for God during the two weeks' meeting. It was two weeks, now history, profitably spent for God.

MR. CRECRAFT,
Fort Wayne, Indiana.

MY IMPRESSIONS OF CITY MISSION REVIVAL

It was our privilege to attend a revival here in the city of Fort Wayne, held in the City Rescue Mission and conducted by Brother Lantz, pastor of our Berlin church. With the field prepared by a praying people, many souls were led to the Lord. Night after night, men and women, boys and girls were convicted by the Holy Spirit of their need of Jesus Christ. It is still true that, "the Gospel is the power of God unto Salvation," and faithfully preached it is bound to bring results. Fearlessly was the Word presented night after night, and God honored it, as he has promised.

Many of these folks without a church home have spoken very favorably about our own church in Ft. Wayne, standing for the whole Gospel we should be able to claim them for the church. A number of these folks have been attending very faithfully our services, and we think it fine, the spirit that directed these folks to our church.

May the Lord continue to use Brother Lantz to the saving of many souls. The people as well as pastor of this church are truly thankful for the services, for the advertising of our church, and our faith, and the people directed to us. May God find us worthy of these things, and may we faithfully live each day that many may be attracted to the Christ we love and serve.

SAM. J. ADAMS.

SHIPSHEWANA NEWS

The Indiana District Board of Trustees met with the Shipshewana committee Thursday, February 19th, in the study room of the First Brethren church at Goshen, to plan for the summer activities just ahead.

The committees were very pleased to hear the announcement by the Board of Trustees of their appointment of Mrs. C. H. Hepler as hotel manager for the summer. Mrs. Hepler has experience in this type of work, and having resided in their own cottage which is nearest the hotel for the past summers, she is well acquainted with the work. Besides she has always shown the best type of interest in the Shipshewana project. Sister Hepler is a very congenial and likable person and will have the constant help of her two daughters as well as the splendid ability and cooperation of Mr. Hepler who will be in position to be with his family each night after his day's business in Goshen is over. Mrs. Hepler is also a member of the Dormitory committee and will lend the best cooperation with our whole project. Certainly the Board has made a wise move in this choice.

The activities for the summer will be similar to last year. The Indiana Ministerium will meet there for their annual spring meeting some time in May, to be announced by the officers of this organization soon. This is an occasion looked forward to by all the Brethren ministers of Indiana with eager anticipation.

On Decoration Day the Chamber of Commerce of Shipshewana will dedicate the mound and monument to Chief Shipshewana, which is located at the very entrance to our Brethren property. Large crowds from all of LaGrange County is anticipated on this occasion. And our people from over the state will be there to manifest their appreciation of the interest taken on the part of the good people of Shipshewana.

The Bible Conference and Young Peoples' Training School is scheduled to meet simultaneously again this year. This arrangement proved very successful last year. The Bible Conference program Committee is at work and in due time will be able to announce an excellent program. The training school arrangements will be made similar to last year with few exceptions. The Sunday School Association of the Brethren church is preparing leaflets that will give complete information of this work as well as show a number of splendid views of the work last year.

Concession for the use of the grounds has again been offered the Mennonites for a ten day training school during the month of August. This concession was taken by these good people last year and was greatly appreciated by them.

It was suggested that the Board of Trustees take under advisement and study the feasibility of some type of property owners' organization. This ought to result in good to both the property owners and the Shipshewana project.

On the whole things look good for Shipshewana for the summer of 1931.

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
Chairman Publicity Committee.

THE NEXT BRETHREN TEACHER

I am getting a good many inquiries about how the Brethren Quarterlies are being received. I am glad to say that we are encouraged. The Brethren Teacher has made a fine gain in the first quarter which if continued will soon bring it to a place where one will feel somewhat compensated for the toil. Very soon we hope to bring a report about some of the other issues. I have a fine stack of letters which I have answered and so far as our own people concerned, I trust this will suffice. I am sincerely grateful for every letter I received and solicit more of constructive criticism if any one has such suggestions. Shall I pass on to you a few excerpts? I do, remember that it is but to encourage some others to ask for samples, at Better still, to fall in line with Brethren teachings and ideals in our literature.

Here are a few: From a burdened one came this, very early, "It makes one feel when they know that Brethren Sunday schools do not use our lesson helps; how we expect our young people to grow in Brethren if we do not teach them right. Another under an early date wrote: "I have just been studying next Sunday's lesson from the new 'Brethren Teacher' and I am glad to say that I like it very much. The whole tone of it is so sane and so much like the old-time religion that I was brought up on. Of late years I have been reading much that it is difficult for me to accept in its entirety, and it is refreshing to find things that I agree with. I believe I ought to get my theology from the Bible, but if I must have more than that, I prefer to have Brethren teaching." Another from the same city says, "I certainly am very pleased. * * * Scripturally, it is very attractive." From the Southland comes this: "Myself and wife were very much surprised * * * that all Brethren Sunday schools are not using Brethren literature. Surely the Church would not use Brethren literature." Another writes, "Some of us are going to put up a fight for Brethren literature 100%, but of course, we can't succeed." Strange! "If you can help us get Brethren literature back into our Sunday school all * * * will rejoice," this one continues. What a travesty is this! From a big city teacher from the west comes this encouragement: "Am very well pleased with it, particularly 'The Brethren Approach' find one of the most difficult problems to solve by method of presentation (of the lesson). I think your work will be of assistance in this problem." That's good.

Another from the West says, "It is a pleasant surprise. * * * I have been helped from the two articles in the beginning of the book." One of the oldest and most loyal of our superintendents said in a letter: "This first copy is very good. I am glad that you are in charge of this important work and feel confident that your splendid efforts will continue to advance the standards of our literature." Thank you of our prominent pastors says: "I am not satisfied with * * * I would like to see as I am very much pleased with your efforts, permit me the privilege of telling you * * * Give to the Sunday schools the Brethren churches a literature that is the same, sound and FUNDAMENTAL. BRETHREN." Turning west again, "I appreciate your splendid quarterly. It strikes the right spot and I think we should move forward at an improved rate. Your article on 'Healing' is fine."

Other Denominations

From a college president of another denomination comes this: "I received a copy of the recent Brethren Teacher. It is very good. I congratulate you on the work you are doing." From "The District," Rockwood, Pennsylvania, W. H. Elton, Editor, this: "The Brethren Teacher, Ashland, Ohio, Dr. Charles A. Barber, certainly will help to bring us to the faith.' 'The Brethren Approach' on lesson is an inspiration and a comable help toward a wholesome church. Another editor wrote, "Thanks copy of your splendid quarterly" and stor writes: "Very auspicious start. many unique features. * * * Sincere ds." From the Capital of our coun- pastor wrote: "I have read every of the January number and must say you have done credit to the Dunker of view;" while another said, "I like ter than the one we use; it sure es the Old Dunker Doctrine," while another pastor says: "We need a hren Approach; God knows we have h of the other stuff;" while a leading an of another branch of Brethren says: ve a large class of young people. I much valuable help in the Brethren mer. * * * Hope to see the day when — merger will be brotherhood wide."

I. w, friends, this is a small fraction of Many prayers were offered for contin- success and I need them. Will you join ? Will you investigate this literature u have not?

e April Brethren Teacher will soon be int. It will contain much proffered on the subject of the Resurrection. We to have a larger subscription list. Help take a better Teacher with suggestions subscriptions. CHARLES A. BAME.

SECOND BRETHREN CHURCH, LONG BEACH

January the 12th, at the Annual Meet- of the Second Brethren church, Long n, reports were handed in and indi- the following: Every department of work showed a decided increase during past year. For this and other many ings we thank the Lord, and give him e glory and praise.

uring the past year a total of 16,258 at- ted our Sunday school or an average of per Sunday. Our largest attendance of without any special effort was on No- ver 30th. The smallest attendance dur- the year was 207, and this occurred dur- the infantile paralysis epidemic and the mer season. Birthday offerings amounted 4.08 and General Sunday school offer- $691.11. Our Sunday school is under eadership of George Momme, Superin- nt, and Onas Lawson and Oliver Col- Assistant Superintendents. We have achers and four departments.

r Primary Department is in charge of H. A. Kirby, superintendent. This de- nt reported 5,358 attended last year average of 104 per Sunday, and a to- fering of $164.33. Their present en- t is 150.

e Cradle Roll Department, in charge of Onas Lawson, superintendent, reported 1,073 scholars attended during the and 16 babies were dedicated. Their nt enrollment is 84 members and 38 of umber are attending Sunday school. have six active Christian Endeavor ies. The Adults have an average at- tance of about 15. Young People's an Endeavor have a membership of tive members and an average atten- of 20. Our Intermediate Christian vor has a membership of 33 and an ge attendance of 27. This society re- an average attendance of 25 at their r Wednesday night prayer meeting. were 14 new members added to this y during the year. Recently a Junior Intermediate Christian Endeavor society was organized and their average attendance is 20. The Junior Christian Endeavor society has an average attendance of 35 to 40.

Recently a beginners' department was organized from the Junior society and this society is enjoying an average attendance of between 12 and 15. The deacons and deaconesses also handed in a fine report. Four communion services were reported totaling an attendance of 393 or an average of 98 at each communion. Thirty-five families were ministered unto. Approximately 200 calls were made during the year. The treasurer reported a total of $7,014.85 received and an expenditure of $6,864.29 during the year. The pastor reported 81 souls buried with their Lord in baptismal waters and 77 new members were received into our membership during the year. Nine of these were received by letter and 68 by baptism. The night of our Annual meeting 21 members were dropped from our roll, leaving us a total membership of 209. God's blessings are resting upon the work as a whole. Many visitors and strangers are attending the meetings from Sunday to Sunday and we are looking forward to a great harvest of souls this coming year, God willing.

We covet an interest in your prayers.

MRS. GEORGE MOMME,
Corresponding Secretary.

NAPPANEE, INDIANA

The First Brethren church of Nappanee, Indiana is advancing steadily and is endeavoring to function for her Lord and the Brethren cause in this part of God's vineyard.

The activities of church and the church spirit have been rising steadily ever since the new church year that began last September.

Our people are responding splendidly and the response is notable.

Every department is growing and uniting together for the one purpose of service in the Master's cause.

The one department I wish to stress at this time is the Sunday school. This department has been growing steadily for eighteen months. The first year of my pastorate was discouraging due to an epidemic of smallpox. This lasted for six months on and off. But just as soon as conditions righted themselves we began to move along nicely. Brother William Widmoyer was Sunday school superintendent the first year of my pastorate in Nappanee. All who know William know him to be a splendid fellow and one quite devoted to the Brethren church despite his heavy business duties that tie him up until midnight Saturday night, he being a proprietor of a meat market in Nappanee. He put in his time and work faithfully at his task as overseer of Sunday school until last September when he turned the work over to another faithful young Post Office clerk, of our church, Samuel Sharp. Brother Sharp entered his office in a year that has been quite favorable to Sunday school work both from the standpoint of health and weather. Nevertheless it meant work. He has forged ahead with his faithful teachers and officers and scholars in the Sunday school until we have reached a point where we feel the brotherhood would like to hear of our success. Ever since last September our Sunday school has been climbing. No spectacular methods have been used but straight plugging. Our band has not functioned this year owing to a number of the players going away to school, making it difficult for the rest to organize because of the lack of those parts that go to make effective music.

Well, what is the secret? The secret lies in the fact that Nappanee has come to life and its members are in the work. They support the leader, that is evident or we could not do it. Its members are that group who are busy in the cause of Christ and the church.

Here are the figures. In the month of January, 1931 our average for Sunday school attendance was 369 for the month. For February the average was 412. How do these figures look for a town of 3,000 people and eleven churches? You divide 3,000 by eleven and you discover we have more than our share. Well, we do not turn any away; we take all that come and still look for more..

The Lord has blessed us and does bless those who trust him. He has surely blessed Nappanee abundantly during these times when conditions are strange. There is no pastor or people who delight more in learning of the success of other pastors and churches in the brotherhood than the pastor and people of Nappanee. Because on the success of all hangs the future of the Brethren church.

One is our Master and all we are Brethren.

Miss Helen Garber came to Nappanee the first of February to teach the Bible in the public schools of Nappanee and New Paris, Indiana. She is doing a splendid piece of work and the children just love her. Should any one care to communicate with her, just address her in care of Mrs. U. J. Shively, Nappanee, Indiana.

BENJ. F. OWEN.

Sunday School Notes

(Continued from page 11)

nate. We can compromise the gospel for the sake of popularity or we can stand loyal to the word of God. Nothing is to be won through compromise. Jesus never compromised. He was stern and searching and positive in his reproof of those who played double and would seek to live up to their opportunities. Hypocrisy drew a stiff reproof. The Pharisees loved to make a great show of their religion. "They posed as being extremely religious," making long prayers in the market place, wearing gorgeous robes with phylacteries, and casting into the treasury handfuls of silver with a loud ring, all of which was done to attract the attention of men. Jesus reproved them for their show of religion which had little reality about it. They magnified the little things, such as tithing mint and rue, but passed lightly over the important things, such as justice and mercy and love. Jesus took them to task for their arrogance. They sought the chief places in the synagogues and in the market places simply to be seen of men, to make a show of their religion and their importance and their dress, and to be saluted by those who would take notice of them. Jesus pronounced woe upon them, for their good exterior was simply a shield for the corruption within. He condemned those who laid heavy burdens upon the poor and did nothing to relieve them. He reproved the lawyers or teachers for their wilful ignorance. They received not the truth for themselves, nor interpreted it so that others could understand.

THE FOREIGN MISSION APPEAL

On Easter Sunday, April 5, the BRETHREN CHURCH will be put to the utmost test of loyalty to the Lord Jesus Christ.

On that day, and for some Sundays following, we shall bring our offerings for Foreign Missions. We have undertaken a great work. We have two extensive fields of work on two widely separated Continents. We are under obligations to support about thirty-five workers on these two fields. These fields are white unto the harvest. Unless we shall carry the Gospel to these needy and lost souls they will never hear it.

But we are told that Foreign Missions are a failure or too expensive or unnecessary. We are told to remain at home and attend to our own affairs. There has never been a more insidious attack upon the world-wide propagation of the Gospel than at present. We need accordingly to reassure ourselves of the ground upon which we stand. We need conviction, courage and faith. What are the basic facts of our faith that will still send us to our knees in prayer and then out into a lost world with a message of power and salvation?

I believe these facts are the following:

1. God has spoken to us in his Son. His word is unchanging, authoritative, final, effective. The Bible is not one of many books; it stands alone.
2. The world without God and this message of salvation which he revealed through Jesus Christ is lost. Sin holds men in its death-grip and renders their lot helpless, hopeless and meaningless.

The First Brethren Mission Church in Argentina, located at Rio Cuarto

"Dead in sin."

3. Jesus Christ, Son of God, Son of Man, made full and complete atonement once for all on the Cross for sin. There is no other name than his and no other way than that which he opened for cleansing by and through which man can be saved. Jesus Christ saves sinners. No other can or does.

4. God through Jesus Christ has commanded us to carry this Gospel of salvation to the whole world. We have concrete evidence at home and abroad that God's Word is true and when obeyed will bring supreme blessing.

In the light of these fundamental and inescapable facts of our faith what shall we do? Shall we call home our workers? Shall we confess that we have been mistaken? or, shall we go forward?

J. ALLEN MILLER,
President Foreign Mission Board.

First Permanent Brethren Mission Church built in Africa, at Bassai, Oubangui-Chari

Vol. LIII
Number 11

March 14
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Heart Throbs of Our Church Leaders

LI—THE CHURCH'S OPPORTUNITY

By J. L. Gingrich

Jesus not only said, "Ye are the salt of the earth," but also reminded his followers that they were "the light of the world." The Church is a great preserving factor in this sin-cursed world. Were it not for the Church's influence the chaotic condition of the world would be much worse. In the next place the Church is to bear testimony for Christ. The works of the Church should not be for self-glory but for the glory of the Father in Heaven. The time has come when the Church should change her hymn from "Hold the Fort for I am Coming" to "Rescue the Perishing." The fort should have been reached long ago. This refers to both clergy and laity. "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so," should be the motto of every saint of God.

Amidst the multitudinous organizations of the world today the Church must remain the most peculiar, most powerful and the most respected. While other organizations may or may not have their excuse for existence, nothing can take the place of the Church. If there ever was a period in history when the Church could and should be heard it is right now. The world is sick of plans and remedies which end in failure. Give God a chance.

Today individuals as well as organizations are attempting to muzzle the pulpit, silence the press, destroy the Bible and intimidate the laity of the Church. Scholars agree that a golden opportunity awaits the Church possessed with positive convictions on the "Thus saith the Word of the Lord" and then have the courage of those convictions. "And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this."

This is a general period of revivals and evangelistic endeavors.

The greatest victory for the Church, now, is a revival of those who are falling asleep, or who are asleep. "Now it is high time to awake out of sleep" (Rom. 13:11). Every Brethren church should utilize the tremendous amount of energy going to waste among her laity. These consecrated people can do a work that the clergy cannot accomplish. "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so." First, let the Church speak. The writer has very little sympathy for the church which allows the world to dictate the policy of the church. Secondly, let the Church speak forth. "Ye are my witnesses saith the Lord." Amen.

Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

THOU That Preachest

The National Education Association, at its recent Convention, rejected overwhelmingly an anti-prohibition resolution proposed by one of the Association's vice-presidents, and also reaffirmed its belief in the 18th Amendment as the most effective means of curtailing the sale and use of alcohol.

This great and influential Association composed of teachers also condemned "all false advertising and other pernicious attempts to mislead the youth in relation to the use of cigarettes and narcotics." For this action the teachers deserve commendation.

It is difficult to forget, however, that some of the members of this Association use cigarettes and tobacco in other forms. And the example thus set is more far reaching and pernicious than all the advertising in the world.

"Thou therefore that teachest another, teachest thou not thyself." That is what Paul would have said, had he been at the Teachers' Convention.

THE "Temple of the Air"

The other afternoon, while fishing for a radio program of good music, I happened to dial a certain preacher who conducts what he styles "The Temple of the Air." Ordinarily I do not spend my time listening to the sort of thing which he was delivering, but broke the rule for once.

According to his own frank claims, the gentleman is a Modernist of the modernists, of which course is his privilege. This is a free country. But his address was one of the most ill-advised pieces of special pleading, filled with half truth and misrepresentation, that I have ever heard. His characterization of those of us who believe in the reality of human sin and the need of Atonement showed that he either knows nothing about the real theology of orthodoxy or else he chose deliberately to misrepresent.

His answers to questions sent in by listeners bristled with guess work and inaccuracies. Attempting to explain Acts 15:14-17, he attributed the words to Simon Peter instead of to James. Had he even read the preceding verse carefully he would have known better.

To a question about the Resurrection of Christ he answered that no one knows what became of the Body. The only point upon which he was sure was that the Body did not rise. In this opinion he was as dogmatic as the dogmatists he condemned so severely. Most scholars have regarded the testimony of John, Peter, Paul and the many others who saw the risen Christ as worthy of consideration. But this pastor of "The Temple of the Air" dismissed them all without even so much as mention.

Judging from utterances like these over the radio, one is reminded of Paul's statement that the Devil is "the Prince of the power of the air." Of course, the speaker would call this "Fundamentalist intolerance" on my part. But after listening to him for half an hour, one is not greatly concerned about what he thinks.

THE Opinion of a Newspaper Editor

The Denver Post published by Frederick Bonfils is one of the great daily papers of the country. Not long ago Mr. Bonfils wrote a remarkable editorial which is refreshing after listening to some of the preachers. I quote it in part:

"A firm faith in the Gospel of Christ is what the world needs most. . . . Philosophy from Hammurabi to Herbert Spencer leaves the heart cold. Science down to Einstein is barren to a hungering soul. But Christ is the Bread and Water of Life. Without his Life and Words the human soul would starve and shrivel to ashes. When all else is stale and barren his words are as satisfying as cold water in a desert. Compared with Christ, Socrates is but a fool. Compared with him such great men as Cato and Sophocles are but babbling children. They never taught the beautiful lesson of sacrifice for sin. . . . While they feed the intellect the Lord Jesus feeds the human heart. 'He that believeth in me hath everlasting life,' he said. The Light of the world is Jesus."

This is good Gospel. If more preachers believed and preached it with fire burning in their hearts, the churches would make more progress.

ANOTHER Scholarly Pessimist

Guglielmo Ferrero, famous Italian historian whose writings have been read by the American public for the last fifteen years, is in this country for a visit and lecture tour. In his first article written for the New York American since arriving, he draws a gloomy picture of the world.

He says that "Half the world no longer knows how to govern itself. . . . Revolutions are multiplied—no one knows why. Half the world has become bankrupt or is about to become so, and knows no longer how to feed its increasing population."

"Nearly everywhere reserves which had been accumulated since 1848 have been dissipated. Credit has been exhausted by a fantastic multiplication of debts. How many millions are unemployed? Industry and agriculture suffer together from the consequences of fifteen years of unmitigated waste."

"A wind of folly, lunacy, violence and cruelty blows over the world."

"After an immense war, during which ten million men were sacrificed to defend liberty and democracy, two-thirds of Europe is groaning under tyrannies such as had never been known before, even during the darkest times of the old regime."

"The final disaster is that in this chaos men's minds have once more become a prey to the obsession of war. Western civilization is passing through one of its most dangerous and painful moments of its history. A monstrous war and a peace hastily patched up with incredible light-heartedness have plunged Europe and Asia into despair. At some moments it seems as if the whole world were reeling on its base."

After reading this man's estimate of the times, it is a great comfort to recall the words of Romans 13:12, "The night is far spent; the Day is at hand."

SHORT Story of Modern Life

A young wife and husband were playing bridge whist at a party given in their fashionable Kansas City apartment.

The husband made a poor play. The wife called him a "bum bridge player."

He slapped her face.

She shot him.

The jury called it an "accident."

The exonerated wife weeps because of nervous strain of losing her husband in a trial for murder.

This story suggests all kinds of but I shall only quote from a letter by the Apostle Paul about nineteen centuries ago: "This know that in the last perilous times shall come: for men shall be lovers of their own selves . . . without affection . . . fierce . . . heady . . . of pleasure more than lovers of God." (Tim. 3:1-4).

Waging War for Human Rights

Have we not slipped back from our conception of our foreigners, which demand the same standard of ethical group life as in our individual relations? demand of officers that they hold offices in sacred trust for the people they represent, and not for their personal advantages. There are, of course, men and women holding office who stand out like shining lights for their integrity. But on the whole we have lowered our standard in government. We have failed to require that it be government of the people, and by the people, and for the people, and we have tolerated and acquiesced in the upgrowth of the conception that it is government of the politicians, by the politicians and for the politicians.

In other words, just because the world no longer steal in their moccasins and trails and burn our houses and steal our women, because no longer red coats threaten our frontiers and threaten our sovereignty, this does not mean that the eternal struggle is not on. The age challenges us to persevere in establishing the spiritual laws forefathers aided in setting up the foundations of our government. Every man anxious to hasten to the battlefield of duty to save America from the apathy, indifference, the ignorance which threaten our most cherished institutions.—Judge E. Allen, in the Methodist Press.

"Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

IN THIS NUMBER

The Church Being Criticised—Editor,
Short Talks by the Editor,
Editorial Review,
Some Modern Educational Ideals—E. Jacobs,
Facing the Facts of Prohibition—Graham Taylor,
Studies in the Types—R. I. Hubbard,
Studies in the Scriptures—C. F. W. Walder,
Significant News and Views,
The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon,
Seventh Day Adventism—W. E. Bierwolf,
Editor's Notes on the S. S. Lesson—Christian Endeavor at Berne, India—Neva Frank,
News from the Field,
Announcements,

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor
R. R. TEETER
Business Manager
and all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

The Church Being Criticised

are loose times, morally, and the church is being widely for the condition. We are not interested in arguing the present state is worse or better than any that preceded the past; we simply say that it is bad. It is so bad that it deserves our attention. It is the bad condition that prevails and the recently voiced responsibility therefor that we are concerned with and not any comparisons of conditions. The church is accused of being responsible for the present moral confusion and and particularly the aggressions of organized evil.

Church criticism is not hard nor is it necessarily significant. It is neither intelligence nor conscience. Furthermore, it is new for the church and church members to be criticized. It has been going on ever since there were church members. Criticism has been malicious and some sincere, some has been superficial and libelous and some thoughtful and warranted. The church's critics are ignorant, and some are actuated by bad motives. Even among preachers themselves there is criticism that is no credit to those offering it. Some gain a measure of popularity thereby that their mediocre talents could never otherwise command, but at what price! When evangelists heap abuse and diatribes upon churches and church members in order to draw the ears of the ungodly and unchurched folks and win attention, rather than benefitting the cause of Christ, they dishonor the church, and deter the advancing kingdom of God, and are spoken by those who ought to be defending the church, they give the world the impression of a house divided against itself. Withstanding all this, we must not flinch too much, nor defend ourselves too vigorously, in the face of the oft-repeated criticism of church folks, as connected in a responsible way with the conditions that prevail and the still worse conditions that exist. We will do ourselves more credit by facing the charges with too much self pity and bias and seek to profit by such criticism of truth as they contain. And we shall often find all too much truth for our comfort, especially when the criticisms are directed against men high in character and station and from motives that are impugned.

For example, while addressing the Baptist Assembly in Virginia Governor Pollard leveled a criticism against church membership relation to Prohibition that we do well to ponder. He debated bootlegging would languish if church members would patronize illicit sellers. In other words, church members are responsible for keeping the traffic alive. So serious is the situation as he views it, that "unless members of the church are observed to observe the prohibition laws to the point of total abstinence drinking the law is doomed." And he is a life-long prohibitionist. There is danger of the Ohio legislature passing a law legalizing Sunday movies and church member legislators and members in the capacity of newspaper editors are among the church's interests' most obedient advocates of Sunday operation. If Sunday movies are legalized it will be because church members among the rank and file cast the deciding influence in the proposed action. The gamblers are trying to put a stop to the Missouri legislature legalizing gambling. If they are successful the responsibility will rest upon church members. It will be "the Baptists, Disciples, Presbyterians, Methodists, Presbyterians and other good church members in the legislature act as gamblers instead of as the servants of Jesus Christ," said The Christian Evangelist, published in St. Louis and circulated in Missouri. Church members, we are told, are responsible for the way in which such men as "Big Bill" Thompson are able to win elections and keep themselves in power and in corruption. The points in the indictment might be enumerated more. On every hand the responsibility of church folks in the present critical situation that exists is being emphasized. The charges are over-drawn, that the number of really good church members who are cooperating with the forces of evil are not as many as the critics claim, yet the fact remains that there are vast numbers who have belied the principles of Christ and are proving untrue to their church vows. And they are numerous enough to hold the balance of power in many communities, and because their influence is being cast in with the powers of darkness, they are judged as children of darkness and are bringing discredit upon the church and whole cause of Christ. Let us not spend too much time explaining and protesting that the accusations against church people are often exaggerated and unjust, but rather let us take a lesson from the situation. Let us take cognizance of the fact that church folks need to be criticised—all of us do, and let us set about doing it ourselves in a proper, Christian way. It will prove a wholesome experience.

There is a place and a need for criticism, and we do well not to neglect it. There can be little profit from flaying church members in the presence of a grinning, scornful, worldly crowd, merely to win its favor, yet church folks need criticism of the right kind and in the right way. That stands for preachers alike. We need to have our sins laid bare, not with mocking sarcasm, but with tenderness and godliness and compassion. We need to be reproved and brought up to standard. There must be admonition and discipline and chastening, that we may strive after that degree of godliness and righteousness that is pleasing to our Lord.

And ministers are the ordained interpreters and custodians of divine standards, not in the sense that any unique relation is committed unto them, nor that in their ordination makes them per se the voice and representative of God, but in the sense that their special training and constant devotion to the study of God's word and to the practice of his spiritual presence makes them especially fit to perform that service. Every minister who exercises faithfully such function, makes himself the first subject of his every message of reproof and correction, and the while he calls others out of their lame and stumbling ways he maintains a Christ-like compassion and humility and considers himself lest he also be tempted. But criticism and correction must be offered, for the standards of God must be maintained. And it comes scripturally within the minister's province to "reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine." And if the standards of church life and conduct have been lowered and if the church is not wielding the influence that might rightly be expected of it, we must look to the minister first in placing the responsibility.

Short Talks by the Editor on STEPS IN THE WAY TO LIFE AND FELLOWSHIP

II. BELIEF

Repentance of sin must be accompanied by belief in Jesus Christ as the Son of God and Savior of men. As one steps out of the darkness of sin, he must step into the light of faith in the Sun of Righteousness. As he changes his mind (or repents) as to the worth of the things of this world and turns his back upon them all, he must at the same time turn his face with confidence and attachment to the One who alone is able to save from the power of the world. Thus faith lays hold on Jesus and embraces him with conviction and joyful trust as the Messiah, the anointed of God, the divinely appointed author of salvation, and the Lord of the Kingdom and of every individual life.

Saving faith accepts what Jesus did for us. It believes that he "died for our sins according to the scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures" (1 Cor. 15:3, 4). This statement is not merely the counsel of Paul, but is the very message which was delivered unto him to preach, as he himself declares preceding the statement quoted. He wrote to the Romans (5:8): "But God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." And to Timothy (1 Tim. 1:15) he wrote: "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." And Jesus himself said concerning his own mission: "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19:10). And that that salvation was to be accomplished through his own suffering and death, he was fully aware, for he said: "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up" (John 3:14).

Belief that saves recognizes in Jesus the world's one and only Savior. That was our Lord's own claim concerning himself: "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me" (John 14:6). There is positively no other way. There is life in none other. He alone has "the words of eternal life" (John 6:68; 17:8).

We may benefit from what Jesus did for us by merely believing. Our Lord himself made conditions just that simple in his conversation with Nicodemus: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). Such was the teaching of Philip to the eunuch—"If thou believest with all thine heart" (Acts 8:37). When the jailor cried to Paul and Silas, "What must

(Continued on page 9)

EDITORIAL REVIEW

EASTER SUNDAY IS FOREIGN MISSION DAY.

A message this week from Alamo, Texas, informs us that Dr. C. F. Yoder visited that community and proclaimed with power the urgency of carrying the "Good News" to all the world. He spoke in a home and in a community church, at the latter place giving his illustrated lecture.

Christian Endeavorers will enjoy reading the communication from the wide-awake society at Berne, Indiana. They have numbers and interest and goals, and they are achieving their goals. A contest with the Fort Wayne society is on. Who else has something of interest to report? Send reports to Brother Whitmer, the department editor, at South Bend, Indiana.

We are in receipt of the 1931 "Year Book" of the First church of Long Beach, California, giving complete membership roll, financial reports and the organization of church and all its various auxiliaries and departments, much other material pertaining to the work and program of that church. It is a fifty-nine page booklet, neatly printed and carries the names of Louis S. Bauman, D.D., Pastor, and Paul R. Bauman, Assistant. The total membership at the close of 1930 was 595 and the total financial receipts for the year were $13,063.06.

At our request we have a report of the "Church College Night" educational program which is in operation at the Falls City, Nebraska, church, where Brother H. H. Rowsey is pastor. It is a splendid means of securing the religious education and leadership training of the young people and of preparing them for church membership, and we wanted him to share his plan with Evangelist readers, which he has done by means of the pen of one of his faithful teachers, Prof. J. G. Dodd. The pastor and his wife are also teachers.

Brother C. C. Grisso introduces his new church calendar with the following announced purpose: "(1) To keep before every member of the Brethren families the work of our church in its several interests, such as missions, finances, evangelism, doctrines, methods of work and all the appointed services of the church. (2) To keep in touch with our isolated membership. (3) To reach homes that are not Brethren in an effort to get them interested in the church and a building up of the same in the community." A calendar devoted to such an aim deserves to succeed, and the Lanark church will doubtless help their pastor make it succeed.

Brother S. C. Christiansen made a visit in his capacity as district evangelist of the Third church of Philadelphia, on the occasion of the twentieth anniversary of its founding, and writes of its splendidly growing condition under the consecrated leadership of Brother W. A. Steffler, mentioning also the names of Brother Braker and Harry Cassel, whose leadership figured so largely in its early days. He says this church is hoping soon to become entirely self-supporting. He also says that God has blessed in various ways the people of his own church at Allentown, Pennsylvania, and that they are encouraged to press on. He has some people who are especially loyal and ready to be of service in saving of souls.

A very successful evangelistic campaign was recently conducted at the First Brethren church of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, where Brother Charles H. Ashman is pastor and Brother R. Paul Miller was the evangelist. It is not hard to imagine success as a result of a campaign with two such energetic and capable leaders in evangelism as these two brethren are. Besides the strong preparation there was splendid preparation and the people seem to have been ready for God to pour out his Spirit upon them in power. There were 173 public confessions, 62 of which were made by persons having previously been church members, and which will no doubt add strength to the church. At the time of the writing, 51 baptisms had been recorded and others awaited baptism. As previously suggested, Brethren Ashman and Miller made an exceptional team, each writes with appreciation of the work of the other, and the fine cooperation of the church.

The church at Masontown, Pennsylvania, has enjoyed a special season of refreshing from the Lord as a result of the evangelistic campaign conducted by Brother W. C. Benshoff. In three weeks were added to the church by baptism and two by letter, more are yet to be baptized. The church membership was greatly revived and many reconsecrated. Brother H. W. Benshoff and his faithful people had made splendid preparation through prayer and advertising and then helped to win souls by vital and personal work. A junior and an adult choir added richness to the success of the campaign. This was Brother Benshoff's series of meetings with the Masontown people and it seems to have been his best. He also speaks a word for his own church at Waynesboro, where the work is progressing nicely, one soul has recently been received by baptism. A Sisterhood is a recent addition to the church's auxiliary organizations.

From Bryan, Ohio, come reports from the pastor and his secretary, telling of progress in the Lord's work since the departure of Brother and Sister Stewart on the field. They were all received and have already made their leadership highly valued to the church. An evangelistic campaign conducted by the pastor resulted in eighteen confessions and fifteen being added to the church by baptism. Since the close of the meetings another soul made the confession and been baptized into the church. The various departments of the church are functioning splendidly, every general interest received proper attention as the members each arrived. A church may not be able to do all it would like to do in a financial way for the various national interest but the claims are presented and the people are given an opportunity that meant much in the way of building up loyalty, and the church can be counted on to do more in the future though its resources may be limited. May God continue to increase the number of churches that never fail to cooperate with the agencies of the general brotherhood.

PRAYER REQUESTS FOR THIS WEEK—

Pray for the revival meeting that begins March 22, at Waynesboro, Pennsylvania, with the pastor, Brother W. C. Benshoff as evangelist.

The Christian Endeavor society of Berne, Indiana, asks for prayer. Let Endeavorers take note.

Prayer is requested for the evangelistic campaign now in progress at Ellet, Ohio, where Dr. J. C. Beal is the evangelist and Brother Floyd Sibert, the pastor.

Pray for an offering for Foreign Missions adequate to the needs.

Pray for the evangelistic campaign in progress at Peru, Ohio, with Brother R. Paul Miller as evangelist and Brother I. C. Miller as pastor.

Some Modern Educational Ideals

By President Edwin E. Jacobs, Ph.D.

readers of this paper who have read the College may recall that I, as well as some others of the staff here, attended certain educational meetings at the college year. I want, in this brief article, to share some of my impressions, for I think I have noted some changes since I first began to attend such meetings more than twenty-five years ago.

Of course, there is a tendency to standardize educational practices. The individuality of certain schools has been somewhat lost by this process. Since there are so many powerful standardizing agencies, they are able to enforce common standards. This growing tendency, I think, affects both ways, for better or for worse.

Denominational lines in education are becoming less distinct. In an older day, certain schools were known as centers of denominational strength. As time goes on, not a few of the so-called denominational colleges without denominational control and one may even believe that the denominational air has largely disappeared.

In some ways this is to be regretted, for it opens the door to liberalism that is somewhat not so good. Moreover, liberalism has acted to cause church members to lose interest in what formerly was their school. Many of these church members poured money into schools which now have slipped from their control. It looks now, the denominational colleges will have to exercise eternal vigilance in order to maintain anything like a distinctive air.

But what seems to me to be more sinister, is the tendency to get farther away from what ought to be the Christian point in education. No one knows the forces at work excepting those who are directly related to college administration. At certain college meetings which I attend regularly I have never yet heard a prayer offered, yet all, or nearly all, of the member institutions are church schools. It occurs to me that this tendency to secularizing of education is not so good. It may contribute to what we sometimes so glibly call "academic freedom", but do we want complete academic freedom? Is that the ideal? Are there certain things which a denominational school ought to teach and some which it ought not to teach?

Let us consider for a moment, the ordinary college student. All, or by far the majority, have been trained in the country's "foremost universities," as the catalogues point out with justifiable pride. There, universities have faculty members of the most diverse beliefs. Not a few are openly and avowedly opposed to, or at least careless of, Christian ideals. The graduate student passes from one to another of the university teachers, gathering as he goes, a slant here, positive teaching there, and perhaps, nothing much, elsewhere. At last he is graduated with the coveted degree and goes out into a teaching position. Now, he must be a man of upstanding qualities and with a mind of his own, if he comes through with settled convictions on certain points.

College faculties are, therefore, composed of men of varied views, if they are taken at random from graduate schools. This is not at all saying but that there are many, many, men who do come through with a decided Christian point of view, however. Hence, dominated as all education is, to a greater or less extent in America, by these great graduate schools, it is easy to see how college education could easily decline from what was formerly a very decided point of view. I have answered quite a few letters recently about candidates, some for colleges, and I have yet to have a letter inquiring about church membership.

4. There is, on the other hand, a strong tendency to "improve college teaching," as the programs point out. Men must more and more be trained for their places. This is right, for the youth of today come from the high schools far and away better prepared than they did twenty-five years ago. The intellectual element is being stressed more and more in education.

5. Of course there is the usual stress upon material equipment. How the continued financial depression will affect this standard, is problematic.

What of the future? It occurs to the writer that there is right now a place for the denominational college which is frankly and avowedly Christian in its point of view. I am concerned with "denominational Chemistry," to put it in the words of another, for there is no such thing, but I am much concerned about the character, the point of view, and the approach of the teacher. These are all important, and I dare say as important to the future as is the content of the course in Chemistry for, be it known, that education in Mathematics, Chemistry, Biology, History, etc., consists of something more than formulae, reactions, classification, and dates. Yet some people seem to overlook that very important fact.

I take it that the denominational college has at least two duties. First, it has a duty to be intellectually awake, but the next is no less important, viz., to stand for those cardinal teachings of the denomination which it owns, controls it, and called it into existence. And what is encouraging, there are still some such colleges. According to a statement made at the recent meeting of the Association of American Colleges at Indianapolis, there are 669 four year colleges in the United States. Of this

Planting Trees by the River

Long observation of the withering effects of the desert sun appears to have given many of the Hebrews a love for the figure of the life-giving stream. In that Garden where life began, there were trees by the river. In the redeemed world, where waters from beneath the door of the temple transformed the desert, the prophet saw many trees beside the river. In the Heavenly Jerusalem, come down from God out of Heaven, the seer found trees by the river.

Men grow only beside the life-giving waters. They soon become the victims of the desert if the waters are stopped. There can be no life of the spirit, except by the river side. And when the roots are starved there is no fruit.

* * * * *

Productive Christian leadership must be rooted in a fertile soil. For such a plant there must be adequate sustenance. The appointed means for wholesome spiritual growth is the Word of God. Life rooted there is abundantly fruitful, maintains a natural development, and fulfills its purpose. Christian leaders who have been brought into vital contact with this Word are equipped for a profitable career.

—Professor Paul F. Barackman.

total number, the ordinary man could name but a very few. But there are some which get their names in the public prints for a great variety of reasons,—athletics, certain scandals, certain renegade teaching, great endowments, etc., while by far the majority go on from day to day doing their small part in the great scheme of public education. This latter class is often passed by with small notice.

If I have not sensed the situation wrongly, I believe that there is a place for the denomination-owned and denomination-controlled college which is at the same time adequately manned and equipped. And it will lose nothing by being known as frankly and avowedly Christian.

Ashland, Ohio.

Facing the Facts of Prohibition

By Graham Taylor (Chicago Commons) in Chicago Daily News, January 31, 1931

Two-thirds of the 90,000 or more words of the report by the national commission on law observance on enforcement of prohibition laws are devoted to statements of facts upon which the commissioners' conclusions are based. Yet there is little if any reference to these facts in the discussion of the conclusions by statesmen and editors which have so far been reported. Comparatively few others have had a chance to see the full report.

A well-informed eastern journalist recently remarked that "prohibition is sure to come up whenever two or more Americans meet, but there is not much evidence to a casual observer that many Americans know anything about the history of prohibition even during the last ten years."

Up to the Jury of Public Opinion

And yet from now on the jury of public opinion, through its legislative spokesmen, must face the facts thus officially put in evidence and decide what to do about them. No decision that ignores them can stand. Nor can they be brushed aside by any such snap judgment as Senator Glenn is reported to have made, discarding the commission's report as "worthless and a waste of money." It is timely, therefore, to let every one who can read and reason know what those facts are. They were sought and found at more sources of information than have ever been made available before. They are the facts of the situation which every community has had to face which now confronts it and which hereafter must be reckoned with in dealing with the liquor habit and the liquor traffic. The necessity to control them is shown to be recognized in all civilized countries. Laws to restrict the traffic have been enacted for 600 years. Our continental congress in 1777 passed one. At its first session under the constitution in 1789 congress taxed the traffic not only for revenue but to restrict it. So the national as well as the state governments asserted their right to do so long before they ventured to prohibit it.

Why the Great Venture?

Why it was ventured, and what a venture it is, is shown by the difficulties the enforcement of all liquor laws have encountered. The federal tax on liquor distilled in the United States was so defied that the "whisky insurrection" in 1792 was suppressed in Pennsylvania only by troops of the regular army. After 1862 every brewery and distillery operated under federal license and police control.

Facts are cited to show that failure to enforce regulatory laws during 150 years and the political aggressions of the liquor trade chiefly account for the recourse to prohibition. Commenting on this fact, the judicially-minded author of "The Dry Decade" asserts: "There never moment in the history of these years when the br could not have reformed the saloon, which was the front of attack in the campaign against the vested ests made by the prohibition movement." And this ing was repeatedly urged upon them by Hugh Fo able editor of the Brewers' Year-Book. While oppo has always been encountered in enforcing all laws lating the relation of the individual to the communit no such venture had ever been undertaken as to pr this traffic and enforce police regulation over 3,50 square miles and 122,000,000 people accustomed to ssume 2,000,000 gallons of alcoholic beverages per an "Certainly an ambitious undertaking for any ge ment," remarks one of the commissioners.

Facts on All Sides Fairly Stated

No facts are withheld that show what has hap More facts were available to prove how far short enforcement the laws have fallen; how increasingly have been disregarded by hitherto respectable, law ing people; how powerful and widespread the illicit has grown; how great is the demand which creates ply against all odds; how dangerous alike are the defiance of this and other laws by underworld outlaw the weakened respect for law itself by many people whole communities and how states are arrayed a the national government on this law enforcement i

Fewer facts tell the story of the "bad start" en ment got through the first seven years, the intol abuses and corruptions attending it, the resentment aroused, the better methods and effects during th three years. These and many other facts, bearing upon the hope for more effective enforcement and the proof that the law is unenforceable, are impar stated.

The economic and social gains during the decad fully emphasized, but caution is well taken in attri them not only, or even chiefly, to prohibition, but to contributory conditions. With these statements of all the commissioners agree. And they are a unit posing the return of the saloon under any form or tion.

Outlawing the Saloon the Great Gain to be Conserved

The consensus is well expressed by one of the w opposes prohibition that "the abolition in law of the commercialized liquor traffic and the licensed saloon, opal for private profit, was the greatest step forward taken in America looking to the control of that tr The saloon is gone forever. It belongs as completely the past as the institution of human slavery. How st it is that "antisaloon" has been the rallying cry whi on to prohibition, and yet rallies those opposed to it P haps more than anything else the fear that the lo might return underlay the distrust of the proposed natives to the present system which divided the com sioners in framing their recommendations. It in the majority of them to give the benefit of the do the continuance and re-enforcement of the present at least until it had a fairer chance to prove its er ability. Only then and after such delay as might some alternative to be safer and better did most of seem to feel justified in advocating the changes eac ferred. This caution, and the facts it emphasized well be heeded both by the wets and the dries—le decision to change the law leaves liquor as uncon as it was when legalized, or the decision to retain p tion in the law leaves it without any control in fact in either event leaving the country in confusion o confounded.

by weighing facts on both sides can we see the situation. One-sided theories never can settle so ted a problem as now creates one of the most decisive crises our country has ever faced.
go Commons.

Studies in the Types

By R. I. Humbert

(Study Number Two)

THE PASSOVER

ve seen our salvation typified in the incident of ent of brass that Moses formed and "lifted up" wilderness (Jno. 3:14). There was no hope for a man unless he believed the message and looked he serpent. Let us now consider the passover as f the cross in our salvation.

ad repeatedly plagued the Egyptians but Pharaoh ornly refused to grant liberty to the Israelites. as in ruins and Pharaoh's heart was hard. "Get n me, take heed to thyself, see my face no more; at day thou seest my face thou shalt die. And aid, Thou hast spoken well, I will see thy face ore" (Ex. 10:28).

ions concerning the passover were then given. A s to be taken on the tenth day of the month and four days. At evening on the fourteenth day it e killed and its blood applied to the lintel and two s of the door of their house.

night the Lord should smite all the first born of less there was blood on the door post. "When I blood I will pass over you" (Ex. 12:13).

The Lamb of God

1500 years later John the Baptist, seeing Jesus toward him, said, "Behold the Lamb of God, which way the sin of the world" (Jno. 1:29). To what refer when he called Christ a lamb?

e not left in darkness for we find our answer in hians 5:7, "Christ our passover is sacrificed for us we see that the passover lamb was a type of ho was the true lamb of God, the shedding of od would make atonement for humanity.

The Death of Christ

did not save us by his life. The passover lamb perfect and Christ's perfect life had to do with g a fit subject for sacrifice. All during his life n perfect communion with the Father and called y Father, Righteous Father and talked to him feet fellowship. It was on the cross that he bore nd it was then that God the Father who could d sin, hid his face and brought forth the terrible God! My God! why hast thou forsaken me?"

Substitution

ross nearby a thief not fit to live on earth was made fit to live in heaven forever. Unseen hands d the load of sin from off his shoulders and on him who hung on the center cross. The thief n a new found salvation while our Lord stag- der the awful load of humanities guilt. as died and the blood of God's passover lamb shed. But it is of no avail unless it is applied.

Must Be Applied

ve an Israelite would have killed the lamb and a vessel containing the blood on the door step. have been safe? No, the blood had to be ap- was worthless to that individual. But how is it to be applied? Must they find some difficult method? No, far from it. A bunch of hyssop, a most common weed growing everywhere, was used to apply the blood.

It is thus with the blood of Christ, it is to be applied by the most common thing on earth—Faith. We know how to have faith in a bank. We can trust our friend and even an automobile. It is with this same faith and trust that we apply the blood of Christ to our heart. He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that be- God abideth on him (Jno. 3:36).

An Israelite who applied the blood was safe regardless of his own feelings. God did not say, "When I see how you are feeling about the matter I may save you," but God did say, "When I see the blood I will pass over you." God's lamb has been slain and a person who fully trusts our Lord Jesus Christ for his salvation is as safe as God can make him for he has "everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life" (Jno. 5:24).

Lake Odessa, Michigan.

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

THE FAITH OF THE GOSPEL

(Continued from last week)

IV. MEMBERS

1. Qualifications—Inasmuch as the kingdom of God is spiritual, entrance to it is by a spiritual birth (Jn. 3:3-5), and the members are "new creatures" (2 Cor. 5:17). The agents in the process are: the divine Trinity,—the Father (Jas. 1:18), the Son (Jn. 1:12) and the Spirit (Tit. 3:5,6). These use the testimony of the Word of God (1 Pet. 1:33) and of the church of God (Acts 1:8). The steps are: faith (Jn. 3:35), repentance (Acts 2:38) and baptism (Matt. 28:19). The evidence of conversion is seen in obedience to God (1 Jn. 5:2), the gifts and fruit of the Spirit (1 Cor. 12:11; Gal. 5:22, 23), and brotherly love (Jn. 13:34, 35).

2. Duties of members

(1) Private life—The first duty of disciples of Christ is to obey the greatest commandments: love God supremely and their neighbors as themselves. Such love does not come of itself. It is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Spirit (Rom. 5:5). It is nourished by the means of grace that God has given in the church. These include the study of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16), prayer (Lk. 18:1-14), fasting (Matt. 6:7, 8), meetings of the church (Heb. 10:25; Eph. 5:19, 20), meditation on the things of God (1 Tim. 4:13-15), the use of talents (1 Tim. 4:14). On the contrary the selfish life is fostered by worldly companions, worldly amusements and worldly ambitions (1 Jn. 2:15-17; Jas. 4:4).

2. Domestic life—The home is the foundation of society. A true Christian cannot be happy with a Christ-rejecting companion (1 Cor. 7:39; Amos 4:3). The husband is the head of the family (1 Cor. 11:2), responsible for its discipline (1 Tim. 3:4, 5), but should treat his wife as his own body (Eph. 5:22-29), as also the wife should love her husband (1 Pet. 3:1-8).

The marriage union, being also a matter of society should conform to the laws of the state as well as the precepts of the word of God. The contracting parties should prepare themselves by a study of the duties of married life, the care of the health, the rearing of children and the mutual obligations of husband and wife. Such preparation should be a pre-requisite to marriage. The blessing of God cannot be asked upon something which he does not approve, therefore pastors should never be accomplices to unscriptural marriages. The union being taken for life should be considered with the utmost care, taking into account the physical, mental and moral aptitudes of the contracting parties. The interests of relatives and friends should not be forgotten.

The Gospel permits separation (and, seemingly the remarriage of the innocent party) for the cause of adultery (Matt. 19:1-12; 1 Cor. 7:10-15).

The parents should love their children and provide for them (1 Tim. 5:8), rearing them in the discipline of the Lord (Eph. 6:1).

It is infinitely better to leave them an inheritance of education and Christian character than a fortune of money. If parents wish to keep their children at home, away from the evil influences of the streets or amusement resorts they must make home attractive. There should be music, books, papers, games, tools,—all that they need to pass the time with interest as well as profit.

The coming of children should be prepared for by prayer, and it is a good custom to publicly consecrate them to the Lord (Matt. 19:3-15).

Family worship should be considered indispensable to those who wish to obey the command to bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord (Eph. 6:1, 2).

Children should obey their parents in the Lord (Eph. 6:3) and this obedience should be required, by love if possible, by force if necessary. Many parents are rearing criminals to disobey state laws by allowing them first to disobey parental laws.

In the Christian home servants and masters should treat each other as brethren (Eph. 6:5-9). Hospitality should abound without grudging (Heb. 13:2).

(To be continued)

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

THE NEW SANHEDRIN

In April, 1929, a few leading orthodox Jews of Denver, Colorado, headed by Solomon Shwayder, a lawyer, inaugurated a movement to reorganize the ancient Jewish Sanhedrin, for the purpose of revising the trial of Jesus. These men, and others of the same spirit, moved by a sense of justice and burdened with the questionings and misgivings of their people, seek to establish for themselves and for all Israel the truth concerning the life, work, teachings, trial and death of Jesus. They feel that this can only be done by an official body representing all Israel, since he was condemned by official Israel. Hence the plan for the Sanhedrin. David L. Cooper has written a book entitled, "The New Sanhedrin, or The Revision of the Trial of Jesus," which tells of the inception and progress of this movement and giving the documents relating thereto. It promises to be a movement of the utmost significance, with the possibility of the most important developments. At any rate, it indicates a strange stirring of national conscience with respect to Israel's attitude toward their Christ. Thus does God move the hearts of men when great events are pending.

("Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." Romans 11:25).—The Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

PEOPLE AROUSED

There has been a strong, widespread resentment against the picture of Abraham Lincoln presented by Edgar Lee Masters. Many reviews and other utterances have branded it as coarse, vulgar and untrue. Someone has introduced a bill in Congress to bar it from the mails. We cannot understand this great desire on the part of certain types of minds to belittle, disparage and even besmirch the greatest heroes. Abraham Lincoln has made his place "upstart" is going to move him. The book is a good one buy.—The Presbyterian.

RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA

The question whether the United States should recognize the Soviet Republic seems to be popping up continually. It stay down. When so weighty an authority as John Bassett, formerly a judge of the World Court and among the foremost international lawyers, takes the field, his argument demands attention. The United States, says Judge Moore, "necessarily recognize the Soviet Government when it permitted Russia to adhere to the Kellogg-Briand Pact." He declares that the supposition that recognition of a government implies approval of its constitution, its economic system, its attitude toward religion and its course of conduct is "preposterous and mischievous." That differences shall not be settled by war, and then to one of the parties the recognition which would enable them to be settled by diplomacy is, in Judge Moore's opinion, to "push the limit of incoherence."—The Baptist.

RELIGIOUS WORK FOR INDIAN CHILDREN

Of approximately a hundred thousand Indian children of sixteen to twenty years of age, some thirty-five thousand are in public schools, twenty-two thousand in government boarding schools, and about seventy-five hundred in mission and private schools. Seven and a half per cent, therefore, are under the influence of missionaries for their classroom and dormitory life. The religious education directors in eight of the fifty-four government schools, who are able to influence a considerable number of Indian children during the hours allowed on the government program for religious teaching. Considering the large number of teachers employed by the mission boards in mission schools for Indians, and the very small percentage of the Indian children who are able to touch, one is led to question whether the religious Christian personality provided by our churches are being used efficiently.—The Congregationalist.

CHICKENS COME HOME TO ROOST

The Chicago Tribune, which modestly introduces itself as the world's greatest newspaper, proved itself impotent to get its candidate, Judge Lyle, nominated for mayor of Chicago. Mayor Thompson walked away with the nomination despite the Tribune's and entirely justified array of evidence against him.

If the Tribune is surprised, at least many observers are not. The newspaper has been educating the people of Chicago for many great many years, and this outcome is the result of that. The Tribune, like most of the other American newspapers in the cities, has been, in its editorials and (what is far worse) in its news columns, sedulously developing the idea that if or do like a law it is not merely a right, but a glorious duty, to defy the law, to take matters into one's own hands. The Tribune has defied the idea of personal liberty until it has come to protect personal license.

The Tribune, like most of the other American dailies, has educated the masses to consider material prosperity the criterion of success. It has scoffed at morals.

Why, then, should it be thought strange that when it calls upon its readers to judge Mayor Thompson upon the basis of moral quality and upon the basis of failure to put down lawlessness, the Tribune gets such a weak response?—Christian Standard.

BILLY SUNDAY STIRS LOS ANGELES

Billy Sunday gave three addresses in Los Angeles to city audiences within six hours. Eight police officers were to care for the crowd at Temple Baptist Church, where Sunday morning sermon in the pulpit of his friend, John Snares, the service had begun every nook and cranny of the auditorium was packed, and it was manifestly Billy's famous baseball evangelist was in his best form, and was fully at home in the sympathetic evangelistic atmosphere of the Church, which was originally founded as a downtown continuous evangelistic activity. Billy spoke for an hour

...t, "Where there is no vision the people perish," and covered most the entire gamut of moral, spiritual and civic issues. He responded to the brief and gracious introduction of Pastor Snape remarking that it was about as absurd to introduce him to a Los Angeles audience as to introduce him to his wife. He intimated that eventually he might leave his present home at Winona to live in Los Angeles and finally to be buried beneath the perennial sunshine and flowers of Southern California: "and I want you, John Snape, and my other friends, Dr. Herbert Booth with and Dr. Elmer Helms, to preach my funeral."

Among the many rhetorical gems, startling similes and vitriolic denunciations were some familiar to his American audiences for forty years past; with more recent accretions inspired by the red menace, prohibition, unemployment and other current issues. A brief Sunday Anthology follows, gathered from his Temple church sermon.

"National dissipation is the same as individual dissipation; we've got to pay the price. No nation can hand God the hot end of the poker."

"Al Smith can no more be elected president on a wet ticket than can cross the Pacific Ocean on a grindstone pulled by a pair of croaches."

"You have no right to your own opinion. God tells you what to do. Follow the law and go where you please; follow your own opinion and you go to state prison."

"I wish the church was as liberal as the world, the flesh and the devil; in our national expenditures the basic principles of our civilization, namely religion and education, have to divide between them a paltry four cents on the dollar."

"Jesus put the cookies and the jam on the lower shelf; the common people heard him gladly."

"If the English language gets in my way I'll walk over it."

"Many a man can see Jesus Christ quicker through a ham sandwich or a ton of coal than he can through a sermon."

Short Talks by the Editor

(Continued from page 4)

...to be saved?" they both shouted forthwith, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31). Belief is the simple condition. And Paul wrote to the church at Rome that belief in Christ as the resurrected of God was the one essential to salvation. (See Rom. 10:9, 10).

Belief must be sincere and whole-hearted. Saving faith is more than mere intellectual assent; it is more than mere confidence; it goes to the point of giving over, or of committing, one's self to Christ. The Psalmist expressed it admirably: "Commit thy way to the Lord; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass" (Ps. 37:5). That was the kind of belief that Philip demanded of the eunuch: "If thou believest with all thine heart." And it was that belief that Paul told the Romans would be effective: "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness" (Rom. 10:10). The faith that Christ desires is that which lays hold on him with such strong attachment that devotion to him is placed above everything else in the world. Hear his challenge: "Whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple" (Luke 14:33).

Faith in Christ must be active, not passive. One must be ready to express his belief and declare his conviction before men. It must indeed be a heart-belief, but it must also find its way to the mouth. That was what Paul preached: "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; but with the mouth confession is made unto salvation" (Rom. 10:9, 10). And to make the necessity of confession doubly certain, hear the words of the Lord Jesus: "Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 10:32-33). In the face of such statements as to the importance of confessing Christ before men, the confession of the Ethiopian before Philip and in the presence of his own attendants is an example for repentant, believing sinners of all ages—"I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God" (Acts 8:37).

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Exodus 1:7-14. The new king knew not Joseph. Many times in the history of nations rulers have come into power who have had no sympathy with the people of God, and oppression and persecution have followed. In no small measure America was founded by men who wished, for religious scruples, to escape the compulsory militarism of Europe, yet the country today is forgetful of that fact. The few who still refuse to bear arms because of religious conviction were subject to great persecution during the days of the war, and only recently the American Legion tried to prevent Einstein from landing in California because he dared voice opposition to war. Now is the time when Christian people should be speaking their convictions on this great matter. May God give us grace to be true to him, no matter how bitter the persecution.

TUESDAY

Exodus 1:22; 2:1-10. When God is working out his great plans, all the persecutions of his enemies cannot avail. God here enlisted the womanly sympathies of Pharaoh's daughter to preserve the child who was to deliver his people. In much the same way he has planned definite things in the life of each believer; Satan may try to frustrate those plans, but "he that hath begun a good work in us will perform it until the day of Christ." Let us praise him!

WEDNESDAY

Exodus 2:11-15. It is frequently remarked that "Moses looked this way and that way, but failed to look up!" He was unwilling to wait for God to work out his plan in his own way, but tried to "take the kingdom of God by force." So we frequently ask if we shall pull up the tares, or call down fire from heaven, but God's answer is: "I will perform it." He chooses to perform his work through men, however, and we should daily, constantly, seek to learn from him the part he would have us take in his plans.

THURSDAY

Exodus 2:16-25. Those who oppose God's plans must be removed. In process of time the king died, but God heard the cry of his people. They were his people, and God had made a covenant with them, an everlasting covenant. Our God is a covenant-keeping God, and just as he kept his covenant with the children of Israel, so he has kept and will keep every covenant with us. His promises are yea and amen! Let us praise him for all his wonderful works to the children of men.

FRIDAY

Exodus 31:6. Moses, like David, was tending sheep, but God had a greater work for him. While tending his sheep he had ample opportunity to think of God and of his people, and now God called him aside to commune with him about his part in it all. It is well to remember that as we gather around the Family Altar we are on ground as holy as that on which Moses stood. Even a great pagan philosopher reminded us that in the seclusion of our own darkened room God is present with us. May we ever be mindful of his presence, ever heeding his blessed voice.

SATURDAY

Exodus 3:7-12. God here definitely called Moses to deliver his people. When Moses hesitated, he gave him assurance of his divine presence and assistance. Likewise we have been called to deliver the straying people of God; if we feel that we are not able to do his bidding, so much the better, for his strength is made perfect in weakness, and he will manifest his presence and power through us.

SUNDAY

Exodus 3:13-22. I AM. What a suggestive name for our God, who is from everlasting to everlasting. May each one of us linger in his presence until we hear his voice saying to us: "I AM;" until we fall before him crying out in adoration: "Thou art;" and until we are empowered by him to go forth saying to all the world, "He is, and he is to come."

W. I. DUKER,
President
Goshen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

Seventh Day Adventism

By William Edward Biederwolf

(Continued from last week)

V. THE SOULS OF THE DEAD ARE SLEEPING IN THE GRAVE. So they say. "The state to which we are reduced by death is one of silence, inactivity and entire unconsciousness" (Fundamental Principles, page 12).

1. What then did Paul mean when in Hebrews 12:22, 23, he enumerated, among other things in heaven, the "spirits of just men made perfect?" Were they unconscious?

2. Did Paul expect to go into a state of "entire unconsciousness" when he said he had a "desire to depart and to be with Christ, which is far better" (Phil 1:23, 24), and when he said, "we are willing rather to be absent from the body and to be present with the Lord" (2 Cor. 5:1-8)?

3. When Moses met with Elias on the Mount of Transfiguration, was he in a state of "entire unconsciousness?"

4. Was the rich man unconscious when in the lost world he cried out, "I am tormented in this flame," and asked Abraham to send a warning to his brothers on earth?

5. Does not the Bible distinctly state that at death the body "shall return to the earth as it was and the spirit shall return to God who gave it?"

6. When Jesus said to the thief on the cross, "This day shalt thou be with me in paradise," and a moment later said, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit," what happened?

IT IS VERY PLAIN TO SEE WHAT HAPPENED.

HIS SPIRIT WENT INTO PARADISE AND THE SPIRIT OF THE THIEF WENT WITH HIM.

THESE TWO SPIRITS DID NOT GO TO SLEEP IN THE GRAVE.

The soul sleeping texts used by the Seventh Day Adventists refer always to the body and never to the spirit. When it is said Lazarus sleepeth, it does not refer to his spirit, because it says a moment later, "Lord, by this time he stinketh."

In Acts 2:34, when it says, "David is not ascended into heaven," the whole context shows that the reference is to his body, and as a rule whenever the dead are referred to as sleeping, you will find the subject under discussion is the resurrection of the body. It is the body that sleeps and not the soul. So in Matthew 27:52 it says, "The graves were opened and many bodies of the saints which slept arose."

The strongest scriptures used by Seventh Day Adventists are taken from Ecclesiastes and their main text is Ecc. 9:5, "the dead know not anything," etc.; also verse 10, "there is no knowledge in the grave whither thou goest." But this is not a divine revelation concerning the state of the dead at all. Everything in the Bible is not true. Every time the Devil opened his mouth he lied. The writer of Ecclesiastes is here reasoning from the standpoint of a man "under the sun." It is the way things look to a man "under the sun," the natural man. They are set down by inspiration, to be sure, just as the words of the Devil are, but this does not mean that they are therefore necessarily utterances of the truth. Take the second verse of this same chapter. We know that it is not true and in verse 4 the writer says there is no difference between a dead man and a dead lion, and that a living dog is better than either of them.

THIS DOCTRINE OF SOUL-SLEEPING HASN'T GOT A SINGLE LEG TO STAND ON.

IT IS OPPOSED TO EVERY INTUITION OF MAN'S RATIONAL NATURE.

IT DESTROYS THE IDENTITY OF MAN.

IT CONTRADICTS THE PLAIN AND UNMISTAKABLE TEACHING OF THE WORD OF GOD.

The soul of the believer at death passes immediately into glory and that of the unbeliever into the region of the lost; not necessarily into the fullness of glory nor into the final degree of punishment, but the righteous into a glorious state and the wicked into a condition just opposite. So the Bible teaches and so the church has always believed.

The Fate of the Wicked

VI. THE WICKED ARE ULTIMATELY ANNIHILATED. Now this is a harmless sort of doctrine and we are not going to make any stout denial of the contention of many that if a man were left to his own inclinations he'd rather believe that the wicked cease to exist than to think of them suffering always the everlasting punishment of orthodox theology.

But the trouble with the doctrine is that it is both unscientific and unbiblical.

1. In the first place it contradicts the Bible teaching that there are degrees of reward and punishment. In Romans 2:6, we are told that God "will render to every man according to his deeds," and in Rev. 20:13 it says that "they were judged every man according to their works," but if the finally impenitent are annihilated they are punished every man alike.

2. In the second place the Bible speaks in no disguised manner about the "wrath of God abiding" on the wicked (John 3:36), and when, in Matthew 25:46, it says the wicked shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into everlasting life, the same Greek word is used in both cases, making plain the fact that the punishment of the finally impenitent is as everlasting as is the reward of the righteous.

So in Revelation 22:11, "He that is filthy, let him be filthy still, and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still," while in Mark 9:44 we are told of a worm that never dies and of a fire that is never quenched, and in Revelations 20:10 we are told of a punishment that is to continue "day and night forever and ever." A man who can read annihilation into Scriptures like that can discover a Beethoven symphony in croaking of a frog pond.

Saturday or Sunday

VII. THE SEVENTH DAY OF THE WEEK IS TO BE KEPT HOLY AS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD AND NOT THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK.

1. They say that Sunday is the day of pagan sunworship and is therefore not a day for Christians to observe as the Holy Sabbath.

BUT THE FACTS ARE AS FOLLOWS:

Sunday was named after the Sun, just as Saturday was named after Saturn, anybody who knows anything knows that the day of pagan sun-worship was an annual day, that it came only once a year, and that therefore it came on Sunday only once in seven years, and that it came on Saturday just as often as it did on Sunday, exactly as does the Fourth of July or any other annual celebrations.

2. They say the Pope is the image of the beast mentioned in Revelation and that he changed the Sabbath from the seventh day of the week to the first day, and that therefore the keeping of the first day of the week is the "mark of the beast," and that every one who is not a Seventh Day Adventist and who keeps the first day of the week is eternally lost. WE ANSWER:

(a) What Pope? There ought to be a trouble to locate him. But they have furnished us neither with his name nor his time. No such person has ever been found.

(b) The "Catholic Dictionary," one of the recognized standard authorities of the Roman Catholic Church says the title "pope" is not exclusively applied to individuals until 1073. Nothing could therefore be done by a pope before there was a pope.

(c) If the Pope changed the Sabbath why did the Greek Catholic Church, which strongly opposed the Roman Catholic Church and its Pope, observe Sunday as the Sabbath instead of Saturday?

(d) The Apostolic Church fathers and early Christians who observed Sunday must have known that the Pope made the change, if he did make it, and therefore when they ascribed the Sunday Sabbath-keeping to any other reason, as they all did, every one of them made himself a self-confessed liar.

3. They say that Constantine, by an imperial edict in 321 A. D. effected the change in compliance with the demands of the Roman Catholic church, and that thus pagan Roman Sunday was made the Sabbath instead of the Saturday-Sabbath of the Word of God.

This same contention is made by the Roman Catholic Church herself; at least a number of her prominent priests. The Catholic Mirror, the official organ of Cardinal Gibbons and very largely of the Papacy in the United States, says in its issue of September 23, 1893, "The Catholic Church for over 1,000 years before the existence of a Protestant, by virtue of her divine mission, changed the day from Saturday to Sunday."

WE ANSWER;

(a) If, however, the Roman Catholic Church wants some testimony fully authoritative, and even more so than that, they will find it by turning to the article "Sunday" in the Catholic Encyclopedia, published by Robert Appleton Co., where they will find these words "Sunday was the first day of the week according to the Jewish method of reckoning, but for Christians began to take the place of the Jewish Sabbath."

an Apostolic Times as the day set apart for public and solemn worship of God." Now, that the Apostolic Fathers and Christians did observe Sunday as the day of rest and worship, exponents and opponents of Sunday-keeping alike acknowledge. See abundant proof of this on pages 45, and note especially the acknowledgment of Elder Andrews, the ablest historian the Seventh Day Adventists ever had. This being so, it becomes at once apparent that the edict of Constantine in 321, which made Sunday the legal Sabbath for Christian people, in reality changed NOTHING, but only gave imperial sanction and definite imperial authority to a CUSTOM ALREADY ESTABLISHED AS A FIXED THING IN THE EXPERIENCE OF CHRISTIAN PEOPLE.

Here is exactly what was done. The Christians had their rest day, their Sabbath, every eighth day. It was called "Nundinae." Christians had their rest day, their Sabbath, every seventh day. It was called "Sabbath."

In 321 A. D. Constantine legalized the Roman's Sunday, that is, he made it equal to the Sabbath, equal legally to the pagan Nundinae. This, as one can well understand, became too burdensome, and the Nundinae day of rest was suppressed. Theodosius the Great and the Christian Church accepted as the only legal Sabbath of the Roman Empire.

Sabbath observance of the first day of the week came down to Constantine's FROM APOSTOLIC TIMES, and Constantine nor any other Roman Emperor changed the so-called Bible Sabbath to Sunday, but such a change made with respect to the pagan Nundinae Sabbath. The truth is that the pagan Nundinae was supplanted by the Christian Sabbath.

(To be continued)

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for March 22)

Use and Abuse of God's Gifts

Scripture Lesson—Luke 12.

Text—Luke 12:16-20, 41-48.

Optional Reading—John 15:6-14.

Lesson Text—Be not drunken with wine, for it is riot, but be filled with the Spirit. 1 Cor. 12:13.

Introductory Note

On the occasion of this must be considered. Luke 13, 14. A man who had some dispute with his brother about an inheritance, who he considered himself entitled to at a moiety, finding Jesus' authority respected as a prophet, wished to enjoin him to arbitrate between himself and his brother, in hope to gain his point. Our Lord who carefully avoided any interference in secular concerns, replied sharply: "Who made me a judge, or a divider between you?" and evidently perceiving that he was influenced by a principle of covetousness, delivered the following parable to caution against that evil and dangerous temptation.—Scott. There is a closer connection in thought between this and the foregoing than appears at first. The disciple was called a fool who would act according to the foregoing, but the real fool was brought into view. He is a covetous man. Ezek. 33:31, for that was the animus of him who made the request of Jesus, vs. 13-15. Christ was setting forth the heavenly calling, but his questioner thought only of his possessions in the present life. This explains the parable that follows, vs. 16-21, in the light of it all the verses are to be interpreted down to v. 48, but especially v. 34. "Take no thought," v. 22, means no anxious, worrying thought indicative of a lack of faith and knowledge of God in Christ.—Dr. Gray, in Christian Workers' Commentary.

Intemperance More than Liquor Evil

As previously suggested, the parable with which our lesson today begins was spoken in reply to a request for Jesus to act as a divider of an inheritance, with the result that Jesus refused and warned against the sin of covetousness. But we are supposed to make a temperance lesson out of this, and while we may doubt the appropriateness of the scripture passage for that purpose, yet we must acknowledge the great importance of temperance instruction. The application of this lesson to temperance is much wider than that of abstaining from alcoholic beverages. "To be sure," as the Otterbein Teacher suggests, "this phase of the subject is fully large enough for consideration in this day when the fate of the Eighteenth Amendment seems to hang in the balance, and when the enemies of sobriety are marshalling all the forces they can control to bring back this curse of curses to our land. But let us not neglect to stress the broad principle that every man who strives for mastery 'exerciseth self-control in all things,' and at the same time give warning that the enemies of righteousness are exerting every influence to break down this provision which has freed thousands from the slavery of the drink habit, and has brought happiness and comforts to many homes which strong drink had despoiled. The need is urgent."

Intoxication Destroys Liberty

The intoxication of the soul or mind through greed, covetousness, is as bad as the intoxication of the body through strong drink. But the intoxication through strong drink has produced more actual crime, more suffering for women and children, more degradation of body and of soul than any other sort of misuse of God's gifts. Gluttony may harm a man but rarely injures his family.

"Liberty is the power to satisfy the major human instincts, such as the instinct of self-preservation, the instinct of workmanship, the instinct of self-respect, and the instinct of home-making. . . . Alcohol interferes with that true individual liberty, just as do opium, morphine, chloral, or any other habit-forming drug. . . . The mental worker who takes alcohol voluntarily puts a yoke upon himself. He limits the exercise of his faculties, for he cannot judge so wisely, will so forcefully, think so clearly, as when his system is free from alcohol. The athlete who takes alcoholic liquor is similarly handicapped, for he is not free to run so fast, jump so high, pitch a baseball so accurately as when his system is free from the drug. Any one who has become a 'slave to alcohol' has lost the very essence of personal liberty. . . . The liberty of the alcoholic-drink manufacturer and seller to profit by the enslavement of the drinker was prohibited in

(Continued on page 15)

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK 	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. DuBall Ave., South Bend, Ind.

Christian Endeavor at Berne, Indiana

Dear Endeavorers everywhere:

We are sure you will be interested in hearing about our Christian Endeavor work at Berne. We have a very wide-awake crowd of young people who really believe in doing things for Christ and his church. We have a membership of seventy-five (75) active members and eight (8) honorary members—the Juniors and Seniors in one society.

We have as our goals:

1. Every meeting full of power.
2. Every member taking part.
3. $15.00 every three months for Krypton.

"Our motto is, 'Occupy till I come.'"

We are at present engaged in a contest with the newly organized society at Fort Wayne, Indiana. The chief purpose of this contest is to create more interest and zeal in both societies and to win souls for Christ. We have wide-awake meetings each Sunday evening which are very inspiring to all, with every member taking part.

We have organized a C. E. Orchestra in which a great interest is manifested. To Christ be the glory. For without Christ we can do nothing. We are asking that you pray for us that we may grow in grace and that the C. E. society at Berne may stand out as a beacon light to those out of Christ and that each Endeavorer may do and give all that others may know Christ.

Yours in the Master's Service,
MISS NEVA FRANK,
Berne, Indiana.

MEETINGS THAT HOLD INTEREST

By Robert W. Ball

After new members have been received into the society, to keep them the meetings and activities must be so attractive that they cannot make a place for their dislikes. The meetings must be different, novel, and as original as possible. If the meetings can be entirely different each week, the atmosphere of surprise is created. If there is a different leader each week, the program cannot be monotonous. If no one person speaks more than once, except by request, entirely different viewpoints and angles are given. If there is a varied musical program, those who appreciate music will enjoy it more. Good, spirited singing aids in creating a genuine Christian Endeavor spirit, and appeals to those who like to sing. Outside speakers are enjoyed as often as they speak, especially if the speaker is an older person and able to give experiences from life. Illustrated talks are good for variety. Discussion on some important society work brings out a great deal of interest. Hold union services with other societies in the town, inviting as many organizations as possible. Serve light refreshments now and then. Have a special discussion period after the regular service is over, to talk over problems of human interest. Lastly, and most important, is having every part of the service prepared and carried out thoroughly. These suggestions have been proved just this year, and statistics show that the society has increased in its attendance seventy-five percent and in membership fifty percent, and is still on the increase.—C. E. World.

PLANNING SUCCESSFUL SOCIALS

By Marjorie Akins

In planning a successful social I would suggest five general rules under which, I believe, fall all details.

First, have a committee; don't make it a one-man job. Give every member on the committee a definite responsibility. Three will do if necessary, but more are desirable.

Second, as soon as your committee is organized, decide upon a general idea to be carried out through the whole party. The season of the year will often give you a good idea.

Third, plan your social in detail, from the publicity and decorations to the eats and the cleaning up afterward, carrying out the general idea. Have a time schedule, and stick to it as nearly as possible. In planning your games take into consideration the nature of the crowd and the place where it is to be held.

Fourth, advertise your party. Some one has said, "Major on the publicity whether or not you have any other definite plans for the party." Make your invitations, posters, etc., unusual.

Fifth, most important of all, remember that it is a Christian Endeavor party, and make everybody else remember it, too. Close with a devotional, and be sure to invite everybody to Endeavor on Sunday evening.—C. E. World.

many new members. Fifty-one (51) others have already been baptized and received into church membership. Others be baptized this week. Each one was with and prayed for individually. There were 30 on the closing night, but each was cared for separately and personally by Brother Miller.

Spirit Liberty

The Spirit liberty during this revival was marked. The crowds were large. small one. They came without delegation or much present-day publicity. The service was wonderful. The confessions came out the need of much personal presence in fact, very little of that was used in the invitation. The invitation period was short. Tears flowed freely, tears of repentance, tears of contrition, tears of rejection. The Holy Spirit used everything to liberate and melt the hearts. He gave liberty in preaching, in prayer, in singing, in testimony, in everything. He even turned parent obstacles into open doors. "I joy with us." We pray that a revival of equal power shall be enjoyed in your church. Pastor, CHARLES ASHMAN.

FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH

535 Napoleon St., Johnstown, Pa.

Victory Revival at First Brethren Church, Johnstown, Pennsylvania

We have just enjoyed a great revival. A wonderful revival! A marvelous revival! God blessed his people gloriously! This revival was one of tremendous spiritual power. It was deep in its transformations and far-reaching in its scope of influence. It has secured most hearty congratulations from ministers all over the city.

Preparation

The preparation was spiritual. Twenty-one cottage prayer meetings were held. They were well attended and used mightily of the Holy Spirit. The Sunday of the opening week was set aside as a day of fasting and prayer. Many fasted and prayed. In the afternoon a great prayer meeting was held in the church at which Brother Wm. Schaffer, pastor of our Coney-maugh church, gave us a stimulating study on the "Principles of Prayer." A Brethren Fellowship Night was enjoyed preceding the opening Sunday at which several hundred gathered to become better acquainted. Brother J. L. Gingrich of Morrelville spoke on this occasion on "The Power of Christ." The pastor delivered a series of sermons on "Detour Signs Back to the Highway." We sought to prepare for a REVIVAL.

The Revival

The revival came! It was not "worked up." It was not "in the energy of the flesh." It was not "mechanical or forced." The Holy Spirit stirred the hearts of folks. The first week was one of the deepest heart-searchings we have ever witnessed. "Judgment began at the House of God." At the close of the first week, on Sunday morning, an opportunity was given for all who would yield themselves to the Holy Spirit to be used during the revival to come to the front for prayer. Pastor and moderator came first. Then, what a service! They came out by the scores! None of these are counted as professions. The revival was on! It is still on! Primarily, this meeting was a REVIVAL. Malice and enmity were cast out. Members who had been at variance were reconciled. Families were re-united. One divorce was annulled by re-marriage. Scores sought a closer walk with their Lord. Young men and women volunteered for the ministry and the mission field. The church is more united and surrendered than it has ever been to our knowledge. This was a great and glorious revival!

The Preaching

Brother R. Paul Miller is a strong revivalist. His preaching was fearless. His sermons were more than sermons,—they were messages. They covered a wide scope, touching the lives of folks at every point. They were Biblical, not only in that they were true to the Word, but in that they were filled with the Word. Brother Miller put HEART into his messages. They caused the hearts of the listeners "to burn within them." His answers to the many questions placed in the box were wise and helpful. His methods of evangelism were profound in their simplicity and most effective in their thoroughness. We found him a most congenial and considerate fellow-worker in the Lord. God richly blessed his ministry among us. Prayers are following him wherever he goes. He was "the man for the hour" in the life of our church.

Visible Results

There were one hundred and seventy-three (173) public confessions. Every one was definite, individual, and clean-cut. This was no "mass movement." Sixty-two (62) had previously been members of the church. They came weeping for their sins, surrendering themselves whole-heartedly, seeking a closer walk with their Lord. They came willingly, without urging. Their lives have been transformed. In spiritual power and service, the coming of these will mean as much, if not more, than the addition of that

THE REVIVAL AT JOHNSTOWN

At the close of our meeting at Johnstown, Pennsylvania, we opened up in Johnstown at the First church on Monday night, February second. This was the eleventh revival effort that Brother Ashman inaugurated since his ministry began in this city and if it is typical of those that have preceded it there is little wonder that the Church has experienced such phenomenal growth in numbers and in spiritual power. Their building here is one of the finest the brotherhood and most excellently adapted to a Brethren congregation.

The people of the community were kindly disposed toward the meeting and showed a very constant interest and attendance throughout. The people of the church were most faithful in their support of meetings in every way. The splendid continuous attendance through fair weather and wet weather was splendid evidence of their loyalty to the church and the cause they love.

The choir was most faithfully directed by Prof. Jones in a most capable and appropriate way. There was a splendid rendition in the choir every night and music rendered for the meetings was of high order. The pipe organ was throughout the meeting for all songs and was capably handled by Sister Miller fit in to revival meetings. This is unusual thing. Needless to say we enjoyed this meeting since it was the first brother who has been a friend in the ministry ever since we were both in our ministerial experiences in the north. We have never had a sweeter fellowship, harmonious cooperation, nor a more support than Brother Ashman gave these weeks of meetings. He is a man who knows his people and knows the community about the church and is a tireless worker dealing with individuals and seeking the lives of all he can reach both in and out of the church right with God.

My home was with Brother and Sister Ashman and I can truly say it was a home to me, for they did everything to make me welcome, happy, comfortable, and content. It was a real privilege to spend these three weeks with this group of friends of years standing and I shall soon forget it.

my aim to be very careful in my life in Johnstown, but the pastor's and the other good women of that city have made this impossible by their hospitality and splendid cooking. It was a pleasant experience that we enjoyed while Brother Schaffer, pastor of the Conemaugh church, and Brother and Sister Gingrich, of the Morrellville church, were at Ashman's celebrating Brother Ashman's birthday. We greatly enjoyed the visit. Brother and Sister Lantz of Berne were invited to the Ashman home, and the fellowship was greatly enjoyed with these people.

It is noted that Brother Schaffer and Brother Rich are determined that their conversions, in spite of all the Devil can do, will increase. Just before the meeting Brother and Sister Gingrich rejoiced in the coming of a little girl to their home, and during the meetings a little girl made her appearance at Brother and Sister Schaffer's home. We greatly congratulate the parents.

Very confident of the future of this church for it is certainly reaching the community and bearing true testimony to Christ in that city and such a testimony is certainly greatly needed. I shall attend all this meeting with the most pleasant memories and bid the people of this city to carry on their great work so ably until our Lord returns.

R. PAUL MILLER,
Berne, Indiana.

ALLENTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

For the work here in Allentown, Pennsylvania, we have not as yet made any progress, but God is wonderfully good to us as a church. For several of our members are working again and their usefulness looks brighter than the past. We praise God for this favor. Again some of the members an increased joy and willingness to volunteer that they can for the progress of the church. I hope the day will come when the members here will work because of the love of God which constraineth them. Last year we have been blessed by going into fellowship again two young men who a few years ago were in active fellowship with Sunday school and church. These were out of this city for some time but I am glad to report that both are active service with the church today. There are several young people on whom we are depending as helpers to interest others and to lead them to Christ and the church this year. These young people are capable and worthy and I have the confidence in them that they will help us to show others the love of Christ more perfectly. You may say the church is good enough. Then turn to 18, verses 24-28. Let us all read this passage and ask God to help us to be some one today. The future of some may be at stake, and God may bring us into contact with him. The opportunity to help him. Will I take it, or shall I be responsible in the judgment for that? The hope and joy of my soul lays in the fully united work of God's grace, which will be gained through fasting and prayer.

We are praying as a Church that God will send us to see the great need of a revival that he will help us to prepare so that we may send us a revival and that this may begin in each one of our hearts, especially in the preacher's.

Brethren, I am longing for the pure love of God to possess me wholly, that neither enmity nor jealousy may remain, but that the love of God may fully control me, so that I can truly love and prefer my brother to myself. Brethren, I have no doubt of my salvation, nor that God gave me his Holy Spirit. For I have often in joyfulness and tears had communion with him. Although having had several and wonderful manifestations of God's grace and great love, I often realize within me self-pride and self-will, even at the expense of others. Brethren, these idols will not and can not remain when the pure love of God controls us. Brethren, I have met many who have told me of their baptism of the Holy Ghost. Others have told me how they could not sin nor fall. Yet these same folks have said some of the most belittling things about their brethren, and jealousy, and even enmity were laid visible. How can we love our enemies if we can not tolerate our brethren? There is a way of getting rid of these enemies of God within us, so that we may have a steady peace and blessed communion with God. Brethren, I am seeking and trusting in God with simple child-like faith for this pure love which will help me to love my enemies and to uphold my brethren who try to do right.

S. E. CHRISTIANSEN,
507 Tilghman Street.

A VISIT TO THE THIRD BRETHREN CHURCH OF PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA

It was a great pleasure to the writer to be with and to celebrate with the Third church their twentieth birthday. We know that when a person is twenty-one he or she is of age; so I think in similar terms of this church, it is nearly of age. As a young man becomes self-dependent at this age I have the confidence in this church and its pastor, Elder Wm. A. Steffler that they are aiming at this very thing—self-support.

While in South Philadelphia with Brother I. D. Bowman I remember that Brother H. Cassel and Brother E. Braker were the men who labored with a few members in the far north of our city. There were a few others who helped with the work there but I did not know their names. I remember the old frame building they bought and worshiped in for years. Nine years ago as I went home to Norway I was asked to preach in that building; I was impressed with the smallness of the house and the good attendance. I met again the man whom I always loved and enjoyed to hear, Brother Harry Cassel. I saw him but once since at Winona Lake. His natural vision had then changed and without doubt he saw and realized God closer and more lovingly than ever. This dear brother helped many in physical and spiritual needs and in distress. He was a man who loved God and always tried to help his fellowman. Brother E. Braker also worked faithfully for a long time in the Third church. His hardships and sacrifices were more than many knew. However God will reward him as no other can.

The work in the Third church today is very encouraging. The pastor and people are working in a wonderful accord. I have always noticed that the church which boasts its pastor will always get along much better than the church that has little or nothing to say for their own fellowship and the work and preaching of their pastor. If we are ashamed of Jesus and his Gospel, he can not help us. If we are true he can not do other than help us. I feel this is the key to the success in north Philadelphia. This is not the only place where this method worked, but every place where this practice has prevailed the church is growing and pastor and people are happy together. On the part of the Pennsylvania District I take pleasure in congratulating the Third church and their able, true and faithful pastor, Elder Wm. A. Steffler, on their twentieth birthday, with their newly refinished church—woodwork varnished, floors carpeted, new art-glass windows in the main auditorium and the basement sidewalls plastered. Think of this work in a year of depression! How could this be done? The old proverb is still true, "Where there is a will, there is a way."

May God grant church and pastor a continuous blessing so that the good reports may continue to come to the brotherhood. We also wish for the pastor and church a long and fruitful service together.

S. E. CHRISTIANSEN,
District Evangelist.

CHURCH COLLEGE NIGHT AT FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH Falls City, Nebraska

Three years ago Brother H. H. Rowsey, our efficient pastor, began the Educational feature that we call Church College Night. He conducted two six-week terms each year, one in the Fall and one in the Spring. The sessions meet one night each week. The term now in progress began the second week of January and will continue until Easter week.

In previous terms, work has been offered in Religious Education, Church Doctrines, Prophecy, Bible Book Outlines, Religious Pageantry, Sacred Music, Orchestra and Choir, and Bible Stories for the Children. Brother Rowsey conducted the Church Doctrine classes in special interest of the new converts, young people, and all others who wish to know more of Brethren teachings. This feature should greatly strengthen the local church and the cause of the whole Gospel.

The work of the present term consists of two to three periods each Wednesday evening, 6:30, 7:30 and 8:15. For the 6:30 period each evening thus far we have had a covered dish supper. This week, February 11, baptismal services will be conducted at the 6:30 period. Next week something else will be arranged.

At the 7:30 period three classes are conducted. One is on "The Life of Christ" by the pastor; another on "Doctrines" for the children, by Mrs. Rowsey. The other class at the 7:30 period is "The Message and Program of the Christian Religion" conducted by the writer. The classes are open to everybody. Those who wish credit toward a diploma are asked to get text-books and will be given an examination at the close of the term. Some nights the attendance is nearly ten times greater than it was under the old way of single group prayer meetings. "The chief business of the Christian worker is to interpret the Christian message." How shall they interpret without hearers? Who is the chef to prepare the Spiritual food so that the people will come and eat?

At the 8:15 period the choir meets under the direction of Mrs. Rowsey, and the social entertainment period directed by Brother Rowsey. Altogether the church becomes a family for one evening each week, when all who care to come may enjoy themselves as one large Christian family.

Brother H. H. Rowsey and his good wife are doing a great work here for the Kingdom. May the leaven that is being planted grow until the whole is leavened.

J. G. DODDS.

ALAMO, TEXAS

February 22nd the Brethren of the Rio Grande Valley met in the home of Brother and Sister Kelso of Pharr for worship and to hear a very splendid address given by our Brother C. F. Yoder of South America. Brother Yoder emphasized the importance of carrying the Good News of the Kingdom to all the world. The earnestness with which he spoke assured us that all who profess his name have a vital part in the extension of the Kingdom.

In the evening Brother Yoder gave an illustrated lecture in the community church of Alamo. The service was well attended, and many remarked of the timeliness of the address. An offering of more than $17.00 was raised in response to the lecture.

C. A. ESHELMAN,
Alamo, Texas.

MASONTOWN REVIVAL

The Masontown church experienced a most successful revival and evangelistic campaign, January 26 to February 8 under the leadership of Rev. W. C. Benshoff, pastor of the Waynesboro church.

God Worked

Throughout the entire meeting it was quite evident that God was performing his work within and without the church. He brought to bear upon the hearts of many a deep sense of sin, its consequences and remedy in Christ. Such a conviction performed two works, that of bringing the church members closer to Christ and also the work of saving many lost souls. He worked through the evangelist, giving to him the best sermons to preach at the opportune times. He gave the church two weeks of ideal weather.

Members Faithful

The members did an excellent piece of work to make the meeting so successful. A number of cottage prayer meetings were held prior to the campaign and the church as a whole spent much time in prayer. Two faithful choirs were on the job every service, an adult and a children's choir. A great deal of visiting was done to advertise the meetings and to do personal work.

The Evangelist

This was Rev. Benshoff's third meeting in the Masontown church. Each time he comes the people like him better. His clear and emphatic manner of preaching Christ, desiring that Christ rather than self might be exalted, has won for him a permanent place within the hearts of all. It was a privilege and a delight for the pastor and family to entertain Brother Benshoff in their home.

Results

God alone can know the good results accruing from any effort to save men. But some of the visible results we can write about. The church has been greatly stirred spiritually, a number publicly reconsecrated themselves to a closer walk with Christ, and many resolved within their hearts to do so. Thirty-three have united with the church by baptism, two by letter and more are yet to be baptized.

The Unfinished Task

We rejoice to see so many precious ones saved by the blood of Christ, but our hearts are heavy that more did not come. These many who are yet unnumbered among the saved present to our people an enormous task. Before another year passes we pray that the church by means of a continuous evangelistic effort will win many of these lost ones.

Masontown, Pennsylvania.

MASONTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

It was the writer's happy privilege to spend two weeks with this church in a special revival effort. Six years ago I fellowshiped with this people under a similar circumstance and I was delighted with the spiritual and numerical growth which has been realized here. The Brethren have won for themselves a large place in this community, and the church is rendering a real service in a needy field. The greatest need at the present is more room. It is impossible in the present building to properly house and care for the large and growing Bible school. But these people are zealous; they are going forward and will in time find a way.

Brother H. W. Koontz is the faithful and efficient pastor here. He and sister Koontz have proven themselves leaders of special ability, and are very much loved and respected. Preparation for the revival began weeks before. Scarcely, if ever, have I been in a meeting for which more thorough preparation had been made by pastor and people. And preparation tells, it is of major importance. At the first service I found myself between two large choirs, and before a large audience. It was evident that the Lord's people had been working and praying. Attendance and interest grew and continued throughout. There is reason to believe that a definite work has been accomplished. The church has an additional responsibility resting upon it in the proper care and nurture of the babes in Christ. But under the blessing of the Spirit this work, too, will be well done.

People of other denominations and neighboring Brethren showed their interest by their attendance and help. Members of the local Mennonite church attended regularly and in large numbers. Brother William Gray, pastor at Highland, with some of his folks, was present on a number of occasions. The Brethren from Uniontown were with us several evenings in large delegations. This was like meeting with old friends, having labored with these people in a meeting a year ago.

Entertainment was in the home of the pastor, and a real home of Christian fellowship it proved to be. Considerable time was spent by the pastor and evangelist in calling, especially upon the unsaved. The noonday meals were enjoyed in the homes of the parishioners, and great meals they proved to be. I cannot speak too highly of the hospitality of these good people. A very liberal offering was given the evangelist. The time spent here was a season of Christian fellowship ever to be remembered.

Waynesboro, Pennsylvania

The work here was well cared for during my absence by ministers of other denominations. The church at this place is growing and making its influence for good felt in the lives of an increasingly large number. The Christmas season was fittingly observed. Among other things a pageant was given by the Sunday school before an unusually large audience, the effect of which was a deep spiritual impression. The pastor and the members of his family were remembered with gifts over the holidays for v are truly grateful.

The new year began very auspiciously. Business meetings have been held and auxiliaries are well organized and working on effectively. A recent addition to the auxiliary group is the Sister Mary and Martha. With Miss Verlin as patroness the girls are doing all worthwhile things. Attendance has been steadily on the increase and, of course, has received a temporary setback on account of an unusual amount of snow. One has recently been added to the church by baptism.

We have some definite plans for the future. A series of meetings will be beginning March 22 and closing Easter Sunday with the observance of Holy Week. The pastor has been asked to conduct this meeting. We hope to have a large attendance. Interest in your prayers.

W. C. BENSHOFF

BRYAN, OHIO

Rev. Stewart and wife came to Bryan, Ohio, ready to start the work with the church on October 1st. The work is going forward. The Sunday school and other organizations are increasing in size and faithfulness. The work under the leadership of Rev. Stewart.

The fall communion was observed after Rev. Stewart came on the first of October. A revival meeting was well attended. A revival meeting held in the month of January by the pastor with the choir director, Mrs. Freeman, in charge of the music.

Dr. C. F. Yoder took charge of the meetings one evening during the revival. He gave a very interesting address before a full house. The meetings continued three weeks with Rev. Stewart delivering his inspiring messages before an increasing audience. In spite of the many quarantines for smallpox the attendance was very good and confessions of 18 during these services. Of this number 15 were baptized. On Sunday evening following the close of the meetings. Since that time one young man has made his confession and will be baptized in the near future. May God bless them and keep them ever faithful in prayer.

We have been very fortunate in having Mr. and Mrs. Jobson meet with us. Jobson gave very interesting and helpful talks before both the W. M. S. and S. S. and Mr. Jobson spoke in their church before a large crowd. All who heard could not but be inspired to do more for the day and to feel proud to be able to support two such splendid missionary workers as the Jobsons.

The church deeply appreciates the services of their pastor and may God continue to make Rev. Stewart a blessing in his ministry.

ROY BEVER
Secre

BRYAN, OHIO

The five months that we have been in this field have been mighty busy. Getting acquainted with a new congregation and their method of work is no task as many of you know, especially scattered over so much territory. The church is off in a corner by itself many miles from any other Brethren church. The closest church is forty-five miles from Fort Wayne, Indiana, and that account ber of people that have their names records and live at a distance.

ave found the people here very con-and many of them deeply spiritual accounts for the number present at vices when the other churches have their evening services. They are very ative and do not hesitate to express preciation when you have done your their encouragement is very refresh-has a tendency to cause you to do st. But like every field there are which are not very encouraging and may be found without very much ef-ut there are the things that the Lord have us try to correct. So in his e are going forward and trying to best we can.

department of the church is work-a fine way under their leaders, and ffering for every purpose has been are of as they come. We are only at we are not able to do more in a l way for these worthy causes. The school has been well attended and erest has been manifested. Of course endurance has not been large when into consideration the membership, is due to a widely scattered mem-
The Christian Endeavor is not as s it might be, but we are going on and praying that it may take on new fill a long felt need in the church
g something to hold our young peo-e have two very live and active S. ocieties. The Senior and Junior un-leadership of Mrs. Zenia Kerr and azel Keiser. Also a very dependable active W. M. S. under the leadership Niagara Russel. We gave the mis-udy class to a large class of inter-steners, not only of the W. M. S., but also, who enjoyed it. The prayer has taken on new life and the ate and interest is increasing. Since on the field we have had the Ash-llege Girls' Glee Club, Brother Yoter Jobson and Brother Jobson; all ry much enjoyed and we feel that e been strengthened by them all.

: Paefi—
January the fourth we began our red had a three weeks' meeting. These were well attended considering the t we had an epidemic of smallpox re was some talk of closing the
This of course did not help us ne business places were quarantined
e evening we started the meetings,
y of our people were in quarantine.
Lord can overcome these handicaps, results of the meeting were a build-
of the spiritual life of the church, confessions and fifteen added to the One more has come since the meet-be baptized this week, making a nineteen confessions and sixteen and received into the church. We that we had a good meeting and e Lord for victories won, and only he may continue to bless and use vineyard.

we are not privileged to fellowship own brethren in the ministry, we for the radio. Some months ago sten to Brother Bame from Columtoday to Brother R. I. Humbert, her Sibert and his Sunday school of which makes us feel that we ar away from the other brethren, re looking forward to the Indiana ul meeting at Shippshewana, which to attend.

C. A. STEWART.

TO ENJOY THE BIBLE

Reading the Bible enables us to enjoy the Bible more. And our enjoyment of the Bible will lead us to read it more. But which comes first—joy in the Word as our reason for reading it, or reading the Word as the cause of our enjoying it? If we are to read the Bible only when we enjoy it, shall we leave it alone when we do not enjoy it? That sane and consecrated old saint George Muller, said: "It is a common temptation of Satan to make us give up the reading of the Word and prayer when our enjoyment is gone, as if it were of no use to read the Scriptures when we do not enjoy them. In order to enjoy the Word we ought to continue to read it. The less we read the Word of God, the less we desire to read it." In other words, the very fact that we may not enjoy the Bible is the more reason for reading it just then. It is the Holy Spirit who wrote the Bible, and "the fruit of the Spirit is . . . joy." The Bible and Christ are the two Words of God, and the Lord said to his disciples, "These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full" (John 15:11). We must turn to Christ and the Bible in faith, and feed on both, if we would have our joy sustained. Only thus can "the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing" (Rom. 15:13). When our joy overflows it is a good time to read the Bible. When we seem to lack all joy it is even a better time to read the Bible. If a poor man has a rich friend who has asked him to come to him in any and every time of need, then whenever the pinch of poverty is felt is surely a time to seek out the rich benefactor. Our times of spiritual poverty of any and every sort are the times when we ought to draw upon the riches of the Word of God, till we can say with the Psalmist, "I have rejoiced in the way of thy testimonies, as much as in all riches" (Psa. 119:14).—Sunday School Times.

WITNESS OF A BUSINESS MAN

Here is the testimony of Henry G. Adams of the University of Michigan, adviser to the Chinese Republic on the standardization of Railway Accounts.

"When I went out to China I did not think much of foreign missions or foreign missionaries, but I now take off my hat to the missionaries. I have never contributed much to foreign missions but now I expect to put everything that I can spare into the foreign mission offering. The missionaries are a noble lot of men and women and are rendering a very great service to the people of China."

Sunday School Notes

(Continued from page 11)

1920 by the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution and the passage of the Volstead Act. That is, the liberty of one man to make and sell intoxicating drink was held to impair the liberty of another man to enjoy health and economic and social welfare. Ask the wife of the workingman who wants full 'personal liberty' to drink whether this would increase her personal liberty. She will cut out all technicalities and go straight to the main point—that her husband's personal liberty to drink takes away her personal liberty to eat!"—Prof. Irving Fisher.

Summary of Prohibition Situation

In his book Prohibition at Its Worst, Professor Irving Fisher of Yale, sums up the situation as he sees it: "(1) Present conditions are intolerable and must be corrected. (2) Even so, they are not as dark as they have been painted. Moreover, if we do not ultimately correct them, they are now in the nature of temporary evils, destined to fade away in a few years, while the good from prohibition will go on indefinitely. (3) A great net good is already being realized, including over six billion dollars a year in cold cash values. (4) Real personal liberty—the liberty to live and enjoy the full use of our faculties—is increased by enforcement. (5) Light wines and beer cannot be legalized without another constitutional amendment. (6) No such amendment can be passed. (7) All the wets can possibly accomplish is laxity of enforcement or nullification: in other words, enormously to increase the very disrespect for law which they profess to deplore. (8) Therefore, the only satisfactory solution lies in fuller enforcement. (9) This can be accomplished, especially with the aid of education, when we face the facts." "Prohibition," concludes Professor Fisher, "is here to stay. . . . American prohibition will then go down in history as ushering in a new era in the world, in which accomplishment this nation will take pride forever."

Education Needed

Prohibition will not succeed in the final analysis by force. Law and enforcement have their place, let no one mistake that. Those who are trying to discount the place of law enforcement are often trying to encourage an attitude that will cause people to wink at the inexcusable laxness in enforcement to save their hides or to make drink easier to get. Still, the very first responsibility of the Christian citizen is to obey the law, and to encourage law observance by a faithful example. Then he must cooperate in a campaign of education that will reach to every corner of the land. We must not forget that there are vast numbers who have come to this country from lands where sentiment toward drink and the attitude toward the law are far different from what they are here. Besides a great crop of young people are coming on who have not seen the fruits of the liquor traffic as in the days of the open saloon. They must be instructed. Religious leaders, physicians, educators, social welfare workers and others must cooperate in bringing the importance of prohibition and law observance to the vast numbers of unconvinced and wavering people.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

MRS. SIBERT TALKS ON RADIO

Mrs. Floyd Sibert, wife of Rev. Sibert, pastor of the church at Ellet, Ohio, will give a half hour address over station WAIU, Columbus, Ohio, Saturday morning, March 14th at 9:30, during the Pocket Testament League Hour.

FLOYD SIBERT.

REVIVAL AT ELLET, OHIO

Evangelistic services are in progress at the First Brethren church of Ellet, Ohio, with Dr. J. C. Beal of Canton conducting the meetings. We desire prayer for the meetings.

FLOYD SIBERT, Pastor.

LET US REMEMBER

1. That Jesus Christ COMMANDED the Church to preach the gospel to all the world, and this command has never been abrogated.
2. That after 1900 years there are MORE UNSAVED PEOPLE in the world than when the command was originally given.
3. That God, in the most unmistakable way, has laid upon the members of the Brethren Church the RESPONSIBILITY for two great fields in Africa and South America.
4. That some of the finest young men and women of the Brethren Church have offered their lives for this work, and there is NO MONEY with which to send them to the field. LIFE is upon the altar, but where is the money? Must the Brethren Church admit that money is harder for her to give than life?
5. That the Son of God still WATCHES us as we cast our "gifts into the treasury." He will be watching among the Churches on Easter Sunday, watching with those eager eyes from which no intent and motive is hidden.
6. That if we fail on Easter Sunday we shall be passing a solemn judgment upon ourselves as a Church. We shall be admitting that our "candlestick" should be taken away.
7. That the very fact that God has committed so much precious truth to us as a Church only makes our responsibility the greater, and will make failure all the more blameable and disastrous to us.
8. That if we merely try to save our own life as a Church by the human expedience of holding our money for ourselves, we shall lose it. But if we pour it out for others, we shall save it.
9. That the last word of our Lord was, "Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give EVERY MAN according as his work shall be." Rewards are not for Churches, but for men and women. Therefore, the responsibility is INDIVIDUAL.
10. That in that great day, we shall all stand before the judgment-seat of Christ, and there each one of us shall give an account of HIMSELF to God. The solemn question there will not be, "What did your CHURCH do for Foreign Missions?" but "What did YOU do?"
11. That "hard times" may have brought a crash in stock market and real estate values, but there has been no depreciation in the eternal values. One human soul is still worth more than the whole material world.

THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH,

Alva J. McClain, Secretary.

Vol. LIII
Number 12

March 21
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

CHRIST TAKEN CAPTIVE

H. Hofmann.

When the task of World Evangelization is facing a crisis, will we, like Judas, clutch a bag of silver in preference to giving the Sacrificial Devotion our Lord desires?

Our Easter Offering for Foreign Missions will be Our Answer

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

THE Problem of "Christian Education"

What is a "Christian College?" Can an institution call its education "Christian" unless it employs its resources for the main purpose of winning the students to the experience of conversion and faith in Jesus Christ? On the other hand, can such a College maintain its academic standing with governmental authorities? Must the church, having led the way in founding colleges, now surrender the right to use them for the advancement of Christianity?

Questions of this kind are becoming acute, not only in America, but also in the foreign missions schools. Roland Allen, in World Dominion, discusses this problem so discerningly that I am devoting all my space this week to his article as follows.

"THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT AND MISSION SCHOOLS"

(Roland Allen)

In August, 1929, the Chinese government issued Regulations for schools, one of which ran thus: "A private school founded by a religious body is not permitted to give religion as a required subject, nor is religious propaganda permitted in the class instruction. If there are any religious exercises, students shall not be compelled or enticed to participate. No religious exercises shall be allowed in primary schools."

This regulation struck directly at the religious instruction given in mission schools, and this year a certain number of missions appealed against it, petitioning the National government "So to modify the article as to allow all grades of church schools to have religious instruction and church primary schools to have the privilege of worship." This petition was refused on the ground that "there is not only one religion. If we allow each religion in the name of education to vie with the other to propagate religion, the natural tendency will be to create divisions and strife. The Ministry of Education, in order to guard against such a possible calamity, is obliged to impose these restrictions which do not apply only to Christianity but to the other religions as well."

The issue is perfectly clear: Mission schools have been used to propagate a religion: the Chinese government does not think that schools are the proper places for religious propaganda. Therefore to stop that practice it issues a regulation that no religion shall be taught as a required subject, nor the other subjects used as a medium for religious propaganda in any private school. The authors of the petition were well aware of that when they wrote their petition, and they can hardly have been surprised at the reply. The issue was perfectly clear. Is a non-Christian government to encourage foreign missionary societies to establish schools as a means of propagating what is in its eyes a foreign religion? Is it to encourage foreigners to establish schools in which a coveted education in western arts and sciences is given as a means of propagating their religion and instilling into the minds of the young a religion which their parents have not accepted? Is the school the proper place for religious propaganda? The Chinese government decided that it was not.

Everyone knows that money is subscribed in Europe and America to propagate the faith of Christ, and that the societies which presented the petitions were in fact missionary societies. Everyone knows that the use of schools as a method of propaganda has been diligently preached at home, and Christian men have been induced to subscribe because they believed that practice to be good. Everyone knows that the names of any of the scholars in these schools who accepted the Christian faith and later made any mark in the world, or attained to any position of authority and influence have been quoted at meetings to prove the value of the schools as a good and efficient method of propaganda.

But many of us have known and have proclaimed as clearly as we could for some years that that practice was certain to produce a revolt against the mission schools; that to use education which assisted worldly advancement as a means of teaching children a faith which was not the faith of their parents was not the right way to proceed; that even in Christian countries we do not like to see one religious body establishing schools with a view to seducing the children sent to them from the faith of their parents.

And many of us have known, and for some years have pointed out, that language is frequently used at great missionary conferences by missionary educators which suggests that they feel that, and being unwilling to use the schools as a method of propaganda, speak not so much of the conversion of their pupils as of influencing them to live what they call a "Christlike" life by giving them high ideals of duty and charity, training them to become good citizens without necessarily becoming Christians. We have insisted that that sort of education is not Christian education; but that on the contrary Christian education is education in Christ, not merely moral, or even religious education given by Christians, nor education given under what we call Christian influences. We have insisted that Christian education is education in "Christ" and can only be given to Christians. And we have said that the sort of education which the language used implies is not compatible with the education suggested by the language used at missionary meetings where the zealous Christian who seeks first the conversion of men to Christ as the very foundation of all right life is encouraged to subscribe. And we have said that missionary societies ought not to admit this double speech; that by admitting it they deceive their subscribers, both those who subscribe for the conversion of the scholars, and those who shrink from the use of schools as a method of converting the young against the intentions of their parents in sending them to the schools; whilst in the mission field itself if parents send their children under the belief that they need not fear the conversion of their children, a single conversion persuades them that the real object for which the school exists is conversion, and that infrequent conversion is only a proof of the weakness of the religion taught in the school. Thus the double speech at once deceives everyone and convinces no one. When a government deals with the schools it makes no question that any religious teaching given in it is a form of propaganda.

The authors of the petition knew that, and they attempted to deal with it in their petition. How did they proceed? The petition was written as by Chinese, speaking of "our party leaders," "our national leaders," "our country," and of the schools of Chinese churches, though as a matter of fact the schools have all been established by foreign missions and until recently were openly under control, and are still so much under control that it is the missions which really close them if they were closed maintain them if they are maintained. Chinese churches apart from the missionaries started very few of them, and certainly could not maintain many of them. An article reporting the reply of the Ministry of Education to the petition, it expressly said that the reply leaves the missions with two alternatives, either "the missions close their schools," or that Chinese churches under whose control mission schools are perfectly willing—though it is only a year or two since missionaries were saying that the Chinese Christians were quite incapable of exercising that control, and missionaries certainly not accept it now unless they are obliged to do so—"inform the government of their sympathy with the construction of the Christian schools." These expressions make it perfectly plain when the petition spoke of "our schools" it did not mean to imply that schools were the schools of any Chinese churches as we understand that language but were only using a Chinese idiom which the government used no such idiom. The answer concerned "your" churches and schools, and by "your" the government means mission. The schools, apart from mere words, are in fact mission schools and the government objects to their use as centres of propaganda.

How did the petitioners meet the objection? They did not meet it. They simply used a number of paraphrases which concealed it, and glossed it over. "The purpose of the Church," they say, "in conducting schools is to nurture Christian personality to serve society and the state. Does that expression 'Christ-like person'"

(Continued on page 14)

IN THIS NUMBER

Short Talks by the Editor, .....
Editorial Review, .....
Wisdom—Florence Gribble, .....
Some Brethren Church Leaders—
M. M. Shively, .....
Christ's Last Passover—Domina
Reina, .....
Studies in the Scriptures—C. F. Y
der, .....
Significant News and Views, .....
The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon, ..
Seventh Day Adventism—W. E. Bie
erwolf, .....
Editor's Notes on the S. S. Lesse
White Gift Report—M. P. Put baugh, .....
Putting the E. in C. E.—Esth
Vanator, .....
News from the Field, .....
Our Little Readers, .....
The Tie that Binds, .....
In the Shadow, .....
Announcements, .....

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

and all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Short Talks by the Editor on Steps in the Way to Life and Fellowship

III. BAPTISM

repentance and faith comes baptism, the third step in the appointed way to eternal life and into fellowship with the which is the body of Christ. We are not concerned about unions of men when we have at hand the very word of him the source of all authority and from whose decrees there appeal. Therefore hear the words of the Lord Jesus as he his final commission to his disciples: "Go ye into all the world, teach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is d shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (16:15, 16). On an earlier occasion he said to Nicodemus: "I, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John 3:5). How could the necessity of baptism be set forth more clearly and definitely? No word or comment of man could make it more or more emphatic. And none should seek to take away its force.

teaching and practice of the apostolic church bear witness to the necessity of baptism. Peter, in his wonderful sermon on the day of Pentecost, said to the people: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." After giving baptism, the apostles administered it as the essential condition of admission into the church of Christ, for we read: "they that gladly received his words were baptized: and the day there were added unto them about three thousand souls" (Acts 2:41). Hear the words of the great lay preacher of the church: "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women" (Acts 8:12). Evidently, by the results, the necessity of baptism had a prominent place in Philip's preaching. And as a result of his instruction of such, we read: "And as they went on their way, they came to a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what can I hinder me to be baptized? ... and he baptized him" (Acts 8:36-38). Evidently here again Philip spoke of baptism as founded the scriptures and "preached unto him Jesus." Addressing Paul at the time of his conversion, he demanded: "and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord" (Acts 22:16). And Paul obeyed, and he went upon his mission with the doctrine of baptism as an important part of his message, as is evidenced by the record of the baptism of Lydia and her household and of the Philippian jailor and his household (See Acts 16:15 and 33), and further by the results of his preaching at Corinth and at Ephesus. At the former place he told that "many of the Corinthians hearing, believed, and were baptized" (Acts 18:8) and at the latter place, according to the record, "when they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 19:5). And when Peter visited the home of Cornelius and saw the evidences of conversion and of the Spirit's work, he recognized that the process was not complete, "and commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord" (Acts 10:48).

that baptism is essential, how should it be administered? A question which such importance is attached should not be carelessly neglected. And we are not left uninstructed. They who are commanded and are willing to do, may know the truth about how we are to baptize.

In the first place, baptism is immersion, according to the divine command, and should be practiced as such. The word Jesus used in Matthew 28:19 and in Mark 16:16, is baptizo, meaning to dip, or to immerse. It requires water sufficient to immerse the person. Jesus referred to the act of baptism as a new birth—"born of water and of the Spirit." That figure involves water of sufficient quantity to envelope the entire person. Paul likens baptism unto a death, burial and resurrection. It is symbolical of the three acts of Christ's atoning work—his death on the cross, his burial in the tomb and his resurrection the third day. We are identified with him in death, we ourselves dying to sin as he died for sin—that means immersion. We are buried with him, as proof that we are really dead to sin, as his death was real—that requires being submerged in water. We are raised to walk in newness of life, as Christ also was raised by the exercise of power divine—that is suggested by our coming up out of the water. That is what Paul means when he writes to the Romans (6:3-4) "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." Repeatedly he speaks of baptism after this likeness, as for example in Colossians 2:12, Galatians 3:27 and 1 Corinthians 15:29. Baptism, then, is undoubtedly immersion and no man has any scriptural warrant for practicing a substitute.

Scriptural baptism is not only immersion, it is triune immersion—a three-fold act in one baptism. Triune immersion is taught in the commission in Matthew 28:19: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." There are three persons there mentioned—the blessed trinity—and one dip is required in honor of each separate person of the God-head. It is impossible to honor and to recognize the separateness of the three persons of the God-head by one dip; there must needs be three. And when three dips have been made, it is not three baptisms that have been performed, but one baptism by a three-fold action. The very grammatical construction of the great commission requires a triple action, as "into the name of" is understood in connection with each person of the trinity. That is, "into the name of" the Father calls for one dip, "into the name of" the Son calls for a second dip, and "into the name of" the Holy Spirit calls for a third dip. If we use the commission as the formula for baptism and yet make only one dip, we do not do all we say. Furthermore, the use of the word baptizo, which means a repeated dipping, instead of the word bapto, which means just one dip, adds weight to the contention that a triple action was intended. The instruction is to make disciples, dipping them,—how many times? The three prepositional phrases limit the action to three dippings—into the name of the Father and (into the name) of the Son and (into the name) of the Holy Spirit.

And lastly, the immersion is to be forward action. Baptism involves a personal surrender or yielding to God, and not a forced action, and the forward action indicates that willingness while the backward action suggests the opposite. Baptism involves a pledge, a prayer, an act of worship, a calling upon the name of the Lord, and it is the forward action that enables the applicant to be bowed in the attitude of prayer. And the forward action is true to the spirit and manner of Jesus' death to which Paul declares it is to bear a likeness. We are to be "planted together in the likeness of his death" (Rom. 6:5). That involves far more than a mere visible or formal likeness, though we read, "He bowed his head and gave up the ghost" (John 19:30). It means that he died willingly; he voluntarily humbled himself and became obedient unto death. Jesus was not forced to the cross; he was not murdered; he laid down his life of his own accord, saying, "No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself" (John 10:18). It is suggestive of that spirit of willingness when we read that he bowed his head and died. And baptism is to be like that.

Scriptural baptism is, therefore, triune immersion by the forward action and is to be engaged in in the spirit of loving obedience and as a sign and seal of God's washing away of sin and bestowal of new life.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

He gives the best who prays the best. And remember that Easter Sunday is the time to give for Foreign Missions.

We thank Brother L. G. Wood for the words of appreciation and commendation of the Brethren Evangelist and the Sunday school literature. We are especially glad to have him mention in particular Brother McClain's recent treatment of "Is Bodily Healing in the Atonement?"

We are glad to call attention to Dr. Bauman's notice concerning his booklet on "The Modern Tongues Movement", which you will find in the "Announcement" department. It is meeting an extensive need, as the many communications which Brother Bauman is receiving from sources both outside and within the church indicate. The price of the booklet is 20 cents per single copy.

Christian Endeavorers, what does "E" stand for in the "C. E." initials or monogram? Perhaps you do not have an "E" in your "C. E." The writer in the Christian Endeavor department, Miss Esther Vanator, suspects that some folks do not have, and she is telling how to put the "E" in "C. E." Read it. And by the way, if your society has not made a report of its doings recently, send in a report soon to Brother C. D. Whitmer at South Bend, Indiana, who conducts the department.

President E. E. Jacobs gives us a number of interesting items this week in his college news letter. The May Queen is announced in the person of Miss Candis Studebaker, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Studebaker of Pittsburgh. The Alumni Association has launched a move to secure funds with which to erect bleachers on the athletic field, and friends of the college are being challenged by some one who offers to match every dollar given for that purpose. Surely there are enough interested folks throughout the brotherhood to erect half of the bleachers. The college faculty is to be commended for the new effort made to build up a greater intimacy and friendship with the student body by inviting the students into their homes. It indicates a real concern on the part of the faculty members for the welfare and happiness of those under their care. It also points to one of the many advantages of the small college.

The editor slipped away from his office with his family last week, just long enough to help celebrate the golden wedding of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Hoff, of Peru, Indiana. Rev. Fred C. Vanator, pastor at Peru, lent his genial presence and helpfulness to the happiness of the occasion, though he was in the midst of a revival meeting under the leadership of Rev. R. Paul Miller. We had the privilege of hearing several of Brother Miller's soul-stirring evangelistic sermons, which have been so used of God to turn men from sin unto life eternal. We there met also the other members of the Home Mission Board's Executive Committee, which was in session, struggling with some of the knotty problems that Board is facing. The personnel of that committee is Brethren H. F. Stuckman, Freeman Ankrum and R. Paul Miller.

Brother L. G. Wood, pastor of the church at Fort Scott, Kansas, writes that a revival is now in progress there with Brother R. Paul Miller as evangelist. Considerable emphasis was placed on preparation for the meeting, and very properly so. It is very generally the case that where God is able to give great success, there much attention has been given to preparation. There are many churches, and communities where, like Nazareth of old, the Lord can do no mighty works because of unbelief. And great, expectant faith springs out of holy lives, devoted hearts and surrendered wills. The church that does not prepare itself for the blessing of God is likely to be passed over. It is good where churches are able to maintain a continual passion for evangelism and a deep spirituality that makes possible a great conviction of sin and a turning to God at all times, but such are all too few. For most of them, there is need of a rekindling of spiritual zeal before there can be any aggressive efforts at soul saving.

Special to New Church Members—Many new members are being received into our churches and every one ought to be started out aright by having the church paper placed in his home and then encouraged to read it regularly. It would be a fine thing if every church would make each new member a present of a year's subscription to The Brethren Evangelist. It would mean wonders toward encouraging them to grow in grace and in knowledge and in loyalty. An informed church member is far more useful, stable, other things being equal, than an uninformed church member. If you want yours informed get them to reading and now. Whether your church is on the Honor Roll or not, it will you to help your new members to get started aright by putting the Evangelist in their homes. We will do our part to help in this by offering a special rate of $1.35 per year to all churches wishing to place the church paper in the homes of their new members. Let all evangelists and pastors please take note. It would help greatly toward conserving the results of your meetings.

Prof. M. P. Puterbaugh, treasurer of the National Sunday School Association, gives us his second report of White Gifts, the amount of this report being $251.31. The amount previously reported was $3,194.37, making the present total of gifts to this purpose $3,445.68. The total amount of gifts last year to the Association was $3,839.68, so you see we have still a considerable distance to go to reach the mark of the previous year, and this, in view of the fact that the Association enlarged its program this year. Possibly a number of schools will yet send in offerings. We say the treasurer will continue to be in a receptive mood and must close his books for the year. But we are convinced that it would be much more satisfactory to the Association and to the schools concerned, if every individual organization would see that the offering is taken at the Christmas season and the offering sent in promptly. When churches get behind with their offerings, it is very hard to catch up, and it often results in having to the interest being supported.

Rittman, Ohio, has experienced a real refreshing from the Lord under the evangelistic leadership of Brother R. D. Barnard of Dayton, Ohio. Mrs. Grant McDonald, of Smithville, served as a leader, and many visitors from neighboring churches added a touch of fellowship and cooperation to the meetings. There were many accessions to the church and the membership was greatly increased by the splendid preaching of Brother Barnard. We wish to commend both the pastor and people of the Dayton church for providing Rittman, a mission church, with an evangelistic mission without cost. This is real mission work, and of a kind that we should like to see more of, and for which we have on several occasions made appeal to Ohio churches, in our capacity as preachers of the Ohio Mission Board. Dayton is naturally our heavy lift to district missions, but this service is deserving of special commendation and an example has been set that we hope other churches will emulate. We say this not to make it easy for mission churches but to make possible to them strong campaigns when they otherwise be unable to afford them, and also to help them get on their feet as self-supporting churches. Rittman is working toward that end, and with the splendid progress being made under the leadership of Brother Everett Niswonger, we would not be surprised if they would make the goal by 1933. At least that is what we have in mind, and they will come nearer accomplishing it by having the ideal before them than if they did not have it. Let us not try. May God bless Brother Niswonger and his faithful people as they continue to lead in such a devoted way these splendid people.

Brother J. Wesley Platt, pastor of the church at Manteca, California, writes that Dr. C. F. Yoder's coming to conduct a revival meeting at that place has been long sought and is now much appreciated. Splendid preparation was made and the campaign is now in progress. At the first service two made confession. There have been previously added to the church since last October one of these has developed into a splendid Sunday school superintendent. This church is making a courageous effort to raise the money necessary to send one of their number, Miss Laura, as a missionary to the Argentine. Others may help both by their prayers and their gifts as we approach the time for the launching of the Foreign Missionary offering. Miss Larson is specially equipped for the work she has her heart set on doing. We are going, we understand, waits only on the necessary funds.

(Continued on page 9)

PRAYER REQUEST FOR THIS WEEK—

For the revival now in progress at Fort Scott, Kansas, with R. Paul Miller, the evangelist, and Brother L. G. Wood, pastor, Pray for a revival meeting at Ardmore, Indiana, with Brother A. T. Wirick, in charge, March 22 to April 5.

Wisdom

By Florence N. Gribble, M. D., Pioneer Missionary to French Equatorial Africa

men said I, Ah Lord God! behold I cannot speak; for I am a child; for thou shalt speak. Be not afraid of their faces; for I am with thee, saith the Lord." Jeremiah 1. 6-8.

There is no greater gift than wisdom. Man in his blindness seeks wisdom, yet oft-times in unhallowed ways. He who is wise in his own eyes walks in this path presently and is for the most part contented with his self-generated condition. There is only one way to obtain wisdom, and that is—"to fear Jehovah and depart from evil" (Prov. 3:7). He who is willing to do this is to be wise in his own eyes; and, being emptied of himself, he knows that in humility he must ask for that wisdom which he lacks.

James the first chapter and fifth verse, the words are quoted, "If any man lack wisdom let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not," an encouragement to our hearts, as in humility we approach our Father, "to ask of God!" What a privilege! Ask of others,—What a pain! And why? Because God gives liberally and to all. Man gives niggardly, and to many men upbraids. God upbraideth not. Man says, "I should have known better than to have made that mistake. You should not have been so foolish." God says, "My child, your very emptiness, your very lack comes to you to my fulness, and to my supply. Your need invites my faithfulness. Receive, my trusting child, wisdom from my loving hand."

As we have said, a privilege to ask. It is an even greater privilege to be assured that we shall receive that which we have asked. If we are truly believers, if to us the Word of God is equal to its own fulfillment, we do not but rejoice in contemplating the truth contained in Matthew 21:22—"and all things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." And if we desire further assurance, we shall find it in John 16:23: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, if ye shall ask anything of the Father he will give it to you in my name. For if ye have asked nothing in my name: ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be made full." Is it not to know that if we seek, we shall find; if we ask, we shall receive?

Job 28:12 we find—"But where shall wisdom be found? and where is the place of understanding?" A pertinent question, a question asked, if not in despair at least in hopelessness. For it is difficult indeed to put ourselves in the place of the Old Testament sages.

We marvel at their fidelity, at their loyalty, at their faith, in those days when wisdom was but little known; in those days when Christ had not yet been revealed; in those days when they were walking in the dim light of unfulfilled promises.

Today we rejoice that we walk no longer in that twilight of unfulfilled prophecy; but in the knowledge of the relation of God's Son. We rejoice in the wondrous promises of the New Testament; in the acme of spiritual attainment to be found in the Epistles, and in the knowledge of God's choice of us, the humblest of his servants. We indeed, as we hear James (2:5-6) say: "Hearken, ye beloved brethren, did not God choose them that are poor as to the world, to be rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he promised to them that love him?"

We cannot help but believe that wisdom will be found among those who are rich in faith, and therefore among those who are poor in this world. What matter?

For such are also heirs, heirs of the kingdom, heirs of his grace, and heirs of his wisdom as well.

We have seen that wisdom must be asked; that it must be earnestly sought; that it is definitely assured. And we have seen also where it may be found. The despairing question of the Old Testament has found an answer in the revelation of the New. "How shall wisdom be found"? Let us turn again to the Old Testament, and to that author who was given a superabundance of the gift of wisdom, and read the words of Solomon, in the book of Proverbs (3:5-6): "Trust in Jehovah with all thine heart, and lean not upon thine own understanding; In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he will direct thy paths."

And now we come to the charm of this wonderful jewel which we have found. It is a jewel of the first water; a jewel with many flashing facets; a jewel resplendent with heavenly light, and look upon it with heavenly thoughts at its seven manifestations. In James 3:17 we read: "The wisdom which is from above is first pure." How we long for purity; how we rejoice in its possession, whether that purity be of the water that we drink; of the food that we eat; of the lives with which we associate; of the society in which we move; we demand that all these things shall be first pure. Naturally do we then rejoice when we find that purity is the first characteristic of heavenly wisdom.

Again, heavenly wisdom does not proceed from strife and faction. It is peaceable. Do you know a man who is quiet when attacked, who knows nothing of strife? Rest assured that you may rely upon his advice, for that peace which he manifests is the second characteristic of heavenly wisdom. Do you know a woman who has the beauty of holiness manifested in Christian silence or in Christ-like words? She, too, has this characteristic.

And then this heavenly wisdom is gentle. "Thy gentleness hath made me great" (Psalm 18:35). Why does gentleness produce greatness? Because to be gentle is to be like our Father, who alone is truly great. Wisdom does not emanate from a brawl; it emanates from a gentle heart, a heart full of faith and the Holy Ghost.

Such a heart will have the fourth characteristic of wisdom: it will be "easy to be entreated." Do you know someone who quickly gives up his pleasure, or his preference? Do you know someone who says "yes" when his natural inclination would have led him to say "no"? That one is a wise man. He knows how to yield his preference, yet in so doing the same sustains his principle. It is thus that we sometimes find the man whom we had thought easily swayed, to be adamant in the moment of crisis; standing for righteousness though it cost him his life; yielding nothing which pertains to holiness, but yielding all that which pertains to self.

Again, we find that he who is truly wise will be "full of mercy." Mercy is not a human characteristic, it is the divine reflection of God, who alone is truly merciful. Only he who is endued with heavenly wisdom knows when and where to bestow mercy. We have been astonished as we have studied this wonderful passage in James 3:17, to know that mercy is so classified as to be inseparable from good fruit. He who is full of mercy is full of good fruit. Let the goodness, the tenderness, the mercy which you would show your own child, your own sister, your own personal helper, be the criterion in all your standards of discipline. How easy it is to discipline by wholesale. How

(Continued on page 7)

By Martin Shively, D. D.

By Domingo Reina

In those moments the thoughts of Jesus would be different from the thoughts of the rest of his company.

could see in himself, that first passover Lamb, Israel in Egypt, whose blood, sprinkled upon the stones, would be a refuge for those within the house when the destroying angel passed by. He would see in that Lamb, whose blood would be shed on the cross, and behind which would take refuge many who one day would stand before the Father (Heb. 7:27; 9:12-28; 10:14). Woe to that soul who has no such refuge in Christ when he must present himself before a Thrice Holy God!

Jesus pass now for a few minutes to the upper room, where there the twelve seated at the table listening eagerly, ready to participate in the feast. Suddenly we see the Master rise, gird himself with a towel, take a pail of water, and begin to do something he had never done before. One disciple, scandalized, does not wish his Master to take the place of a servant. How sublime he is as he washes the feet of his disciples, and as he says: "I am your Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I ought to be. I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet: ye also ought to wash one another's feet."

Jesus Christ was the fulfilment of the law, and the Passover Lamb, and since he had to be food for the world (for, "verily, verily, I say unto you, except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood, ye have no life in you," and again "He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day" (Jn. 6:53, 54), he instituted a new feast to take the place of the old (Heb. 8:13). This feast is celebrated in commemoration of his death, and he gave forth the Lord's death till he come." What a feast they had that night! Though the apostles did not understand it at the moment, when the passover type was fulfilled they could remember and appreciate what Jesus had taught them.

Jesus had there the Lord, after having partaken of the bread, took the unleavened bread, which alone could give life to his body, since he "was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin," and giving it to his own, said, "Take, eat; this is my body, which is broken for you, this do in remembrance of me." Then, taking the chalice, that cup of which he himself declared "is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many," he gave the pure fruit of the vine, which only could symbolize the precious blood of Christ. Christ is our Passover, and when we are gathered around the table, to commemorate this feast, we think of the cruel death Christ suffered on the cross for our place, and of his blood shed to wash away our sins; and then we ask, "Will this be my last communion to partake of this supper on the earth?" "Am I depending on that death and that blood to cover my sins when I must be presented before the Thrice Holy God? Will he permit me a place to sit down with him in the Kingdom of God, to participate with him, 'who loved us and gave himself for us?' God grant that the reader of these lines, together with the writer, may be found worthy to enter the kingdom of our Father, partaking of that great Love feast, that great Love feast.

Wisdom

(Continued from page 5)

It is to render justice without mercy, unless our hearts are touched with that heavenly wisdom; and then we can see all the suffering, all the motives, all the influences and all the forces which were brought to bear upon the struggling soul at that moment when he was tempted and swayed; and, perhaps, because we lacked wisdom; and we, because of our lack of wisdom, lost the good fruit. Oh, if we would be endued with heavenly wisdom, we must simultaneously be "full of mercy and good fruit."

And then, the true wisdom is without variance. How hard it is to see always alike. How seldom do minds, without consultation, arrive spontaneously at the same conclusion. And yet how shall unity be obtained? Can it be obtained by thinking, "My brother thinks so and so, I will endeavor to think so, too"? Ah, no. You are generous in thus thinking, but you are not wise, for your brother may be wrong; and in endeavoring to force yourself into unity with him, you are unwisely following man and not God. What then shall we do? Wherever there is a difference of opinion let us seek the thought of God as revealed in the Word. And even here, too, we must be careful. Let us not make the mistake of interpreting an isolated passage of Scripture in accordance with non-Christian principles. How many unwise and unjust procedures have thus crept into the Christian Church! And, he who desires to follow them simply says, "The Word says so. We must not exalt our human wisdom above the Word of God."

And then the last, and, perhaps most beautiful characteristic of wisdom, is, that it is without hypocrisy. Oh, to be wise in all sincerity! To be wise enough to manifest a love without dissimulation! To be wise enough to reveal the Lord Jesus from no other motive than the desire for his glory! Is not that inspiration enough to stimulate any heart to seek after this wonderful, seven-fold, heavenly wisdom?

In closing, let us look for a moment at the results of wisdom. Paul, in writing to Timothy, has beautifully expressed the culmination of wisdom in the seventeenth verse of the first chapter of the first epistle: "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only God, be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen."

"The only wise God!" Oh, what a blessed thing it is to know that only God is wise, that he alone has wisdom! We may seek and find it here, but at best we shall only know in part, until that blessed day when we shall be ushered into his presence. Then, "We shall know even as also we are known." Honor and glory be unto him now and forever.

"Why should the spirit of mortal be proud"? Why should the spirit of mortal be so foolish as to forget or reject him who is eternal, him who is immortal, him who is invisible, him who alone is wise? May we henceforth seek with renewed zeal this heavenly wisdom.

Yaloke, par Boali, par Bangui,
Afrique Equatoriale Francaise.

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

THE FAITH OF THE GOSPEL

(Continued from last week)

3. Social life—As members of society believers should try to be without offense. That is, they should not be an occasion of stumbling to anyone (1 Cor. 10:31, 32). As witnesses of Christ they should strive to set an example to the world rather than to follow worldly examples (Rom. 12:2; 1 Pet. 2:21). Their adorning should not be the follies of fashion, but the jewels of the Christian virtues (1 Pet. 2:1-6; Isa. 3:16-26).

True Christians are known by their brotherly love and charity (Jn. 13:35; 1 Jn. 3:17). They arrange their differences with their brethren peaceably and not by appeal to law (Matt. 18:15-19; 1 Cor. 6:1-8). They avoid all that might harm a weaker brother (Rom. 14:21).

Christian conversation should be for edification, without obscene suggestions or vulgar words or smutty stories; without exaggerations or injurious or unjust references to others (Eph. 4:15; 1 Thess. 5:11; Matt. 12:36). The calumniator is condemned with adulterers and idolators (1 Cor. 6:10). The believer does not use oaths, either in blasphemy or in any other way. All cases of legal oaths may be avoided by simple affirmations (Matt. 23:6-20; 5:34).

4 Industrial life—In their industrial relations Christians do not deceive or oppress (Eph. 4:31, 32). Knowing that life does not consist in the abundance of things that one possesses (Lk. 12:15), they seek rather the kingdom of God and his righteousness (Matt. 6:33). They thus avoid the dangerous love of money (1 Tim. 6:10). Laborers work as for the Lord (Eph. 6:9). They save that they may also help the needy (Eph. 4:28). They do not engage in harmful occupations like the sale of intoxicants, the use of gambling devices or harmful amusements which lead away from God and cause people to spend their money for that which is useless (Hab. 2:15; Rom. 13:9, 10). In all things they remember that they are called to be stewards of God (Lk. 19:12-27).

(5) Political life—In civil life believers give to Caesar that which belongs to Caesar (Matt. 21:21). They pay their taxes (Rom. 13:7), obey the laws (Rom. 13:1-7), but oppose iniquities (Eph. 5:11). They pray for their rulers (1 Tim. 2:1, 2), but are opposed to war (Matt. 25:52). They suffer personal injustice with patience (1 Pet. 4:15, 16), and obey God as their final and supreme authority (Acts 5:29).

(6) In the church—It is in the true church that the spirit of Christ can best be seen. Here love is the law. Not sensual love of which the world speaks, but divine love, for God is love (1 Jn. 4:7, 8). This love comes, not by evolution from below, but by the gift of God above (Gal. 5:22). As light is divided into all the rainbow colors, so love when analyzed gives all the Christian virtues (Gal. 5:22, 23; 1 Cor. 13).

Believers love the house of God and do not neglect the meetings of the church (Heb. 10:25). They love the work of the church and help it all they can (1 Cor. 14:26; Rom. 12:3-8). They love their pastors and missionaries and bring their tithes for their support (1 Cor. 9:7-15) with Num. 18:26). They love their fellow workers and are loving and patient with them (2 Tim. 2:23, 24; Eph. 4:31, 32). They love the lost, pray for them and make every effort to convert them (Acts 4:4; Jas. 5:20). They love the unfaithful and try to restore them (Gal. 6:1; 1 Jn. 5:16). They honor their pastors and obey their precepts (Heb. 13:7), not as if they were semi-gods with power to save or condemn, but as teachers of the saving word (1 Pet. 5:1-5). In case of sickness they may call the elders for prayer and anointing with oil for healing (Jas. 5:14-17).

(7) Duties to God—Believers love God above all (Matt. 22:37) and express their love by their obedience (1 Jn. 5:2). They live temperate lives because their bodies are temples of God (1 Cor. 3:16-18). Therefore they do not poison them, even in moderation, by poisons like alcohol, tobacco, narcotics, nor by excess in the use of other things (Prov. 20:1, 2; 23:29; Rom. 13:13). Modern vices, as tobacco using, gambling, dancing, which are not included in the lists in the Bible by name, are in reality included in Gal. 5:21 under the term "and such like." They are harmful like the rest.

Believers, being "sons of God" suffer punishment as sons, receiving it as for their good (Heb. 12:7-12; 1 Pet.

4:14-19). They use their resources, their time, the talent and all, as stewards who must give an account of everything (1 Cor. 4:2; 6:20). They carry them out with the seriousness of ambassadors of God (2 Cor. 5:20), and therefore have no time to waste in simply trying to amuse themselves (1 Thess. 5:5-9).

As children desire the company of their parents, so believers love to pray. Their prayers are not vain repetitions, as in the use of rosaries, but praises and petitions which come from the heart (Jas. 5:16; Matt. 6:7-13). They do not direct their prayers to creatures (saints or angels) but to the Father in Heaven, in the name of Jesus (Jn. 15:16).

They do not forget that praise is a part of prayer (Eph. 5:19; Ps. 150). The hymns of worship should be true prayer with or without the use of instruments, they should be in tune with communion with God in spirit and in truth (Jn. 4:23). Such worship does not permit the use of unknown language (1 Cor. 14:15-20), or the veneration of images (Deut. 4:15, 16; Ex. 20:4, 5; Isa. 44:9-17).

(To be continued)

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

U. S. SUPREME COURT SUSTAINS CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION

On February 24 the Supreme Court of the United States by a clearly worded and unanimous opinion sustained the constitutionality of the amendment against the contention of Federal Judge William Clark of New Jersey, who ruled it had been invalidly ratified.

The Clark decision was based upon a contention that the amendment, to be valid, should have been ratified by state popular conventions rather than by the State Legislatures.

Counsel supporting Judge Clark's position argued that the amendment differentiated between amendments affecting changes in governmental machinery and those affecting the liberties of the people. Amendments of the latter category, he contended, must be submitted by Congress to state conventions.

"The United States asserts," Justice Roberts stated, "that the amendment is clear in statement, contains no ambiguity, and calls for no resort to rules of construction. A mere reading demonstrates that this is true."

The opinion was clearly phrased and Justice Roberts had read it but a few sentences before its meaning was apparent to the spectators who filled every seat in the semicircular room, and listened intently until the conclusion:

"The order of the court below is reversed."—The Evangelist Messenger.

THE NEW KNIGHTHOOD

In days of old, Knighthood was conferred in recognition of military service. But something occurred over in England which shows that the world, the inner world of thought, as the visible world, is changing. Norman Angell, a Member of Parliament, long known for his service in the inner world of peace, was knighted by the British government as a reward for his years of honorable and fruitful service in this field. First he struck out boldly in defense of his peace ideals, then he was scoffed at and ridiculed by people of all classes, including the newspapers. But, undaunted, he followed the gleam through the World War, and now is recognized as one of the greatest peace prophets, few men having been more influential in laying real foundations for general good will and the peace that eventually will supplant the war psychology. It is Norman Angell, who figures in the role of a new knight in the world that is moving, moving in the direction of peace and away from strife. May its pace be accelerated!—Religious Telegraph.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM STILL IN DANGER

Dr. Robert E. Speer of New York, senior secretary of the Presbyterian board of foreign missions and former moderator terian Union in Chicago recently, declared that Christianity battling for freedom of conscience as it did in the first three centuries.

problem of freedom of conscience is the paramount religious problem in Russia today, Dr. Speer declared. He added that such liberty could be denied to people of Italy, China, and Peru if certain conditions in those countries win. Dr. Speer meant efforts toward the establishment of all religion in Russia on the one hand and the Roman pontifical demand for the silencing of Protestant missionaries in Italy. The demand is echoed by Roman Catholic leadership in Latin American lands, Dr. Speer said.

Speer indicated both efforts, though one is irreligious and the other sectarian, seek to accomplish the same end, denial of the right to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience.—The Evangelical-Messenger.

DO A LITTLE THINKING

Suppose the Volstead law should be modified to permit 2.75 percent beer, and then the saloon-keeper, or his equivalent, who sold 3.75 percent beer should be discovered selling 3.75 percent or 4 percent beer, would those who are now advocating 2.75 percent beer be in the least disturbed by the violation of the law, which was worked so desperately to secure?

Would they not be the first to denounce the arrest and punishment of such an offender?

Those who are old enough to know anything about what took place before prohibition, know that these same people are part of the crowd that has always been against the liquor laws.

Are we foolish enough to believe that the high-powered beer and distilled spirits wouldn't be sold in much larger quantities than the 75 percent brand? Every such place would be a whisky business, made to order.—The American Issue.

"USE YOUR FEET FOR WALKING"

The latest explanation of the financial depression that we have is almost Lincolnian in its homely philosophy. It charges that with unwillingness to use their legs and feet for what they were given them to us, namely, for walking to and from our work. It was not a health article in which this reflection occurred. There is some sense in the implications of the statement. No nation has ever practised helplessness more assiduously than the present one. The amount of our resources devoted to relief of work is an astonishing proportion of the mechanism of the market. They are boosted as time savers, muscle savers, brain savers. One is moved to inquire whether time, sinew and brain were intended to be saved or to be invested. We cannot but feel that one big moral question of the day is framed in the words: "What are you doing with your leisure?"

Today was (and we are not too old to remember) when a generation of people were quite capable of amusing themselves. Societies and churches could devise programs that were not only satisfactory but which enabled the members thereof to practise thinking and good fellowship. Towns and cities had organizations for the promotion of literature and art in which the resources of libraries and the talents of individuals became common property. A lot more of the organs than those of locomotion are too little used.—The Evangelist.

Editorial Review

(Continued from page 4)

It seems that lives are more easily secured for the work of the kingdom than the money necessary to send them to their work. Members of the Foreign Board are telling us that many of the young people are waiting for the church to provide the means that will make possible their going into the distant parts of the world with the "good news" of salvation. The same can be said with regard to home fields, workers are waiting and ready to go wherever calls to some of the needy places, but the funds necessary to make their going possible is not forthcoming. Perhaps we will find that Christian stewardship is one of the essential elements of church and kingdom extension, and that they who faithfully preach and practice it will not be able to enter the doors of opportunity as rapidly as God opens them.

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Exodus 4:1-9. How many times in the trials and uncertainties of modern life we wish we could have as certain a sign, as definite a message from the Lord, as was here given to Moses! Yet Moses had not the background of the life of Christ and the inspired word which we have found so precious. Jesus plainly taught that our faith need no longer rest in signs and wonders. Our commission for service is as definite as Moses', and God has promised us strength for the day. Having this, what more need we ask?

TUESDAY

Exodus 4:10-17. Moses still held back from the service for which he had been chosen, and the anger of the Lord was kindled against him. How must some of the grumbling, fault-finding, obstructionist church members of today try the patience of the Lord, after all the years of grace and knowledge which we have all enjoyed. Again, there is great comfort in his words to Moses. When we have found some work thrust upon us, and we feel not at all qualified to undertake the task, let us remember that God made our mouths, our minds, all the talents we have, and he can teach us how to use them all in every work whereunto he has called us.

WEDNESDAY

Exodus 4:18-23. Having taken up the work to which God had called him, Moses at once made preparations to go. "And Moses took the rod of God in his hand." To Moses, that rod stood in much the same position as our Scriptures. It represented the definite word of God, and was a tangible evidence of God's power. If those whom he has called to service in our day would always remember to go forth with the rod in their hands, greater victories would certainly result for the work of the Lord. Let us all spend more time with God's word.

THURSDAY

Exodus 4:27-31. It seemed almost unbelievable to the children of Israel that the Lord would notice their affliction and send them a deliverer, and their hearts were filled with thanksgiving. In spite of all that we have since learned about the nature of our God, it still seems unbelievable that God should so love the world that he sent his only begotten Son to die that sinful men might live. But, praise God, we know it is true, and the great fact becomes increasingly precious through the years.

FRIDAY

Exodus 5:1-9. "Who is this God?" I do not know him, and I will not do his bidding!"—such was Pharaoh's retort. It is not greatly different from the answer of the world today. Just as Moses later was called upon to display God's power before Pharaoh, so must we display the power of God in our lives before all the world, that they may know the power of God and give glory to him.

SATURDAY

Exodus 5:10-23. It has often been pointed out by the archaeologists that in the ruins of these cities in Egypt one may today behold convincing evidence of the exact truth of the Bible record. In the ruined walls one may behold the story of bricks without straw laid on top of work that had been built of bricks made with straw. God's word is true in every detail and we may depend with certainty upon every warning and every promise contained therein.

SUNDAY

Exodus 6:1-8. It was while the children of Israel were in their very deepest misery and dejection under the increased burdens that had been laid upon them, that God appeared unto them, through Moses, and reaffirmed the promises made unto their fathers. How precious is our God in every time of trouble, and how comforting are his blessed promises! Let us pray for all those who are trying to make known the promises of God throughout all the world today.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Goshen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

Seventh Day Adventism

By William Edward Biederwolf

(Continued from last week)

Now let us investigate the matter somewhat further and get all the facts before us as clearly as possible so that if a decision must be made between the two days it can be made intelligently. If we are told expressly to keep the seventh day, then of course such a command must forever settle any dispute we may have about the matter.

Here now are three positive and undisputed facts:

(1) God rested on the seventh day and hallowed it (Gen. 2).

(2) The next mention of the seventh day Sabbath was 2,500 years later, when God gave it to Israel (Exodus 20:11). God "made it known" to Israel when they were in the wilderness (Nehemiah 9:7-14). So we are not certain that the Sabbath was observed prior to this time.

(3) The Sabbath was given to Israel.

(a) As a remembrance of her deliverance out of Egypt (Deut. 5:12-13).

(b) As a sign of God's covenant with his people (Exodus 31:11-18 and Ezekiel 2:12).

(c) As a shadow of which Christ is the substance (Col. 2:16-17).

The Sabbath was nowhere given or enjoined as a memorial of God's creation rest, but as a remembrance and a sign and a shadow as just noted, and of course because of the constitutional demands of man's nature for a day of rest.

NOW LET US NOTE THE FOLLOWING:

1. The Sabbath day, according to the Old Testament and according to Seventh Day Adventists, began at sunset on Friday evening and ended at sunset on Saturday evening.

But the Sabbath day in the minds of the Disciples evidently did not begin and end with sunset. In fact it seems that no hard and fast time necessarily began or finished the day of rest at the time of the writing of the gospels.

Matthew says (Matt. 28:1), "In the end of the Sabbath as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulcher." It doesn't "begin to dawn" at sunset on Saturday night. For Matthew the Sabbath must have ended at SUNRISE on Sunday morning.

Now if you will look at what the other writers of the Gospels have to say as to the time of the coming to the sepulcher you will see that they apparently make the Sabbath end at MIDNIGHT on Saturday night. It is for this reason that the critics charge the evangelists with error and inconsistency. But they are not uncertain about the time of the resurrection at all, because they all agree that it was about the rising of the sun on the first day of the week, but their statements apparently controvert the Adventists' contention that the Sabbath day in Scripture must begin and end at sunset.

2. It is also quite plain that whether we are under the law or not a universal application of a strict observance of the seventh day, according to the Old Testament commands, is not only beset with great embarrassment, but is altogether out of the question, because of its utter impossibility. It is this that inclines one to the belief that the seventh day seems to have been given to a special people for a special purpose.

(a) If two men start from the same point and travel, one east and the other west, around the world, when they meet they will be two days' apart in time.

(b) If the Sabbath is to be kept from sunset to sunset, as Israel kept it, what about the lands where the sun only sets once in six months? Mrs. White wanted to fix the hour at six o'clock. But the Bible says "sunset." For those who are so insistent on the letter of the law, is it right to substitute expediency for explicit command?

(c) No fire was to be kindled in Israel's day under penalty of death (Exodus 35:2, 3). Mrs. White says it was not cold there and to kindle a fire would be guilty of needless work. But John 18:18 says distinctly that it was cold, and that they built a fire and warmed themselves. If no fire is to be built how then could such a Sabbath be kept in lands that are severely cold? If we are to keep the law we must keep it always and not only when it is convenient to do so.

(d) Mrs. White teaches that other planets are inhabited and that God's obedient creatures everywhere, even the redeemed in heaven, "will observe the Sabbath day to all eternity." But inasmuch as the days vary in length on the various planets how can they all observe anywhere near the same time?

3. We must further call attention to the fact that while in our minds there is a distinction between what we call the Moral law and the Ceremonial law, there is no such distinction set forth in the Word of God. In the Bible the law is the law.

If now such a distinction between the Moral law and the Ceremonial law be a proper one, and it is, it must be seen in this, that a Ceremonial law is one given as a ceremony to a particular people under peculiar conditions and is therefore local and given for special and peculiar purposes and must necessarily pass away when its purpose is fulfilled and the conditions under which it is given are changed.

The Moral law, however, represents a thing inherently right from all eternity, and is not right because God says so, but is commanded by God because it is right, and which neither God nor man may violate and which must by reason of its very nature endure forever and be universally binding.

Now it says nowhere in the Bible that the Ten Commandments are the Moral law and the other commandments and injunctions the Ceremonial law. In 1 Corinthians 14:34, women "are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law". Where does the law say this? In Genesis 3:16. Therefore Genesis is the law.

Read Romans 7:7 in the same way and find your answer in Exodus 20:17. Therefore Exodus is the law.

Read Matthew 22:36 and with it 6:5 and Lev. 19:18. Therefore in the way Deuteronomy is the law and Lev is the law.

Read Matthew 12:5. Where is this for? In Numbers 28:9, 10. Therefore Numbers is the law.

The Bible does not say the Ten Commandments alone are the law. It does not say they are the Moral law. Make them the moral law and then of course the Fifth Commandment is universally binding and binding for all time.

Now if the distinction made, not in the Bible, but in our own minds, is a legitimate one, the Fourth Commandment would be the only ceremonial one in the entire Bible. That the distinction is a legitimate and perfectly proper one is clearly proven by the fact that Jesus according to strictest historians of his day broke the Fourth Commandment and was criticised by them for doing so. Furthermore Jesus distinctly says, "The priests in the temple profane the Sabbath and are blameless." Who has dared to say this if the Fourth Commandment was a Moral law? Could the Seventh Commandment or any other commandment except the fourth one be broken by the priests and the fact that they were in the temple made them blameless? "No, indeed," you rightly cry. To break any other commandment in the Temple would have made the foul deed the fouler.

While it proves nothing one way or the other, it does appear a bit strange that Jesus told us to keep the commandment, but he nowhere told us to keep the Sabbath. Seventh Day Adventists say that where Jesus commands us to keep the Sabbath day of the week. With equal propriety the same question may be asked concerning the seventh day. All the other commandments are enjoined and reinforced in the New Testament:

I. Acts 17:23-31; Rom. 1:23-29; Cor. 8:4-6. II. Acts 14:11-17; 17:23-31; 18:4-6; 10:7, 14, 19, 20; 2 Cor. 6:16, 17; Eph. 5:19-21; Eph. 5:3-6; Col. 3:5; 1 John 1:7; Rev. 21:8; 22-25. III. Jas. 5:12. IV. References. V. Eph. 6:1-3; Col. 3:23; Rom. 13:9; 1 John 3:15; Rev. 21:8; 22:3. VII. Rom. 13:9; 1 Cor. 6:13-18; Gal. 3:12; Eph. 3-6; Col. 3:5; 1 Thess. 4:4-5; 1 Tim. 2:15; Rev. 22:15. VIII. Rom. 13:9; 14:10, 11; Eph. 4:28. IX. Rom. 13:9; 14:10, 11; Eph. 5:3-6; 1 Tim. 6:9-11, 17; Heb. 13:5.

This impels one to the query of why the fourth was omitted. Seventh Day Adventists say Jesus and his disciples kept the seventh day as the Sabbath. That they did before his resurrection is quite certain, quite as natural. The question is whether the disciples kept the first day of the week after his resurrection?

Now regardless of what day the disciples kept after the Resurrection of Christ, we are face to face with the historical fact that both the particular day observed and the manner of its observance have for the greater part of Christendom been changed. We want now to study and observe carefully as to whether the grounds for such a change are justifiable or otherwise.

I. In the first place we must admit that there are natural grounds for deeming a change permissible if sufficient reasons for the change are forthcoming. These grounds lie as we have already seen in the following:

1. In the more or less ceremonial nature of the Fourth Commandment itself.

appears to a particular people for a particular purpose.

In the impossibility of the universally doing the same time or keeping any time in the same manner.

In the advanced civilization which make altogether justifiable the infliction of penalties such as God saw necessary for Jews in the period of their almost complete tutelage.

In the second place certain special features seem clearly to speak of the passing away of the Sabbath in the old Jewish law.

It seems to be definitely prophesied in Isaiah 66:11. "I will cause all her mirth to be in her feast days, her new moons, and her sabbaths and all her solemn feasts."

In 2 Corinthians 3:7-11 it seems to be indicated that the commandments as written on tables of stone are "done away" and annulled. "But if the ministrations of death written and engraven in stones are glorious, how shall not the ministrations of the Spirit be rather glorious? For that which is done away was glorious, but more that which remaineth is glorious."

(To be continued)

WHITE GIFT REPORT

As reported	$3,194.37
Odessa, Mich.	10.10
Church (Indiana)	6.00
at Hill, Ohio	20.98
burgh	69.52
town, O., S. S.	2.50
eld, O.	4.50
A. Will, Rockwood, Pa.	5.00
Forney, Listie, Pa.	1.00
(Pa.) Brethren church	14.40
Mills, Pa.	5.00
lle, O., S. M. M.	5.00
lle, O., S. S.	30.49
ide, Wash.	26.82
phia, Pa. First church	50.00

.....$3,445.68

By M. P. PUTERBAUGH, Treas.
ston, Ill., March 1, 1931

or's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for March 29)

Jesus the World's Savior: Preparation and Popularity

ional Reading—Isaiah 35:5-10.
n Text—Jesus of Nazareth ... who out doing good, and healing all that pressed of the devil; for God was n.—Acts 10:38.

Introductory Note

ing this quarter we have studied the f of a six months' course of lessons life, teachings, and saving ministry under the general title, "Jesus the Savior." They were taken from the five chapters of Luke's Gospel, and the entire life of Jesus, except a period just before his crucifixion.
also included in these chapters the tion for Jesus' public ministry to his er, John the Baptist. Since Luke's Gospel specifically for the Gentiles ally selected those teachings and in this matchless life which had a ppeal and interest for those whom essed."

The Object

bject of these lessons has been to impress the pupils with the truth of the claims that Jesus is the Messiah, to lead them to accept him as their personal Savior, and to inspire them to grow in grace and the knowledge of him, so that they may become faithful witnesses to his saving and transforming power, to follow his example in life, to manifest his spirit under all circumstances, and yield their lives in grateful service as a thank-offering for their salvation."—Otterbein Teacher.

In order that we may realize Who and What Jesus Christ was and is, and what powers he possesses, it is necessary that we should place together all the forces and instrumentalities used in the work of the redemption of the world. We must see what Jesus planned to do; what his mission to the world was; the methods by which he carried out that mission; his reception by the people of his own time and land.

A Suggestion for Review

The older classes may profitably use the following form of review, which gathers up the lessons of the entire Quarter to form one portrait of the Savior. To this end divide the following subjects among the members of the class, each to write an essay or prepare a brief talk on his theme, keeping within his assigned portion of the time. Every topic will be treated in the light of all the lessons of the Quarter.

1. Christ's Mission to the World.
2. Christ's Helpers and How he Used Them.
3. Christ's Power and How he Exercised It.
4. Christ's Method of Teaching.
5. Christ's Love in Its Many Manifestations.
6. Christ's Courage and How he Showed It.
7. Christ's Foes and his Dealings with Them.

8. Christ's Pity for Sinners.
9. Christ's Passing through Human Experiences.
10. Christ as a Missionary and an Organizer.
11. Christ's Relation to the Father.
12. Christ's Preparation for the Climax of his Life.—Illustrated Quarterly.

Jesus Saves

That fact has ever been a cardinal truth of Christian faith. The name of Jesus is inseparably connected with salvation. Many interpretations of that relation have been offered, all of which go to show that Jesus is a Savior. From time immemorial the petition has gone up from human lips in conclusion of prayers, "and in the end save us in heaven for Jesus' sake." This is a beautiful and comforting expression of hope and desire. It is a perfectly proper prayer in case the qualifications for such a happy consummation are present. There is no question about a final heaven for those in whom heavenly truth has come to dwell. Jesus made that perfectly clear in his teaching and example. He is a Savior in the end because he is a Savior now.—J. Hugh Heckman.

Jesus the Only Hope

If Jesus is not our savior, we have no savior. If we cannot hope in him, we have no hope. His own claim concerning himself is absolutely true: "I am the way, the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." No amount of mystic contemplation or development of the spiritual and emotional side of life will avail anything without Christ. Not even a Gandhi can have any hope of eternal life apart from Christ. The ripest experience of Christian leaders, even of those who are inclined to be liberal in their views, makes them more and more strongly convinced that Jesus is the only hope.

(Continued on page 14)

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. DuBall Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2501 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
--	--	---

Putting the E in C. E.

By Esther E. Vanator

There are many meanings that might be attached to the letter E in C. E. However, we want to think of it more in connection with our own personal lives in our own home endeavors.

The first E is enthusiasm. Perhaps an understanding of the word would make it more clear to us. The word is derived from two Greek words, en meaning in and Theos meaning God. So by combining the words it is God in us. When we have God in us we are sure to be filled with Christian zeal and so a wide-awake C. E. will be the result of this enthusiasm. Not only must this enthusiasm be found among those who lead the organization but they must be so full of it that it will radiate out to each and every member.

In creating this enthusiasm we are perhaps instilling in each and every member an egoistic attitude. By this statement we do not mean egotism which places self first to the detriment of all concerned, but we do mean more personal responsibility. Without this personal responsibility or ego as we have called it we cannot make the strides forward that are so necessary. Too many of us give the plea that others can do it so much better than we and this is what we must learn—that the responsibility is ours.

When we have dedicated ourselves to personal service we will go into Christian Endeavor with more earnestness. It will be our real purpose to accomplish the things we set out to do. We will not be like the uncle of little Donald. One morning Donald heard the clock striking very slowly and heard his uncle remark that the striking side of the clock was run down. Donald remembered this and on Sunday morning when the uncle was asked by his wife if he were going to church, he said slowly: "Oh—I—suppose—so." Donald then said, "Why, uncle it sounds as if the meeting side of you had run down." The uncle was rather embarrassed and began to enthusiastically prepare for church. If we keep at the task with great earnestness we will not allow our working side to run down.

An earnest effort will push us forward to the purpose of gaining knowledge or to education. We might use the term enlightenment instead for we want the knowledge to be Christian knowledge. There is a story told that in Baltimore there is a man who wears a different tie every day and sometimes he wears two or three. He is always careful that the tie harmonizes with the rest of his clothing. So we must be careful that our conduct harmonizes with the highest Christian ideals and also that the acquiring of a Christian education is much more important than the acquiring of harmonizing clothes. If our ideals are not Christian they will not harmonize with the accomplishments of Christian Endeavor.

When we have endowed ourselves with a Christian education we are ready to enlist ourselves for service. The difference between a salesman and a clerk is that a salesman looks for the customer and the clerk waits for the customer to come him. When we enlist for service we must do as the salesman does and look for our task. When we enlist for this Christian service we can well realize the meaning of this poem by Banks:

"I live for those who love me,
For those who know me true,
For the heaven that smiles above me
And awaits my spirit too.
For the cause that lacks assistance
For the wrong that needs resistance
For the future in the distance
And the good that I can do."

As Christian Endeavorers we must be an example of purity of living. If we live clean, pure lives we will be like the Christian man who went to Japan to teach school but in order to teach he had to promise not to teach Christianity nor to proselyte. He agreed and began to teach. He kept his agreement faithfully but his pure, blameless life could not be hid. Forty of his students organized a society (without his knowledge) and pledged themselves to give up idolatry and try to live as near like the teacher as possible. So we as Christian young people and adults can so live our lives that those who are out in the world will see the uselessness of their lives and turn to the more worthwhile life as found in Christian Endeavor.

So we have come to the last point or endeavor. This is the full meaning of the E in C. E. Christian Endeavor embodies all these other points as enthusiasm, egoism, or personal responsibility, earnestness, education or enlightenment, enlisting and example. We must endeavor therefore to embody all these things in our lives in order to have in our lives the true enthusiasm. Let us keep in our minds this stanza:—

"We shall reap such joys in the by and by,
But what have we sown today?
We shall build us mansions in the sky,
But what have we built today?
'Tis sweet in idle dreams to bask,
But here and now do we do our task?
Yes, this is the thing our souls must ask,
What have we done today?"

Have we given ourselves over wholly to putting the E in C. E.?
Peru, Indiana.

PLANNED MEETINGS

By Harriette A. Henderson

Did you ever stop to think that the leader of your regular Sunday evening prayer meeting is not the one who is responsible for the success or failure of that meeting?

That leader shares a responsibility, of course, but he also represents your prayer meeting committee during that hour.

The missionary committee, at the suggestion of the prayer meeting committee, might assume responsibility for the missionary meetings of the year; the Quiet Hour committee, for the meetings pertaining to prayer and Bible study, etc.; not necessarily to lead them, but to be responsible for plans and suggestions, remembering that no plan brings results unless it is worked.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

FORT SCOTT, KANSAS

By the time this reaches the readers, we expect our revival to be in progress here under the leadership of Rev. R. Paul Miller, our field secretary. We have been for several weeks stressing the need of preparation on the part of the membership. We also hereby solicit an interest in the prayers of the brotherhood, and especially those who are vitally interested with us in the Fort Scott church. We expect to begin this effort March 15, and continue until Easter Sunday.

I also wish to express my appreciation of the Brethren Evangelist and especially Prof. Alva J. McClain's answer to the question: "Is Bodily Healing in the Atonement?"

Certainly, his answer is conclusive and should be the means of helping some preachers who have been confused on the subject. Our Sunday school publications are also good, even second to none.

L. G. WOOD.

REVIVAL AT RITTMAN, OHIO

The services conducted at the Rittman church from February 13 to March 1 proved to be a real revival.

We wish to take advantage of this opportunity to thank the Brethren church at Dayton for loaning us their pastor, without charge, for two weeks. Rev. Barnard proved to be a worthwhile gift to our community.

This policy of a large church helping the smaller mission churches is in my estimation true to the helpful spirit which characterizes the Brethren.

A canvass was made of the town before the meeting started and a personal invitation to attend the meetings was given at practically every home. And then, due to the splendid Gospel messages of Rev. Barnard, and the efficient musical leadership of Mrs. McDonald, the Holy Spirit had an opportunity to use the Sword of the Spirit upon large audiences and happy results are certain to follow. The small church was hardly able to hold the audiences. The whole community will receive a blessing from this service.

Our Sunday school attendance was the largest we have ever had. There were 193 present the first Sunday of the meetings and 240 the last. The attendance will not remain quite this high because we do not have adequate room, but we should average this in the future if we have more Sunday school room. Our church attendance is usu-

A committee scrap book often brings a great deal of late and splendid material to the prayer meeting committee. Each member informs himself as to the topics for the coming month, and then proceeds to get all information possible from reading, lectures, and other sources. These items, suggestions, he presents at the committee meeting, to be filled in a notebook or scrapbook provided for that purpose, and when and in the way the committee best.—C. E. World.

ally as large as our Sunday school dance.

In many respects our meetings were like a Brethren conference. Smithville Sterling helped us faithfully. We were fortunate to have their pastor's wife for a song leader. They also furnished us with a pianist, Miss Beulah King. Then the field church came in a body to hear the beloved former pastor. We were all tremendously happy to have the Pattersons, Eckerts from the Dayton church with us over the last week end; as well as the Donalds from the Nappanee church. Monroe and wife, Prof. Black and wife, along with many ministerial students and our visitors from Ashland. We were tremendously happy for this Brethren ship.

We have received six accessions to the church. A number more are contemplating joining our communion from other churches, but at present are held back from baptism. However, aside from the confirmation of the church, Brother Barnard Rittman to understand that the Brethren church believes in God's Word and in God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit.

EVERETT NISWONGER, Pastor

MANTECA, CALIFORNIA

We want to announce the good news to the brotherhood that we are now in a revival campaign with our Brother Charles Yoder. We started with the meetings on March 8. The start off is very encouraging. We have good attendance and excellent interest in soul saving. We began a series of cottage prayer meetings the first week in January. Some weeks we held 20 meetings in various neighborhoods and as many as one hundred fifty gathered to pray for the revival and the evangelists. The last week before the meeting we were having our prayers at home with our families. The prayers of so many people speak an excellent revival.

Our people here have often expressed a desire to have Brother Yoder under the conditions. Several times plans were completed but had to be changed again. But now the desire of years is a plain reality and we are at work now, and what a blessing it is!

We are all working hard to bring gains that have been made during the year we have labored here, as well as new advances which we certainly ought to make. We are glad to report that since the last our church has been blessed by one by letter, one by relation from church of the Brethren, and three by Mrs. Alice Wampler,—Alice came prior to her marriage,—of Cone-Pennsylvania, came by letter. Meloner brought his letter from the In Church of the Brethren of Los An-County. He is the efficient Sunday superintendent of our church. Mae Myrtle Marie and William Roy Platt, only of my own cousin, Sam F. Platt, a member of the Church of the Brethren, but resides here, were baptized received.

opening service of the revival brought man and his wife who will be bap- and received into the church. Every on is that we will have a blessed of revival. We will be glad to have therhood pray for these efforts.

o less importance is our effort to ough money to send our sister, Larson, to Argentina. She is a Christian worker of our own Man-urch. About eight or ten years ago were the call for life work recruits s spent the intervening years pre- for any work to which God would her. A number of years ago she y began preparing for the Argen-rk. She graduated from the Man- school, a four year academic. She graduated from the Bible of the Bible Institute at Los An-wo years. She returned to Manteca k another year of post graduate the high school here. She took an-ear at the Bible Institute, a prac-ical course. A year at U. S. L. A. Angeles gave her additional prepa- For two years now she has been rome in Manteca, making prepara- the time of going to Argentina. always been exceptional depend- the work of the church in every de- t. She is now a young woman of our years, and has made mission r life's goal. We ask the prayers rotherhood that the way may be o she may go to the work in Ar-.

If we were selfish we would try ade her to remain with us and work cal church, but we believe God has alled her to the work indicated, we pray that the means shall be o she may go out to Argentina.

who read these lines should be d to make an offering (and we hope e will reduce his regular offering to ighn Board on Easter) we would y receive such a gift towards the ut of a life for Christ's service in ta. Anyone desiring to make per- tributions might write to Miss nt Manteca, California—her address E. Larson, Manteca, California.

ing this report let me say, our work icely in all departments. I would s to say that I am hoping that the Church at large will recognize the opportunity of spiritual advancement ent an offering for missions this me that will be a concrete proof believe that Jesus died and rose al that we want to register an in- our program of evangelization. d richly bless you all and keep e Day of his Blessed Appearing.

J. WESLEY PLATT,
Manteca, California.

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

ndis Studebaker, daughter of Rev. Studebaker, of Pittsburgh, was recently elected May queen. Only junior girls who have spent both freshman and sophomore years here are eligible.

Dean E. G. Mason is attending the annual meeting of the North Central Association in Chicago this week. He expects to see Dr. Anspach there.

The tri-county basketball tournament was held in the College Gymnasium last week. The team from Litchfield, Medina County, took first place. This team was coached by a graduate of Ashland last June, Mr. Delbert Caton.

On last Friday evening the entire student body was entertained in groups of about 15 by all the various Faculty members, in their homes. It was an experiment but seemed to result well. The idea was to have every student in some teacher's home on that evening. The assignments were made by lot, hence there was a general commingling of classes and organizations.

Plans for the summer school are well under way.

The Men's Glee Club has made several appearances in nearby places and I hear good reports.

We have had some unusual and worth-while talent at the exercises lately.

Last fall the Alumni organization put on a quiet campaign for funds to erect much-needed bleachers on our athletic field. If anyone who has any desire to contribute to this fund, sees this notice, please take it as a personal invitation to send in either your pledge or money very soon. I stand ready to match from other sources every dollar the alumni give.

We were reviewed last week by a committee from the Ohio College Association with a view to entering that association. Ashland College is already a member of the North Central Association.

Mr. Stradley, a member of the reviewing committee and examiner for Ohio State University, spoke most enthusiastically of the College. He was especially pleased with (a) the teaching force, (b) the system of keeping our records, (c) the Library, its use and discipline, (d) and the spirit of the students. We anticipate no difficulty in being admitted at the next meeting of the Association, April 5.

This also will give us a clearer road for our graduates to enter our own State University. EDWIN E. JACOBS.

OUR LITTLE READERS

MR. HOOT OWL AND MRS. SAMANTHA HEN

By Clare MacDermott

Mr. Hoot Owl lived in a hollow elm tree. He spent most of his time taking care of Mrs. Hoot Owl and the rest of the family. He was a very good husband and father. Sometimes, when there was room in the old hollow, he would even sit on the eggs with his wife and help her hatch the puffy little Owl children. So, you see, he had plenty to do. It is the custom of owls to sleep during the day, so he did not know that the woods about his home were very lovely. He did not hear the bluejay screaming far off in the hills, or the woodpecker tapping at the chestnut bole. Like many human beings, he was blind and deaf to the beauty all around him.

One evening Mr. Hoot Owl decided to fly to a farm about a mile from where he lived. He had a contract with the farmers to rid their land of Gophers. In this way he provided many a good meal for the little Owl children. As you may know, Owls are very fond of Gophers for food. On his way, he paused to visit his friend, Mrs. Samantha Hen, who lived in that direction. Mr. Hoot Owl and Mrs. Hen got along very well most of the time. However, like little boys and girls, they disagreed sometimes. Mrs. Hen had a way of telling Mr. Hoot Owl his faults that he did not much like. In spite of this fact, they often shared the same perch and gossiped.

"I called on a friend of mine today," Mrs. Hen informed him as he flew up beside her, "and she told me—"

"Who? Who?" interrupted Mr. Hoot Owl, rudely.

"I don't care to tell her name," replied Mrs. Hen, coldly, "but she said—"

"Who? Who? Who?" asked Mr. Owl again.

Mrs. Hen's topknot trembled with anger. "You are certainly the most curious person in the world," she clucked.

"How about your own drawbacks?" inquired Mr. Owl.

"Well!" answered Mrs. Hen. "I have sense enough to get in out of the rain anyway."

"The Owl family are considered very wise," replied Mr. Owl with great dignity.

"Then," remarked Mrs. Hen, sweetly, "why were you not wise enough to move when the water was falling on your head at the rate of twenty drops a minute?"

Mr. Hoot Owl blushed in the darkness. It was true he had sat for half a day under a leaking water tap before it entered his head to get out of the way. How he wished that Mrs. Hen had not seen him. As he had no answer ready, he fluttered down from the perch, snatching one of Mrs. Hen's pullets as he did so. Like many other people, he did not allow friendship to interfere with business. He knew that a fat pullet would make the little Owl children a very good supper. Mrs. Hen flew after him, calling:

"Give me back my pullet! Give me back my pullet!" This is really what she said, although, to a little girl or boy it might have sounded like: "S-q-u-a-w-k- Squawk!"

Mr. Owl flew swiftly along, chuckling over his success in catching a pullet. Now he would not have to bother about the Gophers, and would be at home much earlier. Like a great many of us do, he was thinking about himself first and giving no heed to the feelings of others. He was flying through a field, when suddenly he came upon a dark object that stood perfectly still and pointed something at him. Mr. Hoot Owl gave a terrified start and nearly dropped the pullet. However, as the object did not move, he took courage and flew nearer.

"Who? Who?" he asked.

He then discovered it was a scarecrow some one had placed there to frighten the birds away. Mr. Hoot Owl made up his mind it would take more than a scarecrow to make him turn back. So he went on.

In the next field he saw another dark object. This time he flew bravely up:

"Who? Who?" he asked.

It happened to be Farmer Smith hunting. Bang! Bang! went his gun and Mr. Hoot Owl fell to the ground. As he was quite sure he was killed he lay there a long time. After awhile, he began to think he might be still alive. He remained very quiet, as Farmer Smith was looking all around for him. He also spread out his feathers and entirely changed his looks. As you may know, Owls have a way of hiding from notice by making believe they are something besides Owls.

When Farmer Smith had gone, the angry Mr. Hoot Owl came out of his hiding-place. "That's a good way to treat me," he grumbled. "I've a good mind never to eat his Gophers any more."

As he flew home, it occurred to him that if he had not tried to steal Mrs. Hen's pullet, he would not have had such bad luck himself. Besides, the pullet had escaped while he was hiding from Farmer Smith, and he had no supper for the little Owl children. He resolved that he would be more unselfish in the future. I am sorry to say, however, he could not break himself of the habit of curiosity. If you do not believe me, pass under the tree in which he lives some night. You will hear him asking: "Who? Who?"—Christian Standard.

FUSSING

A dear old lady from the country went for the first time on a railway journey of about fifty miles through an interesting, beautiful region. She had looked forward to this trip with great pleasure.

She was to see so much, but it took her so long to get her baskets and parcels right, to get her skirt adjusted, her seat comfortably arranged, the shades and shutters right, the anxious questions about all the things she had left behind answered, that she was just settling down to enjoy the trip when they called out the name of her station and she had to get up and hustle out.

"Oh, my!" she said, "if I had only known that we would have been here so soon I wouldn't have wasted my time in fussing."

Dear friend, the wheel of time is flying; the last station is at hand; these things are so trifling. Yet your mind on the main business of life; live as you would wish to have lived when we hear the call of the last station, and don't waste any more time "fussing."—The Presbyterian.

COMMANDER BOOTH'S MESSAGE TO PRESIDENT HOOVER

Commander Evangeline Booth, head of the Salvation Army in the United States recently sent President Hoover the following telegram outlining the stand of this organization on the subject of modification of the present prohibition laws. The telegram said:

"On behalf of the Salvation Army, may I assure you of our wholehearted and enthusiastic support in your courageous decision to uphold the Constitution of the United States and the dignity of our laws by a resolute determination to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment. In refusing to surrender the highest interests of this nation and her prestige among other nations to the clamor of a selfish minority, you are maintaining the tradition for which Abraham Lincoln, the founder of the policy of prohibition, laid down his life, and in the name of countless women and children I pray that God may uphold you in your magnificent conflict with the forces of organized and defiant disorder.

"We of the Salvation Army have no choice but to make it clear that we will never haul down our flag at the bidding of bootleggers, bandits and racketeers. It is for a better world, not for an underworld, that we are working."

"On this issue we recognize that there may be sincere differences of opinion, but our view is that whether in Sweden, Canada or any other country, there is no alternative and never has been any alternative to prohibition except the saloon; and the saloon, however is it supposed to be conducted, will be as evil an influence in the future as it has always been everywhere in the past. Under the political conditions which are notorious in certain of our great cities, a proposal to open the floodgates to the liquor traffic would be disastrous."

Education is never an end in itself. It is not a medal or a decoration, but a tool for use. The tragedy is not so much in being able to secure it, as in obtaining it and not turning it to account.

Sunday School Notes

(Continued from page 11)

On his seventy-eighth birthday Henry van Dyke, noted preacher and teacher, exhorted the Presbyterian ministry: "Center your ministry on personal loyalty to Jesus Christ, the divine Savior. He is the only hope of the world. If we love him truly, believe him absolutely, and serve him faithfully, peace will come."

On the fortieth anniversary of his ordination William P. Merrill, New York pastor, declared: "One faith above all has grown more deep and sure all the way, my faith in Jesus Christ our Lord. He has come to fill the whole horizon until all I believe about God and man and church and life and myself is caught up in the conviction that he, Jesus, is the Wisdom of God and the Power of God."

E. Stanley Jones of India says: "Religion has an open road in Christ. If we cannot be religious after the mind and Spirit of Christ, we cannot be religious at all. Every other way of life is breaking down, except Christ's way."

Went About Doing Good

Jesus went about doing good: when he was weary and thirsty; when he had no leisure so much as to eat; when stones were hurled at him from his enemies; when his family said he was mad; when his disciples begged him not to return to the place where Jews had stoned him. Everywhere he went it was to "do good." He went to provide wine for a wedding, to make glad the hearts of the guests. He went to the grave of Lazarus, and wept that those who were nearest to him had so little faith in his word and the power of his Father. He went to the well of Samaria to save a woman, and gain access to the city that had rejected him. He went where a heartbroken mother walked beside the bier of her dead son, and delivered him to his arms. He went to the home of Peter's mother-in-law, touched her and she was free to minister to her guests. He is now our Advocate and prays for us ever; let it be our constant desire to live like him and love like him,—our Savior.—Extract.

Imitating Jesus

A city missionary visited a house in London and found a dying boy. There was an orange lying on the bed, and the missionary said, "Where did you get that orange?" He replied, "A man gave it to me. He comes here often and reads the Bible to me, and prays with me, and brings me nice things to eat." "What is his name?" said the city missionary. "I forget his name," said the sick boy, "but he makes great speeches over in that big building," pointing to the Parliament House of London. The minister asked, "Was his name Mr. Gladstone?" "Oh, yes," said the boy, "that is his name; Mr. Gladstone." Imitating Jesus? Why not?

It would be a much better world if tian people more generally and faithfully sought to imitate their Lord. And the dominion of God would come the sooner.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

(Continued from page 2)

ity," mean anything more than moralistic? Were not the Buddha and Jesus Christ "Christ-like?" The resemblance has often been remarked. The Conference of Jerusalem used the same expression, reviewing that Report I pointed out how satisfactory and dangerous it was. I mean here that the purpose of the mission in conducting schools is to lead the masses of non-Christians to become Christians, that is exactly what the government regulation was designed to stop: if not, then it is too vague to satisfy the government. It is vague and ambiguous because it is an attempt to allay the fears of the government without denying the many of the mission teachers would deny.

Another periphrasis is: "The reason why Christian schools have religious character is from the sincere desire of the teachers to realize Christ's great purpose to help in the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth through personalities established, to aid others to their spiritual achievement through those who they have achieved."

Another, "The reason why we have religious education is to guide students in the right start in their lives. To share responsibilities with the government and maintain is the duty of patriotic citizens."

Another, "We have religious instruction and worship in our schools, because of the conviction that a full-rounded personality cannot be fully developed apart from religious experience and religious influences."

All these periphrases occur in the petition. Is any of them a plain straightforward answer to the government's question: "What is the purpose of the schools being used as centres of propaganda? Are they not rather attempts to find a formula which will pacify the government without disturbing the support of Christian missions who certainly look upon mission schools as a method of propaganda?"

The authors of the petition object to the use of the word "entice" in regulation; and object that it is too vague. It is not nearly so vague as their own expressions. If a mission establishes a school in which the pupils can obtain a more valuable worldly education than they can elsewhere, and in that school a religion which is not the religion of the people taught, it is not difficult for anyone to understand a non-Christian onlooker to use the word "entice." And if the people of the school object to the word and say they use their school in that way, why then the government gave its sanction. "Since the principal purpose of your schools is establishing schools is to make education widely available and is not intended to employ education to entice or convert students to become church members, the restrictions against the propagation of religion do not run counter to the purpose of the churches in conducting schools. The periphrases have been accepted by the government in the sense that suits them."

Now it is high time that mission schools should face this question: cannot deny that they exist to propagate the Christian religion, and that every they use is certain to be understood ected to that end. They must make ir minds whether a proper means for to use is the establishment of schools ich children are taught a religion is not the religion of their parents, ether they ought to admit that the is not the proper place for religious anda, and concentrate their attention he conversion of the parents, and the shment of churches which are really mistakably native, that is, free from n control, whether exercised through al grants, or through the retention in ds of foreigners of authority to ad- der Christian rites and to establish urches.

phrases and uncertain, vague terms, xasperate and deceive. Christian aries ought to have no terms of cun- devised speeches. Their words and cts ought to be open and manifest to n. The same periphrases are used sionary educators all over the world, her governments, when it suits their ience, will treat them as the Chinese ment has treated them.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

OWER—Myron Kem of Dayton, Ohio and Miss ower of Lanark, Illinois. The groom is the only r, and Mrs. George Kem of Dayton, Ohio, and the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Lower, Illinois. The single ring ceremony was read by at the home of the bride's parents, on December ELDER Z. T. LIVENGOOD.

IN THE SHADOW

S—Mr. George Richard Billups passed to be with any 59, 1931 at his home in Washington, D. C. of 65 years, 6 months and 23 days. Mr. Billups in Maryland but early in life moved to Washing- the most of his life was spent. He was long as an electrician for the Capital Traction Company tion. He was a faithful member of the First Breth- in Washington which he entered over 30 years ag the period of his membership he held official d his counsel was highly esteemed. A good man in the ranks. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. os, two children—Mrs. Florence Otey and George and three sisters—Mrs. Hester Boyce, Mrs. Anna d Mrs. Lydia Hicks. ral service was conducted by the writer at the e deceased and interment was made in beautiful Cemetery. May the God of all comfort provide e bereaved. HOMER A. KENT.

OD—Hugh Portwood, son of Woodson and Martha eod was born in Knox county, Indiana, October 8 and died at the Soldiers' Home, Dodge City, uary 26th, 1931, at the age of 85 years, 3 3 days. He was married to Emma Conner, to which union ur children, one of which survives. His oldest r, Anna Griffiths, was buried one week preceding e. His first wife having died, he was married to nner March 8th, 1878, to which union were born d, four of whom are now living.

He is survived by the following: Alford Portwood, Ana- t; Mrs. C. C. Ball of Garland, Kansas; Wood- od, Mulberry, Kansas; Mrs. Arma Rhodes, Os- d; Simpson Portwood of Kansas City, Mo.; One r, Mary Conner, of Dodge City, Kansas; twenty- children and six great-grandchildren. His second ay in 1922. He united with the Drywood hurch of Bourbon County, Kansas, in 1889 and ul worker in the church and continued in the eadth.

as conducted from the Cherry Grove church, 1931, by the writer, who had known the family 1 days. Burial was made in Pleasant View cem- L. G. WOOD.

SLER—John Edward Millheiser was born at Pa., July 3rd, 1869, and departed this life at Eldorado, Kansas, January 20th, 1931, at the age of 61 months and 27 days. He came with his Kansas when but a youth and lived at Downs, a number of years. He was married to Miss w at Downs, April 6th, 1892. He moved to w, Kansas, in 1916, locating on a farm near r. Later moved into Eldorado, which is the county r County. He had been a member of the ch since he was 20 years of age. For several r Millheiser has been much interested in the church and made frequent contributions to its ade a nice gift to Ashland College when Brother this part of the brotherhood. He also showed t in all of the general work of the church. d by his widow and two sons: J. A. Millheiser Colorado, and Carl A. Millheiser of Clear- s. In my personal acquaintance of about five years, I found a very congenial brother, interested in all the work of the church.

The funeral service was conducted from the Baptist church of Eldorado, Kansas, at 2:00 o'clock Monday, February 3rd, 1931. Many beautiful floral offerings were in evidence and the body was laid to rest in the mausoleum at Belle Vista Cemetery. Funeral service conducted by the writer.

L. G. WOOD.

CUMMINGS—Carl Cummings was born four miles south of Fort Scott, Kansas, and departed this life very suddenly at noon, Thursday, February 12, 1931, at the age of 57 years, 3 months and 11 days. He was married to Alta Ann Vankenburg in Fort Scott, Kansas and she survives him.

He is also survived by one brother, Paul Cummings, and a half-brother, Nate Cummings of Lowe, Kansas. Mr. Cummings had resided on the same place all of his life, therefore was well and favorably known. The funeral service was conducted from the Brethren church of Fort Scott, on February 14th, 1931.

The writer who had known the family from childhood was in charge of the service. Many beautiful floral offerings were made and a large concourse of sympathizing friends and neighbors attended the service.

The body was laid to rest in the family lot in Evergreen cemetery. L. G. WOOD.

MABERRY—Sarah Ann Stroud Maberry, daughter of the late Thomas D. Stroud, was born in Morgan County, Kentucky, April 28th, 1851, and died at her home, nine miles south of Fort Scott, Kansas, February 12th, 1931, at the age of 79 years, 9 months and 6 days. Her husband, Alexander Maberry, preceded her in death about 8 years.

Mrs. Maberry had been a resident of Bourbon county for more than 60 years and was held in high esteem by the entire community. She had been a member of the Methodist church since 13 years of age and ever departed from the faith.

Her father was a Methodist minister for 55 years and performed many marriage ceremonies and conducted many funerals in this neighborhood. He performed the marriage ceremony for the writer and wife. She is survived by the following children—Mrs. H. A. Johnson, of Fort Scott, Kansas, and Oscar Austin and Arthur Maberry, of the Garland neighborhood; also one sister, Mrs. W. V. Davis of Garland, seventeen grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren. The funeral was conducted from the Cherry Grove church, Sunday, February 15th, 1931. A very large concourse of friends and neighbors were in attendance and many beautiful floral offerings were made. The body was laid to rest in the family lot in Pleasant View cemetery. The service was conducted by the writer, assisted by the Rev. Reeves. L. G. WOOD.

WHIPKEY—Samuel Alexander Whipkey was born in 1856, in Sumneret, Pennsylvania. He moved to Iowa when but a boy. There he found his life's companion and was married to Lavina Spior, to which union were born four children—Archea W. Whipkey, Karl W. Whipkey, Ruth Whipkey and Pearl Whipkey. These sons and daughters with his devoted wife he leaves to mourn his departure.

Brother Whipkey united with the church when a young man nineteen years of age under the ministry of Brother S. H. Bashor, and later came into the Brethren church under the ministry of Rev. J. L. Gillin. Brother Whipkey loved his home, his church, his Bible, his Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. He was a deacon in the Turlock Brethren church, and was active as long as he had strength to attend the services.

On January 31, 1931, he took his ewit home to spend that long eternity with his Lord and Master. He was aged 75 years, two months and twenty-four days.

To him we say good-night, for a little while and then GOOD MORNING FOR ALL ETERNITY.

N. W. JENNINGS.

WISLER—Samuel S. Wisler was born November 1st, 1864, and departed this life January 16th, 1931. He had not been well for a year or more, and last summer he suffered from a stroke, and from which he never fully recovered. He had been up and around, however, and appeared to be better, but took a change very suddenly and passed away on Friday, January 16th.

The deceased is survived by the following: Three sons and one daughter, Rev. Chas. F. Wisler, Jeannette, Pa.; John F. Wisler, Clarence Coeter, N. Y.; Paul F. Wisler Martinsburg, Pa.; Mrs. Emery Reffner, Roaring Springs, Pa.; also a sister—Mrs. Barbara Weidenhammer, Roaring Springs, Pa.; and his wife—Mrs. Alice Wisler, who has faithfully cared for him through his illness, and to whom he had been united in marriage about four years ago.

The funeral conducted by the writer. JAS. S. COOK.

PHILLIPS—Sister Mary Elizabeth Phillips, wife of Reuben Phillips, was born near Wakarusa, Ind., March 28, 1858, and peacefully left this world February 10, 1931.

For fifty-four years this couple lived a happy married life being much devoted to each other and their six children, five of whom survive the mother, the other preceding her in death.

She was a faithful member of the First Brethren church of Nappanee, Indiana.

Services were conducted at the South Union church of Nappanee, Indiana, by the writer, assisted by Rev. H. H. Hartman of Wakarusa, Ind. BENJ. F. OWEN.

HEPLER—Sister Kate Hepler, a great and good aged mother and wife of Paul Hepler, who preceded her in death some years ago, was born Feb. 28, 1852 and left this life at the home of her son, Chancey Hepler, in Goshen, Ind., Feb. 18, 1931.

She was a member of the First Brethren church of Nappanee and for 35 years remained true to her trust in the Lord.

She leaves four sons and one daughter, who will miss their mother.

Services were held in Goshen and Nappanee by the writer and Rev. H. F. Stuckman, pastor of the First Brethren church of Goshen, who assisted. BENJ. F. OWEN.

HIKENS—George F. Hikens was born in France, September 21st, 1858 and departed this life Feb. 26th, 1931, at the age of 72 years, 5 months and 5 days. He had resided in Bourbon county, Kansas for about 20 years.

He was married to Mrs. Nancy Primrose about 17 years ago. Mr. Hikens was a successful farmer, a good husband and father, and was respected by all who knew him.

Besides his wife he is survived by the following children by a former marriage: Mattie Hikens and Spay Hikens of Muskogee, Oklahoma, and Lee Hikens of Chicago.

Also by the following stepchildren: Dewey Primrose, of the farm home; Mrs. Charles Henderson of Smith Center, Kansas, and Mrs. Delores Richwine of Pittsburg, Kansas.

Funeral was conducted from the Brethren church of Fort Scott, Kansas, Feb. 28th, 1931, by the writer. Burial was made in the family lot in the Pleasant View cemetery.

L. G. WOOD.

LUDWIG—Mark Vernon Ludwig, born June 26th, 1930, died February 21st, 1931, aged 7 months and 25 days. The immediate and direct relatives surviving, are as follows: father and mother, one sister, both grandfathers and grandmothers, six aunts and four uncles.

Little Mark attended his first church service when only three weeks of age, and was regular until sickness prevented.

JOHN F. LOCKE.

LANDES—Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Hall Landes departed this life February 26, 1931, at the age of 74 years, 6 months and 16 days. She was before her marriage, Miss Mary Elizabeth Hall, daughter of the late George G. and Elizabeth Hall.

Since early life she had been a member of the Brethren church. Her faithfulness to Christ and the quiet cheerfulness of her life were a benediction to all who knew her. By her own request the text of the funeral sermon was "Be ye also ready, for in an hour when ye think not the Son of Man cometh." Luke 12:40.

While she slept peacefully, having retired in apparently her usual state of health, her soul slipped quietly away to be with God who gave it. She fell asleep here to wake in that city toward which she had long been journeying, whose builder and maker is God.

She is survived by one son, Lurty F. Landes and by four brothers and two sisters.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. W. Brill, from the Bethlehem Brethren church, and interment was made beside her husband, who preceded her in death, in the Bridgewater Cemetery.

"And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth. Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

JOHN F. LOCKE.

AKENS—Winfield Akins passed away suddenly on December 22, 1930, due to an attack of apoplexy. Brother Akins was nearly sixty-two years old when the summons came. He had come to Kansas when a young man and married here. He and his faithful wife united with the First Brethren church of Fortis, Kansas, in 1884, remaining faithful until death called him. Funeral services were conducted by the writer in the Brethren church of Fortis. Brother Akins loved the Brethren church and its doctrinal teachings. He leaves to mourn his going his widow and seven children, one of which is Rev. Claud Akins, who for several years worked with our mission at Lost Creek, Kentucky.

REV. S. LOWMAN.

NOEL—Jennie Brumbaugh Noel met a tragic death by burning, having accidentally upset a can of coal oil on a hot stove, causing an explosion and the throwing of hot flaming oil over her body. She died from the burns within five hours after the accident. Sister Noel leaves to mourn her sudden end, her husband, A. J. Noel, and three children. Early in life she had united with the First Brethren church of Fortis, Kansas. Her sixty years of life were filled with good deeds for others and for her church. She will be greatly missed by the church and especially by the W. M. S., of which she was long a faithful and active member. May she rest from all her labors and her good works follow her. Funeral services were conducted by the writer, with Brother Frank Wagoner, an old friend, bringing the main address, and assisted by W. R. Deeter, a former pastor, and Lewis Naylor of the Church of the Brethren.

S. LOWMAN.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

SPECIAL NOTICE

Recently Professor McClain referred to the booklet, "The Modern Tongues Movement, Examined and Judged in the Light of the Scripture and in the Light of Its Fruits," in his column in "The Brethren Evangelist." He failed to state that this is a booklet of 34 pages, and that, in order to meet the cost of printing and mailing, a price is charged of 20c per copy; 2 copies for 35c, 10 copies for $1.50; in quantities of 100 or more, $10.00 per hundred, prepaid. Requests are coming from all over the brotherhood for these booklets. Many are asking the price, while some are simply enclosing a few stamps to pay postage. We are honoring all these requests, but wish to place this notice in "The Evangelist" so that those desiring the booklet will save us much trouble by sending the proper amount. These booklets are the possession of the First Brethren church of Long Beach. Address all orders to "The First Brethren Church, 1925 E. 5th St., Long Beach, California. L. S. BAUMAN.

PRAY EARNESTLY

GIVE GENEROUSLY

EASTER FOREIGN MISSIONARY OFFERING

Sunday, April 5th., 1931

THANKS.....for the past. The Missionaries and the Members of the Foreign Mission Board do praise and thank our Heavenly Father for the splendid offering you gave last year. What a joy it is to know that you have a partnership in the souls saved and the work accomplished at our various stations in Africa and South America.

PRAY.....for the present. We are facing another grave crisis in the history of our Foreign Mission work. Our stations are all undermanned. Our faithful Missionaries are all overworked. The burden of lost souls is weighing heavily upon them. Let us pray that God will sustain them and answer their prayers for more workers. Let each one pray that the Lord of the Harvest will thrust out more laborers from our midst. Pray that the Brethren Church may realize her responsibility in making the glorious Resurrection story known to those whose need is so great. Pray for a larger offering than last year; that we may go forward and not stand still; or worse than this, have to recall some of our faithful Missionaries, due to the lack of funds. This would be a tragedy.

CHALLENGE. Jesus said, "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh when no man can work" (John 9:4). This was said over nineteen hundred years ago. The night is fast overtaking us. He also said, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me." Jerusalem first—the uttermost parts of the earth last. We are in the last days now. We must speed the Gospel Message before it is too late.

Brethren, let us WAKE UP. Let us get a real vision of what Christ's challenge really means. A few of our churches are doing nobly but a great many could do much more. There is no reason why we should not have in the Brethren Church at least:

100 people who will give $100.00 each
250 people who will give $ 50.00 each
250 people who will give $ 25.00 each
500 people who will give $ 10.00 each
2500 people who will give $ 5.00 each
10,000 people who will give $ 2.00 each
12,000 people who will give $ 1.00 each

WHAT WILL YOU DO TO CARRY OUT CHRIST'S COMMAND?

CARL H. SEITZ,
Member of the Foreign Board.

Mrs. Herman Varner, Oct.-30-31
Conemaugh, Pa.
RFD 1.

Vol. LIII
Number 13

March 28
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Special
Foreign Mission
Number

Offering
Day is Easter
Sunday

EASTER MORNING

—Plockhorst

But for vast and restless millions the night of gloom still reigns

Jonah--A Missionary Message for Our "Hard Times"

By Alva J. McClain, Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions

The Book of Jonah is in some ways the most remarkable document in Old Testament literature. Jonah is a by-word among men, and yet I find that most people know very little about the Book that bears the prophet's name. Ask the average college student about it, or even the average church member, and you will be told that the Book is about a whale that swallowed a man. The more intelligent will sometimes vary the formula and make it the story of a man who was swallowed by a whale. Beyond that, accounts become extremely vague and uncertain.

The human mind is a peculiar thing. It often seizes upon the incidental and unimportant details, missing the crucial points. From the standpoint of biological interest, undoubtedly the whale is a tremendous fact, but looked at from another point of view it is merely a detail in the story. It was only God's way of saving Jonah and making him a symbol of things to come. He might just as easily have used a submarine. Why not? It is in fact much easier to make a submarine than to make the kind of a monster that swallowed Jonah.

The Book of Jonah is a rich mine of treasure for those who will take time to study it firsthand, instead of merely reading what others have written about it. It is especially rich in typical and symbolical truth. I find something new there nearly every time I read it. Some time ago, while browsing through the fourth chapter, I found a startling message in the story of "Jonah and his Gourd," a missionary message for the days in which we live.

This is the story of Jonah and the Gourd. When the prophet had been vomited out on dry land, the Word of the Lord came a second time bidding him to preach the warning of God in Nineveh. And this time Jonah obeyed. The result of his preaching was the repentance of the entire city, from the King down to the least inhabitant. Even the animals were clothed in sackcloth. All together the people cried mightily for mercy, with the result that God turned away his fierce anger and saved them from destruction.

And now for the strange part of the story. Instead of rejoicing over the conversion of this great pagan city, we read that "it displeased Jonah exceedingly, and he was very angry." This is why Jonah had fled when God first bade him preach to the Ninevites. He knew that his God was a gracious God and merciful, slow to anger (contrary to the perverted notions of certain Old Testament critics today); and, because as a patriotic Jew he hated the Ninevite oppressors of his people, he had refused to preach lest they repent and God should have mercy. Now the very thing he feared has come to pass, and in childish petulance, he prays, "O Lord, take, I beseech thee, my life from me: for it is better for me to die than to live."

Some prayers, by the infinite grace of God, are not answered. It was so with Jonah's prayer. God's only response is to call his attention gently to the unreasonableness of his anger, "Doest thou well to be angry?" But Jonah, in high anger, takes himself out of the city to sit down in sulky silence "till he might see what would become of the city." Even yet he rather hopes that God will change his mind and destroy the city.

And as he sits, hot with anger and disappointment, the eastern sun rises to add to his distress and grief. So he builds him a booth, but it was a poor shelter. And the "Lord God prepared a gourd, and made it to come up over Jonah, that it might be a shadow over his head, to deliver him from his grief." There is nothing more gracious than that in all the Old Testament. And Jonah, we read, "was exceeding glad of the gourd."

But the prophet must be taught his lesson. So God prepared a worm which smote the gourd and it withered as the sun rose the next day. And the sun beat upon the head of Jonah so that he fainted and wished to die, saying, "It is better for me to die than to live." Once again God comes with a question, graciously, "Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd?" And choking with bitterness, the prophet flings back his retort, "I do well to be angry, even unto death."

Prof. A. J. McClain

Over the loss of his gourd, please remember.

But the last word is God's; and what a word it is! Then said the Lord to Jonah:

"Thou hast had pity on the gourd, for the which thou hast not labored, neither madest it to grow; which came up in a night, and perished in a night. And should I not spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than six score thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand (children;) and also much cattle?"

And so the book ends with a question. There is no answer from Jonah. How could there be? It is like another question asked by our Lord in the New Testament, "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" Such questions need no audible answer. They answer themselves. One human soul outweighs the whole material universe. But Jonah was more concerned over one gourd than he was over one hundred and twenty thousand little children, to say nothing of adults and "much cattle." That is some lessons here for us.

First, like Jonah we have been indifferent to the fate of the great heathen world. O, we have not been altogether idle; our hearts have never yet been really engaged in the work of world evangelization. In viewing Russia and India and China as fields for missionary endeavor, we are likely to think of them, like Jonah, as places to our relatively comfortable eyes.

Second, like Jonah we have built our shelters, made of bank accounts and bonds; and having set ourselves up, we read our newspapers, watching to become of the great pagan world. We see the riots, dirt, and sin of India; the persecutions and death in Russia; the superstition and unbelief of South America; the disease, slavery and exploitation in Africa. We are watching, but not working.

Third, as he did for Jonah, so God has graciously prepared many a "gourd" to shelter us up quickly and shelter our selfish hearts. How patient and kind our God is! He gives us many things for which we have not labored, neither have we deserved. We have a wise saying that if a man wants anything he must earn it. It would be truer to say that he must get it from the Hand of God.

Fourth, like Jonah we have been exceedingly glad for the "gourds." Into this thesis we do not trouble ourselves to go very far. We call them our gourds and are glad when good fortune smiles upon us in the form of material things—position, an abundant crop, an unexpected order or commission, a rise in real estate values. But as we sit in our comfortable shelters, for which many times we have labored, how much real thought we give to the souls of men who have suffered from the blasts of eternal judgment!

Fifth, like Jonah, when adversity comes when our precious gourds wither and perish, we become impatient and can find fault with God. Many are bewailing the crash of the stock market and the fall of real estate values. They forget that the most part these late high values were things for which man did not labor and were made to grow. They were "gourds" which came up in a night, and perished in a night. But when they wither, people become angry and depressed.

God help us. We seem to be more interested in "gourds" than in the tiny seed of the unsaved world; more concerned about our own bodily comfort than in the eternal fate of human souls.

The Lord knows that some of our gourds have been withered; he sees our irritation and vexation; and he is speaking to the professing churches of this country, saying us, "Doest thou well to be concerned greatly about the gourds that have withered to your material comfort of houses and lands? Your automobiles and gowns? Your steam heating and soft carpets?"

And some of us are answering, "We do well to be concerned about these things, even unto death; for if we lose them, life is not worth living."

(Continued on page 15)

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor
R. R. TEETER
Business Manager
and all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Argentine Needs

By C. F. Yoder, Ph.D., Pioneer Missionary to the Argentine were to ask some people in Argentina to name the most need of that country, the answer would be, "money."

would say, "work" or "industries," or "markets." Others, more deeply, would say, "education," or, "good governor, "good people." But back of all this the true answer certainly be, "Christ."

creates good people, and good people create good govern-Good government fosters education and industries, and these markets and money. Christ is the perennial fountain that the river of life that waters the paradise of God. Only can satisfy the world's need.

fore the missionaries who love
ple among whom they labor, engaged primarily in charity though they always do what
1. They are not so much conwith the problems of reform or education, because they under-that these are still but second-they are desperately con-about is to be faithful wit-of Christ. They know that him all the fruits and flowers garden of life will wither and whatever else may be done as a necessity, the one great the church in this age is that gelism. The great commission each the whole Gospel to the world.

how shall they hear without a
? and how shall they preach they be sent?" The testimony conscience is sufficient to cause to know that they are sin-it does not reveal the Savior.
he rewarded by education or overnment. He can only be by the living witness of those ives reflect him and whose proclaim him. The constant missions is missionaries, and the right kind. A missionary who is not "apt to teach" is ped, but though apt to teach, if his example is bad he is an useless.

the best of missionaries must eat to live, and the question
y is unavoidable. Some can do as Paul at Corinth, labor being burdensome, but experience shows that if it is pos-a missionary to give his entire time to Gospel work, it y best to do so.

ssion fields require foreign leadership, at least at the be-and though the goal be that of a self-sustaining and self-g work, it usually requires many years to attain it. Therese who cannot go themselves have the opportunity of n the work by giving that others may go.

entina we could have a hundred workers for every one to have and still have only about half as many in proporthe population as the United States.

er, on account of the fear of American militarism and the y of future prohibition of foreign pastors, it is best to national ministry. This is being done, and the young are being provided for in the "helpers' fund" by the Board are proving themselves worthy of the confidence bestowed upon them. But they also are few in number and the field is very great. Our budget is limited by the offerings of the people and there are promising candidates, both at home and on the field, who cannot be accepted because the budget must be kept down.

Besides, there are often very pressing needs which arise suddenly, and there is no provision for them. A city votes to require paving, sewers or other improvements, as Rio Cuarto, Cabrera and Laboulaye have done. The expense must be met,—but how? We need offerings sufficient to provide a reserve fund for such emergencies, but to have this the Easter offering must be increased.

There are some things also which can be done in addition to the Easter offering. Young men and women like Barnabas who "was a good man, full of the Holy Ghost and of faith" may sell their possessions as he did and go forth to labor in faith. The result of such a witness will ever be that "much people were added unto the Lord."

Openings for self-support are not plentiful, but the proper young men and women can find them and succeed.
The Mormons go out two by two, for three years without supoprt. One works to support the other and both give all the time they can to propaganda. Why cannot Brethren young men do as much? Russelites and Seventh Day Adventists go and support themselves by the sale of heretical books. Why cannot Brethren with equal zeal sell good books? Why cannot doctors and dentists and trained nurses, bookkeepers and teachers, carpenters and painters and many others, come to Argentina to labor, where the climate is beautiful and healthful;
where gains are as certain as elsewhere and at the same time one can witness for Christ to people who are destitute of the Gospel.

The language can be learned and the other difficulties overcome. Many missionaries are already self-supporting and others can be. Part-time work in the Gospel is better than no time.

But those who cannot go can at least help others to go, or to help to educate national workers in the country, or to employ lady Bible teachers for visiting and teaching in the homes.

We need funds to keep an able evangelist in the field and funds for a tent for such meetings. We need funds to enlarge the hall at Huinca Renanco and to erect buildings in several new places.
Even more we need help to increase the Helpers' Fund in the regular budget. Unless that is done it is going to be difficult to hold the helpers we have and impossible to add new ones. But back of all is the need of prayer. Gifts without prayer cannot win the world, but prayer will inspire gifts and workers alike, and converts will result.

A praying church cannot help but be a missionary church, and a missionary church is sure to be a praying church. Therefore Jesus made prayer, and not organization or gifts, the basis of missionary work. Therefore the Brethren Church should make a prayer band of every congregation.

The times are apostate, therefore "watch and pray that ye enter

Our Missionaries

*Forget them not, O Christ, who stand
Thy vanguard in the distant land!*

*In flood, in flame, in dark, in dread,
Sustain, we pray, each lifted head!*

*Be thou in every faithful breast,
Be peace and happiness and rest!*

*Exalt them over every fear;
In peril, come thyself more near!*

*Let heaven above their pathway pour
A radiance from its open door!*

*Turn thou the hostile weapons, Lord,
Rebuke each wrathful alien horde!*

*Thine are the loved for whom we crave
That thou wouldst keep them strong and brave.*

*Thine is the work they strive to do;
Their foes so many, they so few.*

*Yet thou art with them and thy name
Forever lives, is aye the same.*

*Thy conquering Name, O Lord, we pray,
Quench not its light in blood today!*

*Be with thine own, thy loved, who stand
Christ's vanguard in the storm-swept land!*

—Margaret Sangster.

not into temptation." There are increasing dangers on every side, therefore "pray that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things and to stand before the Son of man."

The harvest is great and the laborers few, therefore "pray ye the Lord of the harvest that he may thrust forth laborers into his harvest."

The laborers meet many enemies and obstacles, therefore pray "that we may be delivered from unreasonable and wicked men; that we may speak with boldness as we ought to speak, and that the Word of God may have free course and be glorified." And when you give pray that the Spirit may supply the grace of giving in such abundance that your gift may really be according to the greatness of the work and accompanied with the joyful confidence that it will be used of God to supply the needs of the field and of the giver as well.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Our correspondent tells us that the church at Beaver City, Nebraska, is experiencing an awakening under the leadership of their new minister, Brother Raymond Blood, who took charge of the church last December. The attendance at the services is said to have doubled and the work is being reorganized.

Miss Johanna Nielsen sends greetings from Argentina to the Brethren membership in the United States and speaks of the "glorious privilege" of giving for the sending of the message to those in darkened lands. Miss Nielsen is serving her second period of years as a missionary in the Argentine, and during her first period she supported herself with her own funds, so heavily was the task of world evangelization laid upon her heart.

Our correspondent from Center Chapel church, near Peru, Indiana, writes of a successful evangelistic campaign under the leadership of Brother J. W. Clark, who recently took charge of that church as pastor. There were fifteen confessions, one of which went to another church. There were five added to the church by letter, and two reconsecrations. The Sunday school and Christian Endeavor are going steadily forward and past discouragements are being overcome by new zeal.

Brother Percy L. Yett's Easter greetings reveal a heart that pulsates with a passion for evangelism, and the fires of his missionary zeal are fed by the two blessed facts of the birth and resurrection of Jesus and the hope of his imminent return. Brother Yett is one of our faithful missionaries to the priest-ridden people of the Argentine and his particular field lies in distributing Bibles and tracts and bearing witness by means of the Bible Coach. He loves his work and has proven very efficient in it, we are told.

Brother and Sister Clarence Sickel send greetings from Huinca Renanco, Argentina, and remind us that Easter has come to be a time when thoughts of "others" occupies a large place in the minds of Brethren people. It is the time when we are accustomed to think of others beyond the sea, those in lands where the light of the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ has not yet shined as it has in our own land. Truly, as they suggest, will a keen sense of the blessing of the redemption accomplished through Christ cause men to think of OTHERS who have not yet had opportunity to be benefited by that blessing.

The Women's Missionary Society has long been a leader in spreading the spirit of missions and has cooperated with every kind of missionary activity that the church has promoted. They have a large place to fill in our foreign missionary work, so large, in fact, that our Foreign Board has given these good women representation on that Board, the present representatives of which are Mrs. F. C. Vanator and Mrs. S. M. Whetstone. Sister Vanator, who is also editor of the "Woman's Outlook," writes us a message this week urging cooperation in the Easter offering for foreign missions.

One of our splendid Endeavorers from Teegarden, Indiana, writes of the importance of cultivating self-control. Participation in the various functions of Christian Endeavor is a mighty fine way of encouraging the development of the virtue of self-control. He who takes his Christian Endeavor pledge seriously, and the lessons seriously as they appear from week to week, and takes advantage of its Christian social functions will grow up with his mind and heart disciplined according to Christian standards as naturally a flower develops beauty and fragrance under the influence of sun and soil. Endeavorers will also notice the financial report by secretary-treasurer, Miss Gladys Spice.

Brother Orville D. Jobson writes of the missionary policy of workers in Africa. He tells us that their policy has in mind "ing up a 'native church, self-supporting, self-governing and propagating.'" That involves the training of a native leader and the building up of the native Christians in the grace of God, both of which they are seeking to do. The first ten years of our work in Africa, he calls the "foundation decade," and he believes the next ten years period may be called the "building decade." Brother and Sister Jobson are now on furlough in this country. The blessing of God on our African mission work has been very marked, and gives encouragement for a still more loyal effort.

The obituary of Daniel C. Miller, of New Paris, Indiana, written by the pastor, Brother B. H. Flora, is of more than ordinary interest, and so we give it a place among the church news department. It is news in that it tells of the outgoing of a man who displayed exemplary faithfulness in the final exercise of his stewardship. He was not what we would call rich in this world's goods, but he had a neat little amount to leave behind, and he used it to it that it was distributed to various phases of the Lord's work on which his heart was set. May God cause more of his people whom he has intrusted the treasures of this world, whether large or small amounts, to be faithful in this final expression of their stewardship.

The Editor is giving place this week to the article by Dr. Yoder due to the abundance of material in hand that must needs go into this special Foreign Missionary issue of the Evangelist. Brother Yoder will be remembered as a former editor of this paper and he became the church's first foreign missionary. For twenty years he has been bearing witness to the true Gospel among people that has been kept in ignorance for four centuries by the Roman Catholic hierarchy. It would have been difficult to find a field with more humanly insurmountable and perplexing obstacles than Argentina presented. But through persistent and indefatigable effort the foundation has been laid for a great work in that needy southland. In his newsletter this week Dr. Yoder writes of his visit to Texas where he delivered his illustrated lecture and preached at several points.

Brother Freeman Ankrum writes of his work at Oak Hill, Virginia, where he brought to a close a seven and one-half year pastorate on the first Sunday in March. He is now on his way to a new field at Flora, Indiana, where he has been warmly welcomed with a reception and a kitchen shower. Brother Ankrum did a fine amount of work at Oak Hill. A new parsonage and church building were erected, the estimated value of the present property being $100,000 and the remaining indebtedness is comparatively small. The congregation raised and spent about $35,000 during the pastorate. The membership was increased by 160 people. He officiated at twenty-seven marriages and ninety-three funerals. The Oak Hill folks appreciated his services and were loath to lose him.

The various members of the Foreign Board are making an appeal this week on behalf of the Easter offering for Foreign Missions. First in order of appearance in these pages is Professor Clain's article, which, with his kind consent, and due to considerations of space, we have allowed to take the place of his regular department, "The Signs of the Times." Then Dr. Bauman gives us a challenge, both on pages 5 and 16, from the point of view of the treasurer. Brother A. V. Kimmell tells us that the terrible condition of the world situation and of finances in our country is a challenge to sacrifice. Prof. DeLozier says

(Continued on page 15)

OUR PRAYER REQUESTS FOR THIS WEEK—

Pray for revival at Hagerstown, Maryland, March 22 to 24, with the pastor, Brother F. G. Coleman in charge.

Also pray for ten day Bible lecture and evangelistic meetings at New Lebanon, Ohio, with Prof. M. A. Stuckey in charge and Brother L. V. King the pastor.

Retrench, Stand Still, or Advance---Which Shall It Be?

The Brethren Church on Easter Sunday Will Reply

By Louis S. Bauman, D.D., Treasurer, Foreign Missionary Society

Early five years ago, there was an "unstable meeting" of the "homeside" bishops and "the bishops of the foreign" of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the city of Washington. The "homeside" bishops left that meeting saying: "If the Church could only hear what we have heard, it would be quick and ample." The great Methodist Episcopal Church had begun retrenchment in her foreign missionary fields. But what the "foreign" bishops said, in here are lands from which we come, and to which we go, where the great structure is reared by the sacrificial toil of years, the priceless devotion of consecrated life, the gravest peril. . . . It is no 'foreign matter'. Under God it belongs to you. We, and hundreds of missionaries you have sent to the ends of the earth are your servants for Jesus' sake, to help you, indeed, to make possible for you to obey his last command and great mission. . . . Yonder, whole villages and towns are going for baptism and Christian teachers, and instead of answering the call, we have been compelled because of what in these two years to dismiss thirteen hundred teachers and preachers in India alone. . . . Unless we can be restored at once, the Christian cause in India is gravely injured for decades to come. . . . The native Church is just now making the hardest fight in its history. Doubtless it will never again need help so desperately as at this time, when, as it seems to them, the Church in America is deserting!"

This urgent appeal fell upon the ears of the bishops of the denomination that is, itself, gravely imperilled by growing apostasy, and consequently bore little fruit. We are sorry to say, that, all of the larger Protestant denominations have been face to face with the same desperate situation. And, unless the growth of apostasy in them can somehow be overcome, the situation of our missionary forces will grow more and more desperate; for, the doctrines of Modernism fall as the breath of death upon all foreign missionary endeavor. Modernism has no Gospel for the awful nightshade of heathen-

ry, or not, to the old-fashioned Gospel for which the Brethren Church stalwartly stands in the deepening night of apostasy, not yet have we had to retrench in our work on the foreign fields. Neither have we stood still. We have continually advanced,—not always as much as we would like to have done,—nevertheless, we have advanced. But, now, the whole world seems to have fallen upon "hard times." "Depression" is everywhere. A miasma of fear seems to have settled upon the earth. Verily, it is the last time. A vainglorious world yesterday was fond of pointing the finger at God's children of premillennial beliefs, and crying "Pessimists!" But, lo, the "pessimist" is about the only optimist left! He knows that "the kingdom of God draweth nigh!"

Dr. Louis S. Bauman

The question now arises: Has the Brethren Church a sufficient reservoir of precious faith to keep her from allowing the talk of "hard times" and the "depression" of an unregenerate world to close the reservoirs of her wealth as the Easter call of our missionaries once more is heard? Or, will a lack of faith in God and its consequent fear of the morrow, cause her to do what she has not yet done in her work in the foreign fields to which God has called her,—retrench or stand still? God help us to go forward!

The Brethren Church has as noble a band of missionaries as ever followed the gleam of the cross into the regions beyond! We do not know of one among them all that has not literally laid all his (or her) earthly goods on the altar for God. Yea, they have done more, they have counted not their lives as value to be withheld—all is on the altar! Have they not now the right to expect the folks at home to stand by in a time of stress? If any of us are prone to make "hard times" an excuse for failure to properly support these heroic missionaries, let us just remember that "hard times" are always with them. The shadows of death hover near them continually. Almost alone, yea, often, utterly alone, they stand face to face with the legions of hell in the great darkness that is being pierced only by the moans and groans of men and women and little children who are daily passing into the great eternity without the hope that should be theirs.

"Over there" millions are passing each year into Christless graves and Christless eternities, for whom the incarnate God died just as much as he died for us over here. We have the keys to the kingdom of heaven in our hands. In such a situation, the Spirit of the Christ within us

Who Says "Retrench"?

Who says "Retrench," ye brave missionary hosts?
Who commands retreat from our many outposts?
Does God call them back whom he sends out to teach,
Will Jesus recall those commissioned to preach?

Have the work all been done in the far-away fields?
Have the sheaves all been gathered which harvest time yields?
As the heathen all saved whom our Church seeks to win,
Have we finished our task, are the "Five Million" in?

Who says we'll withdraw the messengers we've sent,
And cease to conserve the vast sums we have spent
To build churches and schools and hospitals, too,
To educate and train with the Kingdom in view?

Will we call back our doctors, our preachers, and all,
And send back the converts into heathendom's thrall?
Is God's arm shortened that he cannot give aid,
Or is Satan making our people afraid?

They say there's no money to send out recruits,
Though we've prayed long for workers to gather the fruits.
Who in the churches are withholding the tithes?
Who failing to pray and to make sacrifice?

Will we stand the test in this critical hour?
Shall we pray and expect God to give us the power
To meet this crisis with hearts true and brave,
And the church from defeat and dishonor to save?

Shall a few stand in the breach for us all?
Shall not the whole Church hear the Master's call
And give enough extra beyond what we've done,
Till the funds are raised and the victory won?

Lord God of Hosts, only on thee we depend;
The "baptism of power" we pray thee to send.
Let it sweep o'er the Church with its tongues of flame,
And bring honor and glory to thy holy name.

—Addison E. Davis, in The Evangelist.

forbids us to talk about "hard times" and make excuse. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." With his Spirit within—the spirit of the cross—sympathy becomes a passion, intercession becomes a groaning, liberality becomes a sacrifice, and service becomes a martyrdom. With Henry Martyn we cry: "I desire to burn out for God!"

Above all, never must we allow the morale of our heroic warriors at the front to be broken by a knowledge of failure at home. We must never permit one of the bravest little armies that "faced hell's legions undismayed" to have their fighting courage imperilled by our neglect—never! Right this minute, every one of them is aware of the financial (and worse yet,—the spiritual) "depression" at home. And, they are wondering! They are not discouraged, because they are looking unto God, and not man. They are wondering—not whether God is going to fail them—but whether we are going to fail them. With prayer and with hope they await Easter Day, to see if the "folks at home" have the courage to rise above all circumstances, and matching faith to faith, say: "Ye sturdy heroes of the cross, we sent you forth to those great lands of spiritual night, to represent us in the one great task our God has given us—the evangelization of the nations. Circumstances or no circumstances, you shall never come home because you lack the sinews of the war whereunto we, under God, have sent you! Stand where you are! You need not retrench! You need not even stand still! Advance, in Jesus' name—ADVANCE!"

Yes, in prayer and in hope they await the coming of Easter Day! They shall not be disappointed!

Long Beach, California.

The Easter Challenge

By A. V. Kimmell, Member Foreign Board

Again the time is at hand when the call of Foreign Missions sends forth its challenge. What a crisis we are facing this year! Last year it seemed bad enough but what changes have come since then! Governments have fallen, presidents unseated; revolution after revolution; communism boldly advancing, Missionaries recalled and many other strange happenings in a world that likes to be called civilized. O, what a change! In America: banks have closed involving millions, industry has been paralyzed, unemployment sending its thousands of honest, industrious men into the streets. What a year this has been!

Does all this stagger your faith? Does this make you fear defeat? No, twice no, for the Believer need have no fear. God still lives and we know that he is able. These are merely testing times. They let you know if you have real faith, or if you have something you thought was faith. These conditions disturb the world, no doubt they were permitted to come to disturb the world, but they need not unsettle the church of the living God.

Rev. A. V. Kimmell

HE IS ABLE. The church is not bankrupt; she has all the money she needs; that is, it is in the possession of her members. We must not let the conditions of the world take our eyes off the Head of the Church. We will not let fear keep the money which belongs to God and his Christ from being given to the Cause which is his, the Brethren Missions in South America and Africa.

In the face of these conditions the people of the world and many Christians spent billions of dollars for sports theaters and movies, cosmetics and beauty treatments and most of all cigarettes and tobacco. In the face of these increased expenditures for things wholly unnecessary will the Brethren Church permit the $50,000 needed for Foreign Missions this year to stagger her faith? True, some who are able to give will let present conditions hinder, oh, they of little faith, but those whose minds are stayed on the Lord will not falter. Many will give in larger amounts because they know of others who cannot or will not give as last year. It may mean using the old car another year. It may mean going without a suit or a dress or perhaps a new hat and shoes for a time but the true child of God is ready to sacrifice, if needs be, that the command of the Lord Jesus to carry the gospel may be obeyed. When the command was given no exceptions were made, although he knew that some of the years would be hard. What need that matter? Listen to the promise, "I am with you always." We dare not think of doing less than last year. Read the pleas of the missionaries given by other writers. Can we turn a deaf ear to their cries? Some will borrow money to keep the gift for Foreign Missions up to normal. Others will make a ledger and take so much out of their wages each week until the obligation is fully paid. Many will go without thinking they are really needed in order that this work may go on unhindered. What will that one do who has the money but fears to trust the Lord with it? Try me, prove me, say the Lord. Let Praying and Paying be the team that will spell success this year.

2259 N. Tenth Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Impression and Expression versus Depression

By Prof. A. L. DeLozier, Member Foreign Board

I firmly believe that our interest in and giving to as well as our praying for foreign missions, or any other missions for that matter, is in direct ratio to our knowledge of the Bible, the great text book of missions.

If this is not true, then I am greatly mistaken and have observed falsely. Assuming my statement to be true, then I should deduct that it is not a question of impression of which so much is being said and written these days, but it is with us Christians a matter of impression and its inevitable corollary, expression.

Can you imagine what effect a depression would have on St. Paul or on any of the other Apostles for that matter?

Could a depression have caused James Gribble to say, "We'll wait until this passes and then we will launch our program." No, indeed! All great souls will know of depression. They will have before them the Word of God, the example of him who had not "where to lay his head."

They will see the Bible picture of a lost world and will recognize their relation to that picture. They will have the feeling of "Woe is me if I do not preach" (1 Cor. 9:16).

I note that in this passage, my French Bible has the word annoncer, which means to announce and also to advertise.

A business man may well say: "Woe is me if I do not advertise!" But in business we do not want the money so we advertise. One company spent last year advertising alone $433,000 and—the same company

Prof. A. L. DeLozier

onally in newspaper and magazine advertising $4,- 0.
this spent to announce! Spent during a depression
Are we also willing to spend in spite of the depres-
If not, then our confidence in our article is beneath of the General Electric Co.
peat that to a large extent, depression is out of the
e. We must think, meditate and pray in terms of sion and of expression.

ert E. Speer says: "Any man who has a religion is to do one of two things with it, change it or spread are we changing ours or are we spreading it?
es of Jerusalem and James of Harvard agree on int at least (Jas. 1:19 plus). Hearing, according se two Jameses, is for the sake of doing. You may ould) read in your Bible what James of Jerusa-ys.

es of Harvard (the late professor James, the fath-Psychology in this country) put it:

the current of life which runs IN at our eyes and ears nt to run OUT at our hands, feet or lips. The only the thoughts it occasions while inside is to deters DIRECTION to whichever of these organs shall whole under the circumstances actually present, the way most propitious to our welfare."

may be allowed a message to our beloved Brethren n time, this is it: Impression and Expression—vs.
sion.

and, Ohio.

"A Little Farther"

Charles H. Ashman, Member Foreign Mission Board

Matthew 26:39, we are told that Jesus "went a little
." He was in the Garden of Gethsemane. Peter, and John accompanied him to a certain point and
But, they could not go all the way with him. He tem, "Tarry ye here and watch with me." They ot go all the way with Jesus. They could not drink
e same cup of suffering of which he was to partake, nk to its very dregs. So Jesus "went a little far-No mere man can go as far as Jesus went. He and e could make atonement for sin. But, the Breth-Church needs to "go a little farther" at this time in World Evangelization Program.

Since we have entered the two most needy fields of South America and Africa, we have made commendable progress. I doubt if any denomination can match it. Considering our membership, number of churches, etc., the record of our evangelization work is most encouraging.
But, have we reached the limit?
Some appear to think so. A few even believe we have exceeded the limit. Yet, we have not really occupied the two fields we have chosen. Neither field has been actually evangelized. Surely they have not been occupied.
We must "go a little farther."

We must "go a little farther"
in prayer. The unseen forces and resources of prayer are at command. We have not exhausted them for they are haustible. We have merely tapped them. Let on these more and more. "Pray ye the Lord of that he will thrust forth laborers." Pray more, farther," that God will supply the funds for ust "go a little farther" in sacrifice. I am not whether the Brethren Church has taken the first step in real sacrifice for missions. A few within her ranks have, but how many? Our Missionaries have, but how many of the "stay-at-homes" have? Shall we make the "hard times" an excuse for greater stinginess or an opportunity for greater sacrifice? This year is a test year for the Brethren Church. It will determine whether we intend to "go a little farther" in world evangelization.

It is the "second mile" that counts. "If any man compel thee to go one mile, go with him twain." The first mile of necessity has very little virtue, but the second mile of willingness brings credit. My appeal for this year's Foreign Missionary Offering is that we voluntarily, willingly, "go a little farther."

Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

Will You Meet the Test?

By Carl H. Seitz, Member Foreign Board

For the past sixteen years, buying and selling merchandise, it has been my privilege to meet scores of business men. In all this period
I have never come in contact with so much unrest, anxiety, fear and hopelessness as I have in the last few months.

Business has been so poor for so long a time, that some have given up hope of improvement. Others are losing money so fast that they are fearful that unless conditions change quickly they will go into bankruptcy. As a result, many employees have lost positions; laborers have been thrown out of work;
bread lines have been formed. Although Relief Committees have been appointed to assist those in distress and are trying to collect from those employed, these folks in turn are fearful that they will be laid off and have become cautious.

This condition began shortly after the stock market crash and no one is able to tell when it will end. This situation is acute—it is world-wide in its scope. The solution of this problem seems to be beyond the power of the business man.

I firmly believe that all this suffering and distress has been brought about by man's utter neglect of God. He has tried to run this old world without taking its Creator into consideration and the result has been failure. It has always been so, since the beginning of the human race. Where there is no faith—there is fear and when faith is gone there is nothing left but chaos.

The Great Need is to get back to God through his Son our Lord Jesus Christ, whom he sent into this world to seek and to save those who are lost. This world needs a Savior, One who can save "to the uttermost," One who can Rule in Righteousness and bring order out of chaos,
One who can bring permanent peace and prosperity to all mankind. His name is "Jesus for he shall save his people from their sins."

"All hail the power of Jesus name,
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And Crown him Lord of All."

But what has all this to do with our Foreign Missionary offering to be taken Easter Sunday, April 5, 1931?
Just this, fellow Christians; members of the Brethren Church scattered all over these great United States, members who are born-again believers of our Lord Jesus Christ, and who are rejoicing in the fact that their sins have been washed away by his precious Blood, who know they have eternal life and who need not be discouraged

Mr. Carl H. Seitz

C. H. Ashman

or distressed because of world conditions, who can sing from the heart—

"My hope is built on nothing less Than Jesus blood and righteousness,
I dare not trust the sweetest frame,
But wholly lean on Jesus' name.
On Christ the solid rock, I stand,
All other ground is sinking sand."

Rev. Charles W. Mayes

Such are called to sacrifice this Easter. Let us see if we can forget our Easter clothes and other needs and put Jesus Christ first by giving the very best we can, even if we have to take from our savings. Let us get behind our Board and our Missionaries and pray definitely for the mind of the Lord as to what he would have us give to make him known and to hasten his Return. "He shall not fail nor be discouraged." Can we trust him to supply our need?

Let us meet this test with the largest offering ever made.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Brethren, What Shall We Do?

By Chas. W. Mayes, Member Foreign Missionary Board

"How shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? How shall they hear without a preacher? How shall they preach except they be sent? (Rom. 10:14-15 in part).

It is agreed that the Word teaches that those of us who know Christ and his salvation are to deliver the gospel to all others in the world. In case we fail, three things should be observed.

I. They will not be privileged to hear. Here in the homeland, any man who really desires to hear the Gospel can hear it. It might not be so easy, but he could find it if he cared to do so.

Such is not the case in the places to which our Missionaries go. The people there, with just as precious souls as ours, could not find the Gospel even with sincerest efforts. They do not even know there is a Gospel to find.

We must be faithful in the work of Foreign Missions, or lost souls for whom the Lord has made us responsible will not hear the Gospel.

II. If we fail, they will never know of the Salvation which has already been provided for them in Jesus Christ. Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures. But they do not know it. They have no Scriptures. How do we know? Somebody told us the truth and gave us a Bible. We have no right to cause this Gospel to stop with us. "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them, and hath committed unto us the Word of Reconciliation" (2 Cor. 5:19). The tragedy of a lost eternity is their's and the tragedy of unfaithfulness is ours, if we neglect the work committed to us.

III. If we fail, we will not have the Joy and Reward of laboring with God to make his Word known. We are "Workers together with him" (2 Cor. 6:1). His work is to "Call out a people for his name" (Acts 15:14). Our work is to go into all nations (Matt. 28:19).

The happiest people in the world today are the people who are winning souls to Christ. There is no joy like that of watching the work of God in the hearts of men in response to the preaching of the Gospel. Our missionaries are familiar with these experiences and like to talk of them. They are filled with joy as they tell of miracles of God's Grace and of the people who have been instantaneously transformed through Salvation. This is their present joy.

But the present joy is not all. "They that turn to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever" (Dan. 12:3). He who "converts a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death" (James 5:20). Paul said of those whom he had won to Christ, that they had his "Joy and crown" (Phil. 4:1). Again Paul said, "What is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Only in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his appearing?" (1 Thess 2:19). It is your money that will support the missionaries, if you yourself do not go.

You are a worker together with God in the work of Foreign Missions with your money. Now is the time for fellowship with God in his work of the salvation of the world. That in the day of Christ's appearing you may have the fullness of the joy of the results.

Whittier, California.

North America's Greatest Export

By U. J. Shively, Member Foreign Mission Board

What is the chief asset of our country? It is not her wealth, her raw and manufactured products, her colleges and universities, her factories, her trucks, railroads, airplanes, means of transportation, nor her army and navy. The chief asset is not things, nor institutions, but—the youth of our land.

What would be this country's greatest export? Not raw or manufactured products, nothing like that. It is the spiritual products, men and women whose greatest desire is to tell the world the love of Jesus Christ. Such men and women have gone from our shore to the needy fields of Africa and South America to carry the wonderful gospel, a light to those who dwell in darkness. They have heard the Macedonian call and have let their hearts be kindred, saying, "Here am I, send me." These men and women must be sent by us who remain at home. We must go or send, if we obey our Master.

Our two mission fields are in continents which contain the largest unoccupied mission fields in the world. Vast portions of the interior are practically unexplored. The attitudes of the inhabitants have never heard the Gospel of Christ. Jesus says, "Go." Will we obey?

Transforming results follow where men and women accept Jesus Christ. Their sins are forgiven, their lives are changed, their dwelling places are made homes, their communities are uplifted, and those redeemed seek avenues of service. The Bible becomes their guide and Christ is their Savior and living Lord.

The people in Africa have been and will worship something, even sticks and stones, and they think spirits are everywhere. Our missionaries go with the Gospel of Christ, whom to worship and know is life everlasting.

So many in South America have no use for God or anything pertaining to a spiritual life. The need is so great for consecrated leaders who can carry the Gospel to these people, so God may be glorified and Jesus Christ be received into their hearts.

Jesus told his followers that one soul was worth more than all the world. Our missionaries are our

Mr. U. J. Shively

est exports, for they are the means of bringing many e Master, Jesus Christ. Let us be thankful for the y faith, the loving service, the courage and patience r Foreign Missionaries.

ay we pray that we at home may more faithfully v Christ and show forth his mind and spirit, so that and money may be laid at the feet of our Heavenly er, which is our privilege and duty next Easter Sunppanee, Indiana.

Where Shall We Economize?

By Mrs. F. C. Vanator, W. M. S. Representative on Foreign Board

rs. F. C. Vanator

In this day of financial depression our constant thought seems to be, Where can we economize? Of course, there are certain essentials that we must have but the question is, What are they? If self would be the judge then it is the necessities for our own comfort. But do we stop at the bare necessities, or have we forgotten what the word means? Is that new model auto a necessity, or is it just something we need in order to be as up to the minute as our neighbor? Is that new furniture for the home needed or just wanted? Is the new outfit of clothing for the whole family at Easter time needed st a matter of keeping up with those around us? gn missions! Are they needed or might the folks our care as well wait a few years longer since they been without Christ for all these centuries? You not answer this question to earthly powers but you answer it to your God when you place your offering envelope on Easter Sunday. Perhaps never in the ty of our foreign work has our work met such a s, as this year. Never was the call more urgent for sion, yet on every hand we are being curtailed be- of the depressed financial conditions. As I pen few lines I have in mind especially the women with o my work has been in a large measure. It might ey for you to find an excuse since you give so gen- ously through the regular channels of the W. M. S. ive exhausted our resources in our efforts with the n's work? Not in any way, I am sure you will say, r one of us have felt the gifts we have made, and ore have not given until it hurts.

ue of us have had the great privilege of receiving er Jobson's message from the field. Wherever he here is the cry, "O, if we could just go back with o help in this great work!" but with many that is sible because of age, training, physical conditions o on, but it is the privilege of every one of us to a sacrifice of some of the luxuries of life and so it possible for some young, trained worker to ac- ny him back. May we go to our knees for the pur- of deciding what are the necessities of life and what uly the wants! May we each one fill our foreign g envelopes on our knees!

et, Indiana.

ust do something to keep my thoughts fresh and ng, I dread nothing so much as falling into a rut eling myself becoming a fossil. James A. Garfield.

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Exodus 6:9-13, 28-30. How often, when we read of God's love and of his many precious promises, the cares and limitations of this life weigh so heavily upon us that it all seems incredible. It was even so with the children of Israel at this time.

Because they refused to heed the message of Moses, Moses hesitated to carry his message to Pharaoh. In exactly the same way, many a pastor or Christian worker today is disheartened because the people of his own congregation, those who ought to be helping in the work, simply do not believe the message. If their own people will not believe and carry on, how can they have the courage to carry the message to them that are without? Only as they find grace and courage in the God who sent them forth!

TUESDAY

Exodus 7:1-7. "I have made thee a god." Is this not true of every believer? He has made us again after his own likeness, and has caused the Spirit of the eternal God to dwell within us. We shall overcome the world, even as Moses overcame Pharaoh by the grace of God, because greater is he that is in us than he that is in the world. The greater the obstacles in God's way, the greater the power displayed in overcoming them! Where sin did abound, grace did much more abound!

WEDNESDAY

Exodus 7:10-13. Aaron's rod swallowed up the rods of the magicians. The works of the evil one, represented by the magicians, are only illusions, however real they seem; the works of the living God have life, and must prevail.

Many times when "Pharaoh hardens his heart," and it looks as though all our plans for the kingdom must end in failure, let us remember that it all is a part of God's plan, and look to him for grace and power, and for understanding of his plan.

THURSDAY

Exodus 7:14-25. Let us learn a lesson from Pharaoh and his refusal to yield to the bidding of God. If his proud heart had been willing to bow down before the eternal God and serve him, how his whole people might have been blessed! But as he was not willing to do so, great suffering came not only upon him, but upon all his people. By yielding to God's commands today, we may bring light and life to others in need; by refusing to do so we only bring added sin and misery to others as well as to ourselves.

FRIDAY

Exodus 8:1-7. How little Satan cares for those who follow him! In the words of an old song, "You get nothing but evil for serving the devil." If the magicians had been able to bring an end to the plague of the frogs, they might have proved their power. To merely produce more frogs was to add to the afflictions of their people. What a difference between the wages of sin and the gift of God!

SATURDAY

Exodus 8:8-15. Pharaoh's "repentance" was like the false repentance of many: he was sorry only for the misfortunes that had come upon him. Someone has defined repentance as "being sorry enough to stop." Instead, as soon as his misfortunes came to an end he started in again. How we must marvel at the long-suffering of God, in the many opportunities for genuine repentance that he afforded Pharaoh. Yet he daily affords us all as many opportunities: do we appreciate them as we should?

SUNDAY

Exodus 8:16-19. The power of Satan is limited, while the power of God is boundless, infinite. There is a place beyond which the power of Satan cannot even imitate the works of God. Even as these magicians recognized the finger of God in the works of Moses, so we may behold the finger of God at work about us every day, if we will. And let us remember that the finger of God is interposed in the affairs of the world for the benefit of his people!

W. I. OUKER,
President
Goshen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR.
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

Seventh Day Adventism

By William Edward Biederwolf

(Continued from last week)

III. In the third place Paul, the inspired Apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, certainly does not refer to the Sabbath as he ought and as we would expect him to if it was to retain all of its old sanctity and stand out conspicuous among all the other days as a day of rest and worship. This we would expect him all the more to do inasmuch as his epistles are shot through and through with the passing away of the Old Testament covenant of death and ushering in of the New Testament covenant of life. If the Fourth Commandment alone was to remain, why didn't he say so? But what are the facts?

1. He never at any time or on any occasion enjoined or enforced the Jewish Sabbath on the Christian church.

2. He seems to be "afraid of" those who observe "days and months and times and years" (Galatians 4:8-11). What "days and months and times and years"? Why, the ones enjoined in the Old Testament of course.

3. He declares that we are not to be judged "in respect of a holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbaths" (Col. 2:16, 17). He says these things "are a shadow of things to come, but the substance is of Christ." We are never concerned with the shadow after the man who casts the shadow comes up. As you walk slowly away from the rising sun suddenly the shadow of a man begins to pass you, first his head, then shoulders, arms and body and by this you know some one is overtaking you, and at last some friend in the body comes alongside of you and what? The shadow is forgotten of course in your sweet communion with your friend who is the substance of the shadow which was cast.

4. He permits every man to be fully persuaded in his own mind (Romans 14:5, 6). "One man esteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind."

IV. In the fourth place it seems utterly futile to even attempt to set aside the historical fact that the early disciples did observe the first day of the week as their day of rest and worship, and this of course was in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ which occurred on the first day of the week, commonly known as Sunday (John 20:1).

The two days were kept side by side, the Jews keeping Saturday and the Christians keeping Sunday, the seventh and the first day of the week respectively, the Jewish Christians for a time at least keeping both. When Paul wanted to address his fellow countrymen he went into their synagogues on Saturday, the Sabbath, but when he wanted to address his fellow believers in Christ he went on Sunday, the Lord's day, the Christian Sabbath, into their meeting place wherever it may have happened to be.

That the early disciples did observe the first day of the week and make it their day of meeting for worship and fellowship is made clear both by Scripture and by early church history.

Let us take first the Scripture testimony.

1. "When therefore it was evening on that day, the first day of the week, and when the doors were shut where the disciples were, for fear of the Jews, Jesus came and stood in the midst and said, 'Peace be unto you' (John 20:19).

We must frankly admit that this verse proves nothing in the controversy one way or the other. The Seventh Day Adventists say the disciples were "assembled for fear of the Jews." We think not, but rather that they "shut the door" for fear of the Jews after they were assembled. Read the verse and judge for yourself.

The opponents of Seventh Day Adventism say they were met to celebrate the Resurrection. But this is hardly probable. As yet they did not believe he had arisen (John 20:9; Mark 16:9-14). It was their abode (Acts 1:13), and it was the most natural thing in the world that they should be assembled there the second day after the death of Christ. They were doubtless assembled there as well the day before, on Saturday. I would rather judge they were assembled every day for a few days at least. Put yourself in their place and you will see how natural such a thing would be.

Christ met them there it would seem not so much to celebrate with them his resurrection as to prove to them who were to be his witnesses that he had really risen from the grave (Acts 10:30-41, Luke 24:37-43). The fact remains, however, whether it be worth anything in the discussion or not, that it was the first day of the week when the disciples were assembled and that the Lord met with them on that day.

2. "Again after eight days his disciples were within and Thomas with them and Jesus cometh, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst" (20:26). This is plainly the "first day of the week." It is useless to contend that "after eight days" would bring the time to Monday. It is the common expression for, "this day week," counting always the day then present and seven others, or "after eight days."

3. "And upon the first day of the week when we were gathered to break bread, Paul discoursed with them, intending to depart on the morrow, and prolonged his speech till midnight" (Acts 20:7).

(a) The statement that the day began at sunset and that therefore this meeting which lasted till midnight MUST have been on Saturday night and that the next day, Sunday, was spent in travel is too puerile to deserve any serious notice. Even if the day did begin at sunset, which it did not, unless you think of it under what they term the Ceremonial law, this by no means proves that the service did not begin at sunset on Sunday evening. Read the verse for yourself and judge with unbiased mind whether it was on Saturday evening or Sunday evening when the meeting was held.

(b) Again, the expression, "ready to part on the morrow," means of course the morrow after the day mentioned in the verse, namely "the first day of the week" when they came together to break bread and is therefore Monday. It is useless to contend otherwise, and the apparent effort to make Paul travel on Sunday justifies all the less.

(c) If we reckon the day begins at midnight as is the custom now and as was already seen it to be with the Gospel writers, then the breaking of bread did not commence until the beginning of Monday, namely as Paul preached until midnight, went down and restored the young man who had fallen from the window and afterwards broke bread with the Disciples. But the mere fact that Paul continued his journey so long and delayed the breaking of bread until the early hours of Monday morning does not by any means alter the fact that it was on the FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK that they came together for the purpose of breaking bread, and it is a temptation to rob the first day of the week of this fact, as the Seventh Day Adventists do by reason of the above mentioned over events, only weakens the cause for which they are contending.

It may be of interest to note that the foremost authority on the chronology of the book of Acts, Prof. Ramsey, has to say. "St. Paul the Traveler and Roman Citizen," page 299, he says, "On the Sunday evening just before they start, the whole congregation met at Troas for the Agape; religious services were conducted late into the night and in the early morning of Monday the party went on board and set sail." Prof. Ramsey is not interested in our discussion at all; he is only trying to make out some case of chronological accuracy for the book of Acts.

THE VERSE IS A HARD ONE FOR THE SEVENTH DAY ADVENTIST BUT IT MEANS JUST WHAT IT SAYS, NAMELY, THAT ON SUNDAY, THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK, THEY ASSEMBLED TOGETHER TO BREAK BREAD.

4. "Now concerning the collection for the saints. . . Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in proportion as God hath prospered him" (1 Cor. 16:2).

While there is therefore no distinction of the Disciples keeping the first day after the resurrection, the Scripture does make it plain that they did meet on the first day of the week and that the Lord was with them on this day before his ascension, and that they met for worship and breaking of bread.

(To be continued)

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for April 5)

Jesus Teaches Humility

Scripture Lesson—Luke 13:1 to 14:5; 15-17.

Printed Text—Luke 14:7-14; 18:1-17.

Devotional Reading—Phil. 2:1-11.

Golden Text—Every one that exalts himself shall be humbled; and he that self shall be exalted.—Luke 14:11.

Introductory Note

Discourses of Luke 13 were spoken in December of A. D. 29, in the year of Christ's ministry. The dinner the Pharisee took place the following day. The blessing of the little child following march. The place was Perea. The lesson is found in Luke, except the blessing of the child which is found also in Matt. 19:13-16; Mark 10:13-16.

The house of a chief Pharisee, Jesus works a miracle on the sabbath and the act, 14:1-6. He rebukes the distinction in guests, 7-11; and the host that benevolence to the true hospitality, 12-14. One of the, putting apparently a literal in on upon the words of Jesus, refers to the Messiah's days, as by Jews, 15; in which every Jew of participating. Our Lord re him in parable: showing how the invitation would be received, company few of those who presumed on ment would value it when offered 16-24. This parable somewhat re Mt. 22:1-14; but here the rejection and mercy is shown to be caused by forms of worldliness, connected with the possessions, the business, or of this life.—Illustrator.

Jesus as a Guest

Jesus never refused an invitation," says the Sunday School Times, the inviter were a Pharisee or a friend or a foe. He never misl disposition of his host. He ac meetings where no kindness is, and occasion there was none. The en was a spy, and the feast was a Jesus was perfectly fearless and his observations. He did not hesi peak the truth for fear it might the conscience and offend some of isious hearers, though he was cour al loving, and gentle.

Choosing the Best Places

Choosing was done as they took their and the entire scene was enacted in the presence of Jesus. (1) Incidentally, Jesus true courtesy and gives a lesed breeding. The one who rushes est places and greatest honors is gentleman, and he proclaims the is conduct. (2) Jesus gives a wise rule for daily life and real sucalse opinion of one's abilities and en leads to failure, financially, soa morally. It is a swift road to oment and unhappiness. (3) This specially applicable to those who the kingdom of God or would seek the kingdom of God the atmosphere clove and of thought for others. The best place must be for those who of this spirit. Therefore, those selfish, ambitious, desirous to exve have the least of the heavenand must in the very nature of copy the lowest place.

The Gospel Feast

Jesus were expecting and waiting for his kingdom. They had in the possibility of realizing all the promises would have been them. They could have led the religious development toward the New Jerusalem described in Revelation. The richness of the feast to which the nation was called, was blessed beyond conception.

God has prepared for us the gospel feast. He has provided forgiveness of sin, new hearts and right spirits, the gift of the Holy Spirit, the abiding presence of Jesus, the care and love and promise of God, new revelations of truth, great opportunities of usefulness, eternal life.—Illustrated Quarterly.

(Alternate lesson for April 5)

Easter Lesson: The Resurrection

Scripture Lesson—1 Cor. 15:1-8.

Golden Text—Now hath Christ been raised from the dead, the firstfruits of them that slept.—1 Cor. 15:20.

The Powerlessness of the Grave

Our Lord has demonstrated the harmlessness of death, the powerlessness of the grave. To the natural eye death effaces all our beauty, and the grave is the last humiliation in which our strength and glory finally disappear. The empty grave of our Lord delivers us from the dominion of our senses, and convinces us that on our real selves death has no power.

The story is told that a chamber in a certain dwelling was reputed to be haunted, and the family regarded it with terror. But one night the father determined to sleep in it himself, and, coming forth the next morning all safe and sound, laughed away the fears of his children. So our Lord entered the grave, and dwelt among the dead; but in the morning he issued forth crying to his affrighted ones, "All hail!" and the gloomy chamber is divested of its terror.—Dr. Wm. Watkinson, in The Gates of Dawn.

O Glorious Grave of Jesus

O vanquished grave of Jesus whose chill could work no change upon his heart!

O deep, deep grave of Jesus whose depths can hide a whole world's sin!

O glorious grave of Jesus through whose gloom lies the pathway to Immortal Life!

—Ralph Conner, in The Recall of Love.

The Power of Christ's Resurrection

"That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection" was the prayer of Paul. He was a man who was not satisfied to know a truth unless he also knew its power; un-

(Continued on page 15)

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. DuBall Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
--	---	---

Self Control In Christian Endeavor

By Miss Elsie Sibert

"Self-mastery is the first law of greatness. He who cannot control himself is unfit to exercise authority over others." If you are unable to control yourself, you are unfit to be a member of our C. E., for the Christian Endeavor societies are exercising a far reaching control over others. The world would be only a shadow if there were no young people who could exercise self-mastery. The world is looking to us for its future. If you would make it a great, successful future, you—yes, YOU, must have self mastery.

In what things must we exercise self-control? I Cor. 9:25 says, "Every man that striveth in the games exerciseth self-control in ALL things." Self-control includes the problems of narcotics, intoxicants, sex-morality, temperament, amusements and hundreds of other things.

It is so very, very easy to grow so careless that we do not recognize the need for self-mastery. We become so engrossed in our own interests that we forget God's interest. We rush headlong for the bright, alluring amusements and other questionable things. We forget that the road has many "S" curves. We are living in an age of speed, so away we speed, speed SPEED. Finally, we see one of our friends lose complete control of his life and go to moral destruction. While the incident is fresh in our memory, we take our foot off the accelerator and slow up. Then some one says, "Aw, come on; be a sport," and before we are aware of it we are saying, "Well, all right. I don't give a whoop. Away we go again."

Are you really, really, exercising that self-control which makes the C. E. proud of you? Or are you the "Happy, Go Lucky" sort of girl or fellow who says, "I don't give a whoop?"

We, the Christian Endeavor—yes and the world, needs young men and women who can keep their own high ideals in spite of the jeering remarks of their reckless, fellow citizens. I say, fellow citizens, not good citizens.

When you are Doubtful—Don't. If you carry this as a motto, you will be able to exercise a greater control over others, due to your own self-mastery.

Teegarden, Indiana.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT

March 10, 1931

Balance on hand Jan. 1st, 1931	$ 41.26
Receipts:
South Bend, Indiana	10.00
Rittman, Ohio	3.25
Johnstown (3rd), Penna.	10.00
Canton, Ohio	7.03
Milledgeville, Ill.	10.00
Louisville, Ohio	10.00
New Lebanon, Ohio	19.00
Fillmore, Calif.	9.90
Conemaugh, Penna.	6.80
Ashland, Ohio	5.00
Martinsburg, Penna.	5.00
Kittanning, Penna.	7.40
Dallas Center, Iowa	15.00
Interest January 1st	.03

Balance on hand March 10, 1931 ..$159.67

GLADYS SPICE, Treasurer.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

MISSIONS

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Berne, Indiana

Our African Mission's Church Policy

By Orville D. Jobson, Jr., Missionary to Africa, on Furlough

The Brethren Church is completing its first decade of Mission work in the Ouham River basin of Northwestern Oubangui-Chari Territory of French Equatorial Africa. This period may be called the foundation decade, since we were obliged to begin at the bottom in every aspect and lay the foundation for the future. Buildings were absolutely necessary, since we could not live nor carry on our work without them; schools were and are necessary in order that the Christians may be able to read the Word, a light unto their feet and a lamp unto their pathway; the sick and suffering must be treated and this requires a medical department with doctors and nurses; and finally to develop a Native Church we needed tried and proven methods that the foundation be well laid.

Since our educational, medical and industrial departments are only auxiliary departments each aiding in the development of the church and chapel work, it becomes at once apparent that our whole program rests upon the Native Church. And here we may learn a great deal from the great Apostle to the Gentiles who made it his supreme work to establish churches and ordain elders. It is important, then, that our supporters understand the Mission's policies for developing the Native Church.

Dr. Norton, founder and director of the Belgian Gospel Mission, has said that the European (continental) Nations will not always permit Protestant propaganda in their African Colonies. Dr. Norton does not stand alone in his convictions; this view is shared with other missionary and colonial leaders. Realizing then, that the day may come, and that not far distant, when missionary effort will be checked in these African Colonies, what should be our attitude toward the Native Church? The answer is inevitable; we must evangelize the unreached territories as quickly as possible, and build Christian communities and churches that will be able to exist and grow without the presence of the missionary. This necessitates that the organization be simple and within the means of the natives; that native leaders be trained from the beginning, so that they may eventually take their places in the growing organization; that the whole Church be taught the importance of reaching their fellow-tribesmen with the Gospel Message.

Such a policy may be termed: The Native Church, self-supporting, self-governing and self-propagating.

The first point is absolutely necessary! The Native Church must give. Long before the missionaries went to Africa, the natives were in the habit of paying for their fetish worship, and the mission that abolishes this practice without utilizing the spirit of giving, for the benefit of the Church makes a serious mistake. This is exactly the mistake we made, however now at length we have taught our Christians to give, and today have an overwhelming majority of our communicant members who tithe. It is out of the question to ever expect the native church to support the American or European missionaries, but it should support, and that from the beginning, its own native workers, and share in the expenses of the local church. To be sure the amount is small at first, but turned into the support of the local evangelists, where the results are tangible, giving becomes an incentive to increased responsibility, and the amount given increases. The disposition of funds must always have church approval, and this leads to self-government which is our next point.

A native evangelist is sent to take charge of a native chapel several miles from the station, called and appointed by the Church. The next point is that his allowance must be set by the Church. This at once puts the Church under responsibility, not only to support him but to oversee his work. This is the point which follows the self-governing work in the local church. Business meetings are held, not because there is so much business, but because it schools the Church in matters they should know. Here the missionary suggests, counsels, advises and leads his group to self-reliance. The native church must have a share in the government from the beginning, and that as time passes his share should increase, until the missionary has become the dispensable element and the Native Church the permanent element.

In matters of punishment for sin, we have found the native group more severe than the missionaries. Both elements are needed at first. Love, as we understand it, is unknown among the native people; and therefore, since punishment should be done in love, with the ultimate end of regaining the transgressor, our advice is necessary.

What is more natural, than if a group of people organized into a Christian Church which is self-supporting and self-governing, taught in the whole Gospel, should eventually reach out to win others. This then brings us to the third point—a self-propagating Church. Eventually there are those who feel called to preach. The beginning is limited; but as the schools train the youth to read and write, discipline for disobedience; Bible schools cover the Old and New Testament stories and truths, there comes a deepening of the young preachers and eventually they are sent out to preach in the villages and have charge of village Chapels. After all is said and done, even if missions cannot agree on the first two points, there must be agreement here. "Africa must evangelize Africa." However many feel that this last point will never be fully realized until the Church is self-supporting and self-governing.

If the past ten years are properly termed "Foundation Decade," then I believe that the next ten may be termed the Building Decade. And now the Mission appeals to the Church in America to make the same sacrifice for our building of the spiritual Church in Africa as it has for the building of the material buildings. We are on the eve of a great ingathering in Africa, are, however, seriously handicapped by lack of workers. We need men, and praying that God will send us men. The Easter Offering will determine whether or not the Board will be able to send workers. God knows that many are in need day! Many on the other hand are saying that Jesus will return and take us home from all this sin and misery. But many of our Christian friends, Jesus cannot return until the Church is completed. And since his Church is to be composed of every tribe and nation, let us give of our means and life that the Gospel may be spread into the yet unreach-tribes of North Central Africa. Then only will we have discharged our responsibility and not until then shall Jesus return. His blessed coming is conditioned upon our faithfulness in preaching the Gospel.

Our Glorious Privilege

Rio Cuarto, Argentina
February 27, 1931

We greet you at this Easter season, which once again will sound forth the glorious message, "He is Risen," the message which each succeeding year seems to give new and more thrilling meaning. Could we but imagine what our lives, what our world would be had those words never been spoken, we should hail with real enthusiasm the opportunity to put in practice the missionary message, "Go tell." Doubtless as the disciples were told the glorious news, a greater new joy filled the hearts of those who were privileged to bear the news; as we "Go tell," the joy of our own hearts overflows, so that truly our "cup runneth over."

May we, members of the Brethren Church, at this Easter time feel such a sense of joy at the thought of our glorious privilege, that our giving for the sending of the message shall be, not like a few drops squeezed from a dried-up sponge, but as well of living water springing up from a heart full of the Holy Spirit and love for our Risen Lord, and for others who have not yet heard the story.

"There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth," surely applies to the joy of knowledge of the Lord; but, let us not forget in these "hard times," that there is that withholdeth more than is measured, but tendeth to poverty." If our Lord should come in this year 1931, may he find us with our treasures stored where they will ensure us eternal joy in his presence.

Yours in him,
JOHANNA NIELSEN

Easter Greetings

The two important seasons during the year that are especially dear to Christians, it matters not their location, Christmas and Easter, signifying the birth and resurrection of our Lord Jesus. As the years pass we approach another blessed period that is still in the future, "which the Father hath set within us," the Second Coming of Jesus. God, what a joy awaits the true child of God, seems to me that that time which the Father alone knows is very near. The seed to be a world-wide awakening among the Students concerning this event, and ev-worldly people one can note an ex-on that causes one to say, "It's in atmosphere." Will he Come THIS last year has been a testing year felt ally, and yet in spite of the severe that some of us have had to pass

I believe we can say it has been a spiritual blessings.

nt to thank you brethren for your
in our behalf and ask you to cono pray for the great work of the oach here in Argentina.

ay that you all may experience the nd peace of God our Father and the esus Christ and that you may enjoy piritual blessing in Christ.

PERCY L. YETT.

etings in His Name from nca, Renanco Argentina

er, how sweet is the sound of that those who have come to know him al personal way. Him, around whom oughts are centered in a special man-Easter Day. It is because of him, th, yes, his resurrection, that we IFE, Eternal Life. It is because of at we are not as others, living in rld without hope and without God, for we have this assurance, "BECAUSE HE LIVES, WE SHALL LIVE ALSO."

As we meditate upon this Easter message, there is another message that finds a place in our thoughts, which has been a blessing to me. It is summed up in this one word, "OTHERS." Jesus Christ lived to be a blessing to OTHERS. He died that OTHERS might be reconciled to God, and because he arose, OTHERS shall rise also.
"AND IF CHRIST BE NOT RISEN, THEN IS YOUR PREACHING VAIN, AND YOUR FAITH VAIN ALSO" (1 Cor. 15:14). But,
"because he lives we shall live also."

To us, as members of the Brethren Church, this word "OTHERS" has come to occupy a very important part in the Easter Message. It is on Easter Day that we think of OTHERS. OTHERS who are dead in their sins, OTHERS who are lost, OTH-ERS who are living in this world without hope and without God. So may we this EASTER, as we have never done so before, thing of OTHERS. OTHERS, who because of our consecrated efforts will some day join with us in that celestial song of the Redeemed, "I AM SAVED BY THE BLOOD OF THE CRUCIFIED ONE." May God help us to realize in a fuller way what it really means to be able to sing this song.—
then, we will think of OTHERS.

Yours in his Glad Service,
CLARENCE AND LOREE SICKEL.

January 24th, and gave a very interesting talk on the work in South America.

We were made to rejoice on February 1st when Brother J. W. Clark accepted a call to be our pastor. On the 15th of February our revival began, with Brother Clark as the evangelist, and for two weeks and two days we had a wonderful meeting.
Great interest was shown from the beginning, and almost every night the house was filled, some nights people were turned away for lack of room. Several neighboring churches came with large delegations. We were made happy when fifteen souls made the good confession and there were two re-consecrations. Five were received by letter. One young girl, who accepted Christ went to another church.

On March 4th baptismal services were held at the Roann church.

Please remember us at the throne of Grace that we may always be found faithful and willing to carry on his work as he would have us.

MRS. GEORGE HUDDLESON,
Corresponding Secretary.

FROM OAK HILL, WEST VIRGINIA TO FLORA, INDIANA

With the first Sunday of March there came to a close a pastorate of seven years and a half at Oak Hill, West Virginia, years that, when we looked backward, seem to be very short. In June, 1923 when we went to look over the field we found an old frame building upon a weedy lot; found a small but willing group of people. This, and little more. With the acceptance of a call to this field the modern parsonage was started and completed in November of that year. One lone woman had faith enough in the work to come to Winona a year before in search of a pastor, paying her own way. She with her husband have had the opportunity of seeing many of their ambitions realized and their dreams come true regarding the work. If there are any two persons who are entitled to the glory in the resurrection and rehabilitating of the work it is these two.

For the first two years' time was divided with Gatewood, but it was realized that if progress was to be made that more time should be given to Oak Hill. When this time was given to Oak Hill the growth was commensurate. In 1928 the modern church plant was completed and dedicated November the fourth. When we came upon the field the property value was approximately $16,000.00 and when we left the estimated value of the property was $53,000.00.
Against this there was an indebtedness of about twenty percent. This small congregation raised and spent during our pastorate in the neighborhood of $35,000.00. One-half of the church debt was paid in two years following the dedication. More would have been paid, had conditions remained normal.

One hundred and sixty people were received into church membership, seventy-seven couples were married, and ninety-three times were we called for funerals.
We saw the congregation grow from a small one until our night congregations became the largest of the city, and from time to time filled the church building. Two well organized Christian Endeavor Societies meet each Sunday night in their respective rooms. These are well attended.

The years were perhaps average years with their allotted portions of disappointment and rejoicing. Our last sermon was

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

TEXAS

finishing my tour of the churches, stereopticon lectures on Argentina, ced an invitation to visit some iso-ed members in southern Texas and hold meetings.

ne way I stopped at Dallas and spoke the students of the Theological Seminary.
the school that Prof. McClain at-de and where Brother Leslie Lindower working. I found a prosperous sem-ry with beautiful buildings. The audias very appreciative and I had a ast visit.

ly next stop was at San Benito, where er brother, Horace, received me and ke to the different places I was to
it. preached to a fine group of members the Brethren church and of the of the Brethren at Pharr in the love-of Brother and Sister Kelso. It ded to try holding regular monthly etings. A Church of the Brethren min-ter Eshelman, lives in the neighown of Alamo. I gave my illus-ecture on Argentina in this town in community church and also in the Methurch of Mercedes and the Baptist San Benito, where I also addressed men's Missionary Society.

was surprised to find large, beautiful, towns, lovely orange and citrus and fine farms of vegetables and all of which have sprung up in the years. The climate of the Rio Valley rivals that of Southern Cal-Irrigation is easy as there is an ce of water from the Rio Grande, main irrigation canal, which was a iver bed, furnishes good water for household use as well as boating and fishing. It is not far to old Mexico or to the sea. At Port Isabel an ocean harbor is projected and will afford cheap transportation to the east for the produce of this region.

Although feeling the general effects of the hard times and overproduction, it looks as if this entire valley is destined to have a wonderful development, and it would be a strategic move for the Brethren Home Mission Board to direct migrating members to places where there is need of churches and a bright future for the country.

Going from southern Texas to southern California was just one big hop across the charming desert from one garden to another. After preaching in Long Beach, Whittier and the first and second churches in Los Angeles I came on to Manteca where I am to preach one month, including the week of the Central California Conference.
But of these meetings I will write later.

C. F. YODER.

CENTER CHAPEL, PERU, INDIANA

Dear Evangelist Readers:

It has been some time since you have heard from the work at Center Chapel. We have not been asleep but have had a good many discouragements, but have tried with the help of the Lord to carry on.

We were without a pastor for several months as Brother A. T. Ronk had to leave us, on account of other duties, before the year was ended.

Our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor have been steadily going forward and much interest is shown in the work.

Our dear Brother Yoder was with us on preached on a night when the weather was very inclement, but had it not been so it is a question as to how we would have handled the crowd. While it, in a sense, was a pleasure to speak to these folks, it was a very sad occasion as we knew that this would be the last time to look upon the faces of some of the congregation. We cannot more than mention the numerous complimentary words, which we certainly did not feel that we merited, the many little remembrances, the farewell banquets, expressed regrets of people of all walks of life, who were not connected with the church, and numerous things that caused us to think perhaps our labors had not been in vain. Do not think that the hand of the Devil was not manifested throughout. He has done more perhaps to break up the work there than some realize. He has worked through those who have their names upon the roll of the church, as well.

If Oak Hill will concentrate and give full time service to the work there, the future is bright. Otherwise the results will be different. There are some of as fine a folks there as any pastor ever worked with. There are those, perhaps a small minority, who lack vision, and need to get rid of selfishness. Lest some aspiring pastor gets the idea that Oak Hill is a snap and an easy place to fill, get that idea out of your mind. There is more church competition there than I have ever found in any pastorate in seventeen years of active work.

Our pastorate there will make Heaven richer because of having met and known some of the congregation, and anticipating the meeting of them beyond the pale. We can say nothing more as this will become too long.

Friday evening, March 6, we arrived in Flora, heralded, as the "Garden Spot of Indiana." This was a drop of fifteen hundred feet from "The Switzerland of America," to the plains of Carroll county.

Kind friends, new made, made us welcome. Our goods had already arrived and Saturday morning in the midst of a raging blizzard we set to work to bring a limited amount of order out of chaos. All day Sunday the blizzard, blizzed, but we had splendid audiences for the first day. Each and all with whom we came in contact vied with one another to be of any service possible. We have been treated so fine that we wonder if we can do enough to show our appreciation. On Friday night following, a reception was held for us in the church, a large number surrounded the tables filled with highly edible samples of "Hoosier cooking." Having been warned that we would not be permitted in the kitchen, after a short program, Mrs. Ankrum and I were taken to the kitchen and a large stock of supplies were shown us. These we were told were for us. Well! Would a preacher work after such treatment and reception as that? If he did not, he would be undeserving. The second Sunday night a young man stepped out upon the invitation and accepted Christ. Naturally we are elated over the opening up of the work at Flora. More from here later. We covet the prayers of the people that we might be equal to the task of carrying on this work.

FREEMAN ANKRUM, Pastor.

BEAVER CITY, NEBRASKA

It has been a good while since you have heard from the church here in Beaver City. No, we are not all dead but I think we have been sleeping. We were without a pastor for a year and a half until Brother Raymond Blood came last December. Since that time we have been waking up and I think it will not be long until you will hear some good reports of the work done here. Under the leadership of our efficient pastor the work is getting well under way and the attendance has doubled in the three short months since his arrival.

Our business meeting will be the first Thursday in April when officers will be elected to fill the vacancies and then the work will progress faster.

We have a very interesting prayer meeting each Wednesday evening.

Pray for the work here in Beaver City that we may recover our old-time vigor and do greater things for our Lord.

MRS. H. W. LARSEN.

OBITUARY OF DANIEL C. MILLER, NEW PARIS, INDIANA

Daniel Miller, a faithful member of the New Paris Brethren church, passed away at his home in New Paris at the age of 83 years. I am sure that the church at large will be interested in this obituary, not that an old man's going home is different from the passing of other Christians but he has left a will that will tell of his loyalty of the church. His will is a wonderful document that reveals his Christian character.

I shall not attempt to give his will in detail. He gave to Ashland College when Dr. Bell was here $1,000. He remembered the college with another $1,000.

He gave to the local church $1,000, the interest of which is to be applied on the pastor's salary and if New Paris should disband then this money should be transferred to the Goshen church.

He gave $2,500, the interest of which is to be collected by the New Paris church annually and divided equally between the Foreign and Home Mission boards.

$1,000 went to the Brethren Home in Ohio, as he supposed it was at the time he made his will.

$500 to each of the following churches for the benefit of their poor (interest only): New Paris Brethren, New Paris Church of the Brethren, Maple Grove Church of the Brethren.

$3,000 to his sister, who is an old lady and at her death the benefits, which means interest only, pass to the Brethren church at Goshen. There are other minor bequests. He also provided a sliding scale that if the estate varied in value at his death, each beneficiary should share the gain or loss pro rata. He provided $1,000 to be divided equally among his living nephews and nieces. All parties seem to be perfectly satisfied and it is not likely there will be any contest.

Brother Miller was an old soldier. He has been blind for a long time. I called to see him regularly for six years. Never did he murmur or complain. Sometimes we wondered why he was not more liberal in his giving. Brother Smoker, who is the executor, said, "And to think while we gave our dollars he gave practically all to the Church."

Funeral at his home by his pastor.

B. H. FLORA.

"BREAK THOU THE BREAD OF LIFE"

By Calvin W. Laufer

Break thou the bread of life,
Dear Lord, to me,
As thou didst break the loaves

Beside the sea;
Beyond the sacred page
I seek thee, Lord;
My spirit pants for thee,
O living Word.

Bless thou the truth, dear Lord,
To me—to me—
As thou didst bless the bread
By Galilee;
Then shall all bondage cease,
All fetters fall;
And I shall find my peace,
My All in all.

O send thy Spirit, Lord,
Now unto me,
That he may touch my eyes,
And make me see;
Show me the truth concealed
Within thy Word,
And in thy Book revealed
I see the Lord.

The background of this hymn is Lake Chautauqua in western New York. Every year since 1873, hundreds of young and old have met for study and prayer. The lake and its surroundings, the conference life and experience, are reflected in the hymn which was written in 1877 as a study for the eager students who came there to enrich their spiritual life through communion with God and his Word. Ever since when young people meet in school conference throughout the country, this hymn is a favorite. The hymn expresses their aspirations, their inner longings for more devout life sustained by fellowship with Jesus Christ. This hymn is, in reality, a beautiful prayer set to stirring music.

The hymn has many tender associations and recalls experiences at Lake Chautauqua, Northfield, Chautauqua, Winona, Gree Lake, and elsewhere. Once the hymn was sung at a sunset Communion service of young people on the shores of Winona Lake where more than thirty persons dedicated themselves to full-time service. Nothing could have been more impressive. For a brief hour the quiet waters bathed in the light of the setting sun recalled Galilee and the Master. It was a time of fulfillment and the presence of Christ was truly felt by all.

A well known hymnologist calls this hymn "a little gem"; it is a graceful and simple lyric, in which every word fits perfectly into the whole like stones in a mosaic. There is no straining for effect in the verse couplets, which flow on as naturally as the water in a brook. It reflects the beautiful and consecrated life of the author, Marcella Artemisia Lathbury, who in childhood dedicated her poetical gifts to the Lord and through her works became known as the "Laureate of Chautauqua." Another hymn by her, and even more widely known and loved, is "Day Is Dying in the West" which was written as a vesper hymn for Chautauqua.

The tune was composed by William Sherwin in 1877, and with it the hymn is almost always associated. The music indicates that the composer must have lived with the hymn and made it his own. For so truly voices the aspirations and longings of the text. The tune is dignified and stately, yet simple. It is prayerful and out, and voices the sense of awe and presence and moves on to increasing intensity in the last two strains. As a national hymn this hymn stands in a class of itself and will be increasingly used by those who seek the life more abundant.

Editorial Review

(Continued from page 4)

is not so much dependent on the depression we are under-as on the impression we have experienced and the expression willing to make. Brother Ashman calls upon us to "go a earther" in prayer and sacrifice and thus make possible going in world evangelization. Brother Seitz admits business ions are very bad, due to man's utter neglect of God and in-that the only way out is to "get back to God" and that such heaven is in the heart we can mold of the earth about us a little closer ideal.

Sunday School Notes

(Continued from page 11)

at is, he felt its influence upon him-there are different sorts of know-Something happens and I hear of it.
the slightest sort of knowledge. The mply receives and registers the in-
But let me find that that something elation to me—that it must influence on and change my life; let me feel ply, and then I know the power of
It is not the mind alone, it is the enan, who knows it. It is one thing ed on the shore and see the great and say, "There is a storm," and it ry different thing to be out in the those waves, tossed every way by ghting for your life. On the shore w of them; in their midst you know ou know their power.

celebrate on Easter Day the rising avior from the tomb. And we go ith one another, heart saying to everywhere, "Christ is risen." And akes that such a glad greeting is surance that is hidden in under it and up through it; "We too shall rise."
assurance of our immortality bound Christ's, the certainty that because we shall rise also, that makes the ion such a message of gladness to Tarbell's.

A Missionary Message for Our "Hard Times"

(Continued from page 2)

ere is the Word of God for all ou have been concerned about these things; things which you have not and could not; things which grew ight and perished in a night: And t I, the eternal God, be concerned t great heathen world wherein are of men and women and children ut-without hope?"

ows but that God caused our late y to grow up in a moment, and then way from us, in order that we taught the great lesson of Jonah ourd? Perhaps we need to forget for a time, and lose ourselves un-in the business of taking the Good lost world.

human soul worth more than a ll be called upon to answer this on Easter Sunday.

ed in part from "Serving and a situation only calls for a little more sacrifice on the part of Christians. Brother C. W. Mayes brings us face to face with the consequence in case we fail to deliver the message of salvation.

Brother Shively says the country's greatest exports are missionaries of the cross in the sending of which it is our privilege and duty to have a part. Mrs. Vanator urges greater sacrifice, saying that not even the women, though they have done much, have reached the limit of their resources. May it be that the rank and file of our membership shall catch much of the missionary passion of these leaders.

TWO BOOKS ON IMPORTANT SUBJECTS

by

Rev. R. I. Humberd

The Virgin Birth

This is a subject of tremendous importance and this booklet should be read by thousands. Many people in the United States, Canada and England are purchasing large numbers for distribution and resale.

Verbal Inspiration

Is the Bible the Word of God, or is it the product of the human mind? This is a vital question and every Christian should know its answer.

Both, Price Ten Cents Each Postpaid

$1.00 per dozen

$7.00 per hundred.

$25.00 per five hundred.

Order from Rev. R. I. Humberd, Lake Odessa, Michigan

For Boys and Girls

BIBLE PICTURES

and

THEIR STORIES

By Susanna G. Fisher

Editor of Youth's World

The thirty-one beautiful pictures in this book are reproductions in full colors of paintings by the English artist, E. S. Hardy. They illustrate many Bible incidents that are of particular interest to children.

Facing each picture is the story written mostly in words of one syllable for children 8 to 15 years of age.

The stories are by an author having wide and successful experience in writing for young folks.
The Lord's Prayer, the Golden Rule, and the Ten Commandments are also included.

The book will make a very acceptable reward or gift for boys or girls. It is beautifully printed on heavy white enamel paper; 72 pages, 4¾x6¾; and is attractively bound in red cloth with a picture of "Christ Blessing the Children" inlaid on the front cover.

Price, 60 cents postpaid

Order from

THE BRETHREN PUBLISHING CO.

Ashland, Ohio

We Dare Not Do Less

By the Treasurer of the Foreign Missionary Society

"How much shall I give to foreign missions this year?" Doubtless that is a question many are asking as Easter approaches. And the question is more serious than in years gone by due to the world-wide depression that is causing many to count their dimes and nickels as never before. Well, if you ask your Treasurer that question, he can only answer;—You must not give less than you gave last year unless you wish some missionaries recalled from their tasks. And, by "YOU,"

we mean The Brethren Church, which of course is made up of "you" and "you" and "you." If each church in the brotherhood will leaf back to last year's accounts, and find out there what amount it gave, then just remember, if any church fails to give an equal amount this year, it is a bid to keep some missionary home, or to recall some from the fields. In this, the Board has no choice. Of course, if the missionaries recalled refuse to come, they may stay, but at their own expense,—and, that would be a sad situation, indeed, for at their present support,—well, we all know it is scant enough! But we have faith to believe that The Brethren Church on Easter Day is not going to leave the missionaries who are giving their very lives, to return, or to stay on with less bread and butter.

It is not necessary here to give detailed figures. Dig up once more "The Annual Financial Report" sent to all members of the F. M. S. last July, and scattered among the delegates at the National Conference. There you have the details of the Board's expense for the year 1929-1930. It is only necessary to say that the expense is running almost exactly the same for the present year, except there will be some additional expense due to increased cost of furloughs, and to the sending forth of one new missionary—Miss Mabel Crawford, of Whittier, California. Eight months have passed by, and we have spent a bit more than $25,000. Looking ahead we can see that the Treasurer will have to send out somewhere between $16,000 or $17,000,—barring any unforeseen necessities,—between now (March first) and July first.

We will admit that $10,000 to $45,000 seems like a lot of money for a denomination as small as our own; and, yet, that is only about $1.75 per member in a whole year for the greatest work God ever gave his Church. Look over the large list of missionaries, and then take your pencil and figure, a bit, knowing something as to what allowances and furloughs and buildings, etc., cost, and you will marvel that so large a company of missionaries can be supported for that amount of money. We verily believe that no missionary society of any denomination in the United States can show greater economy of expenditure than our own.

A very prominent magazine begins a recent article, thus:

"The missionary effort has fallen on hard times. Denominational papers report reduced appropriations because of reduced giving. Whether this is due to apathy or to a belief that conditions in the mission fields do not warrant the outlay is largely a matter of conjecture. But the fact remains."

It is the boast of The Brethren Church that, while other denominations have had a falling off in offerings, and have had to bring home many missionaries, that, in spite of hard times and of general apostasy, The Brethren Church has gone forward to this day—increasing her gifts and increasing slowly her forces. No missionary has ever been ordered home. We believe that this fact is due to the almost complete confidence in our missionary staff—a confidence that is general in every part of the brotherhood. No finer, more loyal, more self-sacrificing group of missionaries ever blessed a church.

Under them, "conditions on the fields" that are theirs, are the best possible in spite of some mistakes made through lack of long experience. We KNOW that confidence in them has not waned. We believe that instead of "apathy" existing in our church, there is enough of the living Spirit of the Christ of the cross in the breasts of Brethren everywhere, that, in spite of all the so-called "depression," no missionaries shall be ordered home, and none will be called upon for greater sacrifices than they have been making. May our God bless his own great work!

Long Beach, California.

An Easter Offering

"Take my life and let it be Consecrated Lord, to thee."

THE HEATHEN WOMAN'S PLEA

*If you had been born in a country dark,
And I in a Christian land,
And you did not know of a Savior
dear
Reaching a nail-pierced hand,
Inviting to come "whosoever will,"
What do you think that I should do
If you were I and I were you?*

*If I could read the precious Word
Which teaches of the way;
If I could hear the church bells ring,
And knew of a Sabbath day,
And of a dear Father who answers
prayer
Would I be loyal to him and true
If the message was not carried to all,
If you were I and I were you?*

*Two thousand years have now passed
by,
Still the story to us is untold;
Men, women and children dying each day,*

*Are we not to be sheep of his fold?
Oh, hasten with the message so precious;*

*Is his mercy for only the few?
Do unto us, poor heathen sisters
As you would have us do unto you.*

—Gertrude Geneaux.

Mrs. Herman Varner, Oct.-30-31
Conemaugh, Pa.
RFD 1.

Vol. LIII
Number 14

April 4
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

—Lodovico Gigoli.

Appearance of Christ to St. Peter

Meditations on the Resurrection Story

By Alva J. McClain

TO see the Sepulchre"

In Matthew's account of the Resurrection we are told that "as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre" (28:1). And Luke adds that they came bringing "spices they had prepared." Now the Lord had told his followers that he would rise from the dead after three days, yet when the women come, it is not to see a Risen Christ, but to see a sepulchre!" They come to embalm a dead body with spices! And Luke tells us that when they went into the tomb and found not the body, "they were much perplexed."

How slow the human heart is to believe God. God tells us in his prophetic Word that something will surely come to pass, and when it comes we are perplexed. There are multitudes of professing Christians in the church who have read the predictions regarding the signs of the Second Coming of Christ, yet now that some of these signs are being fulfilled before their eyes, instead of looking for the Lord they are perplexed. They are looking at "things" instead of for him.

ROLLED Back the Stone"

Matthew further tells us that an angel "descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat on it." Some people imagine that God sent this angel to roll away the stone so as to release Christ from the tomb. Nothing could be further from the truth. Our Lord needed no stone rolled away to free him from the grave. To his resurrection Body, stone walls were no barrier. Undoubtedly he had left the tomb before the stone was rolled away. Then why did the angel come? To reveal the empty tomb and to let the women in.

How gracious is our God! And he still sends his angels to roll away stones for his people. But we must be like these women. They knew the stone was there, that they were not strong enough to move it, and that it was sealed with the Roman seal which they dared not break. Yet they started out feeling that somehow they would get in. If there is work to do, we are to start out. Never mind the mighty stones and the Roman seals. God can break the seals and roll away the stones. When our missionaries started for Africa in 1918, the French Government rolled the stone of their opposition against the door to Oubangui-Chari. But our little party started out for that needy land, and God rolled away the stone.

FEAR Not ... Ye seek Jesus"

When the women came, the angel said, "Fear not ye, for I know that ye seek Jesus which was crucified."

Just as long as we are seeking Jesus, him who was crucified, we have nothing to fear from men, demons or angels. And I have a deep feeling that here we have the password that will get us into heaven. If today I should quit this earthly life and come to the gate of that heavenly city whose builder and maker is God, and if at the gate there should meet me one of God's angels mighty in power, if he should halt me and demand my business, I would say, "I seek Jesus—

Jesus who was crucified. If he is here, I want in. I must be where he is. I cannot live without his presence."

I know that speech would bring me through the gate. It will bring any man through the gate. The Name of Jesus is the password to the Father's House. But don't forget, it must be the Name of "Jesus Who was crucified." No other will pass.

RISEN, as he said"

The angel said further to the women, "He is not here; for he is risen, as he said." Is there not just a hint of rebuke in these words? "Risen as he said." You should have known he would rise from the dead because he said he would.

This should teach us something. When our Lord says something, the thing will surely come to pass. The trouble is that men do not pay attention to what he has said. Christ once said, "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life." And those of us who have believed on him have found everlasting life, as he said. He also said, "He that believeth not the Son, shall not see life, but Wrath of God abideth on him." And those who reject the Son will some day find themselves abiding under the Wrath of God, as he said.

When the Son of God speaks, it pays to listen and take heed. He never makes mistakes. And he never speaks idly.

GO Quickly"

Still speaking to the women, the angel said, "Come, see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly and tell his disciples that he is risen."

We have here the whole program of Christianity.

"Come." "See." "Go." "Tell."

Come to the Lord Jesus Christ for salvation.

See for yourself that he died for your sins and is living.

Go to your family, to your friends, to your neighbors, to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Tell the Good News of Christ, of his Death upon the Cross and his Resurrection from the dead.

And this is not all, but we are to "Go quickly." These words were spoken nineteen hundred years ago, and yet the larger part of the world has been told nothing of Christ. How shameful!

BEHOLD, Jesus Met Them"

Matthew records how that the women left the tomb quickly with fear and great joy, running to bring the disciples word. "And as they went to tell ... Jesus met them."

It is always so. When we go forth in haste to tell men the Good News of his Resurrection, the Lord meets us on the way. If he is not real to you, if you would like to know him better, just start out to tell the Story every day to those who have not heard. He will meet you on the way.

Ask the missionaries, and they will tell you this is true. People say it is hard to be a foreign missionary. In some ways it is a difficult life. But the missionary life has its own compensations. One of these is that you come to know the Lord Jesus in most intimate companionship. Who would send out a new missionary, generally receive a letter written en route, and one of these letters tells the same story. Sooner do they start out but the Lord meets them in an unspeakable experience, the lonely ship-cabin becomes a Mount of figuration filled with the Glory of the

MY Brethren"

Here is something new. We remember that Christ had spoken of his own disciples, as sheep, as servants, and before the Cross he graciously called them "friends." But never before the Resurrection had he addressed them as "My brethren." (Matt. 28:10).

Why was this? Let us recall Gal. 4:4-5: "When the fullness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." It was the work of Christ, in his Death and Resurrection, that redeemed us and gave us the adoption of sons of God. Therefore, we could not but call him "brethren" until the work was done and he had risen from the dead.

How we should thank God for his resurrection! Without it, we would have no right to the blessed name of "brethren." And since we do bear that name, we ought to bear our testimony as to its meaning by adding the good news of the Resurrection to the multitudes of the lost this year. In the power of the infinite power of the living Son of God, may become his "brethren."

The man who shows no interest in the souls of the lost, both at home and in foreign lands, is unworthy of this glorious name. At this Easter season, let us pray and give as those who are truly "brethren."

IN THIS NUMBER

The Word of God on the Resurrection—Editor, .....
Steps in the Way to Life and Fellowship—Editor, .....
Editorial Review, .....
The Message of the Empty Tomb—W. C. Benshoff, .....
The Message of the Cross—A. Bame, .....
Cover, .....
Did You Teachers Teach This?—A. Bame, .....
Studies in the Scriptures—C. F. Bohn, .....
Significant News and Views, .....
The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon, .....
Seventh Day Adventism—W. E. B. Bohn, .....
The April Brethren Teacher—C. F. Bohn, .....
Editor's Notes on the S. S. Lesson, .....
Those Clothing Bags for Kryptos—F. C. Vanator, .....
"An Unoccupied Field"—L. S. Bohn, .....
Higher and Lower Investments—J. Bohn, .....
News from the Field, .....
Our Little Readers—Ona Lee Smith, .....
The Tie that Binds, .....
In the Shadow, .....

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Sold all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

The Word of God on the Resurrection

After we have written on the doctrine of the resurrection, arguing for it, evaluating it, bringing forth in divers ways our own very human notions and reasonings about it. This time, it is our desire to let the Word of God speak for itself, unincumbered by comment. It is a surprise to some, as it was to us, to discover how much the Bible has to say about the resurrection, and how strongly it sets forth the purpose of, and the arguments for, a life after death. Nothing could be more convincing and satisfying at this point than the word of God itself. We shall not be able to quote, or make reference to, all the passages that deal with the resurrection, but here are a goodly number:

Preview of the Resurrection by the Prophets

For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that I shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh I shall see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; my reins shall be consumed within me" (Job 19:25-27.) "But I will redeem my soul from the power of the grave: for he will receive me" (Psa. 49:15). "These dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake, and sing, ye saints in the dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and they shall cast out the dead" (Isa. 26:19). "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever" (Dan. 12:4, 3). "I will ransom them from the power of the grave, and will redeem them from death: O death I will be thy destruction" (Hos. 13:14).

The Resurrection of Jesus Christ

Jesus rose from the dead very early in the morning of the first day of the month Nisan (April 9th). ".... as it began toward the first day of the week, ..." (Matt. 28:1). ".... early in the morning of the first day of the week, ..." (Mark 16:7). ".... the first day of the week very early in the morning, ..." (Luke 24:1). "The first day of the week ... early, when it yet dark, ..." (John 20:1).

Post-Resurrection Appearances

To Mary Magdalene alone, who has remained at the sepulchre after the other women had left: "... Mary! ... Rabboni! ..." (Mark 16:9; Luke 24:10).

To the women without Mary Magdalene: "... All hail! ..." (Luke 24:34).

To Simon Peter: Luke 24:34; 1 Cor. 15:5).

To Cleopas and another between Jerusalem and Emmaus: "In what manner of communications are these that ye have one to another as ye walk, and are sad?" (Luke 24:17; Mark 16:12-13).

To the Eleven: "... Peace be unto you! ..." (Luke 24:36-40; John 20:19-23).

To the Eleven and Thomas: "... Peace be unto you! ... and my God!" (John 20:26-29).

To the disciples at the Sea of Tiberias (third appearance to the apostles): "... Children, have ye any meat? ... No! ... It is I!" (John 21:1-14).

To the Eleven, with perhaps the five hundred brethren mentioned by Paul, on a mountain in Galilee (Matt. 28:16-20; 1 Cor. 15:6).

(9) To James (1 Cor. 15:7).

(10) To the Eleven at the ascension (Mark 16:19-20; Luke 24:44-53; Acts 1:2-12).

(11) To Stephen (Acts 7:55, 56)).

(12) To Paul: "And last of all he was seen of me also as of one born out of due time" (1 Cor. 15:8).

(13) To John (Rev. 1:13).

Declarations of the Lord of Life

"But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage: neither can they die any more: for they are equal with the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection. Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the bush, when he called the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living; for all live unto him" (Luke 20:35-38).

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live. ... Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation" (John 5:25, 28, 29). "And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up at the last day. And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one that seeth the Son and believeth on him, may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day ..." (John 6:39, 40, 54). "And Jesus said unto her, Thy brother shall rise again. Martha said unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection, at the last day. Jesus saith unto her, I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?" (John 11:23-26). "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also. ... Because I live, ye shall live also" (John 14:2, 3, 19).

The Strength of Paul's Testimony

"So worship I the god of my fathers, believing all things which were written in the law and in the prophets; and have hope toward God, which they also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust" (Acts 24:14, 15). "For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection: ... Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him: ..." (Rom. 6:5, 8). "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. ... Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea, rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us" (Rom. 8:11, 34). "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death by man came also the resurrection from the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the first-fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming" (1 Cor. 15:19-23).

"But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? And with what body do they come? Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die: and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain: but God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body. . . . So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. . . . For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" (1 Cor. 15:35-38, 42-44, 53-55). "Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you" (2 Cor. 4:14). "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him" (1 Thes. 4:13, 14).

The New Birth Gives a Lively Hope

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you" (1 Peter 1:3, 4).

Short Talks by the Editor on STEPS IN THE WAY TO LIFE AND FELLOWSHIP

IV. CONFIRMATION, OR THE LAYING ON OF HANDS

After repentance, confession of faith in Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord, and baptism into the name of the triune God, then, as the fourth step, the new convert is confirmed by prayer and the laying on of hands. This is the final initiatory, or entering, rite into the church, and is a symbol of the coming of the Holy Spirit to indwell the life newly dedicated to God.

We have no record of our Lord's having given commandment concerning this rite, but if we accept the instructions of the Gospel writers as inspired, and consequently authentic and essential parts of the revelation of Christ and of his commitment to the church, then we must accept the Laying on of Hands as a step in the divinely ordained way into the fulness of life in Christ Jesus and into fellowship with his church. For in Hebrews we read of its being among the very first principles taught. "Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection: not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrines of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection from the dead, and of eternal judgment" (Heb. 6:1, 2). It is here set forth as a part of "the doctrine of Christ." In other words, we are actually told that it is a part of the teachings of Christ, and so is included in the "all things whatsoever I have commanded you" (Matt. 28:20), which the church is to perpetuate.

The Apostolic Church understood it to be a part of the Christian

(Continued on page 9)

EDITORIAL REVIEW

The choir of the First Brethren church, Elkhart, Indiana, will broadcast over Station WOWO, Fort Wayne, April 12, at 6:30 P. M. Rev. W. I. Duker is the pastor.

Our little readers will find an interesting Easter story in this issue written especially for them by Sister Ona Lee Sams, who formerly was the writer of Junior Lesson stories for the Angelus.

Brother Fred C. Vanator, associate president of Brethren Christian Endeavor, writes that more clothing is needed at Krynitz, Kentucky. The response to previous calls has been fine and several hundred dollars have been made from sale of clothing. This is a splendid way of helping along the work.

Brother W. R. Deeter informs us that his union church at Carleton, Nebraska, will broadcast from station KMMJ at Carleton, Nebraska, Sunday, April 19, at 2:30 to 3:30 P. M. (C. T. time). During the one hour religious service the pastor will deliver a twenty minute sermon. Tune in.

Do not forget to send your foreign mission offering promptly to the treasurer of the Foreign Board, Dr. Louis S. Bauman, whose address is carried regularly in the heading of our missions page. Brother Bauman, who called so urgently along with other members of the Foreign Board last week for a liberal offering, gives another brief appeal this week.

Our correspondent from Lanark, Illinois, reports the work of the pastoral leadership of Brother C. C. Grisso, going forward courageously. The young people are given a word of commendation because of the new interest and cooperation they are manifesting in the work of the church. The experiment of union Sunday services during the winter months has closed, and the evening services in their own church are well attended, with the sermons on questions from the congregation, proving of much interest.

Dr. Charles A. Bame, editor of our Sunday School Lesson publications, calls attention to one of the serious drawbacks of other denominational literature for the instruction of our Sunday school children. We cannot blame other publishing houses for trying the teaching that the feet washing ordinance is an ancient custom and not intended to be practiced by the church when that is what they believe, or that the cube of bread and a sip of wine constitute the Lord's Supper, when they believe other things, but we should blame ourselves for being satisfied with such literature. We have no more serious need than to build an unbroken lesson curriculum that is truly Brethren. And a long step has been taken toward the building of such a literature when once our people get to using in all our schools the literature we do make for Brethren people. We cannot build up our Publishing House with the money that goes to other publishing houses, and you cannot build up loyal Brethren with the use of that sort of material.

Peru, Indiana has experienced a successful revival under the evangelistic leadership of Brother R. Paul Miller, with the assistance of Brother F. C. Vanator acting as song leader. There were twenty-five first confessions, three received by letter and seven by public confession. And among the new members the young men are conspicuous, which fact gives promise of much future strength to the church. Prayer, personal work and preparation were given a large place in the campaign. The evangelist is encouraged by the outlook at Peru and believes it will not be long under its present able leadership until it will be self-supporting and one of the strongest churches.

We recently made mention of the total membership and financial reports appearing in the Year Book of the First church of the Beach, California. Dr. Bauman, the pastor, informs us that he has mis-read their tabular arrangement and consequently gave incorrect totals. We are glad to make correction, for the totals in each category are much larger than we previously reported. The total membership at the close of 1930 was 805 instead of the 595, and the receipts for all funds for the year was $47,863.94 instead of $10,063.06, which proved to be merely the receipts for the "mission fund." Brother Bauman also states that since the first of the year they have had "a house-cleaning" on their roll, dropping from the membership members for various causes and adding a total of ninety members, leaving the present membership at 849. We rejoice with them in the strength God has given them and may they continue to grow and contribute more and more to the Kingdom of God.

PRAYER REQUESTS FOR THIS WEEK—

Brother Sylvester Lowman asks for wide cooperation in prayer for the healing of his wife, who is suffering from a long illness and unable to talk or walk.

The Message of the Empty Tomb

By W. C. Benshoff

The Resurrection of Jesus Christ is the fundamental message of God's Word. If Christ be risen it proves all teachings to be true; if not risen, there is no hope. Christ be not risen then is our preaching vain and faith is also vain" (1 Cor. 15:14). This event has made possible the New Testament with its message of eternal salvation. On the fact of the Resurrection the church is founded. "Now it is unquestionable the cardinal miracle of the Bible on which everything else depends is the Resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ from the dead. If that event happened literally, actually, historically, as described by the four Gospels, then it proves him to be a Supernatural Person, supported are all his claims to be the Messiah and Son of God" (Fleming). Being the Son of God Christ knew what was to occur to him. Knowing that he would rise again, Christ endured. He saw the mockings and scourging, denial and betrayal, he went to the cross; but beyond that he saw resurrection, glorification, and eternal life. "Who for the sake of the cross despised his life" (Heb. 12:2).

The message of the empty tomb is the message of spiritual, eternal life. It means that Christ himself lives. "I am not dead and was dead; behold, I am alive forever" (Rev. 1:18). Christ had neither ended nor changed his personality." We worship not a dead but a living Christ. We make no pilgrimage to a sealed tomb to see the body of a dead savior. For 3000 years the body of King Tut rested in a sarcophagus garlanded with magnificence and grandeur that beggars description. Mohammed's grave is decorated with diamonds, rubies and sapphires worth $10,000,000. The founders of all other religions are in their graves. But Jesus Christ, the Lord both of heaven and of earth is not entombed. He is risen, and all power has been given him.

The open tomb means resurrection from death in sin. This is the state of man. "By one man sin entered into the world and death by sin" (Rom. 5:12). That sin is the most dreadful of the many figures under which it is represented. Jesus came, suffered death and again that he might give life. Jesus did not come to show the fact of the existence of sin and to proclaim realities. The whole race from the days of Cain knew sin. Jesus came to bring "life and immortality to light through the Gospel" (2 Tim. 1:10). "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live" (Jno. 5:25). The offer of life is to all. Jesus unites into one body all people who receive the message of salvation by faith, though in other respects they stand diametrically opposed. From the moment through transgression and disobedience there is no grace but in him. The risen Christ alone can meet the need.

The open tomb means the sinner's justification. "Who was delivered for our offenses; and raised again for our justification" (Rom. 4:25). "One might be perfectly sure of his forgiveness and know that it means sins taken off, and might be confident of his cleansing, but there is the memory of the old life of failure, which is ever to him like a shackle when he would run to God. Justification is sweeter by far than anything we have yet learned. When Christ rose for our justification he stood before God as a kind of receipt (as John Robertson has said) and when God looks upon that receipt he knows the bill is paid. But justification is even better than this, for when one is justified before God he actually stands as if he never had sinned." Chapman.

But the open tomb means more than resurrection from death in sin, it means the possession of the Christ life. To continue in sin is for a man to be dead while he liveth. But when we rise with him and throw off the grave clothes of the old death and put on the garments of heavenly provision, it is then we know life and begin to live. In Christ we have victory over sin and deliverance in times of temptation; in him we have strength for every duty and power to walk in newness of life. In Christ we rise above the things which kill and destroy. "The believer lives a conscious superiority

First Easter Dawn

Artist: J. K. Thomson

to circumstance, beyond the reach of taunts, sneers and persecutions." The Christian has an unfailing strength in all the practical affairs of life. He is made firm in all the eternal verities of truth, steadfast and unmovable. Thus established in the faith, he abounds more and more in good works. By faith the believer says with Paul: "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God who loved me, and gave himself for me" (Gal. 2:20).

The open tomb means eternal, immortal life. "Beloved now are we the sons of God and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is" (1 John 3:2). When we pass from the mortal existence our blessed Lord will not fail to open for us pathways to new adventure, and more glorious spiritual experience. When Jesus rose he put hope into a world of despair, and the grave became an open door into an immortal existence. Faith in the Resurrection enables us to project ourselves into the beauties and bliss of the future. The Resurrection of Christ has been called Jehovah's signature of receipt for the ransom paid for sinners. Soon the Resurrection of the just shall occur. Saints will awake to glory and honor; sorrows and afflictions will be forgotten. Yes, praise be to his name, Christ is risen, our faith saves.

Let us hear the admonition of the apostle: "If ye then

(Continued on page 7)

The Message of the Cross

By A. B. Cover

We are commemorating an event in the life of our Master, that strangely stirs our emotional capacities. The Passion of our Lord cannot be meditated upon but that our very lives are thrilled with throbbings of spiritual realities that lift us heavenward. After Jesus was confessed by Peter as "The SON of God" and he was transfigured before them upon the Mount, he set his face toward Jerusalem. What significance is embodied in the sentence, "He set his face toward Jerusalem." His earthly ministry in the flesh was drawing to a close; but to set the seal upon his life and teachings, and make possible salvation for humanity; suffering and death lay before the Son of Man. The way to Jerusalem was full of ministry: at the foot of the Mount of Transfiguration was the demoniac to be healed; the Perean ministry must be consummated; the approach to Jerusalem was filled with his blessed ministry—healing, teaching and still preparing the disciples for the things which were to be accomplished when they reach Jerusalem.

Passion Week held for Jesus, the Triumphal entry, further ministry, farewell preparation of the disciples for the work that soon depended upon them, institution of ordinances in the upper room, farewell discourse and then the arrest, trial, condemnation to death, and THE CROSS. Here we uncover our heads, we reverently bow, for the Son of Man, God's only begotten Son, dies for us. As we kneel before the Cross where Jesus suffers and dies to atone for our sins and the sins of the whole world, we ask once again, What is the message of the Cross? What does it mean to me? Am I in personal touch with its saving and redeeming power? To answer, we would strive to find its evaluation in God's Redemptive Program. The writer chooses to think of it as pre-figured, enacted, its significance and place in the Scriptures.

The sign of deliverance by blood, was enacted by God when the Death-Angel passed over the homes of the Israelites in Egypt and saved the life of the first born where the blood of the sacrifice appeared upon the posts and lintel of the doors. Where there was no sign of blood, death entered and the Word says, "There was mourning over all the land of Egypt." Under the Law the sacrificial lamb meant for the penitent offerer a passing-over of his sins. The Scape-goat on Atonement Day was let loose and bore away the sins of the people. The Children of Israel throughout their generations were obligated to offer yearly the lamb, without spot and without blemish, for their sins. This with other distinct teachings, as the Serpent upon the Pole in the Wilderness, and the references of Psalms and Prophecies, point to the Supreme Sacrifice upon the Cross of Calvary, where Jesus met every demand of Law and Prophets and accomplished therein salvation for us. Thus the world looked forward to the Cross where Atonement was made for sin by the sacrificial blood of Jesus, the world's only Savior.

Let us now go back to Jerusalem on the day Jesus, weary, mocked, despised, staggers beneath the yoke of the Cross upon which he the innocent, spotless Son of Man, yea, Son of God was to be crucified. A cheering, maddened, blood-thirsty mob, he plods until physical strength fails and your Savior and Lord sinks to the ground. Simon of Cyrene is there to take up the cross of wood and carries it to the place of crucifixion. Speedily the gruesome work is accomplished that places the Savior of mankind upon the Cross. Suffering because of the mere physical endured by the sinless, kind, compassionate Christ, turns hearts of stone to repentance and awe, as witness the penitent thief and the centurion, who exclaimed, "Truly this was the Son of God." Earthly shrouds that death in darkness for a brief time, but the hosts of Heaven and future children of faith view the Gateway into Life Eternal. The types that prefigure the antitype are consummated in the Passion sacrifice once for all.

What does the Cross mean to me? The writer realizes that much might be said here, but space forbids and a few sentences must suffice. The Cross means that the debt of sin has been paid to God. I could not pay it; the world has nothing to offer of sufficient value to pay; and righteous God was outraged by my careless or wilful sin. So in reverence and awe I bow before God in grateful obedience accepted by faith which bestows in Jesus, my Savior. Oh, glorious Redeemer that died for me and paid my debt! Oh, what can I do for thee to simply attest my faith in thy finished work on the Cross? Will I stand once again at the foot of the Cross looking into the suffering, agonized face of Jesus and say, "I will completely surrender my unworthy and fruitless life to thee now and henceforth?"

The Crucifixion

—M. Munkacsy

The Cross holds distinctively a central place in the Scriptures. From the time when sin entered this world away back there in Eden, the figure of the Cross stood out in bold relief against this world of sin and Satan's influence. When God said to the Serpent, "the seed of the woman shall bruise thy head" the Cross with its suffering but life-giving power was set upon the horizon of redemption. As we look back to the time when the Word was fulfilled on Calvary, a vision of LIFE, the result of death to sin and deliverance from it, making the Cross loom over the centuries of time, in the onward march of redeemed souls. Centuries have witnessed the rise and fall of nations; human ambitions realized and defeated; the Cross of Jesus accepted and rejected; the Cross of Jesus ever marching on in lives of men and women, saved by the "Blood of the Crucified One."

May this season which brings to consecrated lives the memory of the time in which these things were ed, lead us to deeper consecration to the tasks that ours in the Lord, and to a greater evaluation of what means that we have been purchased by the precious of Jesus. May we come to realize in a greater meas-the meaning of the Cross, and sing with a deeper of appreciation our Christian obligations and privi-as redeemed ones. May the spirit of these lines be

"In the Cross of Christ, I glory,
Towering o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story
Gathers round its head sublime."
Los Angeles, California.

The Message of the Empty Tomb

(Continued from page 5)

pen with Christ, seek those things which are above, the Christ sitteth on the right hand of God" (Col. 3:1).
things that are above are the things which belong him and his cause—the spiritual realities of a noble life. The Resurrection life is an upward life. Those who risen must be ever rising until they dwell with him foremore.

Wynnesboro, Pennsylvania.

Did You Teachers Teach This?

Charles A. Bame, Editor Brethren S. S. Literature

My last week my wife came to me with the Teacher's book she was to use in teaching to her children on the date March 15, 1931, and asked me what she was to do about it was the explanation for the lesson of that Sunday class of juniors whose primary teacher's book is sold numerously from our Publishing House and recommended as the best among the helps we do not make—Sabbath Graded Lessons.

I mention this, because while it is recommended as best of our own, if our teachers taught it, you can see they taught. If they did not, well, I am glad they did not.

In a church that does not believe that feet-washing is observed as a literal service as taught and believed by Brethren, I do not blame them for printing it, if they disbelieve in the necessity from their best knowledge of the Word of God. But if they believe one thing in practice and teach another, then that Word says, "To therefore that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, it is sin." James 4:21. In modern parlance, "it is too bad." "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me." John 13:8. Here is what the book said my teachers should teach the Brethren children:

Now there was one thing that seemingly had been forgotten before they gathered around the table. During the day they had been walking along the hot, dusty roads.
Their feet had become hot and dusty and uncomfortable.
In that hot country there were no shoes and stockings, sandals, which were easily slipped on and off, for they were fastened on with straps, which left the feet except on the bottom. When they came into the room they slipped off the sandals and left them on the floor. It was the custom, as soon as the guests came into the room, for a servant to bring a basin and pitcher of water and wash and dry the feet of the guests. This was just like we do when guests come from a long railroad or automobile journey—we take them to the bath-house where they can make themselves clean and comfortable before eating. But in Jesus' country there were no bathrooms. Servants washed the feet of the guests.

This was considered a very humble task and was done by one of the lower servants or by an old servant who could not do important work. Since these helpers of Jesus were such close friends—indeed, they were more like one family—Peter or James or John or one of the others might have offered to do this little service. Where there were no servants, it was the custom for a member of the family to do it. But they were too proud! No one wanted to stoop to do the work of a servant. As they had come along the road during the day, they had been quarreling over who was the greatest and who should have the best place at the supper table." * * *

The Conclusion in the Quarterly

"And if I, the Master, am not too proud to do such a lowly thing for you, you surely will not be too proud to do it for one another. I want you to love one another so much that you will be willing to do the very lowliest and humblest things even to the washing of one another's feet, to show your love. I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done to you. The disciples never forgot Jesus' words and how he had taken a ser-vant's place to make them comfortable."

Our Conclusion

But before we give our conclusion, let it be observed that this teacher of teachers did not give a Biblical reference, either because none could be given or because she did not know where to find them; indeed, they are not to be found. That is what might be called a travesty if it were not so serious; it is a tragedy! A real tragedy that the best do not offer the Brethren scholars better Brethren doctrine than that! Let it be noted what are the mistakes this teacher of teachers offers to our Brethren teachers:

(1) Jesus took neither the host's nor the servant's place in this service; there was no such custom. Note all the instances of the Old Testament. Gen. 18:4; 19:2; 24:32;
Judges 19:21; Luke 7:44.

(2) The day was not hot. John 18:18. Peter was cold that night!

(3) This washing was not at the door, as was the custom in that day. See above references.

(4) It was not the customary washing, or Peter would have known. But Jesus said he did not know. John 13:7.

(5) This had a portentous meaning for Jesus said, "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me. John 13:8.

(6) In spite of the fact that all were washed, Judas did not get clean. Vs. 10, 11.

(7) The command Jesus gave, was to disciples only; had it been for mere cleansing, it would not have been thus given. Besides, it was a strange time for dusting.

(8) Jesus knew that his "hour" was come: redemption hour! Matt. 26:45; Mark 14:35; Luke 22:14, 53; John 2: 4; 7:30; 12:23, 27; 17:1.

(9) He claimed Divine power just as he began. John 13:3. This was a strange time for trivialities.

(10) In a few minutes he gave the first communion.
Luke 22:20.

All of which makes me think that this teacher did not know how to tell Brethren teachers how to teach this lesson. Dear reader, what do you think about it? Would it not be wonderful if your money could make possible, a lesson system that tells teachers how to teach what we want them to teach, the real meaning of the Word? Could you not do something for that? The best will not satisfy unless it is the best Brethren can afford.

Ashland, Ohio.

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

THE FAITH OF THE GOSPEL

3. Doctrines of the church

Far from treating doctrine as of little importance, the Gospel insists upon maintaining the purity of the apostolic doctrine (Tit. 2:7; 1 Tim. 4:16). It is true that Christ is the center and foundation of faith, but in preaching Christ we must not only preach what he is, but also what he did and what he taught (1 Cor. 15:1-4, Matt. 28:19). We should not ignore the Old Testament, because its commandments are passed over in their spiritual application to the New Testament (1 Cor. 9:9, 10; 2 Cor. 3:6), and its stories are for our edification and warning (1 Cor. 10:11). We should not neglect the prophecies, for they are a sure light in a time of darkness (2 Pet. 1:19-21). We should not reject any part of the Gospel, because to do so is to despise its Author (Heb. 10:28, 29).

(1) Bible teaching about God—God is the Creator and the Governor of all creation (Gen. 1:1; Col. 1:19).

He is imminent in all parts of his Spirit (Ps. 139:7-10; Acts 17:24-28).

He is manifested in Christ Jesus the only begotten Son (Jn. 1:9-13; 1 Tim. 3:16).

He is infinite in power, wisdom and love (Matt. 19:26; 1 Tim. 3:16).

He recompenses both the good and the evil according to their works (Rev. 20:12; 22:12). Salvation is a matter of faith (Eph. 3:5; Jn. 3:36).

His good providence extends to the smallest details of life (Matt. 6:25-34).

He guides creation to its glorious destiny, the universal and glorious kingdom of God (Eph. 1:10).

(2) The Holy Spirit—The Holy Spirit is not a mere force; he is a person (Jn. 16:7).

His great work is to glorify Christ the Savior (Jn. 16:14).

He is manifested in his temple, the church (1 Cor. 3:16; 12:7-11).

He transforms believers into the image of Christ (2 Cor. 3:18).

He is the Author and interpreter of the Word of God (2 Pet. 1:21; Jn. 16:13; 1 Jn. 2:27).

He gives power to do the will of God (Lk. 24:49; Eph. 3:16).

He will glorify the bodies of believers at the coming of the Lord (Rom. 8:10, 11; Phil. 3:20, 21; 1 Cor. 15:35-45).

(3) Of Jesus Christ—

The Gospel teaches the deity of Christ (Jn. 1:1; 5:23; 1 Tim. 3:16; Col. 2:9).

It teaches his humiliation and birth of the Virgin Mary (Lk. 2:5-7; Phil. 2:5-8).

It teaches his perfect love, manifested in his life and death and resurrection (Jn. 13:1; 10:11-18).

It teaches his vicarious death to reconcile man to God (1 Pet. 2:24; Heb. 9:14).

It teaches his resurrection for our justification (Rom. 4:25), his glorification and intercession as High Priest (Heb. 10:20-23; 7:24-26).

It teaches his return to reign (Acts 1:11; 1 Cor. 15:23-26).

There is no man that has done or that can do any of these things. Therefore "there is none other name under heaven given unto men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12).

(4) What the Bible teaches about man.

The Bible teaches the creation of man in the image of God (Gen. 1:26), that is, a personal spirit (Jn. 4:24; 1:13, 14), without sin (Rom. 4:12), and all nations of one blood (Acts 17:26).

It teaches the fall of man and consequent death (Rom. 5:12; 8:6).

It teaches the necessity of spiritual regeneration (Rom. 3:3-5).

It teaches salvation by personal faith in Jesus Christ (Eph. 3:8-10; Jn. 3:16).

It teaches that good works are the fruit of the saved life (Tit. 3:8).

It teaches the glorious destiny of the saved (1 Jn. 3:3; Eph. 3:14-21).

It teaches the resurrection of all (1 Cor. 15:22-24; 6:8).

It teaches an intermediate conscious state (Lk. 16:9-31) the saved with Christ (Lk. 23:42, 43; Phil. 1:23, 24) and the wicked apart (Acts 1:25).

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

WHAT DO THE WETS WANT?

The Wets declare that under no circumstances would they vote for the saloon back, they want no public drinking places; but at the same time they profess to want home-brew driven out of the house of the poor, and illicit liquor from the table of the lawless class, and above all they want the Volstead Act repealed and the Eighteenth Amendment either repealed or nullified—but preferably repealed. When confronted with the question "What do you propose?" they have nothing to say.

Of course, everybody believes he knows, everybody knows what they want.

It seems to become plainer every day that they want liquor anarchy—the worse curse in the world, turned loose on the people without restraints of any kind.

What else could they mean when they are struggling to defeat the Eighteenth Amendment and at the same time causing enforcement laws in the States wherever possible to be repealed. No Eighteenth Amendment—no enforcement laws in the States—no curb on liquor at all.

Make alcohol king—that is their program. That will come when the majority of the people go crazy.—The Christian-Evangelist

SOVIET AND U. S. LEAD IN DIVORCES

It is to the shame of the United States, that in the matter of disregard for the sacredness of marriage, we are placed next to Soviet Russia. The Reich Statistical Bureau of Berlin, Germany on March 2 made public the results of a comparative study of divorce. According to the report an English marriage is the most durable in the world, while the American variety, next to the Soviet Russia, holds the international record for brevity, as shown in a survey of the Reich Statistical Bureau.

Divorce figures from all over the world brought forth many interesting sidelights on national matrimonial problems, among them that "war" marriages have proved the least successful. Fighting with the Soviet Union, where the average decree is a matter of minutes, the number of divorces per year for each 100,000 inhabitants runs about as follows:

Russia, 305.7; United States, 163.3; Austria, 89.6; Japan, 33.7; Switzerland, 67.5; Denmark, 66; Germany, 61.6; France, 7.5; England, 8.6.—The Evangelical-Messenger.

PROPOSE INSTITUTE OF FAMILY RELATIONS

We learn that plans are being developed for an Institute of Family Relations in New York City. This institute would give information in preparation for marriage and the problems of marriage to young people about to be married. The American Home Association has informally approved the plan and the Social Welfare Commission of the New York federation of churches has proposal before them, though no formal action has been taken. seems more than fitting that the churches should tackle the blem of divorce from this point rather than devote all its energy to the preservation of unhappy marriages.—The Christian Century.

WHAT DO THE VOTERS WANT?

Isn't at all pleasant to read the comment of a well-known socialist on the recent Chicago primary election, when he was asked the redoubtable Mayor of that inexplicable city and one of his opera competitors were mentally unbalanced. He said:

I should say that really the antics and illogical name-calling speeches are a comment upon the mental caliber of the voters. The candidates are experienced politicians and act after the fashion of fanatics because they think that is the way to get popular sympathy and gather in the votes. * * * If the politicians had not learned in previous elections that insane tactics would win the campaign, they would not try to fool the public today with imbecilic orations and parades."

As it comes to this in America, that sanity, reason and sincerity have no chance with the majority of voters? We may well despair for the future of our country if this be true. The situation in our great cities, especially the unholy alliance of crooked politics and crooked business with the underworld, should give serious concern to every patriotic heart. Is corrupt municipal government to prove our undoing? We shall continue to have faith in the underlying stamina of the great mass of our people—but many today civic loyalty is at low tide.—Reformed Church senger.

Short Talks by the Editor

(Continued from page 3)

requirement, and that it was vitally related to entrance into the church, as is evidenced by the two recorded examples of its practice.

They are as follows: "When the apostles which were in Jerusalem, heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent them Peter and John: who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost (for as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus). Then laid they their hands upon them, and they received the Holy Ghost" (Acts 8:14-17, 20). "And it came to pass that Paul ... came to Ephesus, and finding certain disciples, he said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost. And he said unto them, What then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism. Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying to the people that they should believe on him who should come after him, that is on Christ Jesus. When they heard this they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. And, when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them, and they spake with tongues and prophesied" (Acts 19:1-6). It appears to be almost a complement to, or a completion of, baptism, so closely is it connected with that rite. It may be too much to say that the prayer with the laying on of hands was a part of the process by which Christ promised to bestow his saving grace, but it certainly does seem to be a confirmation and a ratification of the pledge thus made by the new convert, and a means of strengthening and establishing him and of putting him beyond doubt in his new life and purposes.

The practice of Confirmation had a very definite and highly necessary aim, namely, the securing of the gift of the Holy Spirit. In the examples cited above, it proved effective, for the prayer with the laying on of hands was followed in each case by the coming of the Holy Spirit into the lives of those on whom the rite was practiced. To be sure there is nothing magical about the laying on of hands, and the prayer is not to be a mere form of words. It must all be done with the utmost sincerity and in faith, for as the Bible suggests, we receive the Spirit not by any formal or superstitious doing of "the works of the law," but by "the hearing of faith" (Eph. 3:2). Nevertheless it is the divinely accepted means by which the coming of the Holy Spirit into the life of the new convert is sought. It is according to the Word, and when men are fully obedient even in that which is least, God honors his word.

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Exodus 8:20-32. Pharaoh wanted to compromise with God, through Moses. Later, when God took away the plague of flies with which he had afflicted Pharaoh and his people, Pharaoh gave evidence that he was not sincere, even in his offer of compromise. Likewise, we may be sure that no one is sincere when he tries to compromise with God. Let us take heed that we do not try to compromise with him in our own lives. When he pleads, "Give me thy heart," let us yield it—all of it. To refuse in any part is to suffer immeasurable loss.

TUESDAY

Exodus 9:1-7. Pharaoh tried to get even with God, because God had not treated the Egyptians as well as the Israelites. We might wonder why God does not seem to make any distinction today between his own people and the unbelievers, but "maketh his rain to fall on the just and on the unjust" alike. The explanation is that these plagues were of a miraculous nature, and the distinction was made between the Egyptians and Israelites as a sign of God's pleasure in the Israelites and of his displeasure with the Egyptians. Even so, we have a certain knowledge today that we are his people and the sheep of his pasture, and that he goes before us.

WEDNESDAY

Exodus 9:8-12. Even the magicians were so afflicted with the boils that they were unable to exercise their power. The powers of darkness are always powerless before the power of God when once he begins to work. If God's people were aroused in the land today, the forces of righteousness might even now put down the forces of evil. But we slumber on. God makes us awake to our responsibilities and privileges that the power of the great God may be used in and through our lives for his glory and the good of his people.

THURSDAY

Exodus 9:13-26. How like the warnings in the days of Noah! Those who feared the word of the Lord heeded his warnings; those who did not fear him did not heed his warnings, and suffered great loss. Also, how like the days in which we now live: God's word exactly describes the present day conditions, its evil men and influences, its dangers and perils. He urges us to separate ourselves from all these things and find safety for ourselves and all who will believe our warnings, with him. We can disregard his warnings today only with great loss. "As the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."

FRIDAY

Exodus 9:27-35. And when Pharaoh saw that the rain and the hail and the thunders were ceased he sinned yet more. As we read the Bible account we are again and again impressed with the fact that human nature has not changed a bit through the centuries. When we are in difficulty we turn to the Lord and acknowledge our sin, but as soon as the difficulty is removed we turn again to our former lusts with renewed vigor. God keep us ever mindful of our weakness and our need of him!

SATURDAY

Exodus 10:1-29. The plague of darkness followed close upon the plague of the locusts. Often it seems in our lives that misfortunes come "one after another." Perhaps it is only the finger of God, trying to get us to walk in his paths. May our hearts not be hardened toward the will of God, as was Pharaoh's.

SUNDAY

Exodus 11:1-10. Pharaoh wanted never to see Moses, the trouble-maker, again, yet it was not long until he sent for Moses and Aaron in the middle of the night. So often it seems that we must lose the most precious thing in life before we come to our senses and yield to God's will. May God help us to know and love his will, and to make known his will among the nations.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Goshen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION
M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

Seventh Day Adventism

By William Edward Biederwolf

(Continued from last week)

Let us now look at the testimony of early Church history and see how fully it corroborates the above conclusion.

THE EPISTLE OF BARNABAS (100 A. D.) says, "Wherefore also we keep the eighth day with joyfulness, the day also on which Jesus rose from the dead."

THE EPISTLES OF IGNATIUS (107 A. D.), a pupil of the apostles and whose writings were commended by Polycarp, a friend of St. John's says: "And after the observance of the Sabbath, let every friend of Christ keep the Lord's day as a festival, the resurrection day, the queen and chief of all days."

"Those who were concerned with old things have come to newness of confidence, no longer keeping Sabbaths, but living according to the Lord's day, on which our life as risen again through him depends."

In the WRITINGS OF JUSTIN MARTYR (145 A. D.), it is said: "But Sunday is the day on which we all hold our common assembly, because it is the first day of the week and Jesus Christ our Savior on the same day rose from the dead."

For some time the Jewish Christians continued to keep both the Sabbath and Sunday, but according to Justin Martyr they were to be borne with as weak brothers. He says in his dialogue with Trypho, chapter 47: "But if some, through weak-mindedness, wish to observe such institutions as were given by Moses, along with their hope in Christ, yet choose to live with the Christians and the faithful, as I said before, not inducing them either to be circumcised, like themselves, or to keep the Sabbath, or to observe any other such ceremonies, then I hold that we ought to join ourselves to such, and associate with them in all things as kinsmen and brethren."

APOSTOLICAL CONSTITUTIONS (Second Century): "On the day of the resurrection of the Lord, that is, the Lord's day, assemble yourselves together without fail, giving thanks to God and praising him for those mercies God has bestowed upon you through Christ."

DIONYSIUS OF CORINTH (170 A. D.), in an epistle to the Church of Rome, wrote: "Today we kept the Lord's Holy day in which we read your letter."

MELITO OF SARDIS (175 A. D.) wrote a treatise on "The Lord's Day."

IRENAEUS (160-200 A. D.), in arguing that the Sabbaths were to be taken as signs and types and NOT TO BE KEPT WHEN THE SUBSTANCE OF WHICH THEY WERE THE SHADOW WAS AT HAND, says: "The mystery of the Lord's resurrection may not be celebrated on any other day than the Lord's Day and on this alone should we observe the breaking of the Paschal Feast."

CLEMENT OF ALEXANDRIA (174 A. D.) says: "The old seventh day has become nothing more than a working day."

BARDESANES (180 A. D.) says in his book of the "Laws of the Countries," "On one day, the first of the week, we assemble ourselves together."

TERTULLIAN (200 A. D.) says in his Apologeticus: "In the same way if we devote Sunday to rejoicing, from a far different reason than sun-worship, we have some resemblance to some of you 'The Jews,' who devote the days of Saturn (Saturday) to ease and luxury." In another of his works he says: "He who argues for Sabbath keeping and circumcision must show that Adam and Abel and the just of old times observed these things."

"We solemnize the days of Saturday in contradistinction to those who call this day their Sabbath."

"We observe the day of the Lord's resurrection laying aside our worldly business."

ORIGEN (185-255 A. D.) says: "John the Baptist was born to make ready of people for the Lord, a people fit for him at the end of the Covenant now grown old, which is the end of the Sabbath." He further says, "It is one of the marks of a perfect Christian to keep the Lord's day."

CYPRIAN, BISHOP OF CARTHAGE (250 A. D.), says: "The eighth day, that is, the first day after the Sabbath and the Lord's Day."

CYPRIAN (285 A. D.) says: "Because the eighth day, that is the first day after the Sabbath, was to be that on which the Lord should rise again, and should quicken us, and give the circumcision of the spirit, the eighth day, that is the first day after the Sabbath, and the Lord's day went before in figure."

VICTORIANUS (300 A. D.) says: "On the Lord's day we go forth to our bread with the giving of thanks. Lest we should appear to observe any Sabbath with the Jews, which Christ himself the Lord of the Sabbath in his body abolished."—On the Creation of the World, section 4.

PETER, BISHOP OF ALEXANDRIA (306 A. D.) says: "But the Lord's day we celebrate as the day of joy because on it he rose again."

EUSEBIUS (324 A. D.) of the Ebonites says: "They also observed the Sabbath and other discipline of the Jews just like them, but on the other hand, they also celebrate the Lord's Day very much like us."—Ecclesiastical History, pages 112, 113.

ELDER ANDREWS the ablest historian the Seventh Day Adventists ever had, says in his "History of the Sabbath," page 308: "The reasons offered by the early fathers for neglecting the observance of the Sabbath show conclusively that they have no special light on the subject which we in this later age do not possess." What a confession is this! He admits the very thing we have been contending for.

The question is not now whether they were right or wrong in their view of the Sabbath, but it is this, did they know did they not know what was the prevailing custom of Christians in the time in which they lived? If there is one extant statement contradicting their testimony, it yet to be produced.

The Seventh Day Adventists say that we must keep holy the seventh day, Saturday or be lost; not to do so is to have the mark of the beast. But this is not the spirit which prompts the New Testament Christian to observe the first day of the week. It is not done in the spirit of legality; not done in order to be saved, but it is done in joyful recognition and grateful remembrance of Christ's redeeming work which was finished by his triumph in Resurrection.

And so we have seen how untenable several tenets of Seventh Day Adventism really are. It is a system of legalism which is a travesty of the truth. It says, "Do not die and live," but my Bible says (Romans 3:28) "A man is justified by faith WITHOUT THE DEEDS OF THE LAW."

There was no legitimate reason for Seventh Day Adventism coming into existence, nor is there any for its continuance. If the seventh day Sabbath conviction must have a champion in some religious denomination, the followers of William Miller could have found it in the Seventh Day Baptists, for this is not shot through with the unvarnished chronological speculations and doctrinal vagaries so peculiar to Seventh Day Adventism.

There is a lot of needless speculation and works positive harm. We recall one woman upon whom some peculiar religious vagary was being pressed and when asked if she believed it all, out of the confusion of her mind and the distress of her soul she cried, "Oh, God, I don't know what to believe," and as a result of it all her world faith became unsettled.

"Faith of our Fathers, holy faith,
We will be true to thee till death."

And what is that faith? Christ, the begotten Son of God. His deity and the value of his Saviorship as based upon it are your justification and mine by faith in him as witnessed through sincere repentance and baptism for its remission.

THIS IS GLORIOUS AND THIS IS ENOUGH.

(The End)

The April Brethren Teacher

The April number of the Brethren Teacher is off the press. It has all the features of the others and one new one. On a new feature, we would like your reaction. It is hard to make up and difficult to perfect and will not be continued unless it is appreciated. Will you write the editor a personal message as to any feature you like or wish changed? It will help, whatever it may be. In another article, I call attention to the kind of teaching our teachers are supposed to give to our Primary pupils. The very next number says they should teach that "this morning, in our church, a table of bread and cups of wine will be on the table. * * * We call this the 'Lord's Supper' or communion. Every Sunday we gladly obey Jesus' command."

If a few of these examples do not stir up our teachers and leaders in our church work, then we are surely not as loyal as we had hoped we were, to our heritage of Brethrenism. But these are just samples of what many of our teachers get on other helps, only they are not so well as these un-Brethren teachings. do you have to say, leaders? Write

CHARLES A. BAME,
 Sunday School Editor.

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for April 12)

The Prodigal Son

Scripture Lesson—Luke 15.

Text—Luke 15:11-24.

Optional Reading—Isa. 55:1, 2, 6-11.

Text—There is joy in the presence of angels of God over one sinner that hath.—Luke 15:10.

Introductory Note

The fifteenth chapter of Luke is a set of illustrations of the joy of finding something that has been lost. First, the one lost sheep of a hundred, the seeking, finding, and bringing home the lost, and the joy of all the home-bringing. Second, the joy of a man who has lost one coin out of ten, seeks and finds it. And last, the joy of a father at the return of the son who was the especial part we study. And all these illustrations, the first two actually, the third by inference, speak of the joy heaven over one sinner who repents (Illustrated Quarterly.) It is a wonderful scripture and is widely loved and read. No portion of the New Testament has been more extensively commented upon than this parable. Applications quaint and delightful, numerous to mention have been made in teachings. It is a veritable kaleidoscope, full of beautiful surprises, and each of it develops some new thought. The paramount teaching of the whole of the 15th of Luke is, that God finds joy in giving grace to sinners.

Edham's comment is interesting. He says, "Man is a silly sheep; a dead piece of silver; a beloved child. As an animal, his services are to wander. As silver he is very useful for current coin. As a man he may give great joy or pain to his father's heart. Grace has two parts to it: giving grace, vs. 1-10, and receiving grace, vs. 11-24."

Christ's Chief Concern

Students of the life of Jesus can see very clearly what were the chief concerns of his life. He was interested in men, in men and women and children. To him human values, or rather personality values, were supreme. All other things were important in relation to their service to people. He pictured himself as caring for the people of the world as a shepherd cares for his sheep. He pictured the Father as supremely concerned with the welfare of his children. In that wonderful chapter in the life of John in which he pictures the vine and the branches, Jesus represents his disciples as friends, friends of himself, and as sons of his Father, in whose welfare he was vitally interested. He was devoted to the faithful disciples, and sought to lead them in a growing experience of fellowship with the Father. He was always concerned with the sheep that was lost or the prodigal who had wandered astray. In his life was a deep, thrilling, vital, and constant consciousness of his relationship to men.

The Temptations of Youth

Young men knew the temptations that come to a young man. He knew the impatient longing to see life and get away from the apparent restrictions of life. He also knew the natural outcome of the wrong responses to these urges. It is a very human appeal that comes from the lips of the youth: "Father, give me the portion of thy substance that falleth to me." He wants to receive what is his due and at the same time avoid the responsibilities that these blessings entail. It is an example of prayer in the wrong spirit, prayer for the wrong gift, but a prayer that is, nevertheless, granted. It was like the prayers of the Israelites in the wilderness of Sinai, of which the writer of the one hundred and sixth Psalm says:

And he gave them their request,
 But sent leanness into their soul.

Sometimes our prayers are answered negatively, in the goodness of God, but sometimes, as in the case of this prodigal, it seems salutary to discipline the petitioner with an affirmative reply. Says Mrs. Browning:

"God answers sharp and sudden on some prayers,
 And flings the thing we have asked for in our face,
 A gauntlet—with a gift in it."

The prodigal received his portion, but with it came the challenging experiences that marked the tragedy of life and still revealed his need of the Father's care.—Ibid.

Began to be in Want

The world, with its riches and pleasures, can never satisfy the soul. This is a sign of its divine nature and greatness. We can quench our thirst with the salt waters of the sea more easily than we can satisfy the soul with worldly good. That is but stones instead of bread, and scorpions instead of eggs. It is warming ourselves with pictures of fire. Solomon tried the world at its best, and with this result: "All is vanity and vexation of spirit."—Adams.

Came to Himself

"A striking expression, putting the state of rebellion against God as a kind of madness. It is a wonderful stroke of art to represent the beginning of repentance as a return to sound consciousness."—M. R. Vincent.) It is as one awakening out of an evil dream, or one who has lost his reason, and has been wandering in strange hallucinations, becomes himself again, and sees things as they are. Now the storm raised by sin awakes him to eternal realities. The famine, the hunger, the distress were God's messengers to the sinner, calling him home.

The Father Waits and Yearns

The Father at Home was still waiting and praying for his prodigal son. So our heavenly Father is ever doing all that is possible for his wandering children. He is never indifferent. He never ceases his efforts to save and restore. But the wanderer cannot be saved till he chooses the right. He must himself return. He has rejected love and home and father, and it is now only those influences united with the bitter fruits of sin that can make him feel his need and come to himself.—Adams.

The Prodigal's Return

Coming slowly, wearily, in rags, shamefaced, and questioning about his welcome. So the sinner, conscious of his sin, knowing his unworthiness, yet hungering after God and home, returns to God ready to take the lowest place in his service. He was "far off" in his feelings, and had but begun his return. His father saw him. The implication is that he was ever watching for the return.—Ibid.

"God loves to be longed for, he loves to be sought,
 For he sought us himself with such longing and love."

"Now the blessed truth is, that in the meanest member of the human race repenting, God sees a prodigal child of his returning to his father's house. . . . It is the great Christian doctrine concerning God which the world never has believed, and which the Church has only half believed, and which God knew from of old men would ever be slow to believe; hence the protestation by the mouth of prophecy: 'My thoughts are not your thoughts,' following the declaration: 'Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy on him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.'"—A. B. Bruce.

Two of the most common weaknesses of humanity are insincerity and pretense. Before these two blemishes, the confidence and love of the world in general fly away.

E. M. RIDDLE,                      President                      Warsaw, Indiana F. G. VANATOR,                      Associate                      Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Duell Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICE,                      General Secretary                      and                      Treasurer                      2301 13th St., N. E.,                      Canton, Ohio
--	---	--

Those Clothing Bags for Krypton

Dear Endeavorers:

No doubt you have already received a call from our National Secretary, Miss Spice, for clothing for our Krypton, Kentucky, field. There is a large demand for clothing and it is a source of much needed income for the work there. Several hundred dollars has been gathered for this work through the dispensing of the clothing already sent in. Order your Krypton Bag at once from Brother Frank Gehman at Krypton. He has a supply of these and will be glad to send you one upon application.

In a recent communication from the field relative to this situation we find that the most needed clothing is women's dresses and children's clothing. But all manner of clothing is acceptable.

SEND FOR YOUR BAG NOW!

And by the way, have you sent in your tithe to the National Secretary? Krypton is moving along as never before. The Endeavorers are aiming to make it their work. Let's get behind it with our money. WE CAN AND WE WILL.

Sin CE rely,
FRED C. VANATOR,
 Associate President.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

MISSIONS

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Berne, Indiana

"An Unoccupied Field"

Such was the caption of an item in a publication of The Inter-Church World Movement" but a few short years ago. It had the following to say:

From Northern Congo up through British Sudan to the east of the continental divide which marks the boundary of British and French Sudan, 1,000 miles; to the west of the same divide, through the French Sudan, another 1,000 miles; to the northwest in the direction of Lake Chad, considerably more than 1,000 miles; west northwest toward Nigeria, more than 1,500 miles, and west into the Cameroons, more than 1,000 miles—along all these lines there is no Protestant mission or missionaries! Who can view the vastness of this territory with no Gospel light and realize the many tribes whose languages must be reduced to writing before the people can get the Gospel message, without a conscious call to pray "The Lord of the harvest" to send forth laborers? If we do not pray, "how dwelleth the love of God in us!"

Now, it is into the very heart of this vast "unoccupied field" that God called James S. Gribble, his good wife, Miss Estella Myers, and Miss Mae Snyder,—our pioneer band to French Equatorial Africa. Miss Snyder went on to be with the Lord before the little band was permitted to enter, opposed as they were by French officialdom. It is in this great "unoccupied field" (still almost wholly so) that our little band is pressing against the foe, and saving many unto life eternal. Dare we fail to keep them there? Dare we refuse them the re-inforcements they urgently ask and more urgently need? Brethren, our "small change" will not meet this need. Someone must die to the things of this world at home, even as these missionaries died to the things of this world before ever they gave themselves to Africa.

"There is no gain but by a loss,
You cannot save but by a cross;

The corn of wheat to multiply,
Must fall into the ground and die.

Wherever you ripe fields behold
Waving to God their sheaves of gold,

Be sure some corn of wheat has died,
Some soul has there been crucified;

Some one has wrestled, wept, and prayed,
And fought hell's legions undismayed."

LOUIS S. BAUMAN.

Higher and Lower Investments

By E. J. Bohn

According to one man, the greatest danger for religion today is not atheism, but the love for things, a passion for personal luxuries and the desire to possess every modern convenience on the market. The gratification of self has made us indifferent to the needs of others and is endangering the vitality of our religion. For when we have once taken the meaning of sacrifice out of our religion, with the joy that it brings; then Christianity is indeed on the way of losing its life and deteriorating into a week and insipid sort of religion with no longer any power to save.

Our money has two possibilities. It can be used for higher and lower purposes. This is well shown by an illustration of Egbert Smith's. "Why don't you buy a motor car?" said one man to another. "Because," was the reply, "I have made a vow not to buy a car until I am supporting my own foreign missionary." Does this not illustrate the point which a great many of us are missing? We have no money for missions, because there are so many things we want to get first. I want to first get that fine big automobile

WHAT'S A MISSIONARY?

By H. A. Gossard

*He who sees a soul in every human being,
And loves that soul enough to give his life
in freeing
It,—is God's ambassador.
But who esteems his life worth more than souls of others,
And flinches from the work of raising fallen brothers,
Is himself unsaved and poor.*

*He who would save his life, and claim Christ
as his Lord,
Is carnal in his strife, and carnal is his sword:
He's a conquered conqueror!
He who through faith in God,—alert, stands at attention
Awaiting his command to 'Go,' at its first mention,
Is a conqueror; yea, more!*

*He who himself is Christ's, and every man,
his brother,
And in whose heart there burns a spark he would not smother,—
Nor a will to God's contrary,
But, bent, through love for men, to a divine submission,
That he might bring their souls to God through Christ's provision,
Is Christ's True Missionary.
Leon, Iowa.*

upon which I have set my heart for some time. It must be a certain make, with a certain number of cylinders, and with a certain smooth purr which I love to hear. There are certain things I must have first, which I have gotten myself to believe are absolutely necessary to be able to live.

It is said of David Livingstone, the night before he left home for Africa that he spent the entire night in conversation with his father. In their conversation they discussed the possibility of a time coming when men of means would consider it a privilege to maintain entire mission stations. Their hopes have been fulfilled, for hundreds of such men and women are beginning to discover, that a mission school, and a mission hospital is a far more satisfactory life than a high priced automobile, and was vastly more influential in inspiring children to a larger and a better life of Christian living.

Mr. John H. Converse, president of Baldwin Locomotive Works, thought support of missionaries by individual churches the wisest possible investment church could make. A certain manufacturer is supporting 228 native pastors under church's Foreign Mission Board and reaching hundreds of thousands with message of the Gospel. What a joy it be to this man to enjoy such an opportunity as that!

John Wanamaker, a few months after return from a trip to the Orient said:

"In all my life I never saw such opportunity for investment of money that any sets apart to give to the Christ who himself for us. As I looked at the churches, schools, and hospitals, and into the original cost of buildings and expenses of administration, I felt a lump of iron in my heart, that I had not been enough to make these investments made and wished a hundred times I had known twenty-five years ago what I learned a year ago."

Such quotations give one a vision of higher possibilities of investing our money. We are the choosers. Which one of the possibilities—the higher or lower—will we choose?—Congo Missionary Messenger.

THE BIBLE

A noted orator asked Dickens for the most pathetic story in literature, and he said it was that of the Prodigal Son. Mr. T. W. Higginson was asked for the richest passage in literature, and he said it was the first seven verses of the fifth chapter of Matthew. Another asked Daniel Webster for the best legal digest, and he replied that it was the Sermon on the Mount. No one could equal Moses for law, nor David for poetry, nor Isaiah for visions, nor Jesus for ethics, nor Peter for holy zeal, nor Augustine for fiery oratory, nor Paul for logic. John's statements of sanctified love. It is a ridiculous statement that to study the Bible "marks a step backward in civilization!" God's Word is the very greatest of books, and its Author the very greatest of all teachers. We do well to stay close to its pages. It is The Book.—Christianity Today.

Days

*Each day is a storeroom given you
Fresh, every morn, from God's hand
Ah! do you stop to think of this
When at its door you stand?*

*Twenty-four empty, waiting hours
All ready for you to fill
With worth-while thoughts and worth-while deeds
And service, if you will.*

*You're given a chance to store away
Treasures of love and joy,
And satisfaction of work well done,
That time can not destroy.*

*So put your best into all your days,
With eyes opened wide to see,
And eager hands stretched out to grasp
Each opportunity.*

—Ida M. Thomas, in Kind Words

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

LANARK, ILLINOIS

not going to tire you with a long article in this my first endeavor at writing news, but will say a few nice things in a homely way. Before writing this I my pastor and asked him if he would chip in on this,—and after a month's conference with his better-half, he "Yes! Say plenty of nice things about young people." I said, "All right, we lots of both," i. e., lots of young people and lots of nice things we could say. But just then a little gloom set in when this thought rushed in among nicer thoughts, if I could only say, "We have a fine Christian Endeavor society!" we have none at all, and that's just too bad. While that's the worst thing I can say, I'm yet hopeful; for, within the several months they have manifested a decided increase in interest along all lines, both in the Sunday school and the church. The Sisterhoods of M., both Senior and Junior, are doing splendidly, if not advanced, work along many lines, worthy of commendation. The Junior Sisterhood, under the leadership of Mrs. George Garber, gave a variety play that held a large audience. The play had some highly interesting points, illustrative of missionary successes and failures. They also have an upward swing to the entire musical program by special effort, as well as in a variety of ways. In a word I'd like to say this: We the BIGGER young folks are beginning to see that there are more than two SIDES TO LIFE.

have returned to our own church house on Sunday evening services, after having spent the winter in a union fellowship service on Sunday evenings with the other congregations of the city. These meetings were enjoyable, and, measured by attendance and interest, were a success. The good that comes out of such fellowship cannot be overestimated. Each preacher did his best in bringing forth the Gospel, not to defend a creed, but to edify saints, and to instruct the unsaved. I firmly believe in more real gospel, under the circumstances and in the same time, would not be possible. I would, for the glory of God and for man's welfare, that much might be put into practice. "Be ye doers of the Word, and not hearers only." Our pastor, Brother Grisso, is much pleased with the interest shown since returning to regular Sunday evening services. He is presently using a new sermon method, in its making, covers a lot of ground. I call it the "field sermon" method. It has about 30 questions, which the average person carries in the spiritual section of their brain, are printed, and distributed to the audience,—any one of which may be asked. One can readily see how this method would involve more study on the part of the preacher than a regular discourse. However, it is proving to be both interesting and beneficial. Any method that produces results without the sacrifice of principle is the method to be used.

The midweek prayer service has increased numerically lately,—and let's hope spiritually, as well. We have just finished Ephesians, studying the epistle under the sub-topics:—The Call, The Conduct, and The Conflict of the Church. Studied thus, Ephesians became a plainer, and a more helpful book.

Why not attend the prayer meetings, and help to lift yourself and your church to a higher level of usefulness in Godliness? "No one but God knows (until the church tries it) what a CHURCH IN PRAYER COULD DO." "Ye are the salt of the earth;" its preserving is left to us. Will it spoil because of US? Will we withhold that from the unsaved which is the savor of life unto life? I'm a discontented optimist. I'm glad things are as good as they are; but I'm sorry they are as bad as they are. If Christendom is yet to do much for the world, the accomplishment lies but in one direction—"answering our own prayers for the evangelization of the world, by personal work." "Thy Kingdom Come."

H. A. GOSSARD,
Church Correspondent.

An Easter Oversight

By Josephine Hanna

What a chance they had to catch him in his words—the Apostle Paul!

What a chance they had to stop his Easter story, once for all!

He had enemies to do it,—many a foe with stone and lash:

Aye, that soldier of the cross had foes knock the thing to smash.

Paul, did you not see the opening you gave them when you said

That so many men had seen the Savior—risen from the dead?

This one, that one, others also, until you their number raised

To above a good half-thousand, at the risen Lord amazed.

Lord, amazed?

Yes, and Paul, what chance it gave your many critics, when you said

Over half the men were living, still, who saw your living Head.

Passing strange they never thought to have it out with you, right then,—

Make you eat your words, or prove them by that half-five-hundred men.

For they did not lack the cunning, and they did not lack the will:

Had they else to keep them busy? Mayhap, miracles to still?

Was it that you carried with you Christ's own, all-sufficient proof

Of the truths you spake? Say, was it that from which they held aloof?

For this Easter—far adown the years from that—we at the grave,

Are rejoicing for its opened door through him who died to save;

Whilst upon our ears is echoing again, and yet again,

Witness of a risen Savior,—by that half-five-hundred men.

Logansport, Indiana.

OLD TIME REVIVAL AT PERU, INDIANA

February 26th to March 15th was about the shortest time we have ever experienced in the Peru Church. And while the time was short, it was the most profitable period that the Church has seen for many a long day. It was a time of real revival.

We were not wrong when we put the emphasis on the theme, "An Old Time Revival." It was not merely one of these modern day Evangelistic Campaigns, where shaking hands with the preacher constitutes the entrance into the Kingdom of God, but it was a time when hearts were torn and rent, and tears were shed over sins, and old wounds were healed, and wrongs made right. Not only these things were seen, but there has come over the entire church membership a feeling that the church is more than just a place to go and we are sure that these dates, February 26th to March 15th, 1931, will go down in the annals of the Peru church as a real starting point to heights which have never before been reached.

We certainly made no mistake when we obtained Brother R. Paul Miller as our evangelist. Fearless in proclaiming the Word; sympathetic in his understanding; kind in his dealing with the unsaved; friendly in his contact with the people; sincere in his prayer life; utterly companionable in the home: these are the marks of his life and work as we saw it day after day. His preaching brought conviction to the heart of the sinner and the Holy Spirit wrought the salvation of the soul. Especially do we wish to commend him as a Bible teacher. His Sunday afternoon studies made a great impression, not only upon our own people, but on the community at large. We pray God's blessing to follow him in his work.

The material results were as follows: First confessions—25; letters obtained—3; genuine reconsecrations—7. Had we been privileged to continue longer we are sure many more would have responded to the call, but we are sure that many of these will yet come as the direct leading of this period of revival.

We rejoice in the fact that many of the first confessions were young men. These will mean much to the work of the church, for there has been a lack of such here.

We were cheered with the presence of a number of the brethren in the ministry from the surrounding churches, as likewise by many of the local ministers. While no overwhelming crowds came during the meetings, yet the attendance was more than ordinary for the city of Peru.

The one thing that stands out in these meetings and which cannot be put upon paper in cold hard figures is the spiritual awakening of the church. At our prayer service last night we had more people than we have had at the midweek service for many a long day, and the prayer life is shown to be strengthened by the response that came when we were upon bended knee.

Pray with us for a continuation of the revival spirit in the days and weeks to come.

FRED C. VANATOR, Pastor,
Peru, Indiana.

THE REVIVAL AT PERU, INDIANA

We came here from Johnstown. This work at Peru is under our Home Mission Board. There is a beautiful structure erected here that is a credit to any church or community. It is somewhat large for the present congregation and Sunday school but we hope that it will not long remain thus. We believe that with the forward look that they are now getting, they will soon be using every available inch of space in the building. This church is prepared for the future in a real way. It is now up to all of us to make the future equal to foundation laid.

Brother Fred Vanator and his wife are making a tremendous impression on this community. I found that they held the finest of respect from all whom I met outside the church. Inside the church membership there is the greatest of confidence in the pastor and in the future of the work. The organization has been vastly improved and great strides have been made in the development of the young people which is the future of any church. Any pastor is a failure who does not build up the young people of his church. At a Sisterhood supper one evening I spoke to about fifty of the finest young women I ever saw. They are under the guidance of Sister Vanator and their daughter, Esther, and are doing fine things. The young men are being gathered into a fine class and we have every assurance that within five years Peru will be one of Indiana's strongest churches.

Brother Vanator is a hard worker. He is tireless in seeking the souls of men and caring for his flock. The men of his church are behind him to a man. He fills a very large place in affairs at Peru.

My home was with the preacher and his wife while there and it proved a happy time for all of us. Mrs. Miller was with us there for a few days during the meeting for which we were very glad. Peru is but seventy-five miles from our home, at Berne, Indiana.

Better and greater days are ahead of the Peru church and in the near future we expect them to be able to make their way independent of any aid from the Mission Board.

R. PAUL MILER.

CROWDING THE CROSS

We do not mean crowding to the Cross by sinners anxious to receive the cleansing power of the blood of Jesus Christ. We mean the crowding out of the Cross as a fact and as the cardinal doctrine of Christianity. If we were asked to put the finger upon the one thing which is causing impotence and discouragement in the Christian church today, we would put it upon the fact that the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ is crowded out.

It is not a modern movement at all. Paul knew very well that the Greek deemed the preaching of the Cross perfect folly. There are plenty today, some in Christian pulpits, who are quite Greek in this regard. One may attend a church a long, long time, and never once hear that Jesus Christ died for our sins.

Man's estimate of his righteousness has banished the Cross. The sense of sin is rare. Few Davids cry out, "Against thee, thee only have I sinned and done this evil in thy sight." Penitential prayers are novelties even in church. Confession of sin is as cold and formal, impersonal, and non-committal as taking up the collection. The average man (and woman) today is pretty well satisfied with his moral and spiritual standing. All this makes the Cross unnecessary. "Simply to Thy Cross I cling" is not true with them. They cling to their good deeds, their respectability, and general standing.

Last, to mention no others, the multitude of plans and movements now proposed and pressed with vigor, have relegated to the rear the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ as the great saving force in the world. Consciously or unconsciously the prevailing idea now is, not that "Jesus saves," but that man saves—not saves souls (an old-fashioned, unpleasant expression), but saves groups and classes and communities. It will be a great day when the Cross, with Christ as the great Substitute dying for our only Savior, is again preeminent in thought and preaching of the church.—Presbyterian.

Make sure that however good you may have some faults; that however dull may be, you may find out what they are and that, however slight they may be, had better make some patient effort to quit of them. Therefore see that no passes in which you do not make yourself somewhat better creature; and, in order to do that, find out first what you are now, you do not dare to do this, find out why you do not dare, and try to get strength of heart enough to look yourself fairly in the face, in mind as well as in body.—John Kin.

MEN'S BIBLE CLASS, FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH OF PHILADELPHIA

By William Stafford

In this church at 10th and Dauphin, in the basement you can find,

A Bible Class of Christian men of the best kind.

Brother Kimmel is the teacher, coming from the "Golden West,"

And we spend a happy hour, as we do with interest.

For he teaches every lesson, with a knowledge most profound.

And every Sunday they get better, we're glad to come around,

To hear the Old, Old Story, he can teach very good.

Then we go up stairs rejoicing, and in a happy mood.

But we must not forget the singing when we begin to shout,

If you come down here with sorrow, we will soon put it to rout.

Easter tide

By Albert Judson Fisher

*On Judah's hillside far away
An empty tomb is shown today
Wherein the Risen Master lay.*

*"Except the corn fall in the ground,
No golden fruitage can abound",
Spake Jesus of the grave profound.*

*"But if it fall to earth and die,
From where its shapeless fragments lie
Shall spring a harvest for the sky".*

*He, who to weeping Mary said,
"Your brother sleeps; he is not dead",
Himself laid down his thorn-pierced head.*

*Not from his rock-hewn tomb alone
Did angel roll away the stone
To prove that death was overthrown.*

*He broke the seal of every grave
On hillside, plain, and 'neath the wave
Where silent forms its waters lave.*

*Ascending from the realm of night
The Christ disclosed to mortal sight
The pathway to the hills of light;*

*And casting off the bonds of clay
He opened wide the gates of day
That crown the Mighty King's highway.*

*Hail! hail your Lord this Easter morn!
For him no more the cruel thorn;
Let diadems his brow adorn!*

*Room for the King of Glory! Room!
Ye lilies burst in snowy bloom;
Fit emblem of the riven tomb.*

you will see the smiling faces of a happy class of men, we meet every Sunday morning, at a quarter of ten. Get your care and trouble, and join in this happy band, go to the Revival Meetings, and for us take your stand. At the time, and place my friend, it will be too late when you're under the sod, in our class and then get saved and we'll have a pass, right up to the throne of God.

These days of unemployment, when our hearts are torn with dread, toss on sleepless pillows, wondering where we are going to earn our bread, do not forget that Jesus can and will supply our need; pray to him in faith believing, he surely will take heed. We gather around these tables, in this light of feast and song, do not forget the poor, in the church, and in the throng. Hearts are torn with sorrow, as they hear their children sob, and their daddy's purse is empty, and cannot get a job.

Dear friends we're glad you're here tonight to enjoy the splendid food, hope you will like our company, and have us in a happy mood, don't fail to stay for the revival meeting, which will soon begin, Brother Ashman is here tonight to put a battle with sin, let us all get behind him, and do the very best we can, bring our friends and neighbors here, is every good plan. Let us all be saved and ready, as our journey here we plod, some day we'll all meet around the throne in the city of our God.

OUR LITTLE READERS

THE JUNIORS' EASTER

By Ona Lee Sams

Junior in the Christian Endeavor was much too excited to do anything but wait for the Easter surprise Miss Brown had to have for them. It was Palm Sunday and she announced they would have a different Easter service than any other, and that meant something for the society, for they had had most every service one could imagine since Miss Brown had been in charge of them. There were Scripture verses written on eggshells and on Easter lilies; they'd had a little pageant, but this year it was a little unusual.

Writing instructions to your mother, Miss Brown said on dismissal at the Sunday meeting "and you'll all know what to do."

Marjorie chattered to her mother excitedly about the service. "Mother," she said, "could it be? Do you know? I bet it is." But mother didn't know, so the service was going to be a surprise and the other mothers as well.

It was a long week in a way to the church. Of course there were Easter pieces prepared for Sunday school, eggs to be colored and clothes to get ready, but it seemed that Saturday would never arrive. And yet it did, just as all looked-for days do. Marjorie was up early and looking for the mail man long before it was time for him to come up the walk. And yes! there was the letter from Miss Brown for on the outside of the envelope was printed neatly, "The Junior Christian Endeavor of the Brethren Church." Mother simply had to stop her household duties and listen as Marjorie herself read the letter which was as follows:

Dear Junior Endeavorer:
We will meet at the church 5:30 A. M., Easter Sunday morning. Please be on time. Sincerely, Miss Brown.

"Five thirty"? Echoed Mother. "Do you think you can get up so soon?" "Of course I can if you'll set the alarm," replied her daughter, "and besides I'll be much too anxious to sleep. Oh, I'm sure it's something lovely."

But a busy day was ahead and Marjorie set about helping Mother with the household tasks, wondering all the while what Miss Brown was going to have for them. At last the busy day was ended, and Mother insisted on Marjorie going to bed early. The first stars had just begun to peep in a velvety, dark sky as she looked out the window and breathed a prayer for what Easter meant to all the world.

Five thirty found every Junior at the church the next morning. It was a beautiful Easter morning too; dew sparkled on every blade of grass; perfume of spring flowers was in the air, and Miss Brown thought she'd never seen a sight as beautiful as the Juniors, bright and happy in their Easter things, waiting for the service. They wondered where the service was to be, for the church wasn't even open. Then around the corner came a huge bus, the kind they always had for the picnic each year, and it stopped right at the church corner!

"I know you're anxious to know, Juniors," said Miss Brown, as happy as they were, "so I'm ready to tell you now. We're going to Boulder Hill for our sunrise service this morning, and come on, pile in, or it won't be a sunrise meeting."

Happily they scrambled in and in fifteen minutes they had reached Boulder Hill, where the seniors many times held roasts, picnics and such things. Miss Brown herself led the meeting this morning, and to say it was a perfect meeting hardly expresses it. A bright, rosy sun came peeping over the hilltops just as they sang "He Arose," and the little voices, young and enthusiastic, sang as though they were really glad that he arose many years ago on a glorious resurrection morning. Streaks of orange, lavender and red gilded the sky and birds began to sing in the dawn. It was a happy Junior society which wended their way home when the service was over. It would be time for breakfast when they reached home and then soon time for Sunday school. What a lovely service it had been! They all agreed it was really the best they'd ever had, so that Miss Brown said next year they might have another.

"Happy Easter," called Marjorie as she went in the house, as Mother, smiling upon her, met her at the door, anxious to hear about everything.

"And Happy Easter to you," echoed the rest, as the bus rolled down the street in the morning sunlight.

Washington, D. C.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

JOHNSON-BLAKE—At the Oak Hill Brethren Parsonage, on Tuesday night, February 24, 1931, occurred the wedding of Norman Johnson of Oak Hill and Orpha Blake of the Salem neighborhood. The bride is a member of the Oak Hill Brethren church. While her husband is a member of another church he is a loyal attendant and supporter of the Oak Hill work. They will make their home in Oak Hill. The best wishes of their friends go with them throughout life. Ceremony by, FREEMAN ANKRUM.

COLEMAN-MCKINNEY—On our last Sunday in Oak Hill, March the first, 1931, occurred the wedding of Martin Coleman of Oak Hill and Edith McKinney also of Oak Hill. These two young people are loyal members and dependable workers in the Oak Hill church. The bride is a daughter of the Sunday school Superintendent, a teacher in the Sunday school and one of the church pianists. They are worthy of the best wishes of their many friends.

Ceremony by FREEMAN ANKRUM.

IN THE SHADOW

CAMPBELL—T. C. Campbell passed to his reward on February 22, 1931, after a short illness. He had been in poor health for several years. At the time of his death Mrs. Campbell was confined to her bed and could not attend the burial service. In a few days she was able to be up and about the house but soon suffered a relapse and on March 11 slipped out of this life. Brother and Sister Campbell were charter members of the Red Hill church and with their passing the charter members living are reduced to three. Some years ago Brother Campbell and wife moved into Roanoke and placed their letters with the Roanoke church where they remained in fellowship until their departure. Funeral services of identical nature were conducted by J. E. Patterson and the writer. H. E. EPPLEY.

CLINE—Mrs. George Cline passed away to be with her Lord, March 8, 1931. Sister Cline had been a life long member of the Brethren Church, and at the age of 72 years was as interested and loved her Church as much as ever. Funeral services were held in the First Brethren church of Hagerstown with interment at Fahrney Cemetery. Services by the pastor. F. G. COLEMAN.

Hagerstown, Maryland.

MINNICH—Mrs. Walter Minnich passed away to be with her Lord on March 8, 1931. Mrs. Minnich had been a patient sufferer for many years, but through it all she held to her faith in the Lord. Services were held at the home with interment at Rose Hill Cemetery. Services by the pastor. F. G. COLEMAN, Hagerstown, Maryland.

KIMMEL—The writer of this sketch conducted the funeral service of Brother Julius H. Kimmel of Dayton, Ohio, February 28th, in the presence of a large concourse of friends assembled in the home. Brother Kimmel had reached the age of 64 years. The son of pious and godly parents, Michael and Sarah Kimmel, their son, Julius, spent his early years on a farm west of Dayton. Early in life he gave his heart to Christ and became a member of the Bear Creek church. As his life companion he chose Cleora Haldeman who was also a member of the Bear Creek church. Four children were born into their home—two sons and two daughters, all of whom survive and mourn with their mother the death of husband and father. He was a graduate of Ashland College, being a classmate of Judge Frank Switzer, Dr. Joseph Kimmel, Dr. J. Allen Miller, Charles Deffenbaugh and others well known in the denomination. Following his graduation he chose Dayton as the field in which he pursued a business career. He was recognized as an energetic and capable man in a business way, having held during his life, positions involving large responsibility. During the last five years of his life he was an invalid, pathetically helpless, and demanding great care and ministry from his family. Through all the years of his residence in Dayton he was affiliated with the Dayton Brethren church. In the struggling, formative years of the work he distinguished himself as loyal, devoted, and capable. In addition to serving the church as Sunday school superintendent for a number of years, he served in practically all other capacities in the church. Of a gentle, retiring, humble nature, he was always agreeable in the church, and greatly loved and esteemed by his loved ones in the home.

Death came to him as a deliverance and release from long, testing, patient waiting. Through the long, trying years his faithful wife manifested a Christian courage and fortitude which might well be the coveted object of every child of God. Truly Sister Cleora Kimmel, like the woman of old, did all she could, all of the time. For the writer, it was not easy to say the last words over Julius Kimmel. Our acquaintance extended back over many years and we were friends. Our sympathy and prayers go with the wife and family. WM. H. BEACHLER.

ANDERSON—Charles E. Anderson, son of Charles and Mary Anderson, was born July 29, 1858, and died March 10th, 1931, aged 72 years, 7 months and 9 days. On November 2, 1882 he was united in marriage to Miss Callie Kiblinger, to which union were born two children. Ora Effie died in infancy and Ollie B. at the age of 17. Surviving him are his wife, one brother, Joseph, of Piqua, Ohio; Mrs. Margaret Malcom of New Carlisle, Ohio, and several nieces and nephews. Mr. Anderson was born near New Carlisle and lived his entire life in this locality. During the last two years he suffered three paralytic attacks, the last one being of short duration, resulting in his passing out of this house of clay to another realm. Funeral services were held in the Mennonite church by the writer, assisted by Elder S. Lambert of the Mennonite church.

H. C. FUNDERBURG.

Idle Tales

By R. R. Teeter, D.D., Business Manager of The Brethren Publishing Company

Such was the belief of the disciples when Mary returned from the sepulcher of her Lord with the report on that first Easter day that "The Lord is risen." Just why the disciples should have been so dull of comprehension concerning the realization of this great event which had been so plainly taught them by the Lord himself is difficult to understand; but it is encouraging to know that when they once did have brought to their minds the things Jesus had said to them concerning his death and his resurrection there was nothing in all the world that could again shake their confidence or destroy their faith.

The force of these supposedly "idle tales" was such that the conduct of Christ's disciples after his crucifixion was just the opposite of what might have been expected.

The natural thing for them to do would have been to disband; for the one bond that had held them together for a period of three years had been severed. Their leader, their inspiration was gone; and if they had acted according to the ordinary laws of human conduct they would have said to themselves, Let us go back to our fishing-boats and to our tax-gathering, and seek safety in separation, and nurse our sorrow apart.

Such would have been a natural result following the death of an ordinary leader, and providing death was the end. But the disciples of Christ held together. What mysterious force or power was it that acted upon them contrary to nature? No matter how much they might have idealized their Master such a disgraceful, such an ignominious death would have shattered that ideal had his death ended all. But the "idle tales" of the women had first recalled them from their half-conscious stupor, and then after coming again in personal contact with their Lord, whom the "grave could not hold," they were in no further danger of losing the faith their Master had taken such great pains to build up in their lives.

As the early disciples learned to reflect upon the fact of Christ's resurrection, its riches unfolded themselves by degrees, and the earliest aspect of its "power" was the light it shed on his person and work. Taught by it, as we have seen, they recognized him for the Messiah whom they had long expected, and for something more—the Incarnate Son of God. That phase of their joy may belong to us as well as to the early disciples.

Had Christ's body been placed in Joseph's tomb and there remained until it "saw corruption", he might still remain a great teacher whose precepts would be worth following in any age; but all that is deepest in his own words about himself, and his relation to men, would have to be sorrowfully put to one side. But if he, after such assertions and claims, rose from the dead, and rising, dieth no more, then for the last time, and in the mightiest tones, the voice that rent the heavens at his baptism and his transfiguration proclaims: "This is my beloved Son; hear ye him."

Our joy in his resurrection is the joy of those to whom he is therein declared to be the Son of God, and who see in Christ risen their accepted sacrifice, and their ever-living Redeemer.

Such was the earliest effect of the resurrection of Jesus, if we can trust the records of apostolic preaching; and the power of Christ's resurrection as the pattern and pledge of ours is the final source of the joy that may fill our hearts as we turn away from that empty sepulcher.

The world has guessed and feared, or guessed and hoped, but always guessed and doubted the life beyond; but to those to whom the resurrection of Christ is a fact their own future life is a fact. Here we have a solid certainty, and here alone. A deep indestructible instinct prophesies in every breast of a future. But all is vague and doubtful. The one proof of a life beyond the grave is the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

The hope that banishes earthly sorrow springs forth from the tomb of him who "bears all our griefs." Therefore let us be glad with the gladness of men plucked from a dark abyss of doubt and uncertainty, and planted on the rock of solid certainty; and let us rejoice with joy unspeakable, and laden with a prophetic weight of glory, as we ring out the ancient message which to the disciples at first seemed but "idle tales" but which proved to be a message that would ring down through the ages with the Easter morning's greeting, "The Lord is risen indeed!"

Ashland, Ohio.

Vol. LIII
Number 15

April 11
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Great Souls in Worship

HE Harp of a Thousand Strings comes to glorious music in hours of worship on the Lord's Day.

The touch of God's presence on the harp strings is wonderful. Sensing God is great business. Sensing God is worship with assembled fellow travelers, mingling voices with them in prayer and praise, singing the stately hymns and waiting reverently in His holy presence is a high privilege that great souls cherish.

Good ministers of Jesus Christ, great souls, chosen vessels, men of prayer and spiritual power, men who walk with God, men who have waited long in the Holy of Holies with come forth with message saturated with the grandeur of truth which comfort the heart, illuminate the mind, quicken and reinforce high purposes and lofty aims and lift the soul to holy living and great endeavor.

God's passion for souls is so great that he has arranged that one day in seven shall be spent in friendship and communion with him.

What folly to permit material interests or pleasure, however seemingly harmless they may appear to be, to take the golden hours of fellowship with God.

People who know not God can not understand the hungerings and appreciation of trusting souls for God and sacred things. "They wonder why they run not to the same excess of riot." Why should they feed on husks when there is bread in the Father's house, abundant and to spare.

A year's Sabbaths are to great souls so many mountains of transfiguration. It is very great to know the art of worship.—Anonymous.

Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee. O let the nations be glad and sing for joy: for thou shalt judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon earth. Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee. Then shall the earth yield her increase; and God, even our own God, shall bless us. God shall bless us, and all the ends of the earth shall fear him.—Psalms 67:3-7.

Wet Ohio Newspaper is Well Answered

(We publish the following story from the Ohio "American Issue" as illustrative of the deception being practiced by the wet newspapers throughout the land. It might help some if there were more men who had the courage to throw into their teeth their lying statements regarding the Prohibition and the cause of crime. It is the old wet story. The evils of illicit liquor are charged up against Prohibition by this and other daily papers, which know better.—Editor.)

The Columbus Dispatch is prone to load upon prohibition all the evils of society. With the Dispatch liquor is not blamed, but prohibition is held responsible. The makers, sellers, buyers, and users of illicit booze are given clean slates. But the odium of the Dispatch is on those who brought about prohibition and are maintaining it, and officials who enforce it.

A short time ago some young people in Indiana were holding a liquor party, and as a result a young girl was killed and a young man was sent to prison. Commenting on the affair, the Dispatch published the following editorial, which is along the line of its expressions on prohibition, and shows its unfairness. The editorial was headed, "Another Product of the Times," and it follows:

What the Dispatch Said

The type of "wild party that ended in the death of a high school girl and the life imprisonment of a youth of good family in Indiana is distinctly a product of these modern times. There always have been booze orgies and the past generation had cause to be anxious about the morals of its youth, but never before in the history of this nation has anything approximating present-day conditions existed.

It is futile to attempt to convince those who have no access to the youthful and "smart" sets that the sort of party at which Arlene Draves lost her life are of more or less common occurrence and that they are attended by a class of young men and women who, 15 years ago, would have considered it a disgrace to be even suspected of indulging in that sort of thing. They prefer to believe that such orgies are rare and are participated in only by the sons and daughters of low-class families. This is as far from the truth as the earth is from the sun.

The old-time stigma attached to drinking and getting drunk apparently exists no longer. The girl who once would have been ostracized by her friends for drinking now is a "good fellow." Parents who once would have died of shame if their children so much as touched liquor now countenance "wild parties" in their own homes or elsewhere, or refuse to believe that such things are possible. Arlene Draves in her grave and Virgil Kirkland in his cell are the victims of a colossal blunder by their elders who, in their zeal to wipe out the saloon, succeeded only in moving it into the American home and they have been unable since to find a means of dislodging it.

A few days later the Dispatch published a communication which it received from Ira C. Allamong, of Martingville, Clinton county. The communication was suggested by the Dispatch editorial, and we leave it to the unbiased reader, wet or dry as to which made the best case. Mr. Allamong said:

Well Answered

It seems to me that your editorial in Thursday's issue of the Dispatch is somewhat beside the mark. You say that the type of "wild party" which ended in the death of a high school girl and the imprisonment of a youth is a "product of the times," and attempt to lay the blame at the door of prohibition. In this, you are drawing unfair conclusions and casting reflection upon the young people of today as a whole. The fact remains that it is not prohibition that is responsible for the so-called evils of modern times as much as it is a liquor dominated public press spreading misrepresentations. One of your correspondents who styles himself a "Crusader" refers to the Anti-Saloon League bossed legislature but says nothing about the editors and newspapers who are the representatives of the liquor interests and who spread the propaganda of their masters. Any one who has lived in the days of the open saloon and remembers the circumstances that existed then knows that a lot of this newspaper talk is also as "far from the truth as the earth is from the sun. Modification or repeal just means the return of the old saloon eventually. If the enemies of prohibition have something better to offer now is the time to bring it out.

Any person who cared to do so could quote scores of college officials, professors, teachers and others, in close connection with young people who would support Mr. Allamong in his defense of the boys and girls.

If the Dispatch wants any defense of its defenseless attitude, it must go to the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and other wet organizations, and other well known dripping wet newspapers.

"PROHIBITION DOOMED UNLESS 'DRYS' WAKE UP," DECLARES JUDGE A. A. BRUCE

"The 'Drys' of Illinois, as well as those of many other states, comprising, as I firmly believe, a great majority of our citizens, are suffering from a 'Fools' Paradise' complex," declared Judge Andrew A. Bruce, former Chief Justice of the State of North Dakota, President of the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology, in an interview with a representative of the American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation.

"The repeal of the State Enforcement Law in Illinois should be blamed not upon the liquor interests but directly to the many thousands of stay-at-home 'Drys' who let last November's referendum go 'wet' without any adequate defense.

"It is true that the million 'wet' votes last November, actually fell short by 5,000 of the total 'wet' vote in a similar referendum eight years ago. It is also true that the last November 'wet' vote was only 34.1 percent of the total vote of the state for President. But, these figures cannot obscure the startling fact that those who believe in Prohibition polled only a trifle more than one-half the vote cast against Prohibition in that election.

"It is time the friends of Prohibition, everywhere, came out of their trance. We are living in a Democracy and not a 'Fools' Paradise."

"Prohibition has no right to expect or demand special privilege or indulgence at the polls or in our Legislature. If we cannot muster our strength in the accredited way, elect men who will enforce the law and defeat every attempt to nullify or repeal our protective legislation, we shall be defeated and, fairly, we shall have no right to complain.

"In my opinion, the voters of Illinois never intended that the present Prohibition laws of the state should be repealed, and satisfactory legislation could be put in its place. The repeal, therefore, of our enforcement legislation is an act of Anarchy and a nation-wide invitation to the thugs of the entire country to swarm into Chicago and the state at large.

"This action of Legislature, if ratified by the Governor's signature, or without, should notice that Illinois secedes from the Union so far as concerns the Amendment to the Federal Constitution which was adopted by the largest majority in the history of America.

"I believe that, more than any one else, the business men of Chicago, Illinois, are responsible for this defeat of law and order in the state. Their influence and their support of fair and honest enforcement will more quickly redeem the good name of the great western city and commonwealth than any other single development. Rightly forced, Prohibition would prove a boon to business and would go far towards insuring the success of our great World's Fair. This defeat shall wake up the hundreds of thousands of 'Drys' who have done little or nothing on behalf of their principles, since National Prohibition was enacted, it will prove a blessing in disguise, and turn the pendulum of public sentiment back toward a reasonable and efficient administration of our Eighteenth Amendment.

"Of course, it goes without saying that the 'Drys', if they would 'come back', must meet liquor misrepresentation with facts, and must do it not merely in the courts and the Church but as widely, through the press, as the 'wets' have, for years, been carrying on their flood of propaganda through the newspapers.

"Our next Illinois Legislature can, and will, establish law and order, through a new and up-to-date enforcement act, if the 'Drys' will really unite their forces and register their will at the ballot box."

"When God speaks he likes no other voice to break the stillness; and hence the power that has always been given to solitude in true religious life. And there is no less more worth insisting on in these days of ours than this: When God wants to speak with man, he wants that man to be alone. The visions which have meant most to men and through them to their fellows, have come to them in the quiet places."

IN THIS NUMBER

Steps in the Way to Life and Fellowship—Editor, .....
Editorial Review, .....
Why Teach and Practice Trine Immersion—S. M. Whetstone, .....
Some Brethren Church Leaders—M. M. Shively, .....
Studies in the Scriptures—C. F. Yoder, .....
Significant News and Views, .....
The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon, .....
The Superintendent in the Sunday School—Mrs. C. L. Royer, .....
Editor's Notes on the S. S. Lesson, .....
An Open Letter to C. E. Societies, .....
Religion in Chinese Schools—Moling Tsiang, .....
News from the Field, .....	10
Our Little Readers, .....
Our Readers' Forum, .....

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

and all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Short Talks by the Editor on Steps in the Way to Life and Fellowship

V. DIVINE WORSHIP

Soon as a soul has found his way to Christ and into membership in the church of Christ, attention should be given to divine worship. Nothing is more natural and fitting to the new-born of God than acts of worship, and nothing is more necessary for spiritual well-being. The word "worship" is a shortened form of "worth-ship," and means giving honor to, or adoring one who is worthy. Worship springs up within the heart of the worshiper as naturally as the earth stirs with warmth in response to the shining of the summer's sun. He who has experienced the saving grace of God does not need to be urged or argued into giving in homage and adoration before the crucified and risen Lord. Love for his Lord fills his very being, praise leaps to his lips, and reverence and humility prostrate the form before him. There is nothing forced or superficial about it; it is all brought about by the moving of the heart. The love of Christ constraineth him; he cannot stand stiff and unmoved in the presence of the Lord and Loving One. Aye, no one can, who has really come to know God. We all, like one of old, cry out, "O come let us worship and bow down: let us kneel before the Lord our Maker" (Psa.

59:2). And our Lord pronounced this blessing upon the "pure in heart," that "they shall see God" (Matt. 5:8). Only such shall have audience with him and shall be able to worship God in a manner that will be well-pleasing unto him.

The Elements of Worship

There may be a number of different elements of worship, but there are three that should be universally recognized and employed. (1) There is praise, according to the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews (13:15): "By him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips giving thanks to his name." And by Paul we are counselled as to the wisdom of "... teaching and admonishing one another with psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord" (Col. 3:16). (2) Prayer is a prominent element in worship. Paul, after urging the Christians of Ephesus to arm themselves for the conflict, concludes: "Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints" (Eph. 6:18). What a wide range such prayer covers! How unselfish! We cannot wonder that such prayer constitutes acceptable worship. (3) But devotional Bible reading is also an essential element of the Christian's worship. Hear these words coming to us across the ages giving admonition, as important now as when first spoken: "This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: ..." (Josh. 1:8). "Search the scriptures" (John 5:39), said Jesus, and Paul admonished: "Study to show thyself approved unto God" (2 Tim. 2:15). The Psalmist (119:11) intimates that he had been reading the Scriptures habitually and with reverence, for he says: "Thy word have I hid in mine heart, ..." And a little later he expresses the appeal of the yearning, worshipping heart to see the wonders of God's truth: "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law" (Psa. 119:18). Such devout reveling in the Word of God should be a part of every Christian's daily worship.

The Purpose of Worship
The zealous Christian needs not to be urged to worship, for it is well for us all to be aware of the fact that we are called to engage in worship and that worship is necessary for spiritual welfare. It is urged upon us by the inspired apostle Paul, who writes: "... in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto the Lord" (Phil. 4:6). Worship is necessary to keep strength renewed. As in Isaiah (40:31): "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint." It is necessary to the final success of our Christian life, for Luke 21:36 says: "Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be able to stand before the Son of man" (Luke 21:36). And prayer will help to keep us from falling, and Peter, having learned from experience the danger of falling, admonishes us to do everything possible to avoid it, saying: "... brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things ye shall never fall" (2 Peter 1:10).

Conditions of Acceptable Worship
The first scriptural statement that comes to mind characterizing acceptable worship is from the lips of our Lord himself: "The hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him. God is a spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth" (John 4:23, 24). Sincerity and spiritual insight go together and they both characterize acceptable worship and are built into the life by true worship. Only the spiritually minded can discern spiritual truth. Paul says: "But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are spiritually discerned" (1 Cor. 2:14). Spirituality is necessary to true worship. (2) Acceptable worship must also be characterized by faith. Hear the Word: "But without faith it is impossible to please God: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Heb. 11:6). (3) Moreover purity of heart is necessary to render acceptable worship. The Psalmist is convinced of it, for he said: "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me" (Psa. 66:18). Again we read: "But iniquities have separated between you and your God, and

Where Worship?

(1) Worship in private—in the sanctuary of the heart. Jesus did. "And in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed unto a solitary place, and there prayed" (Mark 1:35). And he advised his disciples to do it. "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly" (Matt. 6:6). (2) In the home. A family altar ought to be in every home. Every child ought to be permitted to grow up in a religious environment, with religious truth planted in his mind and the habit of worship established in his heart. Abraham maintained that kind of a home, and because of it God made of him a confidant and a means of blessing to all ages. (3) In public. Jesus set the example of public worship. Luke (4:16) tells us that "as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day." He had the habit of attending divine worship in the public meeting places of his day, and not only attending but participating in the various forms of worship. We are to follow his example. And Paul warns us not to neglect "the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, ..." (Heb. 10:25).

When Worship?

The Christian is admonished to worship continually, that is, never to be without the spirit of worship. (See Luke 18:1; Eph. 6:18; 1 Thess. 5:17.) He should worship daily and regularly. (See Psa. 5:3; 55:17; Dan. 6:10.) And at the stated times of public worship all who love the Lord Jesus should gather in his sanctuary. Hear the call—"O come let us worship" (Psa. 95:8). "Lift up your hands in the sanctuary, and bless the Lord" (Psa. 134:2). Let us "forsake not the assembling of ourselves together" at the hour of worship, and let us pray and sing "with the spirit and with the understanding" (1 Cor. 14:15).

EDITORIAL REVIEW

We wish to acknowledge with gratitude several commendations of our special Foreign Mission number of the Evangelist. We are indebted to the Foreign Board and particularly their representative, Brother C. H. Ashman, for cooperation in providing material.

We have learned, though not directly, that Brother J. L. Gingrich's revival meeting in the Third church of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, resulted in twenty-five confessions, four additions by letter, nine reconsecrations and one life service recruit.

We are in receipt of a number of announcements of pre-Easter services, some of them elaborately printed. One such comes from Meyersdale, Pennsylvania, where Brother Willis E. Ronk is pastor and where a communion service was announced for Easter Sunday night. It is a splendid way to climax the Easter celebration.

Prof. and Mrs. A. J. McClain spent Palm Sunday in Pittsburgh and Passion week at Berlin, Pennsylvania, where Brother McClain is giving a week of lectures in the Brethren church and where Brother Albert Lantz is pastor. Prof. McClain's absence from Ashland explains the absence of his page from the Evangelist this week.

In a personal communication from Brother W. I. Duker, he tells us that everything is going splendidly with him and his good people of the Elkhart, Indiana, church. With the quarterly cash offering in April they are expecting to retire all that remains of the indebtedness on the first unit of their new church and have a bit to apply on the parsonage debt.

At our Cooperative Brethren church in Columbus, Ohio, the pastor, Brother D. R. Murray, conducted a week of pre-Easter services, as we noticed by the announcement in the weekly calendar, making special use of stereopticon pictures and song slides. He also made appeal to the children by the use of object lessons. Brother Murray is exercising an earnest and constructive leadership in that church and the people seem to be responding nicely.

Brother A. V. Kimmell began on Monday night following Easter a week of Bible lectures under the auspices of the Cambria County C. E. Union in the Conemaugh, Pennsylvania, church, of which Brother W. H. Schaffer is the pastor. The Sunday school of that church has been hustling for an increased attendance, and succeeding splendidly. On March 22nd, the last date for which we have seen a record, the attendance was 218.

On a recent post card communication from Brother A. T. Wirick, we learn that the work is going good at both Ardmore and North Liberty, Indiana, both of which churches he serves as pastor. To quote him, he says: "We have had full houses both here and at North Liberty all winter. Our Sunday school has run up to 175. This is my third pastorate at both of these churches, and I hope it will be my best." We are promised a report soon of the revival that closed at Ardmore on Easter Sunday.

One of the splendid lay leaders of the brotherhood recently wrote: "We greatly enjoy the Evangelist. May God bless you in your labors to make Christ known and to build up the believers of our church." Our efforts are limited to the number of homes the Evangelist is permitted to enter with its message of instruction and inspiration, and we cannot well reach new homes except through the efforts of our friends. Will you not intercede for us, if there are homes in your church where the church paper does not enter?

One of our leading pastors wrote recently: "Am much pleased with the Evangelist. It is growing better all the time. Our people share with me in this. Recently I visited one of our men. He had just finished reading his copy. And he said about the Evangelist—'I wish it were bigger, it is all so good.'" We thank this good brother and friend for his kind words and rejoice, not for selfish reasons, that the Evangelist is meeting the spiritual needs of men. Our church paper is not a one-man creation, but an institution to which many are making contribution continually. credit for its success is to the leadership of the entire brotherhood and we have a right to rejoice together in it. And the paper be made both bigger and better by the larger cooperation of varied interests of the church.

The Fillmore church of Southern California, has experienced real revival under the evangelistic leadership of Brother A. L. pastor of the church at LaVerne. Both the pastor, Brother Ogden, and the evangelist write their views of the campaign both were highly pleased with the result. There were twenty confessions and baptisms, twenty-seven of which became members of the Fillmore church. Of equal importance was the fact that church members themselves received in being brought together in a spirit of love and forgiveness of past differences. When one hundred percent of the members of a church rededicate themselves to Christ, you may expect God to use that church. dedication has been really sincere. The young pastor and his are given much credit for the fine work they are doing and for aggressive leadership they are exercising at this place. They have appreciated the services of Brother Lynn, who so powerfully preached the Word, and also the services of the song leader, Brother Cecil Snyder.

The First church of Philadelphia has enjoyed an evangelistic campaign with Brother Charles H. Ashman of Johnstown with the pastor, Brother A. V. Kimmell, to form a strong evangelistic team and with a thoroughly alive and evangelistic spirit to give hearty cooperation. Only the most sincere and devoted persistent activity has enabled the First church to maintain and to step forward in the midst of the changed community that has taken place. The field is hard but God is ably willing to meet their faithfulness and to crown it with success he has done. There were forty-three persons to respond to the appeal of the evangelist, some to reconsecrate their lives to God and some to seek church membership. The pastor reports that there will be twenty to twenty-five additions to the church as a result of this campaign. Brother Kimmell, who served as a leader, had completed his first year as pastor of that church at the close of the campaign and the event was fittingly celebrated. Brother Ashman, the evangelist, had served this church two weeks as a lecturer last year.

Dr. K. M. Monroe gives us an installment of Seminary lectures this week, the first item of which tells of the visit of a Gospel Team to our Kentucky missions over the Easter holidays. It will be recalled that previous announcement was made to the effect that the Seminary professors had agreed to turn into the Seminary Dormitory Fund offerings received above expenses for their Bible Conference work. Professor Stuckey has made a valuable contribution to that fund. Our readers will be interested in the series of public lectures to be given under the auspices of the seminary. They are as follows: April 8, Dean J. Allen Miller on "Mormonism"; April 15, Dr. L. S. Bauman, on "The Modern Tongues Movement"; April 22, Prof. A. J. McClain, on "Spiritualism"; April 29, Dr. K. M. Monroe, on "Spiritism"; and May 6, Prof. M. A. Stuckey, on "Christian Science." It will be of interest to note that it is the aim of the Seminary to bring these lectures out in book form. These lectures will be given on Wednesday evenings at 8:15, in the Ashland Brethren church on Park Street, and if any neighboring brethren wish to attend they will be welcomed.

Dr. E. E. Jacobs, president of Ashland College, reports that at the recent meeting of the Ohio College Association in Columbus, our own school was elected to membership. The friends of the college rejoice, we are sure, at the steadily growing recognition of the increased connections that make for influence that Ashland is enjoying under the leadership of President Jacobs and his able collaborators in education. There is a sense in which the "sheepskin" a student carries away at graduation is a symbol of the general recognition that has been accorded the school. Therefore, the growing influence of Ashland College in educational circles adds to the worth of the graduation certificates and degrees that are being given out to students from year to year.

(Continued on page 9)

Why Teach and Practice Triune Immersion?

By S. M. Whetstone

dealing with this subject we will have to pass over important subjects as, "Hearing," "Faith," "Repentance" and "Confession." We will begin with the Great Commission: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Words could hardly be plainer than this scripture. As we study the plan of salvation we note that "love and obedience" have a very prominent place in the whole process. Our Lord says, "If a man love me, he will keep my sayings" (John 14:23). Nothing could be plainer. There is one test of love, and that is obedience. The child who really loves his mother will obey her. The Master makes it still clearer, "He that hath kept my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me" (John 14:21). Now, who is it that loves the Lord? There can be but one answer, "He that hath kept my commandments, and keepeth them." In other words, where love for the Master exists, there will obedience be found. The Lord again, "He that loveth me not, keepeth not my sayings" (John 14:24). We also have this other statement: "For this is the love of God, that we KEEP his commandments" (1 John 5:3). In other words, LOVE AND OBEDIENCE are found in the same heart.

The Necessity

Why should there be any question about the necessity of the rite of baptism? Why should there be any question about the necessity of TEACHING and PRACTICING this rite? Certainly, if we are going to follow the New Testament in our TEACHING and PRACTICE, we must not neglect this very important teaching. When our Lord sent forth his apostles to TEACH and DISCIPLE all nations, he directed that penitent BELIEVERS should be "baptized into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." He also very clearly said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16). Then the Holy Ghost, speaking through the apostle Peter on the day of Pentecost, told those inquiring after their duty to "be baptized everyone of you" (Acts 2:38). When the eunuch listened to the preaching of Philip, he became so impressed that he asked to be baptized. Philip told him that if he BELIEVED he could receive the rite. After making the CONFESSION, he was baptized (Acts 8:6-8). As soon as the Samaritans BELIEVED the preaching of Philip, they were baptized (Acts 8:12). Cornelius, was a "devout man" and "feared God and gave alms to God alway," yet he submitted to the rite of New Testament baptism (Acts 10:48). Saul, who became a Gospel preacher, was instructed by Ananias to be baptized, and he obeyed (Acts 22:16).

The fact is, that during the time of the apostles no one dreamed of accepting Christ as his Savior without being baptized. Jesus had set the example (Matt. 3:

13-16), and every man who preached the Gospel seems to have something to say about baptism. Not one, tries to cover the doctrine up. The necessity of the rite was never in question. Rather, wherever Christianity was introduced, Christian baptism was recognized as a necessity.

The Applicant

In the Great Commission our Lord places "BELIEF" side by side with baptism. He said to his apostles "He that BELIEVETH and is BAPTIZED shall be saved" (Mark 16:16). They were to do their best to reach every soul with their message, but only BELIEVERS were to be baptized. As they went about their work they met two classes who were not subjects for the rite of baptism, —those who WOULD NOT believe, and those who COULD NOT believe. To this last class belongs the infants, who were not capable of understanding. There is not a single instance in the Word where baptism was administered to any one who was not old enough to choose for himself. By the very virtue of the atonement, all infants are saved and need not be baptized. Regarding the little ones, our Lord says: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 19:14), and this without either faith or baptism. The age for baptism comes when the child has sufficient understanding to exercise FAITH, make the good CONFESSION and OBEY the command.

The Purpose

Baptism is an act of obedience, through which one enters Christ, for Paul says that "so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death" (Rom. 6:3). He brings out the same principle in Galatians 3:27, "For as many of you as have been baptized INTO Christ have put on Christ." This scripture simply says that the way for a believer to get into Christ is by being baptized into him. Baptism is the visible, initiatory rite of the church. It is more than the outward sign of an inward initiation,—it is the visible act of the initiation. The work of GRACE in the heart involves FAITH, REPENTANCE, CONFESSION, REGENERATION, and BAPTISM; these may be regarded as parts of the process that makes one a "new creature in Christ Jesus." In this process BAPTISM is the visible part, and belongs to the process as much so as FAITH OR REPENTANCE. We have no more right to exclude baptism than any other part of the divine plan. According to the scripture, baptism is even more than the initiatory rite of the church. On the day of Pentecost, Peter gave the inquiring multitude to understand that the rite, when preceded by FAITH and REPENTANCE, is "for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38). The same is seen in the case of Saul, who, having shown evidence of FAITH and REPENTANCE, was told to "arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins" (Acts 22:16).

We hold that baptism is for the remission of sins, not

Dr. Yoder baptizing in Argentina

(Continued on page 6)

Some Brethren Church Leaders of Yesterday, as I Knew Them

By Dr. Martin Shively, Bursar of Ashland College

Elder Marcus A. Witter

In most of the papers I have written on this general theme, I have tried in my halting way, to tell of the older men of the church of "yesterday," as I knew them, and only once before have I asked my readers to consider with me one who passed on in his young manhood, this being the paper written about my recollections of Brother C. I. Shock. There are still on my list a considerable number of the names of the older men, who were active leaders in their day,—a day when I was younger in the ministry, and they in the hey day of a busy life. But I ask you to think with me again of a younger man, and one who had developed the gifts and powers of leadership to an unusual degree, when, according to our way of thinking, his life was cut off. A comparatively young man, whose death made a great gap in many circles which were characterized by Christian endeavor and achievement. For though Brother Witter had reached the age of fifty years when he was called home in 1927, he was still a young man, and if he had lived many years longer, he would still have been a young man, for he was of that type whose sunny soul resists the encroachments of time, and whose spirit remains young. He was born in the state of Indiana, in 1877, a farmer's boy, who may have imbibed from the soil some of the qualities which contributed to his success. It seems impossible that such as he could ever be led into doubt of things Divine, but he freely admitted that under the influence of associates in his high school life, the faith which he had inherited was brought to waver, but he acted far more wisely than many others, in that he set out to find himself how far there was ground for unbelief. Even such a study of the Word as he could undertake, soon led him to the feet of his Lord and he entered the church under the ministry of Dr. Furry. He felt that he had been saved to serve, and to serve in the field of the Christian ministry, and did what he could at once to prepare himself for the work which it entails. Baptized in 1896 in the Fairview congregation, near South Bend, he taught school for several winters, and then entered Ashland College for definite training. Here he completed the course offered, and while a student, served several smaller groups of Brethren, passing on what he learned, and developing apace the talent which God had given him, and which he had so freely dedicated to the spread of the Gospel, for the saving of souls. His enthusiasm in and for this work, and his belief that the whole gospel is intended for the whole world, made him an avowed champion of the cause of foreign missions, and early led to his selection as a member of the foreign board of the church. He was serving in this capacity when his earthly end came. And for the selection of members of this board especially, much thought is given, and much care exercised, choice indicating standing in the brotherhood. He served in various pastorates, and always with success, and at the time of his death, a victim of pneumonia, he was gloriously leading in the Third Brethren church in Philadelphia. I know nothing of the immediate circumstances attending his death, but I know that he was a man of one Book, a man who believed not only its commandments and kept them, but who also believed its promises, and found them precious in the extremity of death, even though that meant temporary separation from wife and son, dying in the triumph of the faith in outlives death.

The late Elder M. A. Witter

Brother Witter had a face whose was past calculating. I doubt if any one saw it when it was not smiling. He have been discouraged sometimes, but he never showed it in his countenance. may have been acquainted with fear, there was no sign of it externally. He have been angry sometimes, but if s found the grace to smile anyway, and disarm the disturbing element. In his the church lost a most loyal son, and world a constant lover and helper. Bu lived long enough to make his impressio others, whose lives are richer for having known him who are better for having imbibed of his faith in God and man.

Ashland, Ohio.

Why Teach and Practice Triune Immersion?

(Continued from page 5)

because there is merit in the service, but because Lord commands it and promises a blessing on conduct of its performance. Don't quarrel with God's Word lieve it, teach it and obey it. Some say this is the of the commandments, but the question arises,—Is command of our Lord at all? We agree that it is. V is to be done with a command of our Lord? Only answer: OBEY IT. Every command of the Lord is portant and should be obeyed. Notice that nex "TEACHING" (preaching), our Lord places "BAPTISM." He mentions baptism in particular before saying, "t ing them to observe all things." In John 3:5 our says to Nicodemus, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, E a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot into the kingdom of God."

But some object, saying this does not mean water tism. Then our church fathers were mistaken, for took it so. The Greek church has so expounded i these years. No matter how much greater the val the SPIRIT than the WATER, "Except a man be of WATER and of the SPIRIT, he cannot enter the dom of God." We contend earnestly for the WH GOSPEL and nothing but the gospel,—every item; or greatest; first or last. GRACE must have its p FAITH must have its place. The BLOOD must be sacredly guarded, and every other item.

Where did salvation have its beginning? In God's FINITE LOVE. His love moved him to put forth last effort to save man, in the GIFT of his own Son man's Savior. Then follows the Savior's blessed mi among men, SUFFERING, ATONEMENT, DEATH, RESURRECTION, ASCENSION, and some blessed HIS RETURN. Now the mission of the Holy Spirit the preaching of the Gospel, through the apostles; th followed by HEARING and BELIEVING; this k changes the heart and leads to REPENTANCE; th followed by CONFESSION of the Lord Jesus; then c the BAPTISM into his death; this brings man to BLOOD of Jesus; the BLOOD washes away his sin; follows the impartation of the Holy Spirit.

In other words, God's favor brings justification to man, which changes his heart, preparing him for baptism, which cleanses and brings him into the new relation; the blood of Christ cleanses him from sin, and the Holy Spirit adopts him a just man. Without GRACE salvation could not be brought to man; without FAITH the heart could not be changed; without BAPTISM man would not be baptized into Christ;—"into one body." Without the BLOOD man would not be pardoned. GRACE brings salvation; FAITH prepares the heart to receive it; BAPTISM initiates man into Christ and the BLOOD cleanses him and he is saved.

The Mode

The mode, or form, of baptism as stated in the New Testament is not difficult to determine. When Jesus told the apostles to TEACH and DISCIPLE all nations "baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit" they understood just what he meant by the word "baptize." There was no controversy about the word then. Why should there be now? Our students of the Word agree that the primary meaning of the word "baptizo" is to dip or immerse, and is never used in connection with sprinkling. The writer has made the acquaintance of a number of Greek Christians; in fact has had some in congregations which he has visited. Their mother tongue is modern Greek and they understand New Testament Greek with as much ease as we do English. We have asked many of them the meaning of "baptizo" and in every case they have very promptly replied that it means to dip, or immerse. They also tell us that the Greek Church has always practiced the Tri-Mode by immersion.

The Form

The form of baptism is set forth in the Great Commission as found in Matthew 28:19, "Go ye therefore and baptize the disciples of all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." The three Persons of the Trinity are named in the formula, and each one is to be duly honored in the baptism. This calls for three actions in the performance of the commission, three acts symbolizing the Three Persons of the Trinity, and can mean nothing short of a three-fold immersion. One must immerse his candidate three times in order to baptize him "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." The minister takes the candidate into the water, where he kneels in humility before the Trinity; bows his head and gives up the "old man" of sin, as he is "planted together in the likeness of death." In the "likeness of his death." How did he die? "He bowed his head and gave up his Spirit" (John 19:30). The forward action.

A few years ago, two trains collided in northern Indiana and many lives were lost. As one of the engineers was pulled out of his demolished cab by his friends he was gripping in his right hand a little yellow order sheet, and as death came upon him they heard him say, "Someone gave me the wrong orders." Upon investigation it was learned that a "tower man" back on the line had made the fatal mistake of giving him the wrong orders. Brethren, we are God's "tower men" to give out his orders to safely direct the souls of men. May it never be said of us, "someone gave me the wrong orders." Waterloo, Iowa.

Let Jesus be a living vision in our hearts, and onwards we go into the unfading light of that more perfect vision, of the truth and beauty, satisfying joy, and deep tranquility abide for evermore.—F. W. Faber.

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

THE FAITH OF THE GOSPEL

(5) Angels

The Gospel teaches that angels are spirits (Heb. 1:7). They neither die nor marry (Matt. 22:30). They can appear in human form (Heb. 13:2). The spirit of a man is sometimes called his "angel" (Acts 12:15). They are not to be worshiped (Col. 2:18; Rev. 9:20). They are divided into ranks (1 Thess. 4:16; Jude 9).

Good angels are ministers of God (Lk. 1:19; Mt. 13:39). They number many millions (Heb. 12:22) and are powerful (2 Thess. 1:7). They serve the saved (Heb. 1:14).

Evil angels have Satan for chief (Eph. 2:2; 6:12). He was one of the cherubim (Ezek. 28:14, 15), but was cast down (Lk. 10:18) with the fallen angels (Jude 6; 2 Pet. 2:4). With them he will finally be cast into the "lake of fire" which is the second death (Rev. 20:2, 3, 9). They operate through persons who submit to them (Rom. 6:16; Lk. 22:3), in the state (Eph. 6:12) and even in the church (Rev. 18:2; 2 Thess. 2:3, 4).

Their method is that of imitation (2 Cor. 11:14), inciting of doubt (Gen. 3:4), slander (Gen. 3:5; Rev. 12:10), deceit (2 Thess. 2:9), opposition to the word of God (Mk. 4:15), false doctrines (1 Tim. 4:1), opposition to believers (1 Thess. 2:18), causing afflictions (Lk. 13:16) and fear (1 Pet. 5:8). But we are not ignorant of their devices (2 Cor. 2:11) and can be victorious through faith (Eph. 6:16), the use of the Word (vs. 17), watchfulness (1 Pet. 4:7) and prayer (Mt. 6:13). Christ is stronger than they (1 John 4:4).

(6) Creation, the work of God.

All the universes, called "heavens" are the work of God (1 K. 8:27; Jn. 1:3).

All God's works testify of him (Rom. 1:20).

The visible creation comes from the invisible energy (Heb. 11:3; 2 Cor. 4:18).

The natural creation is ruled by the laws of nature that God has established (Gen. 1:11; Ps. 148:6).

These laws in turn are subject to the will of God (Mt. 8:16, 17; Heb. 1:2, 3).

All are so ordered as to work together for the good of them that love God (Rom. 8:19-27).

And all things follow an eternal, progressive renovation (Rev. 21:5).

This Biblical doctrine of progressive creation according to the preconceived plan of God (Acts 15:18) is opposed to the anti-biblical theory that by an unintelligent evolution the law of cause and effect accounts for all phenomena, including the creation of man. But, given God as Creator, it is not irreverent to study the processes and times of his creative work in all the ages involved (Heb. 11:3).

(7) The future—the kingdom of God

The prophecies relate to three groups of people: the church, Israel and the Gentile nations.

The church is represented as becoming apostate, with some who remain faithful till the end. The faithful follow their work of evangelizing the world (Matt. 28:19, 20), persecuted by the world (Jn. 15:18-21), but cared for by the Lord (Eph. 5:24-32). They shall be gathered unto him in his coming (1 Thess. 4:14-17; 2:1; Rev. 19:7; 20:6) and be witnesses to his grace in the heavenly places (Eph. 3:10-12). The false church seeks for temporal power (2 Thess. 2:3, 4; Rev. 3:17; 18:7), to this end is united with the state (Rev. 2:13; 17:3) and will be destroyed by the state (Rev. 17:16, 17).

Israel will be dispersed until the fulfilment of the times of the Gentiles (Lk. 21:24), blind spiritually until the required number of Gentiles have believed (Mt. 24:14; Rom. 11:25). The nation will be restored in large numbers to Palestine in unbelief (Isa. 11:11, 12; Zech. 10:9, 10), will be deceived by the anti-christ (Jn. 5:43; Dan. 9:27), and will suffer the great tribulation (Mt. 24:21, 22); but will be liberated and converted by the coming of Christ (Zech. 12:10), will then preach to the world (Isa. 66:19; Zech. 8:13, and from Jerusalem will go forth the law during the kingdom age (Isa. 2:1-5), through princes of the house of David (Ezek. 47:16-18; Acts 15:16).

The Gentiles will have the Gospel preached to them as a witness (Matt. 24:14), and those who are converted will form the church (Acts 15:15). The rest follow the course of the age in its unbelief and wickedness (Lk. 21:5-13), ending in the universal reign of the antichrist in the restored Roman empire (Dan. 7:23-27; Rev. 17:8-15), but the world system of selfishness and force, inspired by Satan, will be destroyed (Dan. 2:44, Rev. 19:17-19), and the kingdom of heaven will be established by the coming of the Lord (2 Thess. 2:8; Rev. 20). At the end of the kingdom age there will be a final apostasy, and the final judgment and then the new earth and new heavens (Rev. 20:7-9; 21:1).

4. Discipline

The church is a family (Eph. 2:19) and its members receive discipline for their good (Heb. 12:5-11). Aside from the discipline of reaping, each one what he sows (Gal. 6:8), believers are subject to discipline by the church in the following ways: teaching (2 Tim. 2:24), exhortation (Heb. 10:25), reprehension (Tit. 1:13), public rebuke (1 Tim. 5:20), social ostracism (2 Thess. 3:6; 1 Tim. 6:5), suspension (1 Tim. 1:19, 20) or expulsion (1 Cor. 5:11-13; 1 Jn. 2:19). The action of the church will be "bound in heaven" only to the extent in which it is in accord with the word of God (2 Cor. 13:8; Rev. 3:7; 2:5).

(To be concluded)

Bartimaeus Lingers at the Tomb the First Easter Morning

By W. Everett Henry

*I shall not dare stay here much longer;
The eastern sky bespeaks the day,
And this concealment, safe in darkness,
Will to the soldiers soon betray
My presence. But the third day hastens,
The day on which he said he'd rise.
I'm sure 'twas that he said. I wonder
If in the lessening gloom the eyes
Of faithful John and many others
Are fixed upon that watched tomb.
They seemed so grieved; have they forgotten?
Could that have caused their hopeless gloom?
But could such words—Why, day has broken!
But no; the sun shows not! The guard
Is down! Is that—No, 'tis another!
He moves the stone as 'twere a shard!
He looks within the tomb. What, darkness
Again? But by the lantern's ray
The tomb stands open! Lifeless bodies Lie about it! I must away.*

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

SIMPLIFICATION OF MISSIONARY ENTERPRISE NEEDED

The missionary enterprise is badly in need of simplification, according to Dr. Paul W. Harrison, noted medical missionary in Arabia, who delivered the annual lectures on the Student Foundation at Princeton Seminary the week of February 23-27. His subject was "Some Needed Revisions of the Missionary Enterprise." While in Princeton, Dr. Harrison also addressed several church groups, preached at the Seminary Chapel, and conducted a Daily Prayer for the students.

His first lecture was devoted to a discussion of the growing influence of nationalism in mission areas. "Nationalism is a permanent thing now, and the missionary should cordially welcome it," said Dr. Harrison. As a result of this movement, he said, the religious work (education, medical work, etc.) will soon pass out of the hands of the missionaries, and the Christian worker will become more and more engaged in purely evangelistic activity.

In his second lecture, Dr. Harrison urged the need of a single direct and dogmatic message for the non-Christian peoples. "The Christian message ought to be presented in utter simplicity, positively and directly, and with adequate opportunity for emotional outlet," he declared. So far as educational and medical services are continued, said the lecturer in his fourth address, they should be simple, ready, to be turned over to the natives when they desire it, and above all should be given free. Special emphasis was laid on the need for the development of the indigenous church in every mission area.

In his final addresses, Dr. Harrison urged the support of the home church through prayer and sacrifice, deprecated the growth of the influence of "mission boards," which he feels interfere with close contact between the home and foreign fields, and finally discussed the qualities which a missionary must possess. These, he said, a conviction that he ought to go to the field, an adequate and continued surrender to God's will, training for hard work, a growing devotional life, a readiness for sacrifice, and an expansive message.—The Evangelical-Messenger.

GARRETT INSTITUTE—

Garrett Biblical Institute will begin to curtail its output of Methodist ministers next fall, according to Dr. Fred C. Eischen, president of the institution. Overproduction is given as the reason for this action. Garrett Institution will fix a limit on the total enrollment and will reduce the size of each class. The limit and the method of selection of new divinity students have not been determined. Difficulty in placing its graduates in the ministry has resulted from mergers of churches to serve larger communities; and from the return of foreign missionaries to the home field. It has not been so long since we were hearing the wail over unsupported churches.

("Why stand ye here all the day idle? ... Because no man hath hired us." Matt. 20:6-7).—The Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

CITYWARD MOVEMENT DECLINES

According to the annual estimate of the Division of Farm Population of the United States Department of Agriculture, fewer people left the farms in 1930 than during several previous years. More people seem to have moved to farms. The net result, adding the surplus of births over deaths on farms, is that the farm population has increased for the first time in the ten years for which annual surveys have been made.

The number of persons who left farms for towns and cities in 1930 is reported as 1,543,000, compared with 1,876,000 persons in 1929 and a peak movement of 2,155,000 persons in 1926. The movement from cities to farms in 1930 was the largest since 1914. Last year, 1,392,000 persons moved from cities to farms, compared with a peak movement of 1,396,000 persons in 1924. The trend farmward is considered a reflection of the industrial employment situation.

There was a "net movement away from farms" of 151,000 persons last year, but a normal increase of 359,000 births over deaths on farms brought the total farm population on January 1, 1931 to 27,430,000 persons, as compared with 27,222,000 persons on January 1, 1930.

tendency to leave farms appears to have received a decided in the Middle Atlantic, South Atlantic, West South Central, east North Central States, in which areas 262,000 fewer perfect farms in 1930 than in 1929. The Bureau's estimates are upon surveys of farm families in all parts of the country.—Evangelical-Messenger.

YOUTH EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN IN LONDON

of refreshing. The Gipsy is marvellously gifted, and is lously blessed. We do not wonder that he is named the s greatest evangelist; what Dr. Campbell Morgan is as a r, the Gipsy is as an evangelist. All the ministers of the Churches were present to welcome him on Saturday, Febru- and two clergymen of the Church of England have been supporters. The Tabernacle was crowded on the first Sun- and the congregations steadily increased, and on the last three there was a large congregation in the school room under- The Gipsy is a John the Baptist and a John the Apostle . His message is a summons to repentance. It goes to the root and is an appeal to the believer and the unbeliever, and with great tenderness he proclaims "God is Love."

-thirds of the congregation were under thirty, and as they o sing: "Let the beauty of Jesus be seen in me," all hearts greatly moved. Over 1,000 have signed the decision cards, e do not doubt the majority understood and have really en- upon the life which is life indeed.

mission in 1904 was great. A local paper said it exerted a fluence on Woolwich, and we know that that is true. Some most earnest workers today were converted then, includ- the honored secretary of the Campaign, but the verdict on ay by all the workers was, that the campaign today is great- is more than a mission, we believe it is a new movement of pirit of God.—The British Weekly.

EXPLORING NOAH'S NATIVE CITY

nd comes from Mesopotamia that the ruins of an ancient city een found which may be the place where Noah built the ark. oteworthy that more and more the facts of early Biblical y are being accepted as actualities by the general public. ations at Ur have revealed a silt deposit which has been defi- claimed by experts as alluvial deposit from some great in- on. And, underneath this deposit, there is to be found the d remains of fires, the bricks of buildings, showing a civil- anterior to a great flood. Now the city where Noah may ived and testified is turned up. We may well wish for Noahs who will testify as faithfully even in the face of scoffing.—Presbyterian.

Editorial Review

(Continued from page 4)

who have children in Ashland College and those who have school work there, appreciate that fact. It is a great bless- at God has given into the hands of our church,—that of a ian college of high educational standards at which the am- s young people of our brotherhood may obtain their colle- ng. And it seems to be a high order of young people who aking advantage of the opportunities that Ashland affords. ditor attended the intercollegiate debate recently held in the e chapel with the team from the University of Vermont, and there were no judges and consequently no decision rendered, ne Ashland debaters trained by Dr. L. L. Garber, showed elves so much superior to their opponents in forensic ability arguments produced that we dare say the decision would een unanimous in their favor if one had been rendered. ver a comparison of the life ideals and habtis of the two s of debators was such as to make us proud of the Ashland . The fine work of the Gospel Teams, and the programs of lee Clubs are also redounding to the credit of the school and strating the generally high type of student to which Ash- College appeals. The church can afford to be proud of such ol and continue to give it generous support.

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Exodus 12:1-10. "Behold the Lamb of God," the "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." In this Passover lamb we have certainly a type of our Lord, by whose blood we are saved from destruction, and of whose body we must partake for food. Note that no portion of the lamb could be put to common or ordinary uses: any part that was left from the sacramental feast must be burned with fire which purifieth. May we never make a common thing of the things of God, lest destruction come upon us, and in his broken body and shed blood may we find salvation for ourselves and for those about us!

TUESDAY

Exodus 12:11-20. Judgment and blessing! God ordained peace and safety for the Israelites, as he gave the pattern for the feast of unleavened bread, and at the same time he was preparing judgments for the people of Egypt. The people of Egypt were judged not merely as a favor to the children of Israel, but because they had deliberately and hard-heartedly refused for many generations to recognize the God of Israel, and still bowed down before their gods of wood and stone, and enjoyed their sensual orgies. Let us always strive to know and serve the true and living God.

WEDNESDAY

Exodus 12:21-28. The meaning of the ordinances is two-fold: first, as a symbol of religious truth, for making the truths themselves more real to us; and second, that our children, and those about us, may see these things that seem to them peculiar, and ask, "What meaneth this?" What wonderful opportunities for witnessing for our God arise out of such ordinances as the Lord's Supper, the Communion service, baptism, etc. May we ever faithfully perpetuate the ordinances which Christ hath established in his church. Even for selfish reasons, for "Happy are ye if ye do them."

THURSDAY

Exodus 12:29-42. In the words of a well-known atheistic poem, it might be said of Pharaoh that his head was "bloody but unbowed." Quite evidently he did not fully believe that the misfortunes of his people were from an outraged God, or he would not have repented and pursued the Israelites so relentlessly so soon after. More likely he considered his misfortunes as only the "bludgeonings of chance." It is even so with many today. How much of misery might the world be saved if only they would learn to look for the finger of God in the affairs of men and nations, and were willing to profit by his judgments and chastening!

FRIDAY

Exodus 12:43-51. Those that are without, unbelievers, can only become a part of the household of faith by passing through the ordinances which God hath laid down for his people. It is a token of their submission and obedience to God, the loving Father of the household. Let us praise his name for all his wonderful provision for those who are members of his family.

SATURDAY

Exodus 13:1-16. The Lord promised the Israelites a land flowing with milk and honey. In return, he expected them to raise up a godly race, in which the sons should be taught to love and reverence the God of their salvation; he also required the first-born of every creature belonging to them, as an offering. We would do well to remember today that the Lord still expects the first-fruits—not the leavings. How can we expect him to bless us if we do not honor him?

SUNDAY

Exodus 13:17-22. How marvelously God leads his people! Not the nearest way, but the best way! His leading is not less definite today, although we often wish we might have something as tangible as the pillar of fire and cloud to lead us in his way. Let us pray that our spirits may ever be willing, for he that willeth to do his will shall know!

W. I. DUKER, President Goshen, Indiana  E. L. MILLER Vice-President Maurertown, Virginia	NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N. MAGAZINE SECTION M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR, ASHLAND, OHIO	N. V. LEATHERMAN, General Secretary South Bend, Indiana  M. P. PUTERBAUGH, Treasurer 2210 Maple Ave., Evanston, Illinois
--	--	---

The Superintendent in the Bible School Hour

By Mrs. C. L. Royer

(Paper presented at Mid-West District Conference, which voted to request publication)

What is the Bible School?

That the Bible school may do its best work it must be well understood. Is it the kindergarten of the church? Is it the nursery of the church? Is it a place for children? Yes, the Bible school is all of these and a great deal more. Men will not come to the Bible school in large numbers if they have the conception that the school is simply a nursery or a kindergarten. It is therefore necessary to define, rightly and often, the Bible school, till the community catches its meaning. "The Bible school is the teaching service of the church, to win souls to Christ and to train them in Christian service."

Accepting the above definition of the Bible school, we have the following conclusion:

(1) As the Bible school is a church service, every Christian ought to be in it.

(2) As the Bible school is a teaching service of the church, it should have trained teachers.

(3) As one purpose of the Bible school is to win souls to Christ, it should be so organized as to lead the children at the proper time to a personal confession of Christ.

Why does the church need the Bible school?

(1) It needs a department of education. To have strong Christians, we must instruct the child, the youth and the adult in the facts and doctrines of the Bible.

(2) It needs a workshop. There is no other department of the church where everyone, old or young, can so effectively be kept at work.

(3) It needs an evangelizing agency. It takes the child at birth and instructs him as he grows from period to period, from infancy to adult life.

The chief concern of the Bible school should be that all who come under its influence live the Christian life; for primarily the Bible school is a school of life, teaching the way of Life and feeding its members on the Bread of Life.

(4) By what gauge is the success of a Bible school to be measured? Surely not by numbers, for many large schools are poor schools. Neither is a well equipped school necessarily a successful one. Organization does not always imply a good school, nor a modern building, although these may contribute largely to efficiency, other things being equal. What is an efficient school? It is one that reaches its constituency with the gospel message, winning its members to acceptance of Christ as Lord and Savior, and training them for the kingdom service. The efficient Bible school will always be known by the lives of its members between Sundays. Much depends upon the Superintendent in leading the school in these accomplishments. Then, what is the superintendent's place in the Bible school? What kind of a superintendent do you have? Is your superintendent adapted to every department of the school? Is he or she like the drum major in this illustration? Behold the drum major, marching out there in front! He is resplendent in scarlet uniform with gold braid. His black shako looks heavy and hot, but he wears it proudly, head erect. The drum major impresses you as rather a vain fellow. Everyone must admit, though, that he is playing his part well. When the brass band heading the parade turns into main street, he strides on ahead to show the way. There is one admirable thing about the drum major: he is out in front where he belongs. He leads!

"How I wish our superintendent would sometimes give us a little direction and encouragement!" exclaimed an earnest teacher. The person of whom she spoke was a well-intentioned business man who had taken charge of the school amid rejoicings at his apparent fitness.

But the man proved to be no drum major. Save for ringing the opening and closing bells and giving out a few notices, he had been mostly a mere looker-on.

The superintendent should be the leader of the school. It is his privilege to suggest new ideas and make new plans. Like the drum-major, the superintendent has an appropriate place out in front. He should never be afraid or ashamed to be there—leading.

How can the Bible school secure such leaders for itself?

Some Bible schools try to do all their work with one leader. Perhaps they have had the same leader as superintendent for years and years. He is probably a good one, too, or he wouldn't be in office so long. He leads the school in all the endeavors, he can think of; but the school does only what he suggests because he is the only qualified leader. How different is the school that keeps one or more leaders in training all of the time. Under this plan the Bible school can have a variety of things, as each different leader expresses his individuality and proves his ability.

With leaders in training the school does not have to get in a rut when the original leader is gone or becomes ill.

From this illustration, I gained the idea of appointing some one in the school to act as superintendent the second Sunday of each month. On that day the school appoints some one for the following month, giving plenty of time for preparation.

The superintendent has all to do in creating the proper Bible school atmosphere. One of the dictionary definitions of "atmosphere" is "a surrounding or pervading influence or condition." What is the pervading influence one feels on entering your Sunday school room? Socially, is it one of warmth or chill? Esthetically, is it one of inspiration or depression? Educationally, is it serious or flippant? Executively, does it command respect or suggest irreverence? Must it be elevating or merely boisterous? Can a superintendent make his or her atmosphere whatever he wishes it? Evaluate your school from the standpoint of atmosphere. It may lead to improvement in some particulars.

How does your superintendent plan his program? And how much time does he spend on it? How thorough is he? What a superintendent does during the week is even more than what he does on Sunday—the key to his real success. His business is that of making the school "go." The superintendent will have a desk or some particular apartment into which he puts clinics or records which are of service to him in his study of school progress. In his notebook will be jotted memoranda of important subjects for discussion, etc. In other words, he will be steadily on the job, and how thoroughly he does his work will be reflected in the Sunday session. Faithful application to the school's interest during the week is the making of an efficient superintendent. Just as faithful preparation of the sermon discloses to a congregation a minister's fidelity to his study.

It is possible to muddle through with Sunday school service by selecting hymns hastily on Saturday night, or singing hastily five minutes before time to begin Sunday. But, frankly, no superintendent who takes his job seriously would be doing that week after week, because we need a superintendent who does take his job seriously has thought it out well enough to know that he can make or mar the influence of the Sunday school by the kind of opening and closing program he uses. The best show you the superintendent's plan for the Bible school by telling you some of the things we do in our school. We try to have one special number each Sunday. For example:

(1) Take some prominent word in the lesson such as "faith" and have each one secure a verse with that word for the following Sunday. It may be Luke 17:5—"And the apostles said unto the Lord, increase our faith."

(2) Finish familiar verses—you read the first half of verse and let school give the remainder. For example: Psalm 46:1—"God is our refuge and strength,* a very present help in trouble."

(3) Have a Bible drill. Give familiar references and see which class can find them first. This is a contest and has a tendency to bring more Bibles.

(4) When we have a special number of music that is the only special for that morning.

(5) We have different classes take charge of the program one Sunday of each month.

(6) We try to work out all special numbers usually from the calendar or from our lesson; for example, September 14th, celebrating the starting of the Sunday school by Robert Raikes. Last Sunday was our Rally Day. We gave the meaning of the Rally Day and we tried to keep our program along that line.

(7) There are several subjects that we have worked out as special days, some of which we have not as yet used.

(a) Roll Call Day.—We had this Rally Day featuring a Rally Day Tree. Members present putting a green leaf on the tree and a brown leaf was put on those absent.

(b) Family Day.—See who has the present or how many complete families present.

Bible Day.—See how many different Bibles you can secure.

Surprise Sunday.—Have a surprise dinner from each class.

Auto Day.—See how many cars present.

We have several lists of questions—Example:

- Who was the oldest man?
- Who was the wisest man?
- Who was the meekest man?
- Who was the most patient man?
- Who was the strongest man?

Take a hymn of the morning and tell
(Continued on page 16)

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for April 19)

The Rich Man and Lazarus

Scripture Lesson—Luke 16:1 to 17:37.

Printed Text—Luke 16:19-31.

Devotional Reading—1 John 3:13-18.

Golden Text—Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven where neither moth nor rust can consume, and where thieves do not break through and steal.—Matthew 6:20.

Introductory Note

Christ ever had in view the sharp contrast of wealth and poverty. On the one hand he saw the perils of riches. They tend to develop a barren, covetous spirit and to detract from God. Accordingly, we find startling warnings addressed to the self-titled well-to-do. On the other hand we have Christ's constant teaching concerning the duty of charitable regard for the poor as a rudimentary virtue. Luke 16 presents the true Christian attitude on these pressing questions. Verses 1-8 give us the righteous steward. The argument is: If a rich man is commended for prudence in laying up for this future, much more shall a righteous servant be praised for providing for eternity by a good use of entrusted treasure. This argument is powerfully embodied by the rich man and Lazarus.—Sunday School Journal.

Two Prodigals

In our last lesson we dwelt upon the erratic career of the younger son, his life of profligacy and squandering; in this lesson we have another kind of prodigality, that of laying up. The difference between these two is not so wide apart as it seems to be; we get at the basic principle of each in these men, we find that they both bowed down to the shrine of self-worship. The rich man was not rich toward God, and the poor man was not satisfied to have his father as the alone object of his heart. The rich man bowed down and served "divers lusts and pleasures"; the other worshiped a self-interest which disregarded the claims of all else. And so both were, as the intrinsic principle of their life, prodigals.—Walker.

The Sin of the Rich Man

The sin of the rich man was not the fact of his riches. "It would be hard to understand how, if wealth, as such, were the rich man's sin, the celestial banquet would be presided over by Abraham, the father of the rich in Israel." Nor is it that he had obtained his riches dishonestly. This is so purposely, because the point of the parable lay in the use made of riches, not in the wrong ways of gaining them.

2. His sin was selfish worldliness, his utter forgetfulness and neglect of the nobler and spiritual aims and blessings of life. He found in riches his highest good. He spent his wealth on himself. It is not a visible crime, like murder, or lying, or lust, but it is quite as deadly a crime to the soul. It shows a heart utterly contrary to heaven and to God, utterly unfit for heaven, embodying in itself the seeds of all sins and crimes. He had great opportunities for doing good. He had great powers at his command to help and bless his fellowmen. But he stumbled over the very golden stairway to heaven, and turned heaven's blessings to curses. He was a steward and acted as if he were the owner.

Note that worldliness, selfishness, is not confined to the rich, but those who are so anxious to be rich that they save but do not give; those who have striven to be rich and failed; those who have been worldly in their "little," and would, therefore, be worldly "in much"; all who are guilty of worldliness lie under the same condemnation.—Illustrated Quarterly.

A Modern Application

This parable is graphic as it stands, but it will step out of the distance of yesterday and mingle with us intimately and irritatingly if we translate it into the language of this century. Here lives a rich man in a modern city. He has four great houses: a winter home, a summer home, a country estate, a foreign residence. Each of these establishments is expensive in taxes, servants, and upkeep. He can live in but one at a time. He possesses a half dozen automobiles; his family buys clothes and more clothes, gives extravagant parties, travels at will in its search for satisfaction in all the climates of the globe, belongs to exclusive clubs. A mile away (and in these days of speed a mile is but the width of a door-sill) lives a man with four children, but no employment. Dire need rains from every wall; a chilling despair is in the very air of the home; there is little food, much fear of illness, scanty clothing, loss of self-respect, a growing attitude of inferiority in both parents and children. No longer do we look back in the mood of literary reminiscence upon Palestine; now we are seeing our own country.

Set over against this the ideals of Christianity which we recite in our churches and preach from our pulpits and read from the Bible. Among those ideals are these: A man's wealth does not consist in his having more possessions than he needs; we should lay up for ourselves treasures in heaven, but not upon earth, where they decay; when we are asked for our coats we should give our cloaks also; to those who are hungry we should minister; if bread is needed we should not offer a stone.—Frank D. Slutz.

(Continued on page 16)

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK 	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
--	--	---

C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. DuBall Ave., South Bend, Ind.

An Open Letter to the Societies

Canton, Ohio, March 20, 1931.

Dear Endeavorers:

We are taking this method to thank all those societies which have forwarded their offerings taken during C. E. Week, and we wish to state that we believe there are many others on their way,—probably you are just waiting until a little later on so that you can INCREASE the amount. See Brethren Evangelist for financial statement of March 10th.

Now we have another suggestion for you; Rather,—another Appeal to make to you! How would you like to help DOUBLE our contribution to the KRYPTON work? You say, "Fine, but it is impossible!" We reply, "BUT IT IS POSSIBLE!" And we will tell you how:

The Home Mission Board reports that more is realized for the support of this mission through the means of second-hand clothing being sold, than through the actual cash gifts of our National Christian Endeavor! What do you think of that? And so, the call has come to us as individual societies to send AT LEAST ONE clothing bag to Brother Gehman AT THE VERY EARLIEST POSSIBLE DATE, as the supply of clothing is fast being exhausted, but the demand is still present.

Inasmuch as the sale of clothing does much each month to reduce the cost of the work of the Home Board, and since this is such a splendid way for us to help the Mission Board in a most trying year, we JUST KNOW you will respond. Address a postal card to Brother Frank Gehman, Krypton, Kentucky and ask for a bag and he will gladly send one to you at once. Thanks for your cooperation!

SinCErely,

THE BRETHREN NATIONAL C. E.,

Rev. E. M. Riddle, President; Rev. F. C. Vanator, Vice-President; Gladys M. Spice, Secretary-Treasurer.

VARIETY IN SOCIETY MEETINGS

By Herman A. Klahr

A meeting is commonly thought of as that portion of time—usually an hour—devoted by a group of people to a service of worship and discussion. Strictly speaking, however, a meeting begins when preparations start, and ends only after no further influence on human personality can be traced. Therefore, every meeting is important. In our desire for variety, let us avoid superficiality.

The Michigan Christian Endeavor Union is sponsoring an advertising campaign by offering to local churches attractive posters that may be placed in conspicuous locations. These posters read: "Young People Attend Christian Endeavor Here." Who can estimate the cumulative effect of the widespread and consistent use of these and similar posters? The commercial advertiser keeps telling his story, even in times of business depression. We can learn from his methods. Postal cards addressed recently by the president to a group of inactive persons in a certain Young People's Society netted a one-hundred-per-cent increase in attendance. A two-cent stamp will carry a sincere greeting and invitation to some young person who needs to be enlisted in the work of the church. The telephone is an effective aid. Should you care to dramatize the ways in which your Society and your church can carry their message to the public, write to Guy P. Leavitt, Eighth and Cutter Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio, for a free copy of the "Pageant of Publicity" which he has prepared for the use of Young People's groups.

The meeting place should be attractive. It should not be too large, nor should it be too small to be commodious. Pride in the maintenance of an attractive room has led many groups to purchase new equipment and to improve the decorative effects. The use of carefully chosen pictures adds much to the charm of a room. Start a library on Young People's work. Write to the Young People's Department of your denomination for suggestions. Don't hesitate to create atmosphere for meetings by adding special decorations to fit a certain topic of discussion. Missionary meetings afford opportunities for the introduction of the contributions made by other peoples to our civilization. Change the seating arrangement occasionally. Certain surprises from time to time are legitimate.

Introduce changes in your order of service. Learn the stories of the hymns you sing. Have an informal meeting occasionally. Ask those present to suggest favorite hymns, and inspire utter informality of discussion. Thus, a new spirit of freedom and sincerity is injected. An occasional debate is stimulating. The outside-speaker idea can become an obsession, to the detriment of the real function of a Young People's Society, but an occasional meeting of this nature is fitting. Ask the pastor to speak to you for five minutes on the subject of the evening. Introduce, one by one, over a period of weeks, the officers of your church and your church organizations, so that mutual helpfulness may be encouraged. Set aside a three-minute period in every meeting for an interesting item of missionary news. Hundreds of groups are doing this. Start on time; keep going; quit on time. Require your leaders to plan the details of their meetings at least a month in advance. Real variety is possible only when the officers and members are willing to "put first things first."—Forward.

of faith, students have perfect freedom have never tried to "entice" students in schools to become members of the church. The reason we have religious education to guide the students to get a right in their lives. To share such responsibility with the Government, we maintain, is the duty of patriotic citizens and should not be prohibited. ... We have religious instruction and worship in our schools, because we are of the conviction that a full-rounded personality cannot be fully developed from religious experience and religious influences. ...

In short, our church schools have religious instruction and worship because we believe that education without religion is incomplete. The religion of Jesus Christ helps a student to give expression to things most beautiful and most idealistic does not close the mind of an intelligent student, but guides him to understand the true meaning of life, a life that is for the well-being of others. ...

Dr. Sun fought a good fight for our country for over forty years. He was educated in church schools, and even on his deathbed he proclaimed that he was a Christian. He did not regard religion as something that would make one blind to knowledge, but he did not suspect church schools as instruments to drug youth and make them stupid. Because he knew the essence of the religion of Jesus Christ and the traditions of church schools, he wholeheartedly supported Christian institutions to the last moment when he was in this world. Why should his followers act contrary to his intention?

It is deemed necessary and our duty to call the attention of your honorable Ministry to all these facts and reasons as stated. The consequences of the Regulations and of the official interpretation of them will mean education exclusively without religion, the closing down of a major part of our schools, and the loss of opportunity for an education to thousands of children and young people. Can our country afford such consequences at the present moment? We therefore, sincerely hope that your honorable Ministry will reconsider the whole matter and so modify the article in question to allow all grades of church schools to have religious instruction and church schools to have the privilege of religious ship.

(Signed) Church of Christ in Shanghai, Methodist Episcopal Church, American Methodist Society, Protestant Episcopal Church, United Lutheran Church, Swedish Methodist Union, Evangelical Church, Church of the Brethren, Rhenish Missionary Society, Methodist Protestant Church, Basel Mission, United Methodist Society.

Shanghai, China, July 1, 1930.

The Ministry of Education sent its reply to the foregoing Petition on July 24, 1930. Translation was received a month later.

Your petition requesting that all grades of church and mission schools be permitted to have elective religious courses and church schools to have the privilege of religious ship, has been received. Upon consideration of the points raised in your petition we find them not free from misunderstanding. Let us consider these points one by one.

To sum up: There is not only one religion. If we allow each religion in the field of education to vie one with the other to propagate religion, the natural tendency will be to create divisions and strife. The M

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN

Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

MISSIONS

Send Home Missionary Funds to

R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Berne, Indiana

Religion in Chinese Schools

Chinese Christians Petition their Government for Greater Religious Liberty

Supporters of missions in China have watched with growing concern the demands of the Nationalist Government that religion should be excluded from all Christian schools. We have received from the Rev. A. R. Kepler, D.D., General Assembly of The Church of Christ in China, the text of the Petition which the General Council of the Church, upon recommendation of its Board of Education, addressed to the National Government, protesting against the regulations promulgated by the Ministry of Education forbidding religion in church schools. The Petition is a memorable document, stating the case for religious liberty with such mingled dignity and cogency that it is of historic interest. We therefore cite its principal points, assured of our reader's recognition of its importance.—A. J. B.

We, the undersigned, are herewith submitting to you a petition for your consideration. The purpose of this petition is to request your honorable Ministry to allow all grades of church schools to have elective religious courses and to permit the primary grades to have the privilege of worship.

But when we make a careful study of the Regulations stating that

A private school founded by a religious body is not permitted to give religion as a required subject, nor is religious propaganda permitted in the class instruction. If there are any religious exercises, students shall not be compelled or enticed to participate. No religious exercises shall be allowed in primary schools; and in view of the official interpretation on the first sentence of said article as prohibiting voluntary religious instruction in schools lower than senior middle, we are bound to feel that these restrictions are of such a nature as to make it necessary for the majority of our church schools to discontinue. ... It is unanimously felt that the circumstances compel us to protest and to submit the following reasons for our position for your consideration.

First, the purpose of the Church in conducting schools is to nurture Christ-like personality, to serve society and state. ... This can be realized to the highest degree, we believe, only through the gateway of religion. We also are of the firm conviction that the religion of Jesus Christ, his teachings of love, liberty and equality, and his vicarious sacrifice, are such as can inspire and enable the students to achieve the ultimate aim of education—namely, the development of healthy and perfect personality.

Second. There has been a strong movement during the last few years in educational circles for the "separation of religion from education" ... But when we consider the real value of education, we cannot conclude that education without religion is complete. A full-rounded personality is a personality mentally sound and emotionally sane. Reason and feeling cannot well be divorced.

Third. In a country like ours, we cannot afford to discontinue educational activities. ...

We believe that religious liberty is essential to one's own conscience. In matters education, in order to guard against such possible future calamity, is obliged to impose these restrictions which do not apply to Christianity but to the other religions as well.

ance to have elective religious courses in junior middle schools and to have the privilege of worship in primary schools removes obstacles too difficult to permit the Ministry to grant the request. Moreover, we hope that you will consider in a sympathetic way this our humble opinion regarding the restriction upon propagation of religion in schools. Let this be considered final and not subject to further review.

(Signed) MOLING TSIANG, Minister of Education.

—Mission Review of the World.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

OTHER ARCHIE LYNN AT FILLMORE, CALIFORNIA

is a great joy to share with the Evangelist family the news of our recent revival campaign. For several months we had been waiting with Brother Lynn for a meeting, it seemed that the time was ripe for launching of the campaign. Accordingly arrangements were made to begin a "Victory Revival" on February 22 to continue March 8. Brother Cecil E. Snyder, the First Brethren church of Los Angeles, was secured to lead the singing. No credit is due him for the success of the meeting. He is much appreciated as a leader in congregational singing. Then, too, choruses that he taught and used throughout the meeting added much to the enthusiasm and spirit of devotion and praise. Brother Cecil is also a fine soloist many of his old friends came to hear singing. It was in this church where he met Christ as his Savior during the early days of the founding of this work.

Brother Lynn is an evangelist of no mean ability, and a wonderful man to work with. He is a fearless preacher of the truth, convincing in his argument and persuasive in his appeal. And work! say, he would work day and night. "As much as in me is I am going to preach the gospel"—this must be the motto. The list of prospects we had made up was more than we were able to do roughly work in the two weeks of the campaign. However, I believe that the most effective work was done in the homes. Brother Lynn is a master in personal work. His only argument is the Word of God.

The Fillmore church entered heartily into the preparation for the meeting, advertising thoroughly and interesting folks to come. Of course the meeting became the most important item in the prayer life of the church. Cottage prayer meetings were held for several weeks prior to the coming of the evangelist. The church was ready for the revival; in spite of the fact that there were some strained relationships among the leaders in the church. (We are sorry to have to say this). But this is what we want to say, that those who were not right, were ready and anxious to fight with God and with each other. Thus they were together and in hearing the powerful persuasive preaching of Brother Lynn the church experienced a wonderful revival during the first week, and by Saturday almost one hundred percent of the members had rededicated their lives to the following Sunday evening a little girl was first to give her heart to Christ, before the final benediction on the last night of the meeting twenty-eight persons had made the great decision and were led into the waters and were buried with Christ in the rite of Christian Baptism. Every one of the 28 were present at the closing service and 27 of them lined the front of the church to be received into the church by the hand of fellowship. The other one is a member of a Methodist church and requested BAPTISM, having been sprinkled as a baby. Five came from other denominations (back East). The rest were from the children and young people of the Sunday school and church. Truly it was a VICTORY REVIVAL and we shall always thank God for sending Brother Lynn to us at this time.

We will appreciate very much the continued prayers of the Brethren, and especially those who know and love the Fillmore work.
W. A. OGDEN, Pastor.

REVIVAL AT FILLMORE

It was our happy privilege to spend two weeks at Fillmore in a special evangelistic effort. Two brief but delightful weeks. Fillmore has acquired an unenviable reputation for being a hard field. We have never found an easy field yet. It is the Satanic Majesty's business to make every field hard. No one can truthfully say, that the "Arch enemy" has ever neglected to buy up his opportunities.

"Is anything too hard for the Lord?" We have the blessed Trinity back of us. "The glorious gospel of the blessed God," to preach. This "gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Nothing is too hard nor difficult for our Savior. "He is the wisdom of God and the power of God."

Brother W. A. Ogden is the faithful pastor at Fillmore. He is a true yokefellow and a faithful minister of Christ. He is one of the finest young men it has been our privilege to work with.

God has blessed Brother Ogden with a capable Christian wife. Sister Ogden was certainly a great help in the meetings. Playing the piano, visiting and helping in every way to make the meetings a success.

We found at Fillmore a loyal group of brethren, who had been upon their knees with their pastor, agonizing with God for victory. This is the way to prepare for a revival. Revivals that are lasting, aren't "worked up" but are prayed down. The faithful pastor and this loyal group of faithful members, constituted a highway for God, for the accomplishment of victory.

The choir was faithfully and efficiently directed by Cecil Snyder of the First church of Los Angeles. This is the third meeting in which Brother Snyder has assisted the writer. Thank God for consecrated laymen like Cecil Snyder, who are willing to arrange their affairs, give their time and talents in service to the King. Cecil loves the Lord, and enjoys singing the gospel. Thank you, Cecil.

Our home was with Brother and Sister Rawlins. A real home of Christian fellowship it proved to be. They opened not only their home to us, but their hearts also. They did everything to make us comfortable and happy. We shall never forget the sweet Christian fellowship we had in this home. This home has been dedicated to God. The voice of praise, thanksgiving, and supplication is heard in this home.

We are from the "Hospitable South." But the hospitality of the Fillmore Brethren is unexcelled anywhere. Thank you for the offering, Brethren. We are optimistic for the future of this church. The church has the respect of the community. "The people that do know their God, shall be strong and do exploits."

We are very grateful to Brethren Polman, Cover, and Mayes who came with delegations during the meetings. Also for the encouragement that was given by the members of my own church. About sixty of them drove ninety miles to encourage the meeting. This is real cooperation.

ARCHIE L. LYNN.

VICTORY REVIVAL AT FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

A season of spiritual uplift and blessing has come to this church as a result of a revival meeting conducted by Evangelist Charles H. Ashman. We believe in revivals here. The old fashioned kind which tell men that they are sinners and need a Savior, for it is "The Blood of Jesus Christ, his Son that cleanseth from all sin." As far as man's part of the work was concerned it was carried out by efficient committees. The Evangelistic Committee was responsible for the prayer meetings held before the revival began and also for the attendance of the church members during the meeting. The advertising committee secured such publicity as was thought necessary and this was no little task when the city newspapers are so careful to keep church news to the minimum. The personal worker's committee held classes of instruction after the preaching during the first week and conducted the pre-prayer meetings during the other two weeks of the meeting. The music committee had one or more special numbers ready for each service and had a splendid choir ready to assist the evangelist in every way. Our own players and several from other churches aided in the instrumental music. The work of all these committees was so directed by the Spirit that there was nothing forced or mechanical about it and there was not a dull minute in the whole meeting.

The attendance was good. It increased as the weeks passed. On a few bad nights the crowds seemed to increase. All three services on the last day were large and full of interest.

Brother Ashman and the pastor have been in a number of meetings together, so this was no new experience to either of us and perhaps the best way to tell how we enjoyed it will be to say that this one seemed still better than the preceding ones and we were sorry to say goodbye at its close. The evangelist was at his best, not even being bothered by a cold which he brought along with him but quickly became better of. His preaching is always Biblical. The messages are very positive yet tempered with earnestness and kindness so that the sinner knows he is being taught the way of salvation. Forty-three people stepped to the front during the meetings confessing Christ as Lord, or renewing their vows, or making application for church membership. Several baptismal services were held during the meeting and a number are to be baptized Easter Sunday so by the time you read this some twenty or twenty-five will have become members of the church. Others will come later, but in a large city like this it requires a lot of instruction before some are ready to accept the doctrines and the ordinances of the Brethren Church.

Brother Ashman was invited to speak to two Bible Schools and to a group of ministers so that outside the pulpit as well as in it he made friends for the church. The results would show a still greater victory if we had been able to continue another week.

Having been pastor of this church now a year, we feel that we can intelligently say that in many ways this is a remarkable church. Her working membership is most loyal and faithful to the Lord, the Bible, the church and the pastor. Her problems are big ones, caused mostly by changing conditions in the city, but by the Grace of God she is counted one of the few churches making progress in this part of the city. We appreciate the prayers of the people who know how to pray.

A. V. KIMMELL,
2259 North 10th Street.

VICTORY REVIVAL AT TENTH AND DAUPHIN

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Last May we enjoyed a two weeks' Bible Conference with this church. Now we have enjoyed a three weeks' Victory Revival with them. We found that every possible preparation had been made for the revival. Cottage prayer meetings, prayer lists, personal workers, publicity, etc. The church wanted a revival and was willing to pay any price necessary to have it. The leaders and spiritual members were ready for the opening service.

Our comradeship with the pastor, Brother A. V. Kimmell, was sweet. It has always been so. But, each time we work with him it grows better. He is a fine co-worker in the Lord—courteous, congenial, Christlike. He led the singing, and did it excellently. The church has prospered under his pastoral leadership. The anniversary of his first year came during the revival and was fittingly celebrated. The church counts itself most fortunate in having him as its pastor.

The music was of the best. With the pipe organ, piano and Xylophone all playing in harmony, Brother Kimmell leading, and a fine choir to back it all up, you may know that we had fine evangelistic music. The special vocal numbers were appropriate. And best of all, the music was rendered for the glory of the Lord.

The fellowship of the saints was uplifting. This church is as much like a family as any we have ever visited. The members are scattered and do not often get together in the community. But they surely do enjoy themselves at Tenth and Dauphin. It is Christian fellowship! They include the evangelist and all others in their fellowship also. And Bibles! Ask for a show of Bibles at any service. They not only believe in the Word, but bring it with them. In prayer, testimony, quotation of Scripture, and personal work, this church is to be praised.

The field is very difficult for evangelism. The immediate community is almost closed to such. Colored people and foreigners have taken it. The members have moved out and away. They come a long distance to church, but it is very hard to get their unsaved friends in the outlying districts where they reside to come with them. The converts are "hand picked fruit" and very "close picking." An unspiritual, non-evangelistic, non-missionary church would have died and been buried amid these surroundings long ago. But, this church continues to bear her testimony. Yet, it limits very much the possibilities of evangelism. The same effort in a good field would triple the results. The pastor will report the results of this effort.

REV. CHARLES H. ASHMAN, Evangelist.

SEMINARY NOTES

A men's Gospel Team, composed of Herman Hoyt (captain), Willis Belcher, Jim Kyler, Paul Davis, Ord Gehman and Everett Niswonger, conducted pre-Easter services at Lost Creek and Krypton, Kentucky, over a period of four days, and closed last Sunday evening. At this writing we cannot give a report of their work.

At the request of the local pastor, Brother Belote, a Boy's Gospel Team conducted a pre-Easter service in our Ashland church Monday evening of Easter Week. A Girls' Team conducted a similar service on Wednesday evening.

We are endeavoring to wisely spend the money given the Seminary by the National Sunday School Association for our theological library. Sets of books have been procured that are much needed by our students in their daily class preparation, e. g., Philip Schaff's eight volume set on the History of the Christian Church. Dean Alford's four volume commentary on the New Testament, and a number of volumes by Keil and Delitzsch on Old Testament books.

Professor Stuckey reports splendid attendance and more than local interest in the Bible Study Conference he held in our New Lebanon, Ohio, church the last of March. Doubtless Brother L. V. King will report same more fully in the Evangelist later. It may be of interest to the Dayton and New Lebanon people to know that Prof. Stuckey has turned into our Seminary fund over $125.00 of the money of which you gave him personally. It is from this fund that we expect to draw in renting and furnishing a Seminary dormitory.

Professor McClain spent last week in Bible Conference work in Berlin, Pennsylvania.

The first of a series of five public lectures on modern day sects, to be presented by the Seminary faculty, was delivered by Dean J. Allen Miller, April 8th. He dealt with the subject of Mormonism in a very interesting and enlightening manner. Many people of other churches were present at our own to hear this lecture.

K. M. MONROE.

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

I have just returned from Columbus where I was attending the annual meeting of the Ohio College Association. Ashland College was voted into membership in that Association. Also a motion prevailed to make the North Central Standards the Ohio Standards, which means that the Ohio colleges not now members of the Ohio Association must meet higher standards in order to obtain membership. There are several colleges which have not yet met North Central standards but which will still retain their Ohio membership. With Ashland, are now 36 members in the Ohio Association. Also Professors Miller, Mason, well, Black, Ullman, and Bixler attended sectional meetings of which they are members.

Dr. Shively recently solemnized the marriage of two former students, Mr. Tedning and Miss Naomi Heizer, both near Canton, Ohio.

I am happy to report that I recently received a gift of one thousand dollars a friend of the College for bleachers. $300.00 from another for the same purpose.

The College recently debated a team representing the University of Vermont on a question of present day tendencies in advertising. There were no judges. Also the College debated over WJW radio station in Mansfield with a team from the University of Utah on the question of unemployment insurance.

The Men's Gospel team had charge of holy week service in our church. The Gospel team also had an evening.

There was a vacation from Thursday on holy week until Tuesday of the following week.

Recently a Mr. Qurada, a Christianippino, spoke very acceptably in chapel.

Dr. R. R. Ullman recently published his Doctor's thesis in book form. It is long and spoken of.

The Girls' Glee Club recently appeared at Ruggles, Ohio.

EDWIN E. JACOBI

SAY IT

You have a friend—a man, a woman, a boy or a girl. For some reason you love him very much. Have you ever told him so? Perhaps he would like to have you SAY IT.

Your friend has helped you along through the days gone by. Gratitude is in your heart. Do not let it lie buried there—SAY IT.

Some joy comes his way. You rejoice with him. But he will never know it unless you SAY IT.

An honor comes to him. He wins a game of life, and you are glad—SAY IT.

Your friend succeeds in some task he has undertaken. You feel a great pride that he has done it—SAY IT.

A sorrow comes his way. He may have lost his property. Some of his loved ones may have gone wrong. Diseases may have laid its hands on him, taking away the joy of health. You would share the sorrow with him—SAY IT.

Old age, or perhaps a breakdown of human machinery, may shut in your years so that he can no longer fare forth with his fellows. Perhaps the end draws near. In your heart you wish him bon voyage as he nears the sunset gate. A word of sympathy would help to lighten the burden and brighten the way—SAY IT.

A personal word, a telephone call, a card, a letter, a telegram, and only a few minutes of time. Silent sympathy. Your own life may be better because of it. Your friend may go to the end of the journey and never know. You may add joy; you may lighten the load; you may brighten the way if you only take time to SAY IT—B. W. Spillman in Ref. Church Messenger.

OUTSPOKEN GOVERNOR

andous effort is being put forth to change the laws of Pennsylvania relative to the day of the week. Some interests in Philadelphia, made up chiefly of such as have made the law for money gain, have on Harrisburg as never before. It is refreshing to read that Governor Pine is out clear, straight and decided object. He sanctions no change. He believed in Sabbath observance. We wish a forthright stand. Just name a Governor who will take such a position without much verbiage and some evasive Christian people may well rejoice. High official takes a real stand for righteousness. Strangely enough, most who give public support think they must cater to the unrighteous and quibble with the righteous. But we still believe the righteous are the wicked. We rejoice that Pennsylvania and Philadelphia have kept a path as well as they have. No greater a better record than Philadelphia. State authorities have restrained public agitation for "open Sunday." Presbyterian.

AM LINCOLN WALKS AGAIN AT MIDNIGHT

the legislature of Illinois completed destroying every State liquor law, and defying and refusing to cooperate the Federal Government in liquor enforcement, Vachel Lindsay, Spring-distinguished poet, might have written a stronger and truer poem. Abraham Lincoln walks again at midnight in the very shadow of his monumental law-making body lifted the treasurer of secession and by a vote of 24 in the Senate and a larger one in the house, denied its cooperation in favor of the Constitution. It wiped out the State laws for regulating liquor. Democratic nominee for the mayoralty go, Mr. Cermak, announced that he is to Washington with a delegation to repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Mr. Cermak's mission will mean but it will be an insult to Congress; state which is rebelling against the Union has no claim to be heard in national law-making body. This Illinois is those like it are treasonable and wicked in nature. The turpitude of the law, its lawless madness are clearly such legislation as the repeal of the liquor laws of Illinois. We pity the people in Illinois. It turns them over rather than ever to the mercy of the element and what that means can be seen in the gangs that have overrun the State. The Federal Law stands and will not overthrow Illinois.—The Evangelist.

YOUTH AND CRIME

percent of the crimes of banditry committed by youths between the ages of sixteen and twenty-six." Sir Ernest C., a prominent British judge, said the other day. Although referring only to the Old Country, the same would no doubt apply to crime on this continent. Again and again have the chiefs of police in Toronto and other cities commented upon the numerous crimes committed by young men and women. We are witnessing today in this respect is the result, to a very large extent, of the lack of Christian training and instruction in the home, which has led to the breaking down of moral standards in human life on a scale unprecedented. It is ridiculous to attempt to lay the blame for the crime and low moral standards prevailing today upon the Great War or as a manifestation of post-war hysteria, as many people do. The vast majority of those who are committing crimes and are in revolt against the moral standards of other days never smelt the powder of the Great War and, in many cases, have not even a memory of it. They were babes in arms during those fateful years of 1914-1918. It is the moral impasse it finds itself confronting not the war that has brought the world to today, although the war may have hastened it. At the bottom it is the departure from the old standards of Christian thought and living, the breaking down of the moral and religious restraints of centuries, the overthrow of family altars, the neglect of church and Sunday school, the repudiation of God's Word in the pulpit and pew, and the plac-

ONLY ONE WAY

There's only one way that the lost world can know

*That Jesus for sinners had died;
To tell the glad story he's bidden us go.
And no other way doth provide.*

*If Christ's disciples had silently gone,
And been to their great trust untrue,
His plan of salvation we could not have known—
His mercy for me and for you.*

*He's counting on us the story to tell.
His plan of redemption for man:
He's counting on me—he's counting on you:
The Master has no other plan.—Ex.*

ing of human reason above divine revelation. It is these things, we submit, that are sending young people forth today in multitudes who know no law but their own desires. They see riches as the one thing in life to be obtained by any means, lawful or unlawful, and their creed is summed up in the words, "Let us eat, drink, and be merry: for tomorrow we die." What we have said before, we reiterate—it is only God's Spirit blowing through the arid wastes of human life reviving again the hearts of his people and awakening the living fires within his Church, that will effectively meet and cure the crime menace in all lands today.—Evangelical Christian.

WHY WOMEN OPPOSE THE CIGARET

Because it is dangerous.
Because it befouls the breath and the home.
Because it tends to impair the vital organs.
Because it weakens the mind, the health and the morals.
Because it leads to the drug habit, heroin being the chief agency.
Because the cigaret is now used instead of whiskey to break the will and to destroy the self-respect of the victim of the white slaver.
Because nearly all inhalers smoke in living rooms and bed chambers, compelling women and children to become day and night victims of the poisonous fumes.

Because children, who inhale cigaret smoke from the air of a polluted room, tend to suffer anemia and from nervous irritation of the delicate linings of the body.

Because girls who smoke cigarettes tend to become un-moral, losing their feminine self-defense and showing a disposition to yield to the solicitations of the despoiler of virtue.

Because the youth, who uses cigarettes, tends to fail in his classes, to quit school, to lose respect for his mother, to have low ideals and ambitions, to commit crimes and to drop all interest in religion.

Because the throat, lungs, skin tissues, and, in fact, the whole body of the cigaret smoker, gradually becomes clogged with the poisons of the cigaret, tending to slow up all vital forces and requiring a constant increase in indulgence.

DO YOU READ THE BIBLE?

The Bible continues to be the best seller, but we have a notion that the possession of a Bible is a fetish with some people. We doubt very much indeed whether it is much read in many nominally Christian households. The ignorance of the Bible is appalling. The blank look on the faces of congregations when commonplace illustrations are given from the Bible is startling. The Christian Observer carries an article on "The Reading of the Book," by Walter Williams, president of the University of Missouri. Dr. Williams declares that the Bible is a book of fascinating biography; that the Bible is a book of full length portraits; that the Bible is a well of undefiled English; that the Bible is the foundation of modern civilization; that the Bible is a guide to immortality; and best of all, that the Bible tells the unique story of Jesus Christ, our Lord and our Savior. Many publishers and organizations are interested in the distribution of Bibles. We wish that there were more organizations that promoted the intelligent reading of the Bible. Is it not a fact that devout Christian people often read books about the Bible instead of reading the Bible itself?—Watchman-Examiner.

CHRISTIAN LIVING A B C'S

"Abstain from all appearances of evil."
"Be not conformed to this world."
"Casting all your care upon him."
"Do good unto all men."
"Enter ye in at the strait gate."
"Fear God, and keep his Commandments."
"Go ye . . . and teach all nations."
"Hold fast that which is good."
"In every thing give thanks."
"Judge not, that ye be not judged."
"Keep yourselves in the love of God."
"Love your enemies."
"Mind not high things, but condescend."
"Not slothful in business."
"Overcome evil with good."
"Pray without ceasing."
"Quench not the Spirit."
"Redeeming the time."
"See then that ye walk circumspectly."
"Trust in the Lord."
"Use not vain repetitions."
"Visit the fatherless and widows."
"Watch and pray."
"Worship God."
"Xamine yourselves."
"Yield yourselves unto God."
"Zealous of good works."
& Read your Bible often.

—John Three Sixteen.

PROTEST AGAINST THE PERSECUTION OF BISHOP CANNON

Expressing its approval of the exoneration of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., by a board of ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of charges involving the Bishop's non-clerical activities, the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, declared in a recent statement that the Bishop is the victim of persecution and that this has "obviously been animated by political and class motives." "It is to be hoped," says the Methodist Board, "that the exoneration of Bishop Cannon on this occasion will result in the cessation of the merciless and persistent attacks upon him. It is the firm conviction of many millions of people that Bishop Cannon has been the victim of persecution, relentless and unscrupulous. His enemies have had at their disposal millions of dollars. They command great agencies of publicity. Obviously they have been animated by political and class motives." Widespread indignation has been expressed at the bitter and relentless persecution of Bishop Cannon by foes not hard to designate. He has been for a long time a hounded man. It is high time that the friends of Rascob, Al Smith and the Roman Catholic Church be compelled to call off their dogs.—The United Presbyterian.

Sunday School Notes

(Continued from page 11)

What a difference there is between the theory and the practice of our religion! Our greatest need is to put the truth of God's Word more and more into everyday life. If it is not capable of being practiced, it is not worthy of being professed.

Are Riches a Peril?

What has been your experience? Perhaps you have never possessed great wealth and cannot answer first-hand (few of us can), but from what you have seen of it in the hands of others, was it a peril or a blessing?

"It was a peril if it was gained through dishonest methods. Wealth is a peril if its acquisition makes the poor poorer. Wealth is a peril when it prompts men to make slaves of their employees, or to steal, or to engage in unjust and illegal business practices.

"It was a peril if it was used for dishonest purposes. Money is powerful, and it can buy more power. Men who are hungry for power can often purchase it with money.

"Wealth can be a peril if it dominates the mind, heart, and soul of him who possesses it. Money makes misers of men. No wonder Jesus said, 'It is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.' Money is one thing a man cannot take with him into the next world; yet, if wealth has been his heart and soul, what shall he have left when these are taken from him?

"But wealth may be a blessing. Jesus modified his statement to prove that. It can be a blessing if it is not loved above everything else."

THE SUPERINTENDENT IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL HOUR

(Continued from page 11)

occasion for its writing proves very interesting.

(10) We have a record of each name by classes on a large card board at the door where one can tell how many Sundays absent or present for the whole year. It is very interesting to watch your own record.

(11) The first Sunday of each month, we work out our program by the name of the month. For example, last Sunday was the first Sunday of October:

O—pening Song—Open Mine Eyes.

C—onsecration

T—he meaning of Rally Day.

O—bject lesson

B—ible Reading. Ps. 122.

E—nter into my Heart. Solo.

R—oll Call.

(12) We try to use the blackboard each Sunday with some good saying. For example:

(a) Don't stay away—because—
You won't be missed in the crowd. God misses you.

(b) We had a Slogan of July and August—Come again next Sunday.

When the Sunday's bright,
Or when the Sunday's blue,
To your attendance record
Are you steadfast and true?
Come again next Sunday.

(c) Also have a number of good sayings, such as the following:

Your seat has been dusted,
Your song book's in place,
And you will be trusted
To fill up your space.

These suggestions that I have given, we have used in our school. You may not find them all practical to your school but our aim for all of our schools is to make them most efficient organs for service in our Lord's work. He needs the best we can give but many times we do not give him our best.

The following poem is suggestive—

The Lord had a job for me, but I had too much to do.

I said, "You get somebody else or wait till I get through."

I don't know how the Lord made out; no doubt he got along,

But I felt kind of sneakin' like, I know I done God wrong.

One day I needed the Lord—needed him right away

But he never answered me at all, and I could hear him say

Down in my accusin' heart: "Child, I've got too much to do;

You get somebody else, or wait till I get through."

(Shall we not try to make this last verse our motto?)

Now when the Lord has a job for me, I never try to shirk;

I drop what I have on hand and do the Lord's good work,

And my affairs can run along, or wait till I get through;

Nobody else can do the work that God has marked out for you.

Morrill, Kansas.

OUR LITTLE READERS

HE TOLD THE TRUTH

An Eastern Story

Long ago and far away lived a boy with his mother. His father was dead, and his mother had become very poor. His name was Selim, and he lived in Persia.

At last his mother could keep him longer and sent him to his uncle in the desert of Shiraz, far away over mountain deserts.

He traveled with a caravan of men and helped the servant to care for the camels when they camped at night.

One day they went through a range of the mountains. The rocks were high on each side, and the round wound so that they could see only a little way ahead.

They were still in the mountains when the night came on, and they camped on the side of the little stream, and all lay down to sleep.

But in the night robbers came. Selim woke, he found the merchant servants bound, and the robbers built a little fire for light and warmth.

They brought the merchants and servants one by one to the chief or the robber who tried to make them tell what they had with them.

At last Selim was brought. Selim was so small that the chief wished to wait some time on him.

"My boy," he said, "what money do you have?"

"I have three gold pieces sewed up in the corner of my coat," said Selim.

"Three gold pieces!" said the chief. "That is true, why did you tell me?"

"Because," said Selim, "my mother and I promise three things when I leave home. The first was to be kind to any one I could help; the second, to pray for every day; the third always to tell the truth. So I told you the truth."

"Let me see your coat," said the chief.

He took it, cut open the corner and found three gold coins, as they had said.

Then he took from his girdle three gold coins and gave the six to Selim.

"Sew these all up in your coat," he said, "and always do as your mother said. I had such a mother I should not have been a robber."

Then he called the chief of the men and said to him, "See that this boy finish his journey's end without harm, and protect you when you come back to the mountains. Persia needs boys who will be kind, to pray, and to tell the truth. The Book of Life.

OUR READERS' FORUM

FROM THE BUSINESS MANAGER'S CORRESPONDENCE

Dear Brother Teeter:

Enclosed please find check for our Simply can't do without it. . . .

Why not combine "Brethren Missionary" and "Witness," all in one paper, giving missionary news and reports to all of our one paper (The Evangelist) nominal cost, increased, of course. The Brethren would know, or would be presented to them, facts which more than half of them never will know if not told to them through the Evangelist. May it is not worth while to take more of the paper published by the church to get the news. I feel it would create a much more missionary spirit in the brotherhood if facts were spread more widely in this way.

Yours in the faith,
MRS. DAISY C. BOYD
Woodstock, Virginia

Vol. LIII
Number 16

April 18
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

John and Peter

—From Painting by Dürer
Paul and Mark

Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me.—John 5:39.

God's strongest men and greatest leaders have been men of the Word

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

A WEEK at Berlin

In response to an invitation extended by the pastor during the Pennsylvania Conference last October, I went to the Berlin church for the week ending with Easter Sunday. In spite of some rather bad weather the Berlin people came out faithfully in large numbers to hear the Word. We had our largest evening attendance on Saturday, which seems rather unusual to the outsider.

It was a pleasure to minister here and meet the brethren again in this place which has certain distinctive historical associations for our Church. We found, as before, the same gracious hospitality and attentive hearing on the part of the membership, and enjoyed particularly the spiritual fellowship of the pastor, Brother Lantz, who believes and preaches the Truth. We came away with many pleasant memories and a generous offering which, aside from expenses, is being turned over to the Seminary fund for the furnishing of a house for the Seminary students. We expect to have the house ready this fall, if sufficient funds are raised by that time. Any individuals, churches or organizations wishing to have a part in this project, should communicate with me for information.

INTERESTING Records of the Past

While at Berlin we learned a number of interesting facts concerning the Brethren Church and certain families which have been connected with it. Brother Musser, well known to many readers, furnished much of this information. By him I was introduced to Dr. E. C. Saylor, a genial dentist of Berlin, whose hobby is the gathering of genealogical data. The material he has accumulated is quite amazing and valuable. He told me much of deep interest about my mother's family, the Gnageys of Somerset County. He showed me the original diary kept meticulously in German by my great-grandfather, John Fike. There I read the following notation: "My daughter Mary Fike was 17 years, 2 months, 26 days, when she was married to Daniel Gnagey by John Beachly." Then follows a long itemized list of articles which he provided for my grandmother to begin housekeeping. The value of each article is carefully set down. Five bushels of wheat are put down at five dollars, while three cows and three yearling heifers are valued at fifty dollars, and one old grey horse and colt bring fifteen dollars. Many of the items would seem rather strange to the modern bride, such as the Dutch oven, hoe, milk-strainer, spinning-wheel, and 36 gallon copper kettle. There is also one Testament valued at one dollar. You will not find many Bibles among the wedding presents of today. Perhaps that is one reason why the modern marriages do not last so well.

But the most interesting item called to my attention by Dr. Saylor was the following record copied from a Bible over one hundred years old: "In the year of Christ 1858, the 18th of December, was born to us a daughter and we gave to her the name Maria Gnagey." This was the sister of

Rev. A. D. Gnagey, and my own mother, now with the Lord.

As I read these records of the past, there came to mind the words of Job, "Man that is born of woman is of few days, and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not." How fleeting is the little moment that we call life. But we have a Hope which is steadfast and sure. "The dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

AN Article by Doctor Monroe

Brother Kenneth Monroe, professor of Old Testament and Hebrew in the Seminary, appears as a contributor in the last issue of the Bibliotheca Sacra, one of the oldest and best known among the religious quarterlies of this country. The article deals with "The Problem of Primal Religion," and is a thoughtful criticism of certain evolutionary theories of the rise of religion. The writer argues for "an original pure monotheism which the primitive man of God's creation was able to receive, comprehend, and appreciate." The article has already been the subject of favorable comment by two well known Christian scholars.

DETECTIVE and Seminary Student

Recently I was pleasantly surprised to see a picture of one of our part time Seminary students in the leading Cleveland daily newspaper, accompanied by the following write-up:

"Although he works here six nights a week as a regular member of the police department, raiding bootleggers and battling other law violators, Detective Leroy Coffey aspires soon to become a minister. To that end, he is studying theology during his spare time and attending classes at Ashland College.

"Detective Coffey finds often that he has to travel fast to keep his schedule, but he usually drives to Ashland and arrives in time for his eleven o'clock class. He leaves school at 3:15 in the afternoon and generally gets home in time to sleep several hours before resuming his duties at seven in the evening as detective and night desk man at headquarters.

"In 1926, Coffey was graduated from a New York theological school but, feeling that his theological education was incomplete, he did not enter the ministry at that time. He first started out as a salesman and in 1927 became a member of the Mansfield detective force. . . . Although Coffey is to all purposes a minister, he is a 'regular fellow' to all his fellow department members and associates."

Wet Propaganda

By Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington

The most insidious, cunningly devised, misleading, and the most lavishly financed propaganda ever directed against a constitutional provision or a general policy of government in the United States is now being promoted against the Eighteenth Amendment. A vast amount of this propaganda is as unscrupulous and vicious in its tendencies as the forces back of it are financially powerful. The correspondence and papers seized by the U. S. Senate Lobby Committee and the evidence brought out in that committee's investigation, show motives and methods that scarcely fall short of an attempt by the use of a large expenditure of money to undermine that part of constitution and the government, which powerful forces back of it consider to be the way of their greed and avarice. The representatives of the outlawed liquor interests are kept in the background while a small group of other allied financial interests direct the campaign. These interests with their numerous subsidiaries, both veiled and implied use of newspapers, magazine advertising of these groups, attempting to control the press for its purposes. These financial wizards, it is claimed, control 40 per cent of wealth in industries employing one million workers and agents. Their avowed object is to secure the repeal of prohibition and to substitute therefor the sale of beer with a tax of three cents a glass. This tax, they believe will provide revenue to the government equivalent to the amount now paid in federal income tax by the corporations which taxes they plan to have eliminated by the process of substitution.

Under the leadership of such powerful forces the old liquor interests see what they believe to be an opportunity of stemming the tide of prohibition. Not only so, but they see at the same time the opportunity by means of a repeal amendment, to establish for the first time in American history constitutional rights for the beverage alcohol traffic.

While the clever effort thus far made by the wet forces is to keep respectability at a window dressing and in the positions of leadership, for the wet cause, back of the smoke curtain are to be found constituting a major part of the rank and file, all the forces of the underworld that prey upon society and all those groups that constituted the saloon and vice interests of the old days. If those forces, by keeping out of the lime light as the real instigators of the repeal plot, can succeed by whatever subterfuge in dividing the law abiding, liberty loving, respectable social classes, and the change in the constitution can be effected, those same organized anti-social groups will come once again to occupy the coveted position of an oligarchy of crime, degeneracy, vice, and vicious social forces, under the protection of the minority rights provisions of the constitution. This is the real object underlying all the sophistry of the anti-prohibition campaign. This is the real issue, under cover of which designed political demagogues and political factots hope once more to ride into power.

IN THIS NUMBER

Short Talks by the Editor, . . . . .	3
Leadership Against Intemperance—Editor, . . . . .	4
Prayer: A Force or a Farce—L. S. Bauman, . . . . .	6
Whence the Bootlegger—P. M. Welshimer, . . . . .	6
Studies in the Types—R. I. Humbert, . . . . .	6
Studies in the Scriptures—C. F. Yoder, . . . . .	7
Significant News and Views, . . . . .	8
The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon, . . . . .	9
Suggestions for Temperance Programs, . . . . .	10
C. E. at Milledgeville, Illinois—Villetta Allen, . . . . .	11
Dr. Gribble's Interesting Missive from Africa, . . . . .	12
News from the Field, . . . . .	14
Our Little Readers, . . . . .	16
Announcements, . . . . .	16

GEORGE S. BAER

Editor

R. R. TEETER

Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE

BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Short Talks by Steps in the Way to

Editor on and Fellowship

VI CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP

There is no more universal and unalterable Christian principle than the principle of stewardship. It is important that every indwelt church member shall be properly made aware of duty in this regard. For his stewardship is the church's; there should be but one will to rule a stewardship; consciousness and responsibility with the practice of the principles of Christian stewardship.

Meaning of Stewardship

Stewardship means trusteeship. A steward is one who has been made a guardian or trustee of another's affairs. He has been intrusted with the handling of property that belongs to another, and that which has been committed to him shall be managed, not for his interests, but for the owner's. That is the position of the Christian—he is a steward, put in charge of the affairs and possessions of God. The Christian is but a tenant, or caretaker, or manager, and not the owner of the things he possesses, and he is ever in mind always the interests and honor of his greater proprietor, knowing that it is "required in stewards that a man be found faithful" (1 Cor. 4:2).

God the Great Owner

That God is the great owner of all is the testimony of many Scriptures. The father of God's chosen people acknowledges it: "Abram said to the king of Sodom, I have lifted up mine hand unto the Lord, the most high God, the possessor of heaven and earth" (Gen. 14:22). David confesses it: "Thine, O Lord, is greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory; and majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all. Both riches and honor come of thee. . . . For all things come of thee and of thine own have we given thee" (1 Chron. 29:11-14). As he sings: "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof" (Ps. 24:1). Then the Psalmist (50:10) quotes God as saying: "Every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills." Again, "The silver is mine and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of hosts", as Haggai (2:8) reports. Our very lives belong to God, for Paul says, "Ye are not your own, for ye were bought with a price" (1 Cor. 6:19, 20). And God, being the owner of all, is the giver of all, according to James (1:17): "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, . . ."

Man is a Steward

Just as certainly as God is the owner of all, so there are many Scriptures attesting to the fact of man's stewardship. Here are a few: "Are not thou and thy brethren that thou forget not the Lord thy God, . . . And thou sayest in thine heart, My power, and the might of mine hand, hath gotten me this wealth. But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God; for he it is that giveth thee power to get wealth" (Deut. 8:11, 17, 18). God tells us that we are debtors for everything we have: "And hast thou that thou didst not receive? now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?" (1 Cor. 4:7). He writes to Timothy (1 Tim. 6:7), "For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain that we can carry nothing out. That is the case with the steward exactly; he has nothing to call his own. And with the Christian steward, not even his body belongs to him; it is purchased as a temple for the dwelling of the Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 6:19, 20), and as such it is intrusted to be kept clean and free from sin. Above everything else the Gospel is committed unto the Christian as a great stewardship. Paul declares, in 1 Corinthians 9:17, "A stewardship of the gospel is committed unto me." And in Ephesians 3:2, "If so be that ye have heard of the stewardship of the gospel which was given me to you-ward." And this was a unique commitment to Paul, but was to every believer. The apostle Peter writes: "As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God" (1 Peter 4:10). The stewardship of the gospel includes everybody and everything—all is to be given to the Lord. That the good news of the saving grace of Christ may be carried to the ends of the earth.

How Show Faithfulness as Stewards

That faithfulness to stewardship is required will be admitted without argument. Both reason and the Scripture demand it. Paul tells us that " . . . it is required in stewards that a man be found faithful" (1 Cor. 4:2). And everybody knows it is true. The whole business structure of our day is erected on the presumption that men will be faithful to their stewardship. And when men fail the business for which they are responsible falls to the ground. It is so with Christian stewardship, unfaithfulness means disappointment to Christ, hindrance to the cause of Christ and disaster to the souls of men. But how is the faithfulness of stewards to be demonstrated? What are they expected to do?

First, the steward must give himself wholly to the Lord to be used in his service. Paul pleads for that: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present yourselves a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service" (Rom. 12:1). And he informs us that the secret of the very generous, even extravagant, giving on the part of the churches of Macedonia was that they "first gave of their own selves unto the Lord, and unto us by the will of God" (2 Cor. 8:5).

Second, faithfulness to Christian stewardship is shown by giving a tithe,—if there were not the danger of being misunderstood we would say, "paying" a tithe,—of all one's increase. A tithe is indeed a debt that the Christian must meet before everything else, not in the sense that it is a statute carried over from the Mosaic law, but in the sense that it is a requirement of God established from the beginning for the good of the race, and hinging upon the very nature of the relation of God and man. When the prophet complained of the failure of the Jews to bring to the house of God the tithes and offerings, it was not merely that they had become lax regarding one item of complicated Jewish legalism, but more especially that they had become careless about a fundamental principle of godliness. "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation" (Mal. 3:8, 9). They were robbing God of something far more vital than money and they themselves were missing a blessing that was essential to their spiritual lives. Therefore challenged the prophet, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." And Paul was right in line with this divine declamation when he wrote to the church at Corinth: "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God has prospered him . . ." (1 Cor. 16:2). Paul does not definitely mention tithing, but he calls them to proportionate, systematic giving, and in the light of the requirements of the Mosaic law concerning which there were Jewish Christians in Corinth perfectly familiar and the otherwise widespread understanding and practice of tithing, we can fairly conclude that the Apostle expected nothing less than the tithe from these Christians. In view of these facts, and the further fact that Jesus never declared the fundamental principle, or law of the tithe null and void, but rather sanctioned it, it would seem that the church of today is under duty to bring to the Lord its tithes and offerings, giving, however, out of love and gratitude to the Savior of men rather than because of any requirement of law. Moreover, the tithe is required as a recognition of God's ownership and man's stewardship; nothing less would be worthy of those who dwell under the dispensation of grace. May every new child of God accept this responsibility and begin without delay or reluctance to do all that the Lord requireth.

In the third place, Christian stewardship involves not merely the paying of tithes, but the using of all that remains according to

(Continued on page 9)

Leadership Against Intemperance

One of our good supporters and friends, who has taken issue with us at times in some things we have said, writes that the preachers are to blame and it is to them we must look for leadership along these lines (the lines of interest he was advocating). We are about persuaded that he is right, very much right, not only in one line, but in all lines of proper interest.

But the thing that is now getting us disturbed is the progress that is being made by the forces of intemperance and greed. We are concerned about how we are going to save the great gains that have been made by the forces of righteousness. It is no weak gesture that the liquor interests are making, but one of the most persistent, most highly financed and most capably directed campaigns that the country has ever known. They have supporting them the almost unanimous influence of the metropolitan press. And the ubiquitous movie is making prohibition and enforcement agents the butt of ridicule and presenting them as feeble and ineffective. Added to these is the still more subtle factor, that of a generation of young people who have never known the saloon and cannot understand what all this furore is about. They constitute just the kind of soil in which all this highly financed wet propaganda will readily take root and grow. The reaction against prohibition is growing, let us not be deceived about that. And it is not because of any inherent weakness of prohibition as a policy, but because of the unparalleled warfare against it, added to the fact that the forces of righteousness are comparatively inactive in many fields. What are we going to do about it?

Do not say it matters not to the church, that it is not the church's business. It is the church's business. It is the church that has brought this temperance success to pass, under the guidance of God, and shall we turn thumbs down, now that we find ourselves challenged with one of the most severe battles in history? It is true that evangelism is the first duty of the church, but the churches that have been most successful in evangelism have been the churches that have stood strongest against all forces of unrighteousness, organized or unorganized. And the ministerial leadership must be held responsible for the leadership the churches take in this time of crisis for prohibition. May God save us from lethargy and disinterestedness, and cause us to awake to our duty and show ourselves worthy members and leaders of the cause of Christ.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Brother A. E. Whitted, pastor of the church at Louisville, Ohio, was in the editor's office last week and informed us that his work is going forward encouragingly.

The secretary of General Conference Executive Committee writes his second notice to leaders of organizations that want a place on the General Conference program, that it is time for the programs to be formulated and sent to the secretary.

We are publishing in this issue the program of the Ministers' Retreat at Shipshewana Lake, Indiana, on May 4, 5 and 6. Very fittingly they are stressing the "Abundant Life." Doubtless a real spiritual feast is in store for those who attend. Prof. Stuckey is announced to give a special address on Tuesday afternoon.

College Hill is astir this week with members of the College Board of Trustees, which is in session. Rev. George T. Ronk of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is president of the Board. The Foreign Mission Board is to have a meeting in Ashland this week also. We shall doubtless have reports concerning these events in a later issue of The Evangelist.

We have a good report from the enthusiastic Endeavorers of Milledgeville, Illinois, where Brother George E. Cone is the pastor. They have just recently completed an attendance contest, resulted in much good to the society. They discovered the need of a Junior society and have proceeded to organize one. They made and paid their pledge to the Endeavorers' work at Ky. Kentucky. That may be a suggestion to some societies that neglected this important matter. Send more reports to your department editor, Brother Whitmer, at South Bend, Indiana.

Dr. Florence N. Gribble writes from French Equatorial Africa concerning the activities of our missionaries there. They celebrated Christmas together and held their quarterly conference at Bellevue station. The Misses Emmert and Tyson, who were in America on furlough last year, reached the field on January 1st. Miss Emmert to resume her school work and Miss Tyson her work as nurse. Dr. Gribble has reopened the school at Bassai. Estella Myers and Mr. and Mrs. Foster are on their journey to their homeland on furlough. There are thirteen workers now in the field.

Dr. G. C. Carpenter, who, with his wife, is spending the winter in Florida, writes an interesting letter this week. He makes several observations, one of which was regarding an experience of disappointment he had at an Easter service at a popular church. We are not surprised that he "went away from the service hungry for there is nothing that can satisfy the soul save the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and the Bible has no "Gospel," if it has no crucifixion and risen Christ. We are grateful for Dr. Carpenter's observations and we shall look forward to other communications from him at his convenience.

From Elkhart, Indiana, comes a report of a very successful Easter day's services in the First Brethren church of which Brother W. I. Duker is the pastor. Their cash offering for the quarter resulted in $1,100, the largest yet received. As the pastor predicted, this resulted in clearing the church of debt on their beautiful new first unit. Dr. G. W. Rench was the guest preacher at that occasion. The Sunday school attendance reached the highest mark. If they are doing that with only the first unit of a new church building erected, what won't they do when they once their building completed?

Brother Frank G. Coleman has reason to be encouraged over his continued moving forward of the work at Hagerstown, Maryland. He has completed six months of service and in that time the work of the church has been greatly improved; a revival meeting has been held resulting in twenty-one confessions, all but one of which are new members. Have, or are expected to, become members of the Brethren church. A communion service with a banner attendance was conducted. A prayer meeting attendance has been built up with an average of eighty, reaching the high mark of ninety-five on one evening. But their goal is still much higher.

Brother J. L. Bowman, pastor of the church at Linwood, Maryland, reports seventeen baptized and received into the church during the last few months. Three were baptized during the week preceding Easter. This church has been hard hit by the depression and financial depression, but it is courageously carrying on, notwithstanding. Brother Bowman tells us that he and his people appreciate the Evangelist, and we are glad for this expression. He also gives a very gratifying compliment to the splendid work of Dr. L. H. on the Sunday school lesson publications and says his school is using Brethren literature and has no desire to use any other. His loyalty is of a kind that makes us rejoice, and wish for a steadily increasing number of its kind.

PRAYER REQUESTS FOR THIS WEEK—

Brother Coleman of Hagerstown, Maryland, writes, "We are interested in your prayers."

Dr. Gribble asks for prayer "for a teacher" for the Bellevue station.

The Christian Endeavorers of Milledgeville, Illinois, say they pray for other C. E. societies, and ask that others pray for them.

Continue your earnest prayer for the recovery of the wife of Brother Sylvester Lowman, Portis, Kansas.

Prayer: A Force, or a Farce?

By Louis S. Bauman, D.D.

(A Sunday morning address delivered at the Los Angeles County C. E. Convention, in Pasadena, Calif.)

One man has said: "Prayer is either a prodigious force or a disgraceful farce." That statement is absolutely true. For if there is an omnipotent God above, whose arm can be made bare and moved into action by prayer, then prayer is at once the most prodigious force in the universe. If, on the other hand, no God exists and the ear is open to our cry, then prayer is assuredly a farce.

But prayer is not a farce. Four thousand years of human experience and human history assures us that no other potent force exists than a true believer upon his knees before the God of Abraham and the God of Paul. The experience of all the great souls who have made the world while history gives unfailing testimony. No great purpose has ever been achieved by any individual until that man has closeted himself away from the world in some mountain fastness or desert wilderness and there alone in communion with Omnipotence, found the power needed for achievement. The tremendous achievements of Moses, of Elijah, of Daniel, of John the Baptist, of Jesus Paul, of the early Christians who stood the might of Rome, of Luther, Wesley, and of Moody, can all be explained; and in the lives of such men as these human progress in all things has while has found its greatest achievement. The life-story of every one of these great souls gives testimony that the effectual fervent prayer of a right man availeth much."

The most enduring race in the world is the race of Abraham. No other nation has affected so profoundly the course of human progress so much as the nation of Israel. And from its beginning that nation has been a nation of prayer. Moses, its greatest human leader, stands before the world as a man whose every achievement was an aftermath of prayer. Forty years of communion with the living God on the back side of the desert of Arabia, sent Moses forth to lead a people with whom all the might of the mighty Pharaohs could not be compared. The greatest of Israel's mighty prophets was pre-eminently a man of prayer. Apart from prayer, the life of Moses stands forth as an unsolvable enigma. He prayed and the heavens were closed for three years and six months. He prayed and the windows of heaven were opened and poured forth their showers upon an earth parched almost to a cinder. He prayed and the flour of the widow could not be emptied. He prayed and the widow's son leaped back into life. He prayed and all the prayers of the priests of Baal could not cause their fire to strike a match. He prayed and his own sword poured forth flaming fire from the skies. He prayed and the ravens rushed forth to bear him food. He prayed and the mighty Ahab and Jezebel were brought to judgment. He prayed, and the cloud-chariots swung low and carried him alive into the glory above.

And Daniel, who was no less a statesman than was Moses, a man whose life can only be explained on the ground that he knelt three times a day before a prayer-answering

God. He prayed and his wisdom exceeded all the learning of the wise men of Babylon, and Nebuchadnezzar's great prayer was interpreted correctly. He prayed, and the hand-writing that the mightiest intellectuals of earth could not read, became to him as A B Cs. He prayed and the mouths of lions were closed, and the wicked plotting of the presidents and princes of Babylon came to naught. Daniel was a man who did things, and he did them through prayer.

St. Paul, probably in the sight of God the greatest man that ever lived, could not possibly be understood apart from his prayer-life. He, himself, could he be here to testify, would probably tell you that his prayers accomplished far greater results than his preaching, and that is not to discount the might of his spoken words. Through prayer, he stood before the mightiest kings of this earth, and caused them to tremble. Through prayer, he put into motion almost single-handed those forces that conquered eventually the mightiest Gentile stronghold back of which Satan ever marshalled his forces.

If Christianity can boast of great and glorious victories in the days that are past, it must be admitted that the mightiest weapon she used in the battle was prayer. When she laid this instrument aside and began to use other weapons, she always signally failed. And, if today, the battlements of the Church seem to be crumbling, as many think, then it is because the Church is not upon her knees. Strange as it may appear, so long as the Church of God is upon her knees, she is invincible. When she rises to her feet, fighting in her own strength, she wavers and the forces of hell rejoice. No wonder the famous Scottish queen declared that she feared the prayers of old John Knox more than all the fleets of England.

The Master himself was no exception to the rule that the great purposes of life are accomplished through prayer. It was from his knees he arose in the mountain fastnesses and went forth to work the signs and wonders that manifested his Godship. It was from a secret place of prayer up in the hills of Galilee that he went forth to walk the wild waves of the sea, to still the tempest, and with garment so holy that those who but touched the hem were healed of their sicknesses.

To the Master, prayer was more important than teaching or healing, for when "great multitudes came together to hear and be healed," He withdrew himself into the desert and prayed. Prayer was more important than sleep, for "He went out into the mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God." Prayer was more important than securing workers by either machinery or money, for he said, "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." Prayer was more important than preaching, for we read that he taught his disciples to pray, but nowhere do we read that he taught them to preach. The earthly ministry of Christ began with prayer (Luke 3:21), continued in prayer, and ended with prayer (Luke 23:34). And his ministry in

A PRAYER

By Harry Treat Walters

O help me, God,
To walk each day
That when mankind
Shall look my way;
No matter where
Nor how it be,
Christ only, always,
They may see.

O help me, Christ
That I may trust
Thee, mid the world's
Mad greed and lust.
O Give me faith
That I may try
To lift, O Christ,
Thy Cross on high.
—Evangelical-Messenger

prayer now continues in heaven, where "he ever liveth to make intercession for us."

The modern disciples of our Lord, whose ministry has been most richly blessed, have all been men of prayer. Think of George Muller, who never applied to any human being personally for anything, but asked everything of God alone; and yet, more than £1,800,000 was sent to him by the living God in answer to prayer for his orphanages in England. Consider the work of J. Hudson Taylor, who sent forth a thousand missionaries (the largest body of Christian missionaries in all time) into the farthest reaches of China, carrying the message of God, and asked of no man, but asked all of God. There is more than one incident in the life of J. Hudson Taylor, that, had it happened in the days of St. Luke would have been written in the Acts of the Apostles.

The God of Elijah, and of Daniel, and of Paul, and of Muller, and of Taylor, still lives. And, strange as it may seem, the prayers of his children are still his greatest opportunities. It is one of the things hard to fathom, and which we shall never understand until in another world our God shall himself explain, why God has chosen to limit himself that certain things cannot be done by him unless we pray. And, only when we pray, has God the opportunity to do those particular things. Therefore, our prayers, in a very real sense, make openings for God to get into action. Our prayers furnish God with opportunities! Think of it! That child of yours,—has faithful prayer on your part furnished God an opportunity to turn him away from sin? That unsaved friend, has a believing prayer on your part furnished God with an opportunity to unloose the forces that will bring him to his knees for salvation? That great difficulty of life that you cannot solve, has prevailing prayer on your part given God an opportunity to solve it for you? We sometimes long for opportunities to come our way. Wouldn't it be well for us to think of sending more opportunities up God's way? If you carry but one thought away from this great Convention, let it be this: PRAYER FURNISHES GOD OPPORTUNITY!

(to be continued)

Whence the Bootlegger?

By Rev. P. H. Welshimer

The wet press of the nation requests the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, in order to stop bootlegging. We had bootleggers, and plenty of them, in the days of the saloon. When Frank Willis was governor of Ohio in 1915 and 1916, the 1,200 saloon-keepers of Cleveland sent a delegation to the governor, complaining it was not fair for them to pay their license of $1,000 each year for the privilege of running a saloon and then to have 2,500 bootleggers operating in the city without license.

In 1907 the saloon-keepers of Pittsburgh sent a representative to the courts, complaining of the injustice of their paying high license when they could furnish the names and addresses of 7,000 bootleggers in Allegheny county who were operating without license. And they tell us that the Eighteenth Amendment has made bootleggers.

Mr. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, appeared before the Congressional Committee at Washington, as it considered the wet and dry question, and argued against the Eighteenth Amendment, stating that our personal liberty was destroyed. A member of the committee asked Mr. Atterbury why the Pennsylvania railroad company strictly forbids engineers, firemen and other employees to drink intoxicating liquors while on duty; and further asked the question if that was taking away their personal liberty. His silly little answer was, "They don't have to work for us if they don't want to." What an argument!

Everything the opponents of the Eighteenth Amendment are asking for we have already had. We have it all the way up, from local option in the wards of cities, clear through to national prohibition. To repeal the Eighteenth Amendment would mean to go back and fight the entire battle over again.

Mr. Atterbury will not permit his engineers to guide trains, over two parallel tracks, if under the influence of booze. Does he not know there are twenty-five million engineers every day out on the highways in the United States, driving as speedily in their automobiles as the trains run on the parallel tracks? These autos have no roadways. They are passing cars continually. A slight move by the driver may cause many deaths. If it is essential for a man at the throttle of the locomotive to be steady and sober, is it not just as essential for the man at the wheel to be sober?

That the wet and dry issue will loom large in the presidential campaign of 1932 is evident. The need just now is education. Eleven years ago the nation went dry. Men and women who cast their first vote this year were only ten years old when the saloon went out of existence. Many of them never saw a saloon, and multitudes of them know but little of its evil work. They are hearing a little in favor of prohibition, for the drys are keeping their heads still, while the wets are yelling their heads off everywhere. We get the wet news in the daily press, and in the majority of the leading magazines. At the moment there are many dirty flings at the Eighteenth Amendment. All of this has a tendency to lead the youth of today to believe that prohibition is a bad thing and that the golden age will come when the ban is lifted and a better quality of liquor can be purchased in the public places. They are led to believe that state control will solve the problem. State control did not solve the problem when it had the change. We had the saloon, and the broker and the bootlegger, and it was the lawlessness of the saloon and the liquor dealer that drove them out of business and ushered in the Eighteenth Amendment. If you remembered, you may put a nice suit of clothes on a skunk and wash his face with French perfume, seat him on a cushion in your parlor, but keep your distance—he is still the same old skunk. Wherever there is booze there is danger. You can't have booze without alcohol, and alcohol is hell always. Just remember that when some fellow comes along pronouncing his anathemas upon the Eighteenth Amendment.—The American Issue.

Studies in the Types

By R. I. Humberd

Study No. 3

The Smitten Rock

We have considered the incident of the serpent in the wilderness as a type of the cross of Christ, as illustrating the necessity of believing God's message and trusting in Christ for our salvation. In our last study we considered the Passover as a type of the cross as illustrating the necessity of personal application. In this lesson we will see what the smitten rock has to teach us.

The Israelites ran out of water and murmured against Moses. Under directions from God, Moses struck the rock in Horeb" and water flowed forth in such volume as to supply the whole multitude. (Ex. 17:6).

Again at a later date the water failed and the people rose against Moses. "Take the rod . . . and SPEAK ye unto the rock before their eyes and it shall give forth his water. . . . And Moses lifted up his hand and with his rod he SMOTE the rock twice: and water came out abundantly" (Num. 20:7 to 12).

Let us note that Moses did not follow God's directions, for on this occasion he was commanded to speak to the rock but he did as he had done on the former occasion and struck the rock. Although Moses did not obey God at the second stroke, water flowed out for the people. But Moses had to bear his punishment and hear the fearful sentence, "Ye shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them."

Moses Disappointed

For forty years Moses had labored in trying to bring these hundred thousand stubborn men into the land of Canaan but one mistake, made in a moment of time and in the presence of a howling mob, caused him to lose the fruit of all his labors. It was indeed a great disappointment to Moses and he "besought the Lord . . . I pray thee let me go over," but the Lord said, "Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter" (Deut. 3:23 to 25).

As we read these words our sympathy immediately goes out to Moses and we wonder at God's justice.

Let us note that God is very particular with his types and this should serve as a warning to those who are so prone to place a question mark at God's commands. Let us also remember that when God was thus dealing with Moses, he had us in mind and had it "written for our admonition" (warning) (1 Cor. 10:11).

The Broken Type

We turn to the New Testament for the solution of our problem and find that when Moses struck the rock he was in type striking Christ for "that Rock was Christ" (1 Cor. 10:4).

Thus when Moses struck the Rock the first time, it set forth the type that Christ must be smitten before the Holy Spirit (typified by the water) would be poured out in blessing upon mankind.

But when Moses struck the rock on the second occasion he set forth in type the idea that one crucifixion was not sufficient. This was a great error and through this incident God is teaching us that Christ has died (been smitten) once for all and has opened an avenue for the blessing of the Holy Spirit.

Water Type of Holy Spirit

The water typified the Holy Spirit as John is careful to inform us in his Gospel, chapter 7, verse 37. "Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink. He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. It is this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was NOT YET glorified."

Christ, the Rock, has been smitten and a fountain has been opened for sin and for uncleanness (Zech. 13:1). The Holy Spirit came on Pentecost and it is the express command of God that we "be filled with the Spirit" (Eph. 5:18).

The Spirit—God's Power

Some people inform us that we should study psychology and know the workings of the human mind and use this power for successful witnessing for Christ, but all the power that Christ has provided is the Holy Spirit (Acts

1:8), and when Peter and John were persecuted and had prayed "that with all boldness they may speak thy word . . . the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness" (Acts 4:29).

Thus we see that, although they had received the Holy Spirit at Pentecost they were given a new infilling for a special purpose in response to their prayer.

Water can only run down hill and it is thus with the Holy Spirit. He will only work through a humble and lowly heart.

The water of the Holy Spirit can only run through a clean channel, a channel kept clean by confession (1 John 1:9). Also the valve must be kept open so nothing will hinder or quench the flow of the Holy Spirit through the life (1 Thess. 5:19).

Lake Odessa, Michigan.

STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES

By C. F. Yoder, B.D., Ph.D.

THE FAITH OF THE GOSPEL

V. ORGANIZATION

Every living body is an organism, its organs being adapted to the fulfillment of its functions. The church, as a living temple, the body of Christ, is also an organism, being perfected, and adapted to the fulfillment of its functions.

1. The function of direction

Christ is the head of the church (Eph. 1:22, 23) and the Holy Spirit is his universal vicar or representative (Jn. 16:7-14; Acts 13:2; 20:28). The apostles were called to organize the first church and give the written word. They were personal witnesses of the resurrected Christ, and received the Gospel directly from him (Eph. 4:11; 1 Cor. 9:1). Jesus Christ, having fulfilled the law (Gal. 4:4, 5) and established the new covenant in his blood (Lk. 22:20), gave the new law (Heb. 7:12) which is the Gospel (Gal. 1:7-9), the final word for the church (2 Thess. 1:8). The interpretation or application of the Gospel is first of all individual (Rev. 2:7, etc.). The epistles are addressed to the churches and not to the clergy. But the lay members will respect the teaching of their pastors (Heb. 13:7), and when discipline is needed the entire congregation may take means to enforce the Gospel (1 Cor. 5:4, 5).

2. The function of nutrition

For its spiritual nourishment the church has Christ, the bread of life (Jn. 6:51, 63), the Holy Spirit, the water of life (Jn. 7:38, 39), the word of God, the spiritual milk (1 Pet. 2:2) and the strong meat (Heb. 5:12-14).

All these the believer may receive directly (1 Pet. 2:3-5; Lk. 11:13; Jn. 5:39). When the veil of the temple (symbol of the body of Christ) was broken, it signified that from henceforth believers have direct access to God (Heb. 9 and 10). They now constitute a royal priesthood (1 Pet. 2:5) and have no need of a priestly order. Priests and the "sacrifice of the mass" are a negation of the work of Christ and a robbery of the rights of believers.

But Christ has a teaching ministry to feed his flock. He has given to the church gifts for its edification. Its ministers are called pastors, elders, or bishops (1 Tim. 3:1-11; Eph. 4:12; Tit. 1:5-9; 1 Pet. 5:1-4). There are also teachers (Eph. 4:11; Rom. 12:7) including prophets (1 Cor. 14:31) and helpers (1 Cor. 12:28; Phil. 4:3).

3. The function of reproduction, or propaganda

The law of reproduction according to species rules in the natural world (Gen. 1:24) and also in the spiritual realm (Jn. 3:6; Rom. 8:2). The church cannot by baptism or any other rite confer life eternal. That is the gift of God (Rom. 6:23). The part of the church is to present the Gospel, and the Holy Spirit will do the rest (Acts 5:32). The best testimony is the life of faithful believers which is the only Bible that the public reads (Acts 11:25; 1 Pet. 3:1). But believers also have the duty of testifying by their words whenever they have opportunity (Acts 8:4; Jas. 5:19, 20).

Besides, the church approves those whom the Spirit calls to the special work of missionaries (called in Greek, apostles) (Acts 13:1-4; 14:14). They preached in new places (Rom. 15:20) and founded churches (1 Cor. 9:1, 2). There were also evangelists whose special work was preaching and supervision rather than that of remaining as pastors to build up the churches (Eph. 4:11; 2 Tim. 4:5; Tit. 1:5).

4. The function of work, or fruit bearing

Besides being useful to the plant for reproduction and propagation of the species, fruit is useful to both animals and men. The extension work of the church is not only to multiply the number of believers, but to be of blessing to all the world.

The good works to which believers are called are not, however, that they may finally be saved but because they are already saved; and the Holy Spirit in them is manifesting himself in the fruit of the Spirit, or good works of the believer. And besides the good works that each may do separately, there are the good works that the church may do collectively; and for this there are persons called to direct the deacons and deaconesses, and the helpers in the different auxiliary societies of the church (1 Tim. 3:8-13; Deut. 31:12; 2 Cor. 9:3).

5. The function of support

Bodies need clothing and lodging places as well as food. The church has many needs which require money to supply. Jesus and the disciples were supported by offerings and had a common treasury (Mk. 15:41; Jn. 13:29). The missionaries were supported in part by the offerings of the churches (2 Cor. 12:8), Paul and Barnabas being the only two that were self-supporting, and that in part (1 Cor. 9:6).

But they ministered freely unto all. The system of fees for baptism, or other services of God's ministers, is entirely unscriptural. Jesus said, "Freely ye have received, freely give" (Mt. 10:8). He drove the traffickers out of the house of God (Matt. 21:13).

But when the Spirit came to the church he inspired a wonderful liberality, as he always does (Acts 2:45, 46). This spirit of giving is called a "grace" of the Spirit, one of his precious gifts (2 Cor. 8:7). It brings blessing to him who gives and to him who receives (2 Cor. 9:6; Phil. 4:15-19). True believers bring their gifts, not from obligation, or to meet some temporary need of the church, but because they love God and wish to show their gratitude to him by bringing the tithes and offerings which he has ordained for his work (1 Cor. 9:13, 14), that others may also be saved (Acts 20:35; 2 Cor. 9:7).

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

THE CHURCH AS IT IS TODAY

The best news of the churches is that they are turning seriously to their business of evangelism in the true sense of the word. The Church of England assembly has definitely called its people to this task; and both the archbishop of York and many bishops, Lin Exeter, Liverpool, Ripon and others, have pressed upon their congregations this duty. The bishop of Exeter says that wire and the press are doing much of the work that was once done on street corners and in parks; what remains is the personal work which it is agreed on all hands has been seriously neglected. There should be a general staff to deal with evangelism, the bishop of Liverpool says.

It is an important fact to have in the Church of England an awakening to this paramount task. The mission of Dr. Temple, Oxford, in which there was provision made for personal interview both with the missionary and with his helper, Canon Pym, has helped to bring the need of evangelism to the fore.

The Congregationalists are calling their people to the same work. Excellent pamphlets are being widely distributed to show how it can be done through visitation and open-air preaching as well as through the ministry of the sanctuary. The Methodists, soon to become one and undivided, are looking for a great spiritual advance. They are declaring that their own sacred traditions remain unimpaired unless they are giving themselves to the task of making known to all the world the unbounded grace of God.

There are many things to distress the churches; on almost every side there is a decline in the resources offered for missionary work; there is a revival of controversy upon religious education; the prevalence of blatant paganism in our cities; but there are signs of hope, and none more welcome than the news that the churches are determined once more to preach Christ.—British Correspondent in Christian Century.

TAINTED MILLIONS

The American Tobacco Company is estimated to have paid its president about $2,283,000 for last year's services. Thus George Washington Hill is America's highest paid executive. And Mr. Hill is credited with chief responsibility for the successful advertising campaign which has lifted cigarette consumption to new levels.

And yet, at what a cost this man's financial success has come. His profits were made from the promotion of a vicious habit which adds nothing to the nation's well-being. Indeed, the nation would be vastly better off, if the products of Mr. Hill's company could have been turned into poisons to control pests, or even dumped into the sea.

Mr. Hill has his millions, while millions of his fellow countrymen have stained fingers, stinking breath and poisoned bodies. Every advance of the American Tobacco Company as it is now run, at the expense of the good health of the American people. Its profits are tainted millions.—H. A. B.—The Gospel Messenger.

CRIME DECREASE—

A general decrease in crime in 1,000 cities during January as compared with December was reported recently by the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice. In a monthly bulletin, prepared under the supervision of Director J. Edgar Hoover, the average number of crimes committed daily in these cities was given as 1,824 for December and 1,711 in January. The number of murders reported daily decreased from an average of slightly more than eight to slightly less than eight, while the daily average of cases of manslaughter by negligence dropped from less than ten to less than five. Let us hope that the crest of the crime wave has been passed.

("Fools make a mock at sin." Pro. 14:9).—Methodist-Protestant Recorder.

LIBERALISM REACHES ITS GOAL

Liberalism is a word of many meanings, but in a general way its aim today is to take off all restraints and let human nature go according to the urge within it. That is Behaviourism and that is liberalism. At last we have an example of what it will do, if given rein, in the state of Nevada. It has not gone quite to the limit yet, for the limit is anarchy and death. Governor Balzar has been reported as boasting "Nevada is the only free state left in the Union." Gambling runs riot and lashes the people into wild frenzy. The family has been practically divorced by a six weeks' residence in the state. All state liquor regulatory laws have been abolished. People of this stripe pay license fees to meet public expenses. In other words the state has been bought by gamblers, saloon keepers, divorcees, and reformers have apparently taken to cover. This is governor's idea of a free state. Bills looking toward the same are introduced into several legislatures in the United States in last sessions. In some they were passed, in others badly. It was the assault of liberalism upon the morals of the Can we stand it?—The Christian Evangelist.

INDIAN PEACE—

For a series of conferences, Mahatma Gandhi and Viceroy Lord agreed upon formulas for settlement of all points in the dispute between the Indian Nationalists and the British Government, has threatened to nullify the results of the recent London conference. At this writing the details of the agreement have not yet been made public, but it is understood that the disobedience campaign will be ended and that Gandhi's role in the all-India National Congress will help in obtaining the desired dominion status promised by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald at the round-table conference. It is also understood that the Viceroy has agreed to the contention of the Nationalists that they have the right to make their own salt and may condense sea water, thus avoiding the necessity of purchasing from government monopoly. Gandhi has been contending for complete independence, but apparently has decided to compromise. The Viceroy, Lord Irwin, is given much credit for the tact and patience which he conducted the negotiations.

"Seek peace, and pursue it." Psalms 34:14.)—Methodist Protestant.

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL'S LABEL

The reader's attention is called to the title given the article—"Protestant View of Birth Control." Ever since Mr. Coolidge used the capacity of the English language for implications in his famous "I do not choose to run" communication, we have understood Talleyrand's remark, "That language was intended to conceal thoughts." Hence we look analytically at names of which the first is "Rev. Albert W. Beaven, D.D., President of the Northern Baptist Convention." Certainly Dr. Beaven is a Baptist and of course a Baptist is a Protestant. Hence Dr. Beaven declares is a Protestant's view of whatever he writes about. By the same standard of testing, the twenty distinguished persons whose names are given by the Federal Council are Protestants. But if the Federal Council's headwriter had desired an accurate and unambiguous heading, he might have written, "The Opinions of Twenty-eight Persons Belonging to Portions of the Christian Church Commonly Called Protestant, on Birth Control." The secular press should have been warned against the use of a subhead, which is much more frequently than accurately employed, namely, "Representing 27 Protestant Denominations."—The Lutheran.

Short Talks by the Editor

(Continued from page 4)

of God, having a readiness to give with liberality to the cause of charity. "But to do good and to communicate forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased. The paying of the tithes does not give license to use the other nine-tenths selfishly. We must be ready to help meet every worthy need and be ever generous in the expenditure that we make for our own personal needs and pleasure. Extravagance is unthinkable with money that is God's, and that is the situation with all the funds of him who is our Christian stewardship seriously. Every step in the line of stewardship must be taken in sincere obedience to God and in genuine humility. The glory of God and the winning of the praise of men should be one's constant aim. As Paul admonishes: "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God" (1 Cor. 10:31). Is anything hard to begin? Assuredly it is. But "God is able to do all things, and grace abound toward you: that ye, always having all sufficient in all things, may abound to every good work" (1 Cor. 13:10). Giving as a good steward of Jesus Christ does not come easily; it is a grace, bestowed by God. But be assured, he is ever ready to bestow it. Let no one be satisfied with a narrow, self-centered, God-disappointing Christian life, when he may have the abundant life of the Christian steward.

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Exodus 24:9-18. How lightly we rush, at times, into the presence of the almighty God! The elders here were allowed to approach near enough that they saw God. What a wonderful sight that must have been, and how inadequate the words in which the sight is described! How could men ever forget such a vision? How could they ever do aught than the full will of God thereafter? If we could just see him! Yet the elders were not permitted to approach into the actual presence of God; Moses only was allowed this privilege, but today each one of us may enter into his very presence, and there hold sweet communion with him. What a wonderful privilege! Do we appreciate it as we should? Do we avail ourselves of the privilege? If his presence is real to us, how could we ever do aught than the full will of God!

TUESDAY

Exodus 25:1-9. God desired offerings from all the people, but the offerings must be given willingly—cheerfully, is the New Testament word. God wished them to prepare for him a sanctuary, that he might dwell among them. Today he still desires his sanctuary among men: it is true that the church is a sanctuary, dedicated especially to the worship of God, but more important even than that is the sanctuary he desires in the human heart. It should also be dedicated especially to the worship of God, and nothing should enter there that might in any way defile it. May God help us to build him a sanctuary according to his own pattern, in our hearts.

WEDNESDAY

Exodus 25:10-22. First of all, directions were given for the building of the ark of the covenant, and for the mercy seat, both symbols of the presence of God among them. "In the beginning God." Unless God be first, the whole structure is for naught. Let us make him first as we build our lives, first as we labor for him from day to day, that our building may not be in vain.

THURSDAY

Exodus 25:23-40. Only the most costly materials could be wrought into the tabernacle of the Lord. These furnishings were to be all of gold; only precious metals, and the royal blue and purple and scarlet, fine linen, etc., might be used. So with us today: God requires the most costly things we have to offer, even our very selves—and he who would save his life shall lose it! But we were not redeemed with such trifles as gold and silver: shall we withhold our most precious offerings from him?

FRIDAY

Exodus 26:1-6, 30. We are not concerned for the present with the exact pattern or design of the tabernacle, but it is interesting to note that God does have a detailed plan for each part of his building, whether of material things, or of flesh and blood. And he expects every detail to be carried out in accordance with the plan given in his word. Are we building in accordance with his plan?

SATURDAY

Exodus 29:38-46. Every morning and every evening a lamb was to be offered and at that time God promised that he would meet with them and sanctify them, and dwell among them. If we will but meet with him in the morning and evening, and offer to him the sacrifices of a broken spirit and a contrite heart, surely he will also meet with us, and sanctify and bless. He is a covenant-keeping God.

SUNDAY

Exodus 30:11-16. Souls could not be ransomed with money, but there is a real lesson in the point that the soul of the richest was considered as worth no more in the sight of God than the soul of the poorest and humblest. Your soul and mine are worth no more than the soul of the humblest in Africa or the farthest islands of the sea, and we owe the knowledge of God to them also. May we do all that we can to ransom the souls of the world, and so hasten the return of him who claims all souls as his own!

W. I. DUKER, President Goshen, Indiana	NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N. MAGAZINE SECTION M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR, ASHLAND, OHIO	N. V. LEATHERMAN, General Secretary South Bend, Indiana
E. L. MILLER Vice-President Maurertown, Virginia		M. P. PUTERBAUGH, Treasurer 2210 Maple Ave., Evanston, Illinois

Suggestions for Temperance Programs

(Some time ago we published some suggestions for Temperance program at the request of some of our readers. We are giving you herewith some additional suggestions which may prove helpful.—EDITOR.)

Song—Special music of local selection Exercise—"The Good American"

(Exercise for nine pupils, or may be given by fewer pupils, some reciting twice. It is built around the laws of Character Building of Hutchins' "Code of Morals" used by many schools in character training work. Sections in quotation marks are quoted from the exposition of the "Code" by the Character Education Institution, unless otherwise indicated.)

First pupil: "The Good American controls himself." "Those who best control themselves can best serve their country."

Second pupil: "The Good American tries to gain and keep good health. Therefore we will avoid those habits which harm us and will make the habits which will help us."

Third pupil: The Good American plays fair. We will not cheat; we will keep the rules but will play the game hard.

Fourth pupil: "The Good American is reliable. Our country grows great and good as her citizens are able more fully to trust each other."

Fifth pupil: "The Good American is self-reliant. He learns to think for himself, choose for himself, act for himself, according to what seems right and fair and wise. He is not afraid of being laughed at."

Sixth pupil: "The Good American does his duty." He is not willing "to shirk" his own duty or "burden his fellow citizens unfairly."

Seventh pupil: The Good American is a good workman. "He will form the habit of good work, for mistakes and blunders cause hardship, sometimes disaster, and spoil success."

Eighth pupil: The Good American does good "team work." As we learn better how to work together the welfare of our country is advanced."

Ninth pupil: The Good American is loyal to his family, his school, his state, his country, and all mankind.

Tenth pupil: The Good American obeys all laws; not only the ones with which he agrees, but also those with which he disagrees. Respect for law is the foundation upon which our government rests. Bad laws may be changed but may not be disobeyed; the people may be trusted to repeal any law that proves to be unsatisfactory to a majority of our citizens.

Salute to the flag: (Led by the participants in the preceding exercise.)

"I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and to the republic for which it stands, one nation, indivisible with liberty and justice for all."

Using Our Heads—"Figures Dot Not Lie"
Directions for this exercise:

Appoint one of the older and best pupils as teacher to conduct the following exercise in the manner of an ordinary recitation in arithmetic. Any number of pupils may be used in answering the questions asked. All parts should be thoroughly committed to memory.

Teacher: No doubt you have all heard someone say that there is more liquor drunk today under prohibition than there was in the days when there was a saloon on every prominent corner in our towns and cities. Many people seem to believe this, chiefly because they do not know how much liquor was drunk before prohibition was adopted and because they have not figured it out for themselves. In our arithmetic lesson for today we are going to figure it out on the blackboard and then see what we think about it. Does anyone know when prohibition was adopted?

Pupil: (Appointed for this answer.) It was adopted as a war measure in 1919. The eighteenth amendment became effective January 16, 1920.

Teacher: Then the year 1917 was the last year of saloons. Who can tell me how many gallons of liquor were sold in 1917?

Pupil: (Another appointed to answer.) The report of the United States Department of Commerce for 1922, page 697, gives the number of gallons for 1917 as 2,095,535,005.

Teacher: (Calling designated pupil by name.) Will you please go to the blackboard and write those figures as high as you can reach? (Pupil does as requested.)

Teacher: Well, if we agree that more is drunk now, how many gallons should we say were consumed in 1930?

Pupil: Three billion.

Teacher: That would be almost a billion gallons more and may be a larger increase than anyone would agree to. Suppose we make it less than half of that amount and say 2,500,000,000 gallons. No one who claims there has been an increase will object to that much increase. Write that amount under the other. (Pupil who has remained at the blackboard writes these figures.)

Teacher: Now, how many people are in the United States, not counting our foreign possessions?

Pupil: 122,728,872 according to the 1930 census.

Teacher: Well, let us say for easy figuring, 125,000,000. Put those figures down. Now, divide 125 millions into two and a half billion. (Pupil performs division.)

Teacher: Good! The result is twenty gallons. Now what does that mean?

Pupil: Why, it means that in 1930 every person in the United States, men, women, children, even babies, drank twenty gallons of liquor.

Teacher: Do you think that every last one of them drank his share?

Pupil: Well, the babies didn't; that's a cinch.

Teacher: Do you think many of the school children did?

Pupil: I don't know of any.

Teacher: Do you know how many school children there are in the United States?

Pupil: About 38 millions in 1930.
Teacher: Put those figures down. (Pupil does so.)

Teacher: That means, of course, the ages of 6 and 18. How many were there under 6 years of age?

Pupil: There would be about 18 million or 19 million.

Teacher: Put those figures down. (Pupil does so.) Now, divide 38 million by 18, showing a total of 57 million. (Pupil does so.) What is the result?

Pupil: 57 million.

Teacher: Now, subtract that from 18 million. (Pupil does so, showing 68 million.)

Teacher: Now, who are included in that 68 million?

Pupil: Every man and woman in the United States above 18 years of age.

Teacher: Do you suppose any of them do not drink liquor?

Pupil: Yes, indeed, lots of them.

Teacher: Well, about how many out of every ten would you say do not drink liquor?

Pupil: Half of them anyway.

Teacher: But, let's put it lower. What would you say to three out of ten?

Pupil: That's sure low enough.

Teacher: Well, of course that would mean that seven out of every ten of them do drink. How shall we find out how that many is?

Pupil: Take seven-tenths of 68 million.

Teacher: That is correct. Do you know how many pupils are on the board, who does so, showing 600,000.)

Teacher: Now, for easy figuring, let us say that there are 50 million people in the United States. Of course, means that there are 50 million who do drink, and we must suppose, an average amount they drink, that a man drinks every day of the year. If 100 million people drink two and one-half gallons of liquor in an year, we find how much each one drinks.

Pupil: Why, divide 50 million into one-half billion.

Teacher: (To pupil at blackboard) Write that down.

All pupils: Fifty gallons apiece.

Pupil: They don't do it. Nobody believes that.

Teacher: Now, just wait, we're not done yet. How many pints are there in a gallon?

Pupil: Eight.

Teacher: Correct. (To pupil at blackboard) Reduce the fifty gallons to pints. (Pupil does so, showing 400 pints.)

Teacher: How many days in a year?

Pupil: 365, except leap years.

Teacher: All right; if each person drinks 400 pints in 365 days, what does that mean?

Pupil: Why, it means more than one pint a day for each person. It just shows how much.

Teacher: Yes, but we're supposed to show how much is done. Who can name a result of drinking?

Pupil: Well, you'd surely smell it everywhere you went. But...

Another pupil: There would be more automobile accidents.

Another pupil: Yes, and more in factories.

Another pupil: It sure would be the bootleggers.

Teacher: Yes, and that brings up the problem. How many bootleggers would it take to deliver a pint a day to the drinkers?

Pupil: That would depend on the number of people to whom each delivers...

Teacher: Well, how many would it take to keep him real busy, so you'd notice him; Pupil: No telling how far they'd be apart. Teacher: 25 would be a good day's work. Pupil: Suppose we say a hundred. Teacher: He'd be busier than the milk man! Pupil: All right, let's say 100. How many bootleggers each serving 100 customers a day would it take to serve the million drinkers? How shall we figure that? Pupil: That's easy; just divide 50 million by 100. Teacher: That's right.. (To pupil at blackboard) Do that. (Pupil does so and gets 500,000). Teacher: That's right, a half million bootleggers, busy for at least eight hours every day of the year, delivering two and one-half gallons of liquor to 50 million drinkers. How much would each deliver in a day? How shall we find that? Pupil: Divide two and one-half billion by 500,000. Teacher: Do that. (To pupil at blackboard does it showing 5000). Teacher: What does that mean? Pupil: Why, that each bootlegger delivers 5000 gallons of booze in a year. Teacher: Correct. Now, who knows how much a gallon of liquor weighs? Pupil: About seven pounds, without the bottle. Teacher: Yes, and delivered in pint bottles would weigh at least 10 pounds. How much would 5000 gallons in pint bottles weigh? Pupil: 50,000 pounds. Teacher: How many tons would that be? Pupil: 25 tons. Teacher: Say, boy! That'd be harder to haul than hauling coal, and yet they make a bootlegger because he doesn't work. Teacher: How many of you believe all of that? Pupil: Shucks, I don't believe any of it. Teacher: Lot o' bunk. Teacher: But they say, "Figures won't lie." Pupil: Yes, but Uncle Ben says, "Liars won't lie."

at greater length. It is evident that the disciples did not at this time fully understand the teaching of Jesus concerning the Kingdom, nor did they understand it until after his ascension. The subject of the Kingdom was always very near to the heart of Jesus.

Three important aspects of prayer are set forth in the two parables which we are to study today. They are perseverance, humility, and confession. The conduct of the importunate widow shows the value of perseverance in presenting our petitions to God. In the parable of the Proud Pharisee and the Penitent Publican there is emphasized the importance of humility and confession in supplicating the throne of grace. The great need of more prevailing prayer today invests this lesson with special importance. These parables were spoken as a part of our Lord's Perea ministry.—Otterbein Teacher.

Three Contrasts

In the story of the widow and the unjust judge, God is not compared to the unjust judge, but contrasted with him. If a hard-hearted, wicked judge, who cared for neither God nor man, but only for himself and his own interests, would yet grant justice on account of the perseverance of the widow, how much more, how infinitely more readily will the good God, our Father in heaven, who loves to give far more than we are willing to receive, give us the help we need against our adversaries.

And if the unjust judge does this for a poor widow, in whom he has no interest, how much more will our Father grant the prayers of his own children, even his select ones, whom he has chosen. And if the unjust judge will do it for the sake of deliverance from some vexation in common life, how much more will God save his children from their adversaries, all enemies of the true church and of the soul,—sin, temptation, bad men, bad principles, every embodiment of evil that was against the kingdom of God and its principles,—including Satan, the prince of darkness, the persecuting rulers of this world, and all combinations of men in evil against the good.—Illustrated Quarterly.

Why Prayer Must be Importunate

(1) Not because God is unwilling to bestow good things, or must be overpersuaded, for he is more ready to give than we are to ask. (2) It is to cherish and cultivate our faith, bringing us into closer relations to God. (3) It is to make us fit to receive, to intensify our desire and appreciation of the things God would bestow. As Jeremy Taylor says, "Our prayers upbraid our spirits when we beg tamely for those things for which we ought to die; which are more precious than imperial sceptres, richer than the spoils of the sea or the treasures of Indian hills." There is no use in furnishing large measures of food to those who have no appetite, nor of giving libraries and colleges to those who care nothing for learning. The great difficulty with all God's best gifts is on our part, to make us able to receive and to use them.—Ibid.

"Secret prayer means secret power. Delay is not refusal to answer. Faith must precede our petition. We must not limit God's power. Always add: 'Thy will, not mine.' Long prayers are not always strong prayers. Always couple prayer with praise. Prayer should consist of—reverence, adoration, confession, request and intercession."—Australian Christian World.

(Continued on page 14)

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Deball Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICK, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
--	--	---

Christian Endeavor at Milledgeville, Illinois

Milledgeville, Illinois, March 30, 1931.

Dear Christian Endeavors:

The C. E. Society of the First Brethren church at Milledgeville, Illinois, says "Hello!"

We only wish that you might visit our group some Sunday evening at six-thirty o'clock. You would see such enthusiasm and zeal displayed as you have not witnessed among young people. Each one is willing to do his part to make the meeting a success. Each worker waits his turn to act as leader, feeling it a privilege rather than a hard job.

We have just finished a thousand mile car contest. It was, indeed, an active stimulus the past few months. We had from forty to sixty present at each meeting. But you ask, "Is the attendance falling off now that it's over?" Perhaps, but the enthusiasm is just as great. The contest also revealed to us the need of a Junior Christian Endeavor. So we have organized one. The younger boys and girls are very interested in making their particular division a success. The talent displayed by members of the opposing sides in each side's special number contributions shows that we have a chance for even greater advancement. An orchestra which will be made up entirely of young people and directed by one of our young people is being organized.

Our society paid its $10.00 pledge toward the work at Krypton and always aids in the work here at home. We do not find it necessary to do outside work to secure financial backing. An offering is merely taken at each meeting and those unable to contribute are not barred from our gospel spreading, character building young people's services.

Our members are active church workers. Some in our own congregation, some in other denominations, as there is no society similar to ours in this community. We cannot begin to estimate the spiritual value received from such splendid services. Each member finds it especially beneficial to learn a scripture verse to repeat at each meeting. In so doing he becomes better acquainted with the one great book and guide—the Bible.

We always remember other societies in our prayers. Will you be so good as to do the same for us? Yours in the faith,

(MISS) VILLETTA ALLEN, Press Correspondent.

Editor's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson

(Lesson for April 26)

How to Pray

Picture Lesson—Luke 18.

Text—Luke 18:1-14.

Optional Reading—Psalm 61.

Text—Lord Teach us to pray—11:1.

Introductory Note

Following the story of the Rich Man and us, which we studied last Sunday, continued his journey toward Jerusalem. As he journeyed he taught his discipular lessons regarding forbearance, humility, etc. In connection with lessons Luke records the miracle of the ten lepers. In answer to a question of the Pharisees, who were watching closely at this period of his ministry, entered upon a most important discussion of the Kingdom and of his second advent. Along with this record by Luke should read Mathew 24 and 25 and Mark 13, these chapters treat the same subject

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
 LOUIS S. BAUMAN
 Financial Secretary Foreign Board
 1925 East 5th St.,
 Long Beach, California

MISSIONS

Send Home Missionary Funds to
 R. PAUL MILLER
 Home Missionary Secretary
 Berne, Indiana

Dr. Gribble's Interesting Missive from Africa

Bassai, January 21, 1931.

Dear Evangelist Readers:

This month we have changed the scene of our labors from Yaloke to Bassai, and have attended a Conference at Bellevue, so that we will have something to say of each of the three stations.

On December 22nd, 1930, we celebrated Mr. Hathaway's birthday at Yaloke. We managed to surprise him, partially at least. Only four were present, Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway, Miss Patterson and Dr. Gribble. Everyone retired at an early hour, as the preparations for departure for Bellevue on the 24th were not yet completed. The next day was an exceedingly busy one. The coming of the mail was unexpected and added just that much more to the joy and excitement of the day, especially when we read the telegram announcing the arrival of Miss Emmert and Miss Tyson at the Coast on New Year's Day. It was impossible to change the date for the Conference, for which we were scheduled to leave the following morning. A few hasty letters were written late that night. We were on our way shortly after six o'clock, December 24th, going this time via Bossangoa, a comparatively new route. We did not arrive at Bellevue until shortly after sunset, a long, hard ride of twelve hours. We found that the Bassai delegation which should have preceded us by several hours, had not yet arrived. We waited that day and the next, Christmas Day, which we were to have spent together. There being no arrivals, Mr. Hathaway left on the morning of December 26th for Bassai. Car trouble had caused the delay. This was, however, adjusted in time so that all arrived on the evening of the 27th. Christmas was observed on Sunday, December 28th. Who knows but what we may have had the right day after all?

The day commenced with a tree for Kenneth in the morning. The older people also found something there for each. The morning service was held at the Chapel, the Christmas sermon being preached by Mr. Foster. Christmas dinner was bountifully served by Mrs. Sheldon. The rather lengthy Christmas program was divided into two parts, rendered respectively in the afternoon and evening. Solos, duets, instrumental music and an address by Mr. Hathaway were interesting features of the combined programs.

On the following morning the Conference proper, several days delayed, commenced. Three days were spent in prayer, and three in business. These days were followed by a closing day of prayer, it having been found necessary to somewhat shorten the Conference on account of the initial delay. On Monday, January 5th, 1931, the delegates left in two cars for Bassai and Yaloke respectively. Travelling this time over the same route, they spent some time at Bozoum together, then separated for their respective destinations. The Bassai delegates did not arrive until late evening.

The next days were busy ones. The rearranging of the houses for the expected guests, and the resuming of hospital duties preparations were being made to leave for Bassai.

On January 9th Mr. Hathaway left to meet Miss Emmert and Miss Tyson at Bangui. The return was not possible until January 14th, Mr. Hathaway being delayed in Bangui for the transaction of Mission business. Misses Emmert and Tyson, aside from this delay made exceptional time. They reached Doula December 31st, and Carnot January 6th, having consumed just one month between France and Bangui! In spite of being delayed one week in Bangui, they arrived at Yaloke on January 14th, less than forty days from their European port Bologne. The trip was made across by hired automobile, the company furnishing meals and providing furnished rest houses. This was very acceptable for two ladies traveling together or for any larger party, but might prove to have difficulties for an inexperienced missionary traveling alone, especially for a lady.

With the missionaries came the sad news of the death of Mrs. Myers. Our heartfelt sympathy is extended to the missionary sisters, Misses Estella and Ethel Myers, and to the bereaved sons and daughter in Iowa.

Miss Estella Myers has decided to abandon the planned-for trip through Palestine, and to accompany Mr. and Mrs. Foster to the homeland, hoping to meet Miss Ethel in France before she shall sail for Africa.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Kennedy have notified us of their arrival at the Coast on or about March third. Mr. Hathaway with the outgoing party of three will meet Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy at Yaounde with the Mission car. This is the first time it has been possible to utilize the return trip of the car, and should greatly reduce the individual expense.

On January 17th, Mr. Hathaway, driving Mrs. Gribble's car, came to Bassai, accompanied by Miss Emmert and Miss Tyson, to pay a brief visit to Bassai station, especially to Miss Myers, so recently bereaved; and by Dr. Gribble, who, on January 20th with full governmental permission, reopened the school at Bassai, necessarily closed for some months because of the furlough of Brother and Sister Jobson.

The arrival of Misses Tyson and Emmert at Yaloke, the one to resume her duties in the school room, and the other her duties as nurse in the Yaloke hospital have made it possible for Dr. Gribble to be relieved from her school and hospital duties at Yaloke, and to take up her residence at Bassai while teaching. We trust that the speedy arrival of Miss Ethel Myers will make it possible for the school work at Bassai to be continued, and will mean the uninterrupted growth of those who are destined to become readers of his Word and evangelists in the Karre tribe.

Miss Patterson has of necessity remained at Yaloke, one of the dwellings at Bassai being in process of repair, housing room is at present insufficient. For lack of another bedroom Dr. Gribble is at present appropriately lodged in the laboratory of the Bas-sai dispensary. But while temporarily arated from the one whom in the eight months she has so greatly served, Patterson's skillful and willing fingers find employment wherever she may be. Other newest missionary, Miss Byron, found the secret too of being greatest among us. Like her Master, she is continually ready to serve, and her senior missionaries greatly appreciate her companionship!

We must not close without mentioning Bellevue dispensary, whose rapid growth has made it the largest in the Misson from the standpoint of treatments given. Miss Bickel, with her tender heart and successful, devoted care, is winning many of patients to the Lord. Pray for her, and us all.

We now number thirteen upon the fourteen with dear little Kenneth. At present we are five at Yaloke, five at Bassai and three at Bellevue. There being no school at Bellevue, we must pray for a teacher there too! And it would be well indeed were there to be another worker there now. We consider three inadequate for many activities of any station. Pray for more workers, and for more stations.

Faithfully,
 FLORENCE N. GRIBBLE

The Racial Frontier of Home Missions

A Southern Baptist Survey of the Situation

By J. B. Lawrence, Executive Secretary
 Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Church

We have in the South an ever-growing number of alien-thinking people. There are now about 15,000,000 of these in our midst. Add to aliens in the South the population of Western Cuba and the Indians, and we have in the United States and we have at least 25,000,000 people of alien races in the Home Mission fields of Southern Baptists.

When these alien races are divided into groups we find that we have twenty-two nationalities speaking twenty-two languages; one and a half million Mexicans, six hundred thousand French, five hundred and fifty thousand Italians, two hundred thousand Indians, two million six hundred and fifty thousand of other races, not to mention the twelve million Negroes who all people, have a claim upon us.

These foreigners, Indians, Negroes, Chinese in their traditions, in their mental makeup and racial and social outlook, but all heart-hungers and their soul-longings are the same as ours. They need the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

The problem of sin and vice and immorality is the same in all races and the chances of salvation are the same.

This alien problem will become more and more complex and insistent. The different languages and nationalities and religions from all countries in the world will come more and more a menace to our national, social and religious institutions and life unless these alien races are evangelized.

What shall we do about these foreigners in our midst and our brothers of other races right here at our door? If we do not launch a conquering mission program among these same races in our Homeland

Southern Baptists must not overlook the fact that their treatment of the foreigners in their midst will either help or hinder their missions to the foreigner in his land. We are constantly getting let-telling our attention to the fact that foreigners are taking note of the attitude of our churches towards them.

One of these letters is from an Italian missionary working under our Board. He states the fact that Christians in this country only get interested in foreigners as a foreign mission matter. He says: "The attitude of the Christians in this country towards the foreigners in their midst will be against their effort on the foreign Baptists ought to know that the mailbags leaving this country are stuffed with letters from foreigners to their friends and kindred in their Fatherland, telling about the treatment they are receiving from the churches in this land of America. When they are slighted and neglected how can they feel kindly? A report of their treatment will make it hard for the foreign missionary."

Let us give these foreigners in our midst the gospel. Let us win them to Christ and then they will become missionaries to their friends and loved ones in their native land.
—The Christian Index.

Brother Rench, who was with us three years ago, was with us again, he saw the work started and witnessed its finish.

The Sunday school is growing in attendance and interest. Brother Glenn Wood, with his officers were re-elected for another year—a confidence the church gave eagerly.
Easter Sunday the attendance reached 453.

On Wednesday following Easter we held our spring communion—the largest ever held. Our people realize more and more the need of these sacred services, and the blessings that come in simple obedience.

May God continue to bless the work here —may he keep us where he can use us to his honor and glory.

MRS. EDNA NICHOLAS.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

LINWOOD, MARYLAND

Evangelist: Your weekly visits are much appreciated by the pastor and people of the Linwood congregation. Linwood, as you know, is just a little isolated from the main body of the church, and the Evangelist is the only means of keeping in touch with the real trend of Brethrenism, and splendidly does she fulfill her mission.
The Evangelist must be read before other periodicals are perused. The messages in the Evangelist are good news from near and far.

The work of the Linwood church is moving without a jar or interruption. A few days before Easter I baptized three families, all of which we feel will help in the work of the church. In the past few months I have baptized seventeen, of which have been confirmed and received as members of the Brethren church.
Easter day we took up our Foreign Mission offering. I do not have the figures they tell me it will be larger than they ever taken here. We were unmercifully hit by the drouth and financial depression, but we are trying to lead these good people to a plane where it is a real joy to make some sacrifice for the cause we love for Christ we serve. Where Brethren have the will to first advance the Massachusetts kingdom, it becomes a pleasure and a rewardship to labor to that end.

Our Sabbath school is doing fine under the leadership of Brother Charles Messing as superintendent. We are using Brethren literature and have no desire to use any other. Our own literature is sound fundamental, is very free from any modernistic trends and advocates the doctrines for which Brethren church stands. I most heartily regulate Brother Bame on his clear cut and Fine! Our literature is becoming valuable to other folks.

The Junior Sisterhood is the latest auxiliary of the Linwood church. It is young and promises healthy growth and activity.
We will hear from them later.

I. L. BOWMAN, Pastor.

CAMP FOR MINISTERS' RETREAT, SHIPSHAWANA LAKE, INDIANA

May 4, 5, 6, 1931

Monday, May 4th

9:00 A. M. Devotions and greetings.

B. H. FLORA, President
Duet, . . . Rev. and Mrs. Owen
Sermon . . . Freeman Ankrum

Tuesday, May 5th

6:30 A. M.—Sunrise Prayer and Praise.

M. L. Sands.

9:00 A. M. "The Abundant Life"

Devotions . . . . O. C. Lemert
Deepening the Spiritual Life
In Prayer. . . D. A. C. Teeter
Deepening the Spiritual Life
—In the Study of the Word.

G. W. Rench

Deepening the Spiritual Life
—In Meditation. . G. L. Maus
Deepening the Spiritual Life
—In Giving . . . B. F. Owen
Deepening the Spiritual Life
—In Singing. . . F. C. Vanator

2:00 P. M. Devotions . . . . J. W. Clark

Duet . . . Rev. & Mrs. Adams
Address . . . M. A. Stuckey

7:00 P. M. Devotions . . . C. D. Whitmer

Bible Study. . . S. C. Henderson
Duet. . . Rev. & Mrs. Vanator
Sermon . . . Samuel Adams

Wednesday, May 6th

6:30 A. M. Sunrise Praise and Prayer.

N. V. Leatherman

9:00 A. M. Devotions . . . Mark Spacht

Discussion period.
Summer Young People's
Camp . . . . . W. I. Duker

Shipshewana Bible Conference

H. F. Stuckman

Shipshewana . . A. T. Wirick

10:30 A. M. Adjournment.
B. H. FLORA, President.
J. L. KIMMEL, Vice-President,
E. M. RIDDLE, Secretary.

ELKHART, INDIANA

Easter Day dawned in all its glory and splendor and with it the blessedness of a "Risen Savior"—a glad Easter Day—a rejoicing for spiritual and temporal blessings.

This was our cash offering day—$1100.00 was turned into the building fund. Three years ago last November, the first unit of our church was dedicated—today it stands clear of all indebtedness. While there were small individual pledges on the day of dedication, the greater part of the pledges were made by organized classes. This offering is the best ever made; under the stress of financial conditions, it represents untold labor and sacrifice on the part of our people;
they were rewarded and God blessed their efforts. Our people are not wealthy, but would have you know they are hard workers and willing to go the limit to win.

HAGERSTOWN, MARYLAND

"The Gateway to the South"

These first six months of our pastorate at Hagerstown is history. Things have moved rapidly since our coming to take up the work here. In fact, I do not think that they had stopped and that we just stepped into the current. Much might be said of Hagerstown and of the Brethren people here but we forbear for fear of tiring you. Suffice to say that we have been received in a way that meets all of our expectations. Shortly after we arrived certain of the Brethren decided that the heating plant in the parsonage needed attention and soon workmen were on the job committed to the task of increasing and furnishing heat to the second floor of our home. This seemed to call for other things and three other Brethren decided that they would lay hardwood floors throughout the first floor, also removed a partition that doubled the floor space in the living room. Then the Trustees redecorated the first floor rooms. So we say things have been moving since our coming to Hagerstown.

March 22 we began a two weeks pre-Easter service which resulted in 21 confessions, 16 of which have been baptized, one is going to another church and four are awaiting baptism. The services came to a close on Easter Sunday night with Communion services. The Communion was reported as the best attended communion in the memory of the oldest members. Every available space, including balcony, was taken. If this continues more room must be provided. You will not accuse us of boasting if we tell you about one thing of which we are mighty proud; it is our mid-week service. We started with 30 and since have gone up to 95 as the high water mark, and then to an average attendance of around 80. But we are not stopped, we are going on to 150 regulars. We are not putting on anything spectacular, just plain old fashioned prayer and Bible study. We ask an interest in your prayers.

FRANK G. COLEMAN,
104 S. Mulberry Street.

WAYSIDE OBSERVATIONS

Gleaned from our Travelogue

By Dr. G. C. Carpenter

AN EASTER DISAPPOINTMENT

Easter! What a joyous day! In the land of palms and flowers! About 40,000 people assembled for the Easter sunrise service on Miami Beach. Nearly 2,000 were present in the Men's Bible Class that meets in the Olympia Theater every Sunday, the second largest class in the world. Then we went with friends to an attractive church service in one of the oldest and most aristocratic churches located in a suburb of Miami. Attractive? Yes, but we regret that the attraction was not the Cross or the Risen Son of God. That modernist preacher's subject was "Developing an Immortal Personality." How? Not alone by doing, he said, but by being, developing an immortal sense of sympathy and good will and honesty, as Jesus did, thus preparing one's self to dwell on the sunlit heights. That was what Jesus did.

A beautiful vine-covered church and manse! Beautiful music by an able organist and a trained, gowned choir! An able discourse by an educated, gowned preacher. Beautiful lilies, oleanders, palms and other flowers! Four people received into the church by the pastor who announced that the church had no creed and asked only that they agree to attend services as regularly as possible and that they seek as far as possible to pattern their lives after the life and teachings of Jesus.

Supost a repentant sinner had come to that Easter service seeking help! Suppose a Christian burdened with doubts, disappointments, sorrows, afflictions, perplexities or trials had come for help! They would have heard this message: "Help yourself by being and doing, thus developing an immortal personality and thus preparing yourself to dwell on the sunlit heights, as Jesus did."

We went away from that service hungry, disappointed, sad! We went away saying, "That congregation has a beautiful church, first class equipment, they have all they need, with one exception, they need a preacher who PREACHES THE GOSPEL." The whole thing seemed like a farce, mockery, sacreligious, shameful! No mention of SIN, no call to REPENTANCE, no cleansing BLOOD, no SALVATION BY GRACE, no great RESURRECTION MIRACLE, no sure HOPE for lost men and women! The tragedy that is being enacted dawned upon us anew for we had never before attended an Easter service like that. What a tremendous responsibility rests upon every preacher to "PREACH THE WORD." Hallelujah! He is risen! Who? The Son of God, the Divine and Holy One, the Savior of the world! Hallelujah!

Wickedness in High Places

Miami has been called the "wickedest city in America." Travelers look upon the widespread gambling in connection with horse racing, dog racing, and other games and sports. They see thousands of winter tourists behaving in an unseemly manner, like mice at play when the cat's away. They meet Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. A thousand or two thousand miles from home seems to afford many a personal liberty license not dreamed of at home. Verily one-half of the world does not know how the other half behaves when away from home.

At the same time Florida is the home of thousands of choice saints and the winter residence of thousands of God's most loyal folk. It is quite evident that the preaching of the Gospel attracts the few while the worldly attractions lack standing room. The noonday half-hour Gospel service in Bay-front Park drew a baker's dozen while the dog races drew many thousands each night. There is nothing wrong in having fast dogs chase an imitation white rabbit, but the GAMBLING, wholesale and retail, for which it seems the races are held, is wholly wrong. Loss through gambling is often the cause of broken hearts and wrecked lives and often results in suicide. Gambling is destructive of character and can have no rightful place in the life of the Christian. Children should be taught to avoid all games of chance, whether in the candy box at the corner grocery or in the game of marbles for keeps or elsewhere. Adults should set a right example, and states have no moral right to license any gambling institution. "Righteousness exalteth a nation but sin is a reproach to any people."

International Flower Show

Here is some news more fragrant and pleasing. The flower show held recently in Miami Beach Garden was one of the most original and beautiful ever assembled. More than 7000 people attended, far exceeding the expectation of the sponsors. Words cannot describe the bowers of color, the landscape gardens and the magical beauty of the thousands of blooms on display. Special interest centered upon the orchids of which there are 2000 varieties. About 150 of these were on display, many having been gathered wild and brought by air from many Latin American and British countries. There were lovely displays of hibiscus, azaleas, lupins, amaryllis, roses and many others, both cultivated and wild.

Who could look at such a display of wondrous color and beauty and not believe in God! Who does not love flowers lacks appreciation of the beautiful in God's creation.

Florida is Different

A young woman vowed she would never marry a preacher or a man with a gold tooth. She married a preacher with two gold teeth and when joked about it she would reply, "Oh, but he is different." Florida is the subject of many adverse criticisms, but one thing is certain, Florida is different, in weather, soil, vegetation and people. Seminole Indians and many negroes are mingling daily with the "Florida Crackers" and multitudes of tourists from the north. The Indians live an outdoor life yet they are suffering much from tuberculosis. Very few of them are educated. "Tony Tommy", a leading Seminole just died, another victim of tuberculosis. Florida is suffering greatly from deflation and high taxation, but many Floridians are confident that the future for Florida is bright indeed.

The many friends of Sister Crofford of Hallandale will be glad to know that she is improving in health, having been quite ill recently. She has an unwavering faith in our wonderful Savior. At her request we anointed her with oil in the Name of the Lord. Will all who read these lines join us in praying for her full recovery to health?

And will the many friends of Sister Hedrick remember her in prayer. She is able to be about but is a constant sufferer. She too knows the Lord. May he bless and restore her.

G. C. CARPENTER,

Hallandale, Florida.

Sunday School Notes

(Continued from page 11)

"For in frequent prayer there is so much rest and pleasure, that as soon as ever it is perceived the contrary temptation appears unreasonable; none are so unwilling to pray as those who pray seldom; for they that do pray often, and with zeal and passion and desire, feel no trouble so great as when they are forced to omit their holy offices and hours of prayer."—Jeremy Taylor.

"Do not be discouraged, dearly beloved, because God bears long with you—he does not seem to answer your prayers. Your prayers are not lost. When the Lord sends his ships to distant shores, he does not expect them to come back laden in a single day—he has long patience. 'It is good that a man should both and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord.' Perhaps your prayers will come like the ships of the merchant, all the heavily laden with blessings because of delay."—Robert Murry McCheyne.

Humility in Prayer

"The message of the second story of prayer must be intimate, secret, not for display. Only God needs to know we pray. On the busy street corner, the market place we have people so busy with us that we cannot concentrate in prayer if we would, especially if we try to stand aloof in such a place. We only attract attention to ourselves by such exhibition."

"A second wonderful principle is that prayer must wait for hindrances to be moved before it can be effective. The Lord was at that task. . . . He could not begin to pray until he had a well-ordered and steady connection with God. . . ."

"One mighty hindrance to prayer is the attitude so many of us take toward teachableness. We are thinking that knowledge is ours. That was the case with Elihu, the youthful adviser of Job, are becoming unteachable in religion. We have taken the fine and precious knowledge gained through science to be so complete that we need know no more. We are in God unnecessary in the dazzling brightness of our little learning. A skillful teacher of chemistry in one of our American colleges used to say to his classes in advanced chemistry: 'All of you gentlemen have had more or more preliminary courses in this subject. Some of you probably think that you know something about chemistry. I wish to invite all such to withdraw permanently from this class. I can do nothing for the man who thinks there is very little for him to learn. I can teach only the teachable.'—D. D. Slutz.

WHY READ THE BIBLE IN THE SCHOOLS?

"Why read the Bible in the schools?" asks the average citizen. The matter is brought to his attention. Here are a few of the reasons.

Its Necessity

It is about the only way that half of the 31,000,000 school-age citizens will be brought into contact with the great sources of our American moral and political ideals. Grant the primary responsibility of the parents of these 15,000,000 children, but it is useless to expect them in a gravity system to rise higher than their source. When that is necessary you must install a pump. When the parents are ignorant, careless, incompetent or criminal they simply will not do it and the state must do it for them. Grant also to the churches to do this work, but the duty can never go beyond the wish of the individual or family of the unchurched millions. The church is a voluntary organization. But these 15,000,000 children and youths need an education in science as much as they need an education of intellect.

It is Prepared Food

Food poorly nourishes the human body. Abstract principles of morality or discussions of ethics are just as useless as to nourish the moral and spiritual life of a child. In the Bible we find a system of morality taught in such a way that even a child's nature is fed and built up by its example and precepts. That some portions of the Bible are too old and should not be used in schools, yet no intelligent teacher ever omits them in daily readings. No food was ever so well prepared for the building up of a child as the moral teachings of the Bible for the spiritual needs of the human soul.

No Additional Expense

A great majority of the public schools of this country do not add anything to the budget of the school. The teacher simply takes a few minutes at the beginning of the session each day to read a few verses, or allows some of them to be read by the children. This is usually found to be a good way to get them settled in their seats and a sensible preparation for their school work. This policy requires no additional teachers, rooms or equipment. It requires its adoption by the school board so that the teacher may be free from the nagging of opposing fan-

Cumulatively Effective

This policy is deprecated as trivial and ineffective. Such objection is sometimes made but more often made by persons who are devoid of imagination that they cannot see the cumulative effects of a policy continued throughout the entire school period of the school period, which usually lasts twelve years if we include the summer months. This practice makes a possible separate contact of the mind with the spiritual source of moral culture. Any teacher who appreciates the effect of reiteration will realize that such a policy will be far more effective than many are disposed to admit. Henry Ford's testimony is valuable in this matter.

Is Not Exclusive

This policy of reading the Bible does not exclude the use of other methods and materials of moral education, such as nature study or the problem method. In fact it is complimentary to these and lays a foundation that makes these more effective. It brings the support of the age old Christian ideals as sanctions of reason and nature. Even though in the hands of some teachers these other methods may diverge in conclusions, far less harm is done to the child's mind than by leaving it a blank as to the moral teachings of the Christian faith.

Consistent with Modern Pedagogy

By some it is contended that the child's mind should be left blank as to religious and moral teachings until it is mature enough to understand such materials. This is the idea back of the Soviet law which forbids any school to teach religion to any child under eighteen years of age. But an additional reason is there, in the determination to stamp out all religion.

Apply this principle to music and in a generation or two there will be no musicians. Apply it to artistic studies and you will soon eliminate artists. Apply it to works of the imagination and you will soon extinguish literature. Little knowledge is required to discover that this objection is simply a part of current materialistic thought which regards the mind as only a highly organized matter functioning in thought. Most of us reject this conception of the universe as artificial, incomplete and about four thousand years behind the times.

A true pedagogy requires the consistent development of every faculty of human nature in order to produce the best type of humanity. Simultaneously with the physical and mental the spiritual nature must be developed. The subject matter of the Bible tends to develop that spiritual nature consistently. With this normal development the average boy and girl are better able to meet their religious problems at maturity than with an untaught atrophied religious nature. From this point of view a spiritual literature as part of the material of instruction is highly desirable.

The Crime Solution

Most Americans are anxious just now to do something that will develop the average conscience of the people up to a point where they will observe the laws and refuse to tolerate those who do not. Few will deny that the law has an educative power in itself that is not to be despised. The opponents of the Eighteenth Amendment realize that and their propaganda is aimed to nullify that natural education. This is why law is sometimes powerless to lift a people apart from an adequate public sentiment. Public sentiment is largely a matter of education. Justly it is charged that secularization of education and the deletion from its instruction of all positively religious and moral subject matter, has had considerable to do with bringing us into our present deplorable condition. Few expect that the adoption of a policy of including the Bible in the subject matter of instruction would at once solve the crime problem. Common sense precludes such opinion, but we do affirm that it will have a considerable effect fifteen years hence in lifting the average conscience to a higher and more social level. —The Christian Statesman.

To perpetuate the name of Dr. Jesse Lyman Hurlburt, it is proposed to erect a Hurlburt Memorial Church on the Chautauqua, New York, grounds. The late Dr. Hurlburt, a leader in religious education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was one of the first to join the founders of Chautauqua. He helped to make Chautauqua an intellectual, social, and religious force during the half century and more of its existence.

A Mountain Prayer

By Dr. C. F. Yoder

Lord make me pure,
As pure as the fragrant mountain air,
The mountain air so pure and rare,
That bears its balsam everywhere,
Lord make me pure.

Lord make me meek,
As meek as the humble mountain flowers,
The modest flowers in lonely bowers,
That weave the hues of rainbow showers,
Lord make me meek.

Lord make me true,
As true as the faithful mountain pines,
Tall, noble pines, on steep inclines,
God's compasses for Heaven's shrines,
Lord make me true.

Lord make me kind,
As kind as the covering mountain snow,
That shields the flowers when cold winds blow

And sends life streams to vales below.
Lord make me kind.

Lord make me strong,
As strong as a rugged mountain tower,
Fit emblem of thy mighty power,
Made ours by Pentecostal dower.
Lord make me strong.

Lord make me brave,
As brave as the rushing mountain streams,
Which, leaping forth from rugged seams,
Break into life like heavenly dreams.
Lord make me brave.

Lord make me glad,
As glad as the warbling mountain birds,
Whose melodies, too sweet for words,
Are sung for all the mountain herds.
Lord make me glad.

THE UNDERWORLD MOVIES

A few years ago, in one of our first references to the character of the motion picture shows, the Messenger declared that the two most serious indictments which had to be made were (1) the primacy of sex pictures, with their almost invariable attack upon the purity and fidelity of family life; and (2) the exploitation of the underworld. We believe that subsequent events have served to confirm this diagnosis.

In his annual report to the Board of Directors of the movie trust, Mr. Will H. Hays is credited with the following rhetorical outburst:

"The greatest of all censors—the American public—is beginning to vote thumbs down on the 'hardboiled' realism in literature and on the stage which marked the post-war period. The orgy of self-revelation which marked such a large portion of modern authorship is passing. We have a new younger generation, now rising from the jazz age, that promises to support clean, high-purposed entertainment." Czar Hays said among the signs of the new day was the wide-popular acclaim which greeted feature productions in 1930 dealing with great biographical subjects, prison and civic reform and stirring epochs of American history. "The American screen in recent months," he said, "has done much to debunk the gangster by showing he can't win and by ridicule." And the latter influence "removed from the bandit and the gunman every shred of false heroism that might influence young people. Nothing could prove more forcibly the success of self-regulation in the motion picture industry than the manner in which such subjects invariably have been handled."

Can such a high claim be justified? Certainly not, if the pictures we have seen are any criterion. If Mr. Hays really believes what he is reporting, we are quite unable to understand the phenomenon. Vice has been paraded and made glamorous before our eyes, and the evil effects seem incalculably great to many thoughtful people who are by no means crusading reformers or intolerant fanatics. Judge Wm. H. Smathers, of Atlantic City, for instance, does not hesitate to say, in the very face of the beautiful language of Mr. Hays, that motion pictures featuring gangsters and gunmen are "responsible for a national wave of juvenile crime." The ire of the jurist was aroused when four boys, aged 7 to 12, all members of prominent families, confessed they had broken into a store and stolen merchandise worth $500, having planned the robbery as they were returning home from a theatre where they had viewed a gangster picture. It seems as if Judge Smathers were debunking some defenders of the movies in these solemn words:

"Something has got to be done," Judge Smathers said, "to prohibit motion picture concerns from making and exhibiting gangsters, gunmen, underworld and racket pictures. They are poisoning the minds of the youth of this country, conveying a false impression of bravery and heroism, actuating them to commit serious crimes, such as carrying pistols, breaking and entering and attempted holdups. They not only disturb a boy's mind while he is in school and at wholesome play, but they disturb his sleep."

The father of six children, including two small boys, Judge Smathers said the situation was so serious that he hesitated to permit his own children to attend movies. "When my children want to go to the movies," he said, "before I can give my consent, I first must investigate and determine that there is no gangster picture for them to see and then I cannot always be sure. School authorities, churches and civic organizations should join forces with law enforcement agencies and the courts to compel State and Federal action to rid society of this menace without further delay."—Reformed Church Messenger.

We never know how far or how deeply our words will go or sink. They may travel quickly to a great distance, or simply dig their way into some nearby heart and lodge there, growing into something very real. It pays well to guard our lips.

OUR LITTLE READERS

THE FAIRY IN THE STOVE

Mother Margary, in British Weekly

Right away up in the wilds of Sutherlandshire there was a small farm called Heatherside, and in it there lived Farmer McDougall and his wife and their two children, Jim and Alice. Also with them lived the children's Grannie, a dear old lady, who spent most of her time in bed, having rheumatism.

Grannie dreaded the icy cold winter, and found it very hard to keep warm, so everybody was rejoiced when one day Farmer McDougall announced that he had a surprise coming for Grannie which would keep her room beautifully heated. Alice and Jim guessed that it was a stove, and they went out on the hillside the day the carrier was expected, to look for him.

"It's awfully cold," Jim said. He was a tall fellow of thirteen.

"Awfully cold for my little Italian fairy," his sister answered in low tones. Alice was only just six, and she had had as companion an imaginary little person called Claudina for some weeks. Jim thought it all rubbish, and he said sharply:

"Now, stop talking about your Italian fairy! Why is she Italian, anyway?"

"Because Grannie has been talking to me about Italy," said Alice in a rage. "And you know I do believe in fairies, Jim."

"You say you do, but you don't really," answered Jim, irritably.

"Do believe that I believe," pleaded Alice. "My fairy's right here by your foot, shivering in the cold blast."

I am sorry to say that to answer Jim gave a kick into the air. Alice burst into tears, and ran on to the moor, nor was she present when at last the carrier arrived bringing a lovely anthracite stove for Grannie's room.

When at last Alice (and her fairy) came in, she was most excited to hear all about the stove with the big square door. And in a day or two, when it was fixed and lighted, and beamed redly, the little girl said in gay, ringing voice, "Grannie, I shall let my Italian fairy live inside the stove, now that it's getting so frosty."

"A good idea," smiled the dear old lady, "if she won't get burned."

"She's magic, Grannie," reproved Alice. "Her body is full of magic. She can't burn."

"Oh, stop it, Alice," muttered Jim, "You're only showing off. You know as well as I do that you don't believe in fairies." Then Alice cried, but directly Daddy came to make up the fire she recovered, pushed her fairy (in a pretend way) the stove.

Months passed, and in early February Farmer McDougall and his wife were away to see Alice's aunt, who was severely ill in London. Many instructions given to the children to be good in parents' absence. Jim was told to charge of Grannie's stove. It must go out, night or day! He was determined to fill it up last thing every evening. He didn't want Grannie to grow ill as was Auntie. Alice whispered to herself that the fairy would die if the stove went out. The fairy had again and again jollied Alice through the front of the stove to say it was jolly, and only it was keeping her alive till the warm of May, when she could again frolic with Alice on the mountain side.

About a week after his parents had returned for London, on a bitterly cold night, Alice was so much taken up with a crossword puzzle that he quite forgot to fill up Grannie's stove. Grannie woke hours after Alice was in bed. She could not move. The stove was almost out. Only a tiny red glow remained.

By the ray of her nightlight Grannie suddenly saw little Alice at the door.

"Grannie, did Jim forget your stove?" heard the fairy Claudina calling, so low. "Oh! it's nearly out. Claudina's all alone! I'll get Jim."

Presently Jim, blinding and apoplectic was down, and pouring in anthracite. The fire was saved; it glowed again. Claudina thought, danced and waved.

"Good kid to wake," Jim said to himself.

"Claudina called me. Now do you believe that I believe in fairies?" demanded the small person in the pink nightdress.

"Suppose I must; girls are queer!"

"Life is very queer," said Grannie. "There are many things that cannot be explained, my chicks. Let us be kind to each other."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

NOTICE NUMBER TWO

This is the second reminder to those who have charge of the programs of the General Conference Auxiliaries. If you have yet started to work upon your part of the program, start at once. After June 1st, it will not be possible to guarantee your part upon the printed programs. This is a "dead line."

FREEMAN ANKRUM, Secretary
National Conference Executive Committee, Flora, Indiana.

MINISTERS MEET AT SHIPSHEWANA, INDIANA

Ministers and the Indiana District, with their wives, and Brethren of neighboring districts wishing to attend will meet at Shishewana Lake, May 4, 5, and 6:00. Spring Retreat. Meals will be served at the Lodge. Bring extra blankets and food. Supper will be served Monday evening before the session. Prof. Stuckey of Shishewana College will speak Tuesday afternoon on the challenging theme. Details for the Conference and Young People's Camp will be completed at this Retreat. Write to the secretary any questions you may have.

E. M. RIDDLE, Secretary
Warsaw, Indiana.

Mrs. Herman Varner, Oct.-30-31
Jonemough, Pa.
RFD 1.

Vol. LIII
Number 17

April 25
1931

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

A Promenade on Ashland College Campus

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

DO Not Worry

Dr. George W. Crile, the noted surgeon of Cleveland, was in Ashland the other day for an address before the Union Medical Association. Among other things, he said:

"Worry affects the digestion. Sudden excitement cuts off digestive action and peptic ulcer results when the orderly emptying of the stomach is affected." The famous surgeon also declared that tobacco smoking would aggravate the condition.

If you wish to avoid this dread affliction of the stomach, don't smoke and don't worry.

Dr. Crile said that peptic ulcer is found only in civilized man, particularly in those men who carry great responsibilities and are constantly driving themselves.

There is both spiritual and physical health in the Word of our Lord, "Be not anxious for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, nor yet for the body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than food and the body than the raiment? ... Which of you by being anxious can add one cubit unto the measure of his life?" (Matt. 6:25-27 ARV).

Worry not only cannot add, but actually takes away from the full measure of life,

THE Testimony of an Unbeliever

George Bernard Shaw, the gad-fly of the modern literary world, cannot always be followed, but sometimes he speaks with tremendous authority. He is quoted as saying:

"I am no more a Christian than Pilate was, yet I see no way out of the world's misery than that would have been found in the Will of Christ."

In that statement, Shaw indicts both himself and the professing church. It is the shame of the professing church that she has not adopted the Will of her Lord as the rule of life. We admit that. But one wonders why, if Mr. Shaw can see so clearly in the Will of Christ the remedy for the ills of modern civilization, he does not cast in his lot with those who earnestly acknowledge the Will of Christ and strive humbly to fulfill it.

There are such people. And they are Christians.

SOME Good News

A famous editor once said that if a dog bit a man it would not be news, but that if a man should bite a dog it would be news. Perhaps this is why the preachers who follow the truths of the Bible do not receive much space in the columns of the newspapers. It is the normal thing for ministers to preach the Word. Therefore, when a minister denies the Word, he generally gets more space than the believer. He is doing something abnormal, and the abnormal is news.

Unfortunately, many ministers have acquired a wrong slant on the matter of newspaper publicity. They suppose that extensive newspaper space indicates worth. Quite often it indicates just the opposite. An unbelieving preacher is given space in the newspapers because he is an abnormality, like a five-legged calf.

But sometimes the truth is given newspaper space, even in these days of sensationalism. The Cleveland Plain Dealer recently reported a sermon by Dr. Ernsberger, a Lutheran pastor, in which the following choice paragraph occurred:

"Not every man admits the truth that Jesus feeds him. He thinks he is self-sufficient, and all he has is the product of his own hard toil." Then referring of Christ, the preacher said, "He has given sunshine and rain and fertility to the soil that produces food for man and beast. Through his divine power he multiplied the loaves and fishes until there was enough for all. In this miracle he proves himself more than human. He is God and he provides food for our bodies which he created. For this we should thank him at each meal. Jesus also feeds our souls. He himself is the Living Bread which came down from heaven. ... There is no salvation apart from him."

ARE We Genuine Protestants?

Perhaps one reason why unbelief and its works receive so much attention in the ordinary channels of publicity is due to the fact that Christian people are willing that it should be so. Do we not need more of the old time "protestant" spirit? Perhaps if we protested more, this situation would change. At any rate, the pastor of our Long Beach church writes as follows in his church calendar:

"Utter your protest. One reason why sin flaunts itself into your ears and faces is that you do not protest. When these abominable cigarette ads appear in your magazine, write the editor and tell him that his magazine will be dropped from your list unless the ads cease. When cigarette programs are given over the radio, shut it off, and write the offending station that you did so; then call up other advertisers and tell them that you refuse to listen in longer to that station. If school teachers are attacking your Bible, protest to the superintendent and the School Board. If your preacher attacks it, stop helping to pay his salary, and write the church clerk why you are doing so. If your protest avails not, you have done your duty, and that is everything. Only the dead never kick. The trouble with Protestantism today is that it no longer protests."

In Old Saloon Days When Our Government Legalized the Liquor Traffic

By Georgia Robertson, The Kenesaw, Washington, D. C.

(Article read before the W. C. T. U. of the District of Columbia and before the Business Women's Council of Washington, D. C.)

It was not the name saloon, or the brass rail, or the easy-swinging screen doors that made the saloon what it was—a place so vile that even the ardent wets say "It must not come back."

If only nonalcoholic beverages had been sold in those saloons they would not have become breeding places for drunkenness, fights, shootings, and practically all crimes.

It was the alcohol in the beer, wine and distilled liquors sold there that caused the drunkenness, poverty, crime, and heartbreaking misery. If the same kind of wine, and distilled liquors had been anywhere else—in groceries, drug stores, restaurants, hotels, or only in Government stores through mail orders—and had it drunk in vacant lots, or deserted buildings or in the homes of the people, drunken quarrelling, fighting, murder, abuse of and children, sexual immorality, and crimes would just as surely have resulted from its use.

Violation of liquor laws did not begin with the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act. Liquor dealers and their customers constantly violated the week-day and the Sunday closing laws for saloons. They also violated the law against selling to minors and drunkards. Their slogan was "Dimes spent now for boys will bring us dollars later." They operated saloons outside the prescribed limits and defied the law to dislodge them.

The Liquor Dealers' Journal complained of the number of bootleggers and law breakers that reduced their sales. The Government even then had officers hunting for illicit stills that were evading the liquor laws not only in the mountainous regions of our cities as well.

Neither did deaths from alcoholic beverages begin with the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment. "The liquor deaths in the United States during the saloon regime averaged 60,000 a year, or 1250 a week. The purest 'good grain alcohol' is a poison to the human system."

At the request of the liquor dealers themselves the Government placed all liquors containing one half of one per cent, or more, as intoxicating; and no one seems in days to have questioned its accuracy. The flasks were too common to cause comment.

There was "a well beaten path between the liquor dealer's place of business and the houses of ill fame." "He bribed judges, threatened district attorneys." He had a grip hand on political nominations and elections. State legislators and even United States Senators and Congressmen feared the power of his threats.

It was because the liquor dealer himself was a constant violator of the laws of God and man that our people arose in might and outlawed him. This was "put over" on him by any one but himself. It was the reaction upon him of his own deeds.

Bring back liquor—even wine and beer.
(Continued on page 15)

IN THIS NUMBER

Short Talks by the Editor, .....
Happy Omens for Prohibition—C. A. Bame, .....
Editorial Review, .....
The Bible and Prohibition—C. F. Yoder, .....
Prayer: A Force or a Farce?—L. S. Bauman, .....
Let Science Keep Her Sphere—F. V. Kinzie, .....
The Family Altar—T. C. Lyon, .....
The Week-day Bible School—R. I. Crees, .....
Pastors and Superintendents, .....
C. E. at Lost Creek, Kentucky—Goldie Richards, .....
Why a Jew was Shocked—Jacob Silverman, .....
News from the Field, .....
Our Little Readers, .....
The Tie that Binds, .....
In the Shadow, .....

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Short Talks by the Editor on Steps in the Way to Life and Fellowship

VII. WITNESS BEARING

become a Christian involves not merely the acceptance of tenets of faith, but the entering upon a life of witnessing Jesus Christ. Every new-born, Spirit-filled child of God must witness to the saving and keeping power of divine grace. We are saved to serve—to help propagate the Gospel, to pass on to us the "good news." to bear testimony to the truthfulness and power of God's revelation, to convince men that Jesus is the Son, the Savior of the world. It is important that the new member shall get this clear at the outset—that we are here merely to offer prayer and praise to God, but also to work and bring forth fruit. And it should be kept in mind by those who are long-time members of the church of Christ, that we are God's witnesses to the world.

How Are We Made Witnesses?

Every Christian and church member is a witness by divine inspiration and commitment. Among the very last words of Jesus recorded by Luke are these: "And ye are witnesses of these things" (Luke 24:48). And in the opening chapter of Acts (vs. 8), Jesus said: "... and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." And the gist of the Great Commission as reported by Jesus (28:19, 20) is, "Go ... teach," a charge to witness-bear. In his high-priestly prayer the Lord Jesus makes it plain that he fully expected his disciples to carry out his program of witness-bearing, for he says: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word" (John 17:20). That Paul did not fail to be impressed with this Christian commandment is brought out at many points in his writings, but particularly in 2 Corinthians 5:19, 20, where we read: "... that was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, ... and committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then, we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us."

Personal experience with Christ makes for witness bearing on the part of a Christian. It was so with the woman who received eternal life from the Lord at Sychar, for we read: "The woman then left her waterpot, and went her way into the city, and said unto the men, Come, see a man, that told me all things that I did: is not this the Christ?" And many were converted because of her witness, but when they had met and heard the Master, many more believed because of his own word," and bore this testimony, "Now we believe, not because of thy saying: for we have heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Savior of the world" (John 4:28, 29, 41, 42). It was the case with Paul, for after he had seen and heard the Lord, he knew he was to be a "witness unto all men" (Acts 22:15). And it had the effect upon John, as he himself tells us: "And we have seen and do testify, that the Father sent the Son to be the Savior of the world" (1 John 4:14). Their experience with their Lord had empowered and dominated Peter and John that when threatened by the authorities, they declared: "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard" (Acts 4:20).

The Holy Spirit also makes men witnesses for Christ, and of this John quotes Jesus in his gospel as saying: "But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, and the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he will testify of me: and ye also shall bear witness, because ye have seen and heard me from the beginning" (John 15:26, 27). Note that it is the Holy Spirit comes, who teaches of Christ, that the new member becomes a witness. And John testifies: "Hereby know ye that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit. And we have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Savior of the world" (1 John 4:13, 14). It was after the coming of the Holy Spirit that he was enabled to say, "We have seen and do testify." It was the Spirit that inspired and made possible the witnessing.

How Are We to Witness?

We are to witness for Christ by our life and conduct. "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself" (1 John 5:10), the witness of the Spirit in his own heart (see Rom. 8:16), and possessing that, men will soon take knowledge or notice that, he has "been with Jesus" (Acts 4:13) and has learned of him. Jesus commands: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 5:16). It is the Christian quality of life that is to be a witness for Christ and a glory to God. Many references might be given to bear home this truth, but these examples will suffice: In Colossians 1:10, Paul admonishes "That ye walk worthy of the Lord unto all well pleasing," and in the next chapter, the sixth verse he says, "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him." Again he writes, "I therefore ... beseech you that ye walk worthy of that vocation wherewith ye are called," and then he specifies, "with all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering, forbearing one another in love" (Eph. 4:1, 2). And John seems to suggest that before we attempt to bear oral witness, we should have the witness of a worthy life. "He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also to walk, even as he walked" (1 John 2:6). Certainly it is important that at the very outset we shall be convinced of the necessity of walking in "newness of life" (Rom. 6:4). That is the way by which every one can bear a witness that will redound to the glory of God and will be respected of men.

We are to bear witness to Christ by word of mouth, testifying to the truthfulness of the things of Christ, the revelation of God given through his Son. Paul found himself charged with that responsibility. After his heavenly vision it was told him, "For thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard" (Acts 22:15). The apostles on the day of Pentecost bore witness "as the Spirit gave the utterance" to "the wonderful works of God" (Acts 2:4, 11). During his mission in Corinth, we are told, "Paul was pressed in the Spirit, and testified to the Jews that Jesus was Christ," and to strengthen him in the face of the opposition that was stirred up, the Lord encouraged Paul to continue his testimony, saying, "Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace" (Acts 18:5, 9). In some manner or degree every Christian is responsible for bearing witness to the claims and teachings of Jesus.

We may bear witness to Christ by presenting him as the Savior of men and seeking to win them to the acceptance of his saving grace. Soul winning is the definite responsibility of every child of God and not of the preacher alone. Every Christian who believes that men are lost in sin and that Jesus is their only Savior is duty bound to do what he can to get men to accept Christ. We are the representatives, the ambassadors, of the Kingdom, and to us is committed the "word of reconciliation" to those who are estranged. If we have any measure of fellowship in the sufferings of Christ, we, with Paul, will approach souls with pleadings on our lips: "We pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God" (2 Cor. 5:20).

We may bear witness by being ready to give our very lives for the Gospel, if need be. The word "witness", as used in the New Testament, means "martyr", and in the early days of Christianity, witnessing for Christ often did mean martyrdom. It meant that

(Continued on page 8)

Happy Omens for Prohibition

An Editorial by Dr. Charles A. Bame, Sunday School Editor

Things have been happening. Ohio is not dead politically nor Prohibitionally. If any thought so, let them be advised. A new impulse and inspiration was given the cause last week in Columbus, the state capital. Other good things are happening.

First, Joe Robinson, strangely silent as to this topic during his race for the Vice Presidency as Al Smith's running mate, has told the Democratic conclave recently, that he will have no more of wet platforms and the South is determined, no doubt that it shall be as he desires.

Second, Gov. Emmerson, elected as a dry, showed unusual courage when he vetoed the bill to undo all dry effort in the state of Lincoln. Wets elected to undo it were defeated by the courage and power of the governor.

Third, Ohio, birthplace of the W. C. T. U. and of the Anti-Saloon League, has spoken through a great convention attended by 1200 dries from all parts of the state. Called by eight of its temperance organizations, it brought together many of the outstanding leaders of temperance and prohibition from all parts of the country and sounded a note of fight and victory that will resound for many moons and be heard perhaps even by Raskob, et al. Let the Columbus papers tell, perhaps most unwillingly, part of the story. In a front-page account of this convention's first day of meeting, "The Ohio State Journal" reported:

Governor White Urges Dry Law Enforcement

The program of a president or a governor should see there is not a nullification of the constitution dealing with the eighteenth amendment, Governor White told delegates Monday attending the state temperance convention in the Southern Theater.

Declaring there ought to be an honest and reasonable enforcement of the law in Ohio, he asserted there ought to be no difference between a man who can write a check for a "million" and the poor man with a pint.

(Continued on page 9)

---

EDITORIAL REVIEW

---

We are sharing our editorial space this week with Dr. Bame, who attended the recent Ohio rally of temperance and prohibition organizations. We are glad for this note, also for the treatment of Dr. Yoder this week on the theme, "Prohibition and the Bible." We need a revival of interest along this line.

Brother Sylvester Lowman, pastor at Portis, Kansas, expresses thanks to those who have given him the support of their prayers and sympathy during the illness of his wife. She still needs your prayers for her recovery. As the result of pre-Easter services conducted by the pastor, seven were added to the church, making eleven additions since the first of the year.

We notice by Brother W. H. Schaffer's weekly calendar that his Sunday school attendance and interest at Conemaugh, Pennsylvania, continues at a high point. A contest between the adults and young people resulted in a victory for the adults. We trust, however, that there was victory in it for both sides. The total attendance record would seem to indicate that. On Easter Sunday the attendance was 246 and the Sunday following it was 226.

Brother R. Paul Miller writes of his campaign at Fort Scott, Kansas, with Brother L. G. Wood. After a persistent five-year struggle the outlook is now said to be encouraging and people are looking to our church with respect and coming to it for a sound Gospel. We have a good church plant there and well located. Seven heads of families were added to the church by this campaign and that means added financial strength. It is suggested that it may not be long until this will become a self-supporting church.

Our Sunday school workers and leaders will be interested in the leading article on Professor Stuckey's page this week, written by Brother Robert D. Crees. He tells of the week-day religious education program that was worked out and put in operation by the First church of Philadelphia. It was splendidly done and has resulted in much benefit to pupils and has been the means of leading at least ten to accept Christ. This is a kind of religious educational activity that our church leaders ought to give more attention to. There are not a few places where similar arrangements can be worked out.

Our correspondent from Waterloo, Iowa, Brother B. F. J. baugh, writes that their pastor, Brother S. M. Whetstone has been compelled to undergo an operation for appendicitis. His situation seems to be encouraging. Prayer is requested in his behalf. He recently closed a revival at Waterloo, with the assistance of Mr. and Mrs. Richer as musicians, resulting in over thirty confessions, most of which have been baptized and received into the church. May God speedily restore Brother Whetstone to health and a continuance of his splendid service.

We have a splendid report of a very successful meeting at Waynesboro, Pennsylvania, where Brother W. C. Benshoff, the pastor, was his own evangelist, in the fifth campaign he has conducted in that church. He had the hearty cooperation of his members and God gave the victory, as he always does when his people stand for the conditions he has laid down. There were seventeen added to the church by baptism, three by letter and seven reconsecrated themselves, making twenty-seven in all to take a stand for Christ. Brother Benshoff's effective, whole-gospel preaching is attracting the attention of the people of that town.

The Christian Endeavorers have an interesting report this week from Miss Goldie Richards, a worker at Lost Creek, Kentucky. She tells of the entertainment of a district C. E. Convention at the Riverside Endeavorers, at which time Dr. K. M. Monroe was the principal speaker. Also, at the Easter sunrise prayer meeting members of the Ashland College Gospel Team were present, as well as at other services and as a result of their efforts two persons were led to accept Christ as their Savior. There are many other societies that might report some interesting events and activities. Why not play fair with those societies that do report and share your blessings with them?

It was a very successful revival and Bible conference that was enjoyed during the month of March by the brethren of the Mt. Tecca church, in northern California. Brother J. Wesley Platter, pastor, led the people faithfully in preparation and Dr. A. Yoder then came on the field as preacher and Bible lecturer. After two weeks of services, then came the northern California district conference, at which Brother A. L. Lynn and Brother Ogden were speakers also. The revival was continued and climaxed by a week of services when Brother Yoder's sermons are said to have been especially strong and effective. The numerical results of these meetings were twenty-three confessions of Christ, eighteen having been baptized and received into the church at the time the report was made. Another notable result was the bringing to completion of an effort on the part of three churches of the district to support their own missionary—Miss Laura Larson—on our South American field. It was a real task, but the churches assumed it courageously and with faith. Miss Larson is well equipped for her work and will sail with Dr. Yoder about May the first for the field.

President E. E. Jacobs reports this week concerning the recent meeting of the College Board of Trustees. A comprehensive five-year program was adopted, which involves the erection of a new building, possibly a chapel; continued increase of endowment; entry into the Association of American Universities; doubling the number of volumes in the library. The renting and equipping of a Seminary house was authorized. The faculty continues to grow and Dr. Bell is continued as part time Field Secretary. The outlook for Ashland College and Seminary is very encouraging and the church can well be proud of its leadership. Instances have recently come under our observation indicating the growing spirit of respect for and loyalty to our own and only educational institution. God has been good to us in providing us with such scholars and with such Christian leaders in education as are now in the field at Ashland. The brotherhood need have no fear regarding their loyalty to the faith and ideals of the Gospel, and we feel that they are attempting to guide the school both in accordance with the highest Christian ideals and the best accredited educational standards. Our own young people are the argument and the ground for the maintenance of such a school. We should give the support of our prayers and finances, and to that end pay attention to the fact that Education Day is the next special offering day—the second Sunday in June.

The Bible and Prohibition

By C. F. Yoder, Ph.D.

question concerning the Bible and prohibition has referred to me and I am glad to take a few moments answer it. The writer in question says, "I am unal-ly opposed to the churches stand on prohibition, and first of all upon our Savior's action in making wine, the words of Paul, "Let no man judge you in meat or k." In answer I will say that regarding prohibition is the way I reason:

First, while the motive of love and reason is the great-est and best as a basis for temperance, yet that vast body of socially minded people who do not respond to either love or reason, something else is necessary. Both human and divine government must appeal to fear. "The law is the lawless" (1 Tim. 1:9, 10). Therefore we must obey the law (Rom. 13:1-7). Jesus himself obeyed the law perfectly. He only disregarded the traditions which were void of the law. He commanded obedience to the law of the law, even though they themselves were law breakers (Matt. 23:1-3).

Second, the law consists largely of prohibitions. It usually says, "Thou shalt not." Therefore the principle of prohibiting that which is harmful is perfectly logical. It is so universally recognized as sensible that no sane person denies it.

The only question as to the liquor traffic, therefore, is as to whether it is being harmful or not. If it is harmful it should be prohibited. "Every tree which my Father hath not planted shall be rooted out." And now also the ax is laid to the root of the trees; before every tree which beareth not forth good fruit shall be cut down, and cast into the fire" (Matt. 3:10). "But ye mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me" (Luke 19:27).

It is true that Paul says, "Let no man judge you in meat and drink" (Col. 2:16) but he is speaking only of the symbolic offerings of the law which were fulfilled in Christ and done away. Read the context and see. He was not speaking of things harmful in themselves. If you interpret his statement to make it permit the use of alcohol as a beverage you make it permit the use of all poisons for pleasure, regardless of consequences.

The example of Jesus in making wine is often referred to as justification of the liquor traffic, just as his enemies called him a "wine bibber" because he "came eating and drinking" instead of being an ascetic like John. Jesus replied to such, "Wisdom is justified of her children,"—that is, say, Good people can appreciate a good example, but evil people will pervert it to justify themselves. Selfish men produce slanderous and illogical arguments.

Those who accuse Jesus of making intoxicating liquor shift the burden of proof, but they cannot prove that he did. The evidence is the other way. The Greek word here translated wine is oinos, which like the word cider or grape juice may be used of fermented or unfermented juice. We must go to the context to find out which is meant, and in the case of Jesus we find (1) That God cannot deny or contradict himself and therefore would not encourage by example here (John 2) what he emphatically forbids elsewhere, and (2) that the people after drinking all they wanted at this feast were not intoxicated. Jesus "manifested forth his glory." Could he do this by making a crowd of people drunk? (3) The ruler of the feast recognized that the drink was better than the best usually offered and therefore must be considered as consistent with the character of Jesus the immaculate Son of God.

The advice of Paul to Timothy also was given in a district where travelers found it impossible to find safe drinking water, and tea and coffee were unknown. The prescription is for a medical use of wine rather than as an intoxicating beverage.

It is drunkenness that all good people wish to eliminate from the world, and the prohibition of the liquor traffic is only one of many steps necessary to this end. No one will deny that drunkenness is an evil, and no honest person will deny that the traffic in strong drink increases drunkenness. It is therefore an evil. The Supreme Court of the United States settled that question for all good citizens, declaring that the traffic has no inherent right to exist; and it has repeatedly upheld the validity of prohibition laws, including the 18th amendment.

But the Bible goes even farther than the prohibition of the traffic. It has something to say to all concerned in fostering intemperance.

1. The Bible prohibits strong drink. "Look thou not upon the wine when it is red" (Prov. 23:31). "Woe unto them that are mighty to drink wine" (Isa. 5:22).

2. The Bible prohibits giving a bad example even by moderate drinking. "It is good neither to eat flesh (offered to idols) or to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended or is made weak" (Rom. 14:21).

3. The Bible even forbids associating with drinkers. "Be not among winebibbers" (Prov. 23:20). This surely includes associating with them by voting for or championing their wicked cause.

4. The Bible prohibits the making of strong drink. "Woe unto . . . men of strength to mingle strong drink" (Isa. 5:22).

5. The Bible prohibits the selling or giving away of strong drink. "Woe unto him who giveth his neighbor

Fight the Good Fight

*Peace does not mean the end of all our striving,
Joy does not mean the drying of our tears;
Peace is the power that comes to souls arriving
Up to the light where God himself appears.*

*Joy is the wine that God is ever pouring
Into the hearts of those who strive with him
Light'ning their eyes to vision and adoring,
Strength'ning their arms to warfare glad and grim.*

*So would I live and not in idle resting,
Stupid as swine that wallow in the mire;
Fain would I fight, and be forever breasting
Danger and death; forever under fire.*

*Bread of thy body give me for my fighting,
Give me to drink thy sacred blood for wine,
While there are wrongs that need me for the righting
While there is warfare splendid and divine.*

*Give me, for light, the sunshine of thy sorrow,
Give me for shelter shadow of thy cross,
Give me as other the glory of thy morrow,
Gone from my heart the bitterness of loss.*

—G. A. Studdert-Kennedy.

to drink, that putteth thy bottle to him and makest him drunk" (Hab. 2:15).

6. The Bible prohibits advertising or advocating the evil. "Woe unto them which ... justify the wicked for reward" (Isa. 5:23).

7. The Bible prohibits licensing the evil. "Woe to him that buildeth a town with blood, and stablisheth a city by iniquity" (Hab. 2:12).

8. The Bible prohibits ignorant or malicious talking in favor of the evil. "Woe unto them that call evil good and good evil" (Isa. 5:20). But of fermented wine it says, "At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder" (Prov. 23:32), therefore to defend it is to call evil good.

9. The Bible condemns the spirit of unwillingness to see and acknowledge the truth. "Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes and prudent in their own sight" (Isa. 5:21). Therefore to be "unalterably opposed to prohibition" is fanaticism in an evil cause.

10. Finally the Bible prohibits treating on friendly terms or becoming the accomplices in any way of the hypocrites who for self-interest deceive the people by lying advertisements and other means. "Eat thou not the bread of him that hath an evil eye. ... Eat and drink, saith he to thee; but his heart is not with thee" (Prov. 23:6, 7).

This injunction is specially needed in this day of a tremendous campaign of lying in order to bring back the cursed liquor traffic. Let Christians follow their Bibles and not the lying sign boards and paid editorials of daily papers or suborned agents of the condemned traffic.

To the whole business and its defenders God says "Woe!" and when God says "woe" it is time to stop.

The people who shout most about non-enforcement of prohibition are the very gang who are trying to break down the law. Would they obey any other law that would restrain their appetites or curtail their profits? They never have, and until they are converted they never will. With all its defects prohibition is producing far better results than any other method ever tried. Let no Christian be found in the camps of the enemies of God, for his "woes" are sure and terrible.

Prayer: A Force, or a Farce?

By Louis S. Bauman, D.D.

PART II

When the apostate nations of Israel and Judah were face to face with decline and captivity, the grief in the heart of God's great prophet Isaiah was that "There is none that calleth upon thy name, that stirreth up himself to take hold of thee" (Isa. 64:7). It was not the strength of Assyria or of Babylon that the great prophet feared—it was the prayerlessness of Israel that broke his heart. God called to Israel: "TAKE HOLD OF MY STRENGTH!" But Israel would not hear nor heed. Therefore, Israel has trodden the pathway of sorrow through centuries upon centuries of time. It is God's call to every despairing Christian today: "TAKE HOLD OF MY STRENGTH!"

There is an unholy pessimism throughout all the world today. And, this dark pessimism has laid hold upon the Christian churches. Undeniably, it is a sick world in which we live. The times are evil. Crime and immorality are demoralizing youth. Lawlessness is rolling in upon us like a mighty flood. Governments are staggered with their problems, and "men's hearts are failing them for fear and for expectation of those things that are coming upon the world." No theory of government furnishes us with a cure. Every school of thought seems to be bringing us in an hour of great human need. Men, even of the world, are frankly confessing that there must be a great spiritual awakening, or our civilization is doomed. But let it be remembered that great spiritual awakenings have never yet come until God's people on earth went to their knees in agonizing prayer. God pointed the way three thousand years ago: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and PRAY, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land" (II Chron. 7:14).

In the Sixteenth Century, the Church witnessed a time of idolatry, distress, confusion, war, and every form of wickedness. A handful of saints, known as "Reformers," went to their knees. A mighty revival followed. In the Seventeenth Century, again spiritual night seemed hopelessly to envelop all Christendom. "The Puritans" went to their knees. A mighty awakening again followed. In the Eighteenth Century, again days of spiritual darkness came, and the world seemed about to be given over to Deism. The Wesleys went to their knees, and a mighty revival shook the Church and saved the day. In the Nineteenth Century, again great apostasy and falling away from God. Christians, on the verge of despair, went once more to their knees, and God raised up Finney and Moody, with results that all the world knows. And once more, the darkness and bigotry and infidelity of Modernism, has all but driven the true faith from the Church and her great schools. If our Lord shall tarry, a time of revival will come, and showers of blessing will again fall over a thirsty world; but, it will not come unless the children of God again build their family altars and seek again their closets. The greatest resolve this year's Convention could possibly make in times like these is that you will return to your churches, your schools, and your firesides, to build again those broken-down altars of prayer, in every home, in every church, and in every Christian Endeavor Society. Resolve that nothing will keep you from any appointed hour of prayer within your home or your church.

Prayer means close, intimate fellowship with God. And therefore, your prayer-life is the real barometer of our spiritual life, either as an individual, or as a church, or as a society. Some one has well said: that the morning church service determines the popularity of the preacher. The evening service determines the popularity of the preacher. But, the mid-week prayer meeting determines the popularity of the Lord.

But, listen! It may be that you are not being negligent of your prayer-life. It may be that you belong to a faithful few who will stand by the altars of prayer wherever they are erected. Yet, you feel that you are not praying in prayer. You sometimes ask, "What's the matter? There are churches and lives in which it is not more prayer that we would urge, but more determined, more faith-full prayer,—prayer that will not let go until God blesses,—prayer that ceases not until God's strength is attained. There is much prayer that is woefully fruitless these days. Why? Let the inspired apostle give an answer: "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss" (James 4:3). It may be well for us to call your attention to some of the reasons for the lamentable lack of a way to prayer.

Note again this statement of the apostle James: "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, THAT YE MAY CONSUME IT UPON YOUR LUSTS." Too often prayer goes out from our hearts with a selfish purpose.

le girl, we are told, knelt and sent up to God this on: "And, please, God, make Boston the capital of ont." The shocked mother said: "Why, Marion, made you say that?" "Cause," answered the little I made it that way in my 'zamination paper today, want it to be right." Thus do we oftentimes decide our own course of action, and then expect God to with us and pray to him to help us out. Prevail-prayer must be according to the will of God concerns. When your life response to God's will concerning ther than to any selfish desires of your own, then for mighty answers to prayer. And, remember, will is always God's best for you,—the thing you, would desire if you understood.

Other outstanding reason for unanswered prayer in ves, lies in the fact that we too often pray on legal d, rather than on the ground of grace. I have now reached my subject: "Supplication in Grace."

Call now, the story of the rich young ruler, who came us with the prayer for eternal life. What greater could have been asked? But note that prayer: l Master, what shall I DO to inherit eternal life?" anted eternal life on the grounds of things he might He stood on legal ground. Christ met him on that d. He told him what to "do." The result we all: He walked away "very sorrowful!" The things to ne staggered him. They seemed beyond him. And, l, they were. Even they that stood by and heard the er of our Lord, cried: "Who then can be saved?"

viously, "a certain lawyer" came to the Master with ame great question, or prayer: "Master, what shall to inherit eternal life?" The result was the same. Master told him what to "do," and gave him an illus- n in the story of the good Samaritan. Telling him story, he said: "Go, and DO likewise." We are not ned that the answer of the Master brought great the heart of that lawyer. Doubtless, misgiving and ir filled his heart likewise. God can do but little for men (and sinful are we all) who approach him on ground,—who pray and expect answer because of al merit. Supplication, to prevail, must be on the d of divine grace.

most striking example of this we find in the inci- hat comes to us from the lips of the Master, where- vo men went up into the temple to pray; the one risee, and the other a publican. The Pharisee stood ayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I t as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, n as this publican. I fast twice in the week, I give e of all that I possess. And, the publican, standing ff, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto n, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merci- me a sinner." Having told this story, the Master B "I tell you, this man went down to his house jus- rather than the other" (Luke 18:9-14). Two men l. One received the coveted answer. The other d nothing, unless it was the Master's scorn. Why? e not because one was morally better than the other. t ground, the Pharisee was probably the best man ey. There is nothing to indicate that he was lying e said that he was not an "extortioner, unjust," adulterer. There is nothing to indicate that his nce between these two men was, that one ap- ed to pray to God on the ground of the law. The approached on the ground of the blood-sprinkled seat,—the provision of the grace of God for sinful e highly significant that the word "merciful" in the famous prayer of the publican, "God be merciful to me a sinner," is the Greek word, hilaskomai, which is "used in the Septuagint and New Testament in connection with the mercy-seat (Ex. 25:17, 18, 21; Heb. 9:5). As an instructed Jew the publican is thinking, not of mere mercy, but of the blood-sprinkled mercy-seat." Dr. Scofield says: "His prayer might be paraphrased, 'Be toward me as thou art when thou lookest upon atoning blood.'" This publican stood on the ground of Calvary, and cried: "God, behold me at the mercy-seat whereon the blood of thine own Son was shed to provide the robe of righteousness for sinners as I am! God, do not make void the shed blood of thine own great mercy-seat!" Now, as a matter of fact, God could not deny the prayer of the publican. He was compelled to send him down to his house "justified," i. e., made righteous, or deny the efficacy of his own blood-stained mercy-seat. God never could do that. The publican had laid hold on God's strength, and in that strength, found the mercy he craved. On the other hand, the Pharisee, approaching God for justification on the ground of self-righteousness was polluted with sin.

It is written: "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh" (Heb. 10:19, 20). When our Lord and Savior died upon the accursed tree, the great veil in front of the Holy of Holies, that forbid the entrance of any man save the High Priest of God, was rent from top to bottom, thus signifying the fact, that now all men might with "boldness enter into the holiest BY THE BLOOD OF JESUS." "Therefore, let us come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need" (Heb. 4:16).

Now, how often Christians kneel to pray on Sinai, instead of at the blood-stained mercy-seat! How often, when God searches the hearts of those who kneel in prayer, he finds them really expecting answer to prayer because they are not sinners "as other men are,"—because of their good, moral behavior, because they are not adulterers, or because they "give tithes of all they possess." Honestly, now, do we see ourselves in supplication only beneath the outstretched arms of the cross,—the great mercy-seat of God? Do we confess to God that only because Christ died for us, and gave us the way of approach, dare we ask for anything? Keep before you as the ground upon which you ask, the merit of Christ. Ask nothing upon the ground of your own personal merit. Supplicate on the ground of grace, and grace only. On the ground of grace, "All things are yours." On the ground of personal merit, nothing is yours, for "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." The lawbreaker sits in the prison, and any self-righteousness that he may possess, is annulled in its working as he sits there. He is under condemnation.

(To be continued)

Let Science Keep Her Sphere

By Fred V. Kinzie

A few weeks ago a pompous gathering, styled "The American Association for the Advancement of Science," assembled in Cleveland, Ohio. More than one article came to the attention of the writer concerning this notable convention, some of which glowed with proud records of achievement.

Simultaneously with these sketches of tribute and praise, which were clipped and preserved, other printed excerpts were also noted. All these lie before us as we write.

At hand also is the Word of God. How dare we, as Christ's own, gulp down any prolix statement without viewing it in the full glare of Holy Writ, which is forever "settled in Heaven"!

Now, these scientists are purported to be the very "nobility" of learning—wisdom personified. So we want to know what our Guide Book has to say on the subject. Solomon, with all his errors was one of Jehovah's wisest, wrote centuries ago, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom: and the knowledge of the holy is understanding," and his utterance still rings true.

We of this modern theological day point proudly to Paul as the only "university graduate" among the apostles, thus soothing the "pain" history creates because of poor "unlearned and ignorant" Peter and John. But scholarly Paul, quoting the visioned seer, Isaiah, tells the sophisticated Corinthians, "I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent." Then he goes on to ask, "Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?" adding later, in such learnedly, clear-cut expressions, "For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, he taketh the wise in their own craftiness. And again, the Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain. Therefore let no man glory in men."

And yet we go on glorifying in MEN!

Praise God, there are some really great men who sense the truth these days and are unafraid to utter it, whatever their own spiritual status may be. Some time ago while Mr. Edison was in his laboratory in Fort Myers, Florida, Roger Babson called on him. When asked what new radical invention he visualized as coming during the next few years, Mr. Edison replied: "Babson, I do not pose as a preacher, but let me tell you if there is a God, he will not let us advance much further materially until we catch up spiritually. A great fundamental law of science is that all forces must be kept in balance. When anybody or any force goes off on a tangent there is a smash. And this applies to America today as it has to every nation before it."

We may not agree with all of Mr. Edison's views, socially and religiously, but he drove home some scathing truth in this instance, which can be comprehended without the "white light" of modern science!

And then we note that this Association takes exception to dismissal of teachers in state schools for "trivial" reasons, a reference being to the "South." A careful reading between the lines naturally calls us to Dayton, Tennessee. Mr. Scope's teaching of evolutionistic theories may have been "trivial" (though a host of lovers of the veracity of the Word know better), nevertheless, praise be to the Author of that Word, today the divinely inspired Genesis account of creation's dawn is being taught in every classroom used by the scientifically inclined Scopes. And the memory of that truly Christian statesman, William Jennings Bryan, is being perpetuated and honored by the establishment of a university bearing his name. "Surely the wrath of man shall praise" God!

As we read these accounts of the Cleveland assemblage of science's dignitaries, another story came before us: "Chang"—an undersized, stoop-shouldered, toothless, partly deaf, but humble Christian of China—was halting in speech, but a battery of power through prayer. This poor, unphilosophical Chinese secured the attention of leading men of affairs, brought to his aid pastor evangelists, caused crowds to leave work in fields, tend divine services, made the need of a large to actuality, saw 3,000 men gathered to hear the under extremely adverse circumstances, even secured favorable weather for the meeting, later lished a Christian school, and brought his traditioned old mother to accept Christ—ALL THROUGH VAILING PRAYER!

Poor old Chang—never knew the difference between an atom and an elephant's eyebrow! We could not but admire and contrast Chang on the platform at Cleveland then again on the streets of the New Jerusalem.

But another contemporaneous item comes up for attention: In considering that undying hymn of the Christian ages, "There Is a Fountain Filled with Life," breathing forth the most blessed doctrine of Holy Scripture, we find that "social science" has discovered a new method of atonement, better than the old. This "scientific" atonement seems to be one of the new creations of the Mathews, of the University of Chicago. In his "The Atonement and the Social Process," he states that the scientific age has outgrown such ideas and must learn to think of the atonement in the pattern of process. While suffering from others' maladjustment to the evolutionary forces of the cosmic process—through his own adjustment to those forces, and became our Savior." What bombastic, swelling word to introduce a latest-fashioned atonement!

But then, the much-discussed Dr. E. Stanley Jones, in his recent book, "The Christ of Every Road," would have us think we are at the very borders of the world of the new era, being ushered in by "MAN'S" "scientific attitude toward life." What sophistry!

To not forget our caption, we must say: "All that the new age has done and is doing in the new realm—giving mankind physical light, sound, recreation, medical aid, etc., ad infinitum; but when they have crossed into the divine will and edicts of the Lord Jehovah, or into the future plan of the ages, which are wholly in his hands, then children of the LIGHT will be aroused to this signal of the perilous times in which we live.

In the face of all God's prophetic utterances and plain handwriting on the walls of our social, political, industrial, educational, and even religious halls today, dare men let their "brains" carry their imaginations? Any idea of scientifically bettering a world that is now in awful judgment, the oncoming echoes of which are already distinctly audible! God grant that we may be the children of light, and the children of the day, and "not of the night, nor of darkness," "that that day may overtake . . . as a thief."

Harrah, Washington.

Short Talks by the Editor

(Continued from page 3)

for Stephen (Acts 22:20), and for James (Acts 12:2), and for the tipas (Rev. 2:13) and for many other saints (Rev. 17:6). Such a price is not often demanded for faithful witnessing in our day. There is certainly much need for the spirit of the martyr. We are not now being called upon to die for the Gospel's sake. We are being asked to endure ridicule, and scorn, and ostracism in many instances in order to be true to the Christ and his Kingdom. Times like these, as has been the case with all other times, call forth the noblest, the most heroic, qualities of the human soul in order to bear a witness of the truest sort.

Happy Omens for Prohibition

(Continued from page 4)

Mrs. Florence D. Richard, president of the Ohio W. C. T. U., presided at the meeting Monday afternoon. Address of Ben H. Spence, Toronto, Canada, a journalist now stationed at Washington, D. C., ended the first session of the convention.

If the United States, with its legal and judicial systems, were to adopt Canada's liquor laws, hell would be popping all over this country in short order. If Canada, with its legislative and judicial systems, were to secure the United States prohibitory law, the results and conditions would be a near paradise," Spence told the delegates.

The difficulty in Canada is because of law. That in the United States is due to enforcement machinery, he said.

Dr. George Brewer, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Lima, Ohio, declared the advocates for the repeal of the liquor amendment were "loud-mouthed, well-organized and well-advertised anarchists."

He saw an engulfing deluge of drink and crime if repealed, and strongly urged the support of the eighteenth amendment.

The self-appointed drinking reformers, he stated never were concerned about the prohibition problem until the law reached the finishing supplies in their cellars.

"The principles of religion are opposed and must be opposed the whole liquor business. If we had continued the prohibition act, we would have been nearer victory today," Dr. L. C. Wright, president of the federated churches of greater Cleveland, declared Monday afternoon.

The prohibition law is working better than anything we have tried, and will work better as years go on," he said.

Another educational campaign was suggested by W. F. Kirk, pastor of the Ohio State Grange at Port Clinton. Discussing the effects of prohibition on the increased sales of foodstuffs, Kirk stated the "bootlegger and the moonshiner are boils upon the face of society, indicating impurity of blood, and the necessity of regulation."

Public sentiment is necessary to back the prohibition officers, Florence H. Sears, state prohibition commissioner stated. "Be realistic enough to give us time to see what we can do," he asked the delegates.

"There are 32 officers now covering the 88 counties of the state," he said. "Try to get your local men interested in enforcement, and depend upon us only when necessary," he asked.

Editorially, "The Columbus Citizen" said, under the title

When the Drys Applaud

Ohio Prohibitionists, holding a convention in Columbus, applauded vigorously when Governor White promised them that he would make a sincere effort to provide honest, vigorous enforcement of the law in this state.

The law should be enforced," the governor said, "and no distinction should be made between the man who can write millions on his check and the poor man with a half-pint of liquor."

Well, too, applaud the governor's promise, and we hope sincerely that he will be able to keep it. We are not unmindful that similar promises, made by other officials, have not been kept. Never—and never believe this statement is impossible to challenge successfully—there has been a genuine, sustained attempt to enforce the prohibition law impartially, as between rich and poor.

The man "who can write millions on his check" has always been able to get liquor, if he wanted it.

Possibly the governor was referring to distinctions between large and small sellers of booze, rather than between their customers, his promise of enforcement. It is true that some wealthy bootleggers have been caught, but it has been far too often the rule that the net of the law held the little fish while the big ones slipped through.

The prohibitionists also applauded the announcement that Governor Emmerson of Illinois had vetoed a bill to repeal that state's enforcement laws. Dr. F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, called it "the greatest news in the dry world for some time."

We wish to join our applause to the signs of an awakening spirit. It is surely not dead, but for some time has been lulled by the lies and yells of a greatly overestimated "wet" propaganda financed by rich millionaires whose day of power is soon to wane. The true American temperance spirit will again assert itself.

STARVING WITH PLENTY OF FOOD

The head of the department of hygiene and bacteriology at the University of Chicago, Dr. Edwin O. Jordan, is authority for the statement that thousands of children in the tropics are virtually starving to death in a land of plenty. And they are starving because they confine their eating to the unvaried and easily obtained staples of plantains, bananas, rice and other plant foods to be had in the tropics.—The Gospel Messenger.

The Family Altar

By T. C. Lyon

Daily Readings and Suggestions

(Keep with your Bible)

MONDAY

Exodus 14:1-12. "God moves in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform." Surely, the children of Israel might well be forgiven if, knowing the hardness of Pharaoh's heart, and seeing him approach with his armies and chariots, their hearts failed them for fear. Certainly it takes much less to cause us to doubt and fear. It is so easy, in the face of visible opposition, to forget the invisible but invincible strength that is with us, and "If God be for us who can be against us?" Let us endure as seeing him!

TUESDAY

Exodus 14:13-18. It seems often that we, like the Israelites, must come completely to the end of our resources before we find God, or any room for the exercise of his power. They were hemmed in on every side, yet God's word was for them to go forward.

There are times when it is not proper to look to God for the next step: he is waiting for us to go forward! "Wherefore criest thou unto me? Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward." Is he waiting for us, for our church, for our missionaries and our consecrated substance, to go forward?

WEDNESDAY

Exodus 14:19-31. To the Israelites God's presence in the cloud brought light for their pathway, comfort, guidance; but to the Egyptians it brought darkness and confusion, uncertainty and dread. God's power took the Israelites safely through the sea, but the Egyptians were drowned by the same power. It has often been said that there is no darkness so great as rejected light. May our eyes ever be open to God's light and leading, and our spirits ever be willing to follow.

THURSDAY

Exodus 15:1-19. Man proposes, but God disposes! As Moses exclaimed in this song of victory, the Egyptians were following them in their might and power, and fully expected—as well they might—that they were going to subdue the Israelites and take them back as captives, with their spoil, to Egypt. But God had other plans for his people, and for the Egyptians. The way of victory is the way that is in keeping with God's plans: may we ever walk in his way!

FRIDAY

Exodus 15:20-27. From the heights of faith and exultation to the depths of doubt and despair! How little it takes to make us doubt. They had just witnessed the great power of God, as demonstrated upon the Egyptians, yet now because the waters of Marah were not pleasant to taste they were murmuring against God. God in his goodness showed Moses the means of making the water sweet, and then led them on to Elim where there were twelve wells of water. How much more he does for us than we ever ask or think! How much more than we deserve! O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good: because his mercy endureth forever.

SATURDAY

Exodus 16:1-8. After all the goodness of God, displayed on so many occasions, so recently, the children of Israel yet murmured upon the first little provocation: they longed for the food to which they were accustomed. And in response to their complaints, God sent them bread from heaven! If only we could remember, often when we murmur against the minister, or the other servants of God, that it is not men we are murmuring against, but God himself. May God give us power to see these things aright!

SUNDAY

Exodus 16:9-21. Even the glory of the presence of God could not long keep the Israelites obedient. The difficulty was that they still did not trust God. They were told not to keep the manna till morning, but they had some food and were not going to throw it away: they might not get any more! O God, may we not be faithless, but believing!

W. I. DUKER,
President

Goshen, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President

Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
South Bend, Indiana

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
2210 Maple Ave.,
Evanston, Illinois

The Week-day Bible School of the First Brethren Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

The average boy and girl in the United States attends the public school about twenty-five hours a week. That comprises their secular education. Many of them receive no religious training at all, but a small percentage do attend Sunday school for one hour a week. Of this hour, however, only about half is spent in teaching the lesson. That comprises their religious education. Just think of it—twenty-five hours of secular training over against a mere half-hour of religious training. The proportion is fifty to one, and yet we call this a "Christian" nation. The Jews and Catholics far outstrip the Protestant Church in the religious training of the child, but even they do not make the proportion much smaller. The question that arises is this: How can we give the children more religious training? The Christian Endeavor does not solve their problem, for their work is of an expressional nature, rather than impressional. In the C. E. the child merely expresses what was impressed in the Sunday school or at home. Then came the Vacation or Summer Bible school. This helped to fill a real need for religious instruction, but it was not enough for even the longest schools were not conducted for more than a six week period.

It was with a desire to meet this urgent need for more religious instruction for the children, that the First Brethren church of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, organized a Week-Day Bible School. The purpose of the school is to supplement the work of the Sunday school by teaching the children MORE of that inexhaustible book—the BIBLE. In December of 1929, the superintendent of the Sunday school, Brother Seitz, appointed a committee to organize a school. In some communities the children are allowed to attend such classes on public school time, but such was not the case in Philadelphia. The school opened the middle of February, 1930 and continued to the last of May, meeting every Friday afternoon from 4 to 5 o'clock. The 1930-31 session has been divided into three terms of unequal length: an eight week term from October to Christmas, a twelve week term closing just before Easter, and a six week term closing the middle of May. There is one teacher for the Beginners' Department, three for the Primary, two for the Junior and one for the Intermediate.

Our average Friday program is as follows. The children meet together in the church auditorium for the opening period. After the singing of choruses, prayer, and announcements, a special feature is presented. These have included illustrated talks by the superintendent, object talks by seminary students, songs and talk by a Hindu in native costume, songs and talk by a blind man, decision service by a visiting evangelist—mrT helbe w'ds9iofgd 6 list, illustrated talks by visiting missionaries, an object lesson by a seminary professor, and stereopticon slides on Biblical subjects. This entire program closes at 4:25, at which time the children are dismissed to their classes. Allowing about five minutes for taking the roll, the teachers have about half an hour for the lesson period, and dismiss directly from the classes at five o'clock. The Westminster Textbooks of Religious Education are used for the graded lessons. The books were not intended for this kind of work alone, but can easily be adapted to our work. There is a second and third year book for each department, after which the cycle is repeated. The Intermediates are making an independent study of the dispensations. Scripture passages are memorized by each department, the work being based on "Passages to Memorize," put out by the American Tract Society.

From the very beginning the interest and attendance has been excellent. The average attendance is over 50, the lowest being 42, and the highest 85. The ages run from three to sixteen. The school has helped to lead ten to accept Christ during the year. All of the children are from the immediate neighborhood, and most of them attend the Sunday school also. The majority of older ones are members of the church. The teachers are all members of the church, most of them being Sunday school teachers and serve without remuneration. No offering is taken from the children, the supply being bought by the Sunday school.

It is hard to estimate the value of this kind of work, but we do know that we are filling a need. The children are getting MORE religious training than formerly. Where it is allowed, the ideal arrangement would be to have such classes twice a week on public school time. Is there a Week-Day Bible School in your church? If not, why not? Why could not the Brethren Church lead the way in providing more religious training for children?

ROBERT D. CREES

(Editor's Note: Robert D. Crees has kindly contributed the foregoing article to this section of The Evangelist. He has done a commendable piece of work in the Philadelphia Bible school and it is fitting and proper that he should be given ready recognition for the splendid work which he has done. More of our Bible schools should be doing this self same work. Read this article carefully and then organize a Week-Day Bible school in your church.)

We are all links in the chain of life. No one is complete in himself. We are each one daily bearing something onward—something that contributes to the world and to experience. And we never know to what end our influence has been carried.

Pastors and Superintendents Talk to One Another

Frank and friendly suggestions given anonymously at a fellowship dinner.

One of the most complete Sunday school buildings in the United States has recently been opened by the North Avenue Presbyterian church of Atlanta, Georgia. The superintendent of the school, Dr. Marion McH. Hull wrote to the Editor:

"During the program of the opening week we had all of the superintendents and pastors of the Presbyterian churches for supper. I had previously asked each superintendent to write down in not more than two hundred words, 'What I Would Like My Pastor to Be,' and put these into the hat unsigned. In this way both pastors and superintendents could talk plainly without hurting anyone's feelings. After dinner we passed around the hat and let each one draw out a paper, which was read without comment. I say 'without comment,' but we did say, at the suggestion of one of the pastors, that we would hand the plate of apple sauce sitting before me to anyone who spread any 'apple sauce' in his paper. When that paper was read in which the superintendent said that his pastor was everything that he desired, and an ideal man, we handed him the apple sauce, although we do not know who it was that wrote this. It made a very pleasant evening, and there were so many helpful suggestions made in the various papers that were read that I thought you might like to publish them in the TIMES, and I am enclosing them herewith just as they were handed to us."

The interesting papers sent to the TIMES by Dr. Hull, and containing much that is valuable for pastors and superintendents everywhere, are here given.

WHAT I WOULD LIKE MY SUPERINTENDENT TO BE

A Man of Prayer

1. First of all, I would like my superintendent to be a man of prayer.
2. To be a man of faith, ready to take problems that are difficult.
3. He should be a man of courage and conviction, with opinions and argument to bolster up those opinions.
4. He should be a man of a loving heart with keen sympathies for young people, understanding their problems, and trying to get their point of view.
5. He should be a man of cordial spirit and pleasing personality.
6. He should have the evangelistic attitude, on the lookout for those who might be brought to a confession of faith in Christ.
7. He should be a man who appreciates his task, who sees its bigness, and earnestly endeavors to accomplish it.
8. Of course, he should be a man who knows the Bible, and is able to present lessons in summary with clearness.

Seeks First the Kingdom

- As a pastor I would have my superintendent to be:
1. One who makes the kingdom first in his life.
  2. One who has a spiritual conception of the purpose of the Sunday school.
  3. One who has a knowledge of modern methods in organizing and conducting his school.
  4. One who is optimistic, and not given to criticism.
  5. One who insists that the Sunday school contribute to the public worship of this sanctuary.

Alert, Open-Minded, Energetic
